BLOT, THE (LOIS WEBER-B. F. WARREN CORP.) SPECIAL CAST.....AUG. 27
Miss Weber builds up-to-the-minute, entertaining picture."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Good picture with entertaining story, but business fell off a little owing to the return of the heat wave."

BOB HAMPTON OF PLACER (NEILAN-FIRST NATIONAL) SPECIAL CAST.....MAY 14
"Wesley Barry saves the show."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"This picture is in no wise out of the ordinary." "One of the best pictures of the year in our estimation. Plenty of action and sustained interest. Custer's last stand brings a real thrill. Excellent box office attraction." "Pleasing picture, fair receipts." "A real big feature which appealed strongly to men and children, but seemed to fail to interest the women. Business just about average for week." "Originally booked for week, was pulled in middle of engagement because it did not appeal to women. Production, however, is good one." "One of the finest pictures of the season—and it went over just moderately well. Business just average."

BOYS WILL BE BOYS (GOLDWYN) WILL ROGERS.....MAY 28
"Quaintly humorous, simple story with Will Rogers."—M. P. News.
Exhibitors Comment.—"Will Rogers in one of his best. Plenty of room for effective exploitation with this picture. The best week that I have had in two months." "Fine picture. Business unusually good for this time of the year." "Patrons liked this picture very much. Drew editorial commendation from daily paper for being clean picture and faithfully portraying the characters in the story. Attendance very good."

BRONZE BELL, THE (THOMAS H. INCE-PARAMOUNT) SPECIAL CAST.....JULY 9
"Big production, but lacks audience appeal."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Just a fair picture, and we did only average business." "Pleasing, receipts average." "The old double role turns up once more, and is not handled any better than usual. Picture has some good settings, and a fair plot. An average picture and box office attraction." "Why did they 'star' Doris May in this? She was merely a supporting lead, and not much of that."

BURN 'EM UP BARNES (MASTODON FILMS, INC.) JOHNNY HINES.....SEPT. 3
"Melodramatic farce furnishes entertainment and couple of thrills."—News.

BUTTERFLY GIRL, THE (PLAYGOERS-PATHE) MARJORIE DAW.....JUNE 4
"Little entertainment in this weak and sugary story."—M. P. News.

CAPPY RICKS (PARAMOUNT) THOMAS MEIGHAN.....SEPT. 3
"Good audience picture with some excellent comedy sequences."—M. P. News.

CARNIVAL (UNITED ARTISTS) SPECIAL CAST.....JULY 9
"Genuine Venitian backgrounds compensate for talky picture."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A wonderful picture which went over with us in big shape." "This one pleased my audiences, but did not draw." "Fair. Not as good business as I expected. Just cleared expenses."

CHARGE IT (GARSON-EQUITY-STATE RIGHTS) CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG.....JUNE 11
"Interesting picture of the eternal triangle."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Star put it over. Did pretty good business." "Really Clara Kimball Young's most brilliant play. Did good business."

CHEATED LOVE (UNIVERSAL) CARMEL MYERS.....MAY 28
"Carmel Myers has a gem in lifelike picture."—M. P. News.

Exhibitor Comment—"Fine business and picture seemed to entertain." "Fair picture. Business ordinary."

COLORADO PLUCK (WILLIAM RUSSELL).....MAY 28
"Has not the action they expect of this star."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Did average business."

CONQUERING POWER, THE (REX INGRAM-METRO) SPECIAL CAST.....JULY 16
"Not another 'Four Horsemen,' but still way above the average."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Pleased our audiences and drew good patronage."

CONQUEST OF CANAAN (PARAMOUNT) THOMAS MEIGHAN...JULY 23
"Fails to come up to expectations."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Very good picture and did a good business." "Very good feature, with excellent receipts." "Drew an average attendance for a week's run." "Commonplace offering, but did pretty good business because Thomas Meighan has friends." "A good picture, well liked by patrons and attracting excellent business." "Fair production with average business."

"THE SHADOW OF LIGHTNING RIDGE"

(Selig & Rork-Aywon-State Rights)

Rapid-Fire Action Here and Plenty of Thrills

TRUST Snowy Baker to put over a smash-bang, thrilling melodrama! In his first production, "The Fighting Breed," the Australian Douglas Fairbanks indicated that he knew something about entertaining an audience, for he displayed a sample of horsemanship that is only duplicated in one or two instances on the screen—and never surpassed. "The Shadow of Lightning Ridge" even for an obvious type of melodrama offers something absolutely new in the shape of stunts. Which must be considered quite impossible, you might say, judging from the fact that most incident is unoriginal. Perhaps the freshness of these stunts may be found in the fact that the picture was made in the Antipodes—coupled with the fact that Snowy Baker has caught a new perspective.

There is nothing tedious about this picture. From the moment that the star, masquerading as a highwayman, puts over thrill number one, which may be catalogued as a daring hold-up of a stage, to the moment when he crosses the trunk of a tree on horseback with a girl in the saddle as the pretty captive, he is constantly doing something in the line of stunts which has one sitting right up and paying strict attention. Baker is at his best in the saddle. Yet on foot he seems to be able to express himself in various ways. And the smile that conquered in "The Fighting Breed" is flashed again and it sure radiates personality.

"The Shadow of Lightning Ridge" is largely made up of physical action which revolves around a picturesque figure who takes to highway robbery to execute revenge upon a certain individual. He is not a highwayman in the general sense, since he confines his operations to the above mentiond party. This figure is represented as wealthy and it is the highwayman's object to ruin him financially for dishonoring his mother years before. Wilfred Lucas, who directed the feature and played the role of the rich landowner, has injected enough sure-fire touches to make it thoroughly appealing. There are a few feminine figures who are involved, one of whom is the fiancee of the ranchman. But with a truly feminine impulse she is attracted to the bold highwayman through sheer admiration for his bravado manner and his undeniable courage.

Baker leaps over fences and cliffs and displays a horsemanship seldom equaled, and he asserts his personality in such compelling fashion that you follow his exploits with the deepest interest. The story ends by lifting the clouds from the character of the landowner. A sub-title states that a relative is the guilty one. The backgrounds taken against the Australian hills are truly picturesque. They represent a new type of landscape.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

By Bess Meredyth and Wilfred Lucas.
Directed by Wilfred Lucas.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

The internationally famous star, Snowy Baker, who combines the spectacular stunts of Douglas Fairbanks and the Western prowess of William S. Hart, is coming to the ———— theatre next ———— in his newest picture, "The Shadow of Lightning Ridge. His personality is one that captures the hearts of men and women alike and he exercises an ever growing appeal owing to his infinite variety. His pictures are certain to be crammed with action since he is a great swimmer, fancy diver, rower, boxer, wrestler, fencer, crack-shot and a marvelous horseman.

"The Shadow of Lightning Ridge" presents Snowy Baker in one of his greatest accomplishments—his horsemanship. Playing the part of a picturesque highwayman, who has taken to the road not for gain but for revenge, he makes the figure of the Shadow one that interests the spectator from beginning to end. His skill in the saddle and the ease with which he accomplishes his ends spells an entertainment which is genuinely entertaining. Wilfred Lucas, who directed the feature, also plays a conspicuous role and gives a finished performance.

PROGRAM READER

The internationally famous star—the popular Snowy Baker, who is to Australia what Douglas Fairbanks is to America—will appear at the ———— theatre next ———— in his newest picture entitled "The Shadow of Lightning Ridge." Here is a star who is unquestionably one of the most skillful horsemen of the day. He is an all-around athlete who can swim, row, dive, wrestle, box, and accomplish anything seemingly in the line of stunts. And "The Shadow of Lightning Ridge" is crammed with adventure and excitement throughout its interesting action. It is a picture certain to keep the spectator on the anxious seat of suspense.

SUGGESTIONS

Here is a picture crammed with adventurous action of the most exciting sort and it would be well to exploit it along this angle. Tell that Snowy Baker has endeared himself to the hearts of the public through his daring stunts, his winning personality, and the fact that he is an all-around athlete. Tell something of his ability and his plea to fame. Bring forth that he is a champion boxer, that he is an accomplished swimmer and that he can ride like Tom Mix and duplicate Fairbanks in accomplishing the impossible. You can bring out that the picture is filled with extraordinary thrills.

CATCH LINES

See Snowy Baker, the athlete of the Antipodes, in a picture crammed with extraordinary thrills.

See Snowy Baker, the athlete of the Antipodes, in a picture crammed with thrills and excitement. A picture you won't forget in a hurry.

"WHERE MEN ARE MEN"

(Vitagraph)

Fairly Entertaining Because of the Punch

WILLIAM DUNCAN'S name as star or director of a picture is sure enough guarantee that before the final fade-out is reached the spectator is certain to witness scenes which contain a hefty melodramatic punch. "Where Men Are Men" introduces the star-director in a feature after a sojourn in the serial field. The five-reeler is not new to him, so he is able to adapt himself to the demands of the story without stretching it beyond the realm of plausibility.

The picture in no way reflects a serial. Which is to say that Duncan has maintained a good perspective while laboring with the continued story. Being a virile, rugged actor, it is certain that his roles must be made to fit him. Consequently the figure of the Eastern tenderfoot who settled in the West, prospected, and learned how to cultivate a quick trigger-finger and measure out a punch straight from the shoulder looks as it was made to order.

The feature is of an obvious design and if Duncan erred in his direction it is in allowing the action to drag in a few places. Again there is too quick a transition in the hero's personal appearance to make it ring as genuine as in the introductory reels. The figure of Foster, the tenderfoot, is presented in a mysterious fashion. Some uncouth Westerners would attempt to besmirch his character and make out that he is the murderer of his partner. The action is placed in the early reels around the saloon of a mining camp—a saloon in which the prospector meets the girl, who for some reason unexplained is acting as entertainer. Duncan holds the attention because you instinctively feel that red-blooded incident is about to occur. And it comes with a regular he-man fist fight.

The star believes in realism. He has allowed a beard to decorate his face—a beard that only a razor could remove. But when the girl is spirited away to a health camp, the action becomes a trifle mild simply because the hero must display his wardrobe. He goes up to 'Frisco and returns with sport clothes and renews his romance. And when the lovers are alone, the flash-back is revealed explaining the reason why the tenderfoot stayed and became proficient with the two guns—so that his partner's memory may be avenged. A note of coincidence creeps in when the heroine is revealed as the daughter of the dead partner. But in its favor is the familiar Duncan punch. The plot becomes quite involved when it concerns a lost mine and certain claims, and the spectator's attention is liable to wander in these scenes. However, all things considered, "Where Men Are Men" is pretty good entertainment.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

Scenario by Thomas Dixon, Jr.
Directed by William Duncan.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

"Where Men are Men," the William Duncan production, is a strong and virile drama of the gold camps in California. There is a fascination about the story which is bound to appeal not only to the Vitagraph star's army of followers, but to all photoplay patrons who like the outdoor type of drama. The story is an adaptation of a novel by Ralph Cummins and comes to the ———— theatre next ———— with a cast that includes Edith Johnson, Tom Wilson, George Stanley, Harry Lonsdale, and Gertrude Astor.

Mr. Duncan directed the picture besides playing the most important role. The plot deals with a young Easterner who seeks gold in Death Valley, California. He establishes a partnership with an aged prospector, who is later found slain. Enemies seeking to freeze out the Easterner try several schemes and the outsider even suspects a new girl who has come to the locality as being one of their tools. There is action throughout the entire picture and the story is clean and wholesome.

PROGRAM READER

A romance of the open country—full of adventure is "Where Men are Men," the Vitagraph feature which comes to the ———— theatre next ———— starring the virile William Duncan. It is the story of a youth who spent several years in the Death Valley gold region in search of a fortune. It is a story which was selected by the star-director because of the great opportunities it afforded him. The greater part of the production is filmed in the open against beautiful backgrounds. A big fight scene comes at the climax of the picture. So come and see "Where Men are Men," a red-blooded story of red-blooded people in the great open spaces. Full of love, romance and adventure.

SUGGESTIONS

Here you have a picture which features the star-director, William Duncan. This rugged actor has been appearing in serials and has built up a steady following through his sincerity and enthusiasm for his work. State that the picture is a colorful production of the great out-doors which carries plenty of action and punch. You can stimulate interest with a teaser campaign. Make plain that Edith Johnson is in the cast as leading woman. Many of your patrons will recall her as the co-star with Duncan in the Vitagraph serials. Blind teasers look like the best angle for advertising here. For example—"It occurred in the Country —Where Men are Men."

"FOOTFALLS"
(Fox)

Morbid Murder Mystery Is Harshly Emphasized

IT is a morbid composition that Fox has uncovered in "Footfalls." Evidently Mr. Brabin, the adaptor and director, being presented with the task of holding the attention through ten reels, has resorted to undue emphasis in stressing the pathos and sentiment. He has a sure grasp upon situation and climax, but in carrying out the salient points the interest slackens in the forepart of the picture. Here it is that he resorts to crude touches of country characterization and atmosphere. And these touches coupled with the abrupt transition into a murder mystery spell a curious entertainment. So complete is the suspense here that one forgets the romantic and sentimental interludes that opened the story.

There is a quartette of figures—an old, blind cobbler whose sense of hearing is wonderfully acute, his son who has reached adolescence with a smouldering passion for a sweetheart of his boyhood days, the girl, who is of a flirtatious disposition, and a city engineer. The cobbler listens to the footfalls of the passersby and identifies them correctly. He even guesses accurately the moods and impulses of his son as he storms through the house and clod-hops up the stairs. The boy is goaded into a desperate state of mind because of the amorous attention paid the girl by the engineer and a quarrel ensues—a bitter, vengeful quarrel. And one of these men is killed while the other attempts to make away with the bag of gold as the house is burning.

The cobbler listens to the footfalls, realizing that he will recognize the identity of the criminal. The mystery is established from this premise. But where the logic falters is in the conduct of the cobbler's son. It is he who started the quarrel—who caused his rival to fight in self-defense. Yet for some unaccountable reason, the engineer is held responsible for all the tragedy. He is made a hunted figure. Meanwhile the cobbler watches and waits and his patience is rewarded when the criminal slouches back, heavily disguised, and meets his punishment from the hands of the morbid blind man.

His life is being crushed out and onlookers are focusing their horrified attention to the crevices of the shop. Yet certain figures storm the door with a huge beam. Just why the engineer should show such a transition of character is inexplicable.

The picture is heavy and actually grewsome in its details. The early reels are cluttered up with rural hokum and exaggerated acting by Tom Douglas, who as the youth indulges in an endless variety of facial grimaces. Estelle Taylor is too sophisticated of expression to make the heroine always sincere. But Tyrone Power gives an unusually compelling study of the blind cobbler. "Footfalls" never reaches the rock-bottom of reality despite the apparent earnest striving to make it throb with life.—Length, 10 reels.—Laurence Reid.

THE CAST

Hiram Scudder ..... Tyrone Power
Tommy (his son) ..... Tom Douglas
Peggy Hawthorne ..... Estelle Taylor
Alec Campbell ..... Gladden James

Based on story by Wilbur Daniel Steele.
Scenario by Charles J. Brabin.
Directed by Charles J. Brabin.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

A powerful story of shattered ideals—of broken romance—of vengeance is "Footfalls," based upon the original by Wilbur Daniel Steele, and which comes to the ———— theatre next ———— as a Fox picture, adapted and directed by Charles J. Brabin. It is a picture which is unusual in plot and characterization and the interest is held through a composition of scenes the force of which is thoroughly compelling. A cast of clever players interprets this picture and makes it something which carries life. Among the players are Tyrone Power, Tom Douglas, Estelle Taylor and Gladden James.

The plot revolves around the romance of Tommy and Peggy. When an engineer, Alec Campbell, comes from the city, Peggy uses him to arouse her sweetheart's jealousy. A quarrel ensues between the young men and a crime is committed. Tommy's father is a blind cobbler who recognizes people through footfalls. It is he who clears up the murder mystery. This picture builds deep mystery and rich melodramatic action and suspense and is cleverly acted.

PROGRAM READER

He was blind, and owing to his affliction his sense of hearing was doubly acute. He knew the identity of the passersby—those who lived in the town. He could tell the mental state of his son just by noticing the emphasis of these footfalls. And he gave each pedestrian some identity. One day a crime was committed. They called the old cobbler mad because he waited to exact vengeance upon the murderer who attempted to take away the bag of gold. He told the villagers that the criminal would return and that he would know his identity through footfalls. This is the outline of the startling and compelling melodrama which comes to the ———— theatre next ———— entitled, "Footfalls."

SUGGESTIONS

Here is a picture which carries an unusual theme and characterization and its plot should interest everyone in search of the original idea. So play it up as a fascinating melodrama that offers something entirely new in theme. Bring forth that it is rich in human interest, pathos, sentiment, mystery, drama, action, and suspense. Play up the quartette of principal players. Each has been star in other pictures. Many will recall the hit that Estelle Taylor made in "While New York Sleeps," and that Tyrone Power is a recognized artist of stage and screen. Use the title and play up the fact that the picture is one of the outstanding, big offerings of the season.

"THE VENGEANCE TRAIL"
(Aywon-State Rights)

Average Western Carries Good Incident

BIG BOY WILLIAMS' latest production, "The Vengeance Trail," is hardly up to the calibre of his first stellar vehicle, "The Jack Rider," since it bears a resemblance to the orthodox western built from a conventional formula. While there is some commendable incident which features the lanky star, much of it is old stuff. There is missing the spontaneity of effort which marked "The Jack Rider," and the offering has followed too quickly upon the heels of the other to make it fully appreciated for what it is—an average western which will satisfy because of the acceptable incident and the personality of the star who goes through his adventures with little or no ostentation. There is nothing of the poser about Williams. He seems like the he-man that he represents.

The plot places him in conflict with his father owing to his tendency to stray from the straight and narrow. And when he hits the high spots, the crooked foreman of the ranch takes advantage to inform the father and exploit the idea that the youth is really the guilty leader of the rustlers. Since the plot revolves principally about the cattle rustling and the efforts of Big Boy to capture the gang and prove to his father that he is sincere, one may be excused for guessing the outcome as early as the first reel. It develops some real interest when Will Rogers, Jr., is introduced. The juvenile cow-puncher plays the kidnapped child here and it is Big Boy's double object to prove his own manliness and rout the villains. He succeeds almost single-handed, although there is an aeroplane stunt employed to add a thrill.

The villains, realizing that the end is in sight for them, take to the tall timbers, but the child makes his escape and becomes friendly with the aviator. It is only a moment or two before the crooks are located and when the hero is picked up the picture is practically over. The offering carries a good sample of hard riding, every member of the cast being an expert in the saddle. This horsemanship coupled with some first rate gun-play provides a satisfying hour. The backgrounds are typical of the West and feature some appropriate atmosphere. In all "The Vengeance Trail" looks like a good bet and worthy of any state-righter's notice. It contains a good flavor of romance and packs an adequate punch.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

THE CAST

Lady Killer Larson ..... Charles Arling
Broncho Powell ..... Bert Apling
Grace Winwood ..... Maryon Aye
Buddy Hicks ..... Will Rogers, Jr.
Big Boy ..... Guinn (Big Boy) Williams

Directed by Charles R. Seeling.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

A thrilling Western which features Guinn (Big Boy) Williams will make its appearance on the screen of the ———— theatre next ————. It is the type of picture which carries fast-moving action, unfolds a plot rich in adventure and incident and is thoroughly appealing in every department. The story concerns a band of ingenious highwaymen and cattle-rustlers who have been operating in the vicinity of Bronson's ranch. "Lady Killer" Larson seems to be the brains of the gang, and it is his object to make Big Boy Bronson the scapegoat. The latter has been living a care-free existence and his escapades have been so annoying to his father that the youth is evicted from home. Big Boy proceeds to prove his father in the wrong by discovering Larson's treachery and it is owing to his courage and determination that the rustlers are captured. The thrills have to do with the recovery of a kidnapped boy, and desperate fighting, scouting in an aeroplane, etc., make the picture tingle with action and suspense. The picture is well acted and directed.

PROGRAM READER

The famous broncho-buster, Big Boy Williams, is coming to the ———— theatre next ———— in "The Avenging Trail," as fascinating a Western as has ever played the ————. It is crammed with adventure and excitement, action and suspense. There are a goodly number of thrills which are shown in the desperate fighting, the hard riding, the aeroplane stunts, and the kidnapping of a little boy. The plot revolves around a gang of cattle rustlers. Big Boy Williams is one of the cleverest actors that ever graced a Western. He is at home in the saddle and an expert with the lariat and his personality is bound to win a host of friends wherever his pictures are shown.

SUGGESTIONS

The best angle to exploit this feature is to concentrate upon the personality of the new star, Guinn Williams, popularly known as Big Boy. Present stills of him. Announce that he is a famous broncho-buster—that he is daring and skillful in the saddle. Play him up big and tell your patrons that a regular, he-man cowboy straight from the plains is the star of the picture. As for the film, describe it as an adventurous Western which is crammed with fast-moving action and which contains several thrills. Also mention that Will Rogers, Jr., is in the cast—and that he is a chip of the old block—a courageous little cowboy. If you played a previous picture, "The Jack Rider," and your crowd liked it—then you have another angle for exploitation.

CATCH LINES

See the famous broncho-buster, Big Boy Williams, and Will Rogers, Jr., the vest pocket cowboy wonder in "The Vengeance Trail," a Western drama crammed with punch and pep.

A smashing, crashing drama of the West is "The Vengeance Trail," which comes to the ———— next ————. You'll be sorry if you miss it.

"CAMILLE"
(Nazimova-Metro)

Nazimova's Best Bet Since "Out of the Fog"

NAZIMOVA has come into her own again with this modern version of Dumas' tragedy of passion, "Camille." Not since "Out of the Fog" has the emotional star had a picture worthy of her expression until June Mathis gave her this modern adaptation of the play which has taxed the art of Bernhardt. Duss, et al. It is not the first time that Camille has been picturized, although it is the first time that it has been brought up to date in setting and detail. The body—the substance of the drama—remains intact except for the final ending.

And this conclusion will in all likelihood raise the only criticism. It may have been the shadow of censorship or the recourse to a happier ending after visualizing so much sorrow and tragedy—that caused the sponsors to have Camille die without Armand present to tender love and sympathy. As it is the picture is apt to prove disappointng to the mass mind. The tragic figure of the gay butterfly who lived her brief moment with the fullest expression of life and love had encouraged enough pathos and sympathy so that some compensation should have been hers at the end. Otherwise the feature builds clearly and consecutively, thanks to the appropriate atmosphere and touches incorporated by the gifted Miss Mathis.

It is a bizarre production which might be called ultra-modern in regard to the impressionistic design of settings. These are fascinating to the eye and quite in harmony with the personality of Camille. The story is too familiar to bear repetition here. Everyone is acquainted with the tragedy of the demi-monde who sought to live her brief hour with Armand, but who was interrupted by the youth's father and compelled to defy her own heart and soul. Nazimova makes this figure truly unique. She is Parisian from her shock of hair to her mincing steps and gestures. She gives her own original conception of the role, unmindful of traditions of the stage and the impersonations of others. And somehow as you follow her in her escapades and finally in her grand passion you catch the misery, the hopelessness of her life. Nazimova makes you feel that.

She is forced, however, to share honors in many of the scenes with Rudolph Valentino, who demonstrates that the art he flashed in "The Four Horsemen" was not a thing of the moment. He makes Armand a brooding, silent volcano of love who suppresses his desires until the supreme moment. His restraint is highly commendable. As for Nazimova, her poise at the death-bed scene calls for words of praise. Here was occasion to stress the emotions—to resort to shoulder-shaking and kindred feelings—but she played it with admirable repression. The atmosphere, the tinting, the technical details, are quite perfect. Eliminate the aggrating trio of creditors and you have a picture almost flawless in its harmony of action and its composition of scenes.—Length, 7 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

The incomparable Nazimova is coming to the ———— theatre next ———— in a screen version of "Camille," the great tragedy of love, which has been used as a medium of expression for the great celebrities of the stage. In this study of passion and disillusionment, Nazimova has done for the silver-sheet what Bernhardt, Eleanora Duse, Clara Morris, Olga Nethersole and Ethel Barrymore did for the stage. The incomparable Nazimova has endowed the figure of the impulsive, beautiful Camille, who lived only for the moment, with a charm and power which makes the part stand out like a cameo. The love story of Armand for Camille—a love which was wonderfully beautiful until the youth's father prevails upon her to leave his son. Illness attacks her and she dies. Nazimova is assisted by Rudolph Valentino of "Four Horsemen" fame, and others equally brilliant. Ray C. Smallwood directed. A feature of "Camille" is the manner in which the stage settings have been designed.

PROGRAM READER

"Camille" the Nazimova production coming to the ———— theatre on ———— is a modernized version of the famous Dumas play, adapted by June Mathis, who made the scenario for "The Four Horsemen." The incomparable Nazimova plays the role made famous by Bernhardt, Eleanora Duse, Rejane, Clara Morris, Modjeska, Laura Keene, Olga Nethersole and Ethel Barrymore. The famous Metro star plays this beautiful butterfly of the Paris boulevards—who lived only to gratify her passions—who was a belle of the moment—with superb charm and power. The love affair between Camille and Armand is considered one of love and devotion and sacrifice—one of the finest love chapters of literature. In the supporting cast are Rudolph Valentino of "Four Horsemen" fame and others.

CATCH LINES

See Nazimova in her greatest triumph, "Camille," written by the great Dumas. See the incomparable Nazimova in her greatest role. Supported by Rudolph Valentino.

"STEELHEART"
(Vitagraph)

Combination of Good Melodramatic Action and Handsome Hero Stuff

"STEELHEART," while conventional and convenient in story, with a whole lot of handsome hero stuff, not needed and hardly excuseable, packs a healthy wallop of melodramatic action in a number of scenes and for an audience of the right class should prove a highly satisfactory feature. The gallery gods will eat it up and Young America can be counted upon to raise the roof.

As a matter of fact the picture reduced in footage in the early reels, where William Duncan, immaculate as any stage villain who ever trod the boards, walks in and out of many unnecessary scenes and poses for close-ups, while question and answer titles advancing the story not at all are used, would average better than many a production that has cost a lot more money. The feature has a number of individual scenes that carry excellent suspense. A couple of these showing a four-horse team, hitched to a wagon, attempting to cross a swift running river and a last minute rescue where hero and heroine are trapped in a mine tunnel by a slide of gravel, just before the dynamite blast is to be exploded, are reasonably new.

The finish is exceedingly melodramatic with the entire gang of villains being killed off in good old-fashioned style. Guns, pistols and knives in the hands of everybody but the heroine, are used for the slaughter. Some very fine scenic shots have been secured and the supporting cast is adequate, in fact more to be commended than the stars. Charles Dudley contributes a bit as an old desert rat that ranks high as characterization.

The story of "Steelheart," a title by the way that seems to have no connection with the picture, concerns a young woman who comes to the gold mining section of the West in search of evidence that a husband who never worked at it, is dead, and a desert woman-hater who is searching for a lost mine. The two meet and fall in love with each other. The man and his partner are kept very busy for a while protecting the girl and keeping the villains from stealing the lost mine they have discovered, but finally everything comes out all right, the final fade out showing the pair starting in housekeeping in an abandoned cabin located near the mine.—Length, 6 reels.—J. S. Dickerson.

THE CAST

Frank Worthing ..... William Duncan
Ethel Kendall ..... Edith Johnson
"Butch" Dorgan ..... Jack Curtis
Steve ..... Walter Rodgers
Mrs. Freeman ..... Euna Luckey
Vera ..... Ardeta Malino
Dick Colter ..... Earl Crain
"Old Tom" Shelly ..... Charles Dudley

Scenario by Bradley J. Smollen.
Directed by William Duncan.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

A thrilling story of the mining country, filled with real action and intense dramatic moments, is a film called "Steelheart." The offering is booked for the ———— theatre next ————. William Duncan, who plays the leading role in the feature as well as being responsible for the direction, has won countless admirers because of his fighting spirit and realism, and he appears at his best in this production. Edith Johnson, who has been associated with Mr. Duncan in serials, enacts the opposite role and she interprets the part with skill and ability. Among the intense dramatic scenes and thrills are a fight in the dark, a combat between Duncan and an enraged bear, a fight on a cliff in which both contestants are carried over the edge and fall into the rapids below and an explosion in the mountain in which hero and heroine are imperiled. An intense love interest is interwoven in the plot and some of the most picturesque backgrounds have been used to emphasize the action and make each scene pleasing to the eye.

PROGRAM READER

Those who enjoy pictures dealing with the great outdoors where a man's word is his gospel and chivalry is still practised will enjoy "Steelheart," which comes to the ———— theatre next ———— with William Duncan as the star, supported by Edith Johnson as his leading woman. The fighting Duncan is given a role of the type in which he excels. He is forced to fight his way every inch of the film, encountering both humans and wild animals. The picture is vigorous and filled with thrills and it furnishes Mr. Duncan and Miss Johnson with rare opportunities to display their skill at exciting feats, and unlimited acting ability. Certainly no one who glories in the red-blooded type of action can afford to miss "Steelheart."

SUGGESTIONS

Describe this picture as one for red-blooded persons who enjoy clean, wholesome amusement of the kind that existed in the early days of the West when man fought for what he believed to be right. Describe it as the story of a brave girl and a courageous man who fights enemies in the dark, emerging victorious after many thrilling encounters. Play up the Duncan popularity and state that he is a fighting, dominating type of actor who succeeds through enthusiasm for his work and sincerity for doing everything right. Play up Edith Johnson as his dealing woman. Tell that the picture is a smashing, thrilling melodrama.

CATCH LINES

An intense picture of love and adventure and thrills in which the stars have to fight their way to success is "Steelheart" starring William Duncan.

A story of the West in the early days when men fought for women's honor and their own safety is "Steelheart," starring William Duncan.

SCRAMBLED WIVES (MARGUERITE CLARK PRODS.-FIRST NATIONAL) MARGUERITE CLARK.....JUNE 4
"Slender story makes just average starring vehicle."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Very 'cute' picture and right entertaining. Business rather good. Marguerite Clark lives in our city and this is somewhat of a drawing card for her screen efforts."

SCRAP IRON (FIRST NATIONAL) CHARLES RAY.....JUNE 11
"Greatest prize fight picture ever made."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Probably the best picture Charles Ray has made, and played to such good business we are holding it over for second week." "Good picture, well received. In spite of Shrine Convention, no unusual business." "The best thing Ray has ever made. Picture intensely interesting and shows realistic fight, although knockout in fight is not shown, which was disappointing to many. Attendance good." "Charles Ray is a favorite here and he gained several new supporters in this production, which did a good week's business." "The picture drags too much. The prize-fight scene is realistic." "This is one of Charles Ray's best pictures and we did very good business with it for a week." "Dandy film with a cash-in on the Carpentier-Dempsey rage. Receipts fine."

SEE MY LAWYER (ROBERTSON-COLE) T. ROY BARNES.....MAY 14
"Too lengthy and complicated to be amusing."—M. P. News.

SERENADE (R. A. WALSH-FIRST NATIONAL) SPECIAL CAST..SEPT. 17
"Lots of atmosphere and acting, but not so much action."—M. P. News.

SEVEN YEARS BAD LUCK (ROBERTSON-COLE) MAX LINDER..MAY 7
"Unquestionably Linder's best picture to date."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Excellent comedy and with cooler weather made the best business for a long time."

SHAME (FOX) SPECIAL CAST.....AUG. 13
"Oriental story filmed in fine atmosphere."—M. P. News.

SHAM (FAMOUS PLAYERS) ETHEL CLAYTON.....MAY 28
"Good clean entertainment with star in likeable role."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"One of the best things Ethel Clayton has done, and she played to capacity business throughout. A thoroughly satisfying picture." "Nice little picture, but not strong enough to compete with the heat." "Not quite up to Ethel Clayton's other pictures, but did an average week's business." "Good picture, but business not so good due to torrid weather." "Just a fair picture that drew average business."

SHAMS OF SOCIETY (ROBERTSON-COLE) SPECIAL CAST.....AUG. 13
"Neglected wife formula burdened with irrelevant detail."—M. P. News.

SHARK MASTER, THE (UNIVERSAL) FRANK MAYO.....SEPT. 10
"A rather weak story of the South Sea Islands."—M. P. News.

SHELTERED DAUGHTERS (REALART) JUSTINE JOHNSTONE...MAY 28
"The best little bet in many a month"—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment.—"The best thing Justine Johnson has yet done, and it shows promise. Her other pictures were so bad that business on this was just 'fair to middlin'' but believe that her next will draw and so on. This one was a fairly entertaining picture on a moss-grown theme." "Fair business at box office with this average production." "Good little picture. Did pretty good business, too."

SHERIFF OF ETERNAL HOPE, THE (FEDERATED EXCHANGES) JACK HOXIE .....JULY 9
"Conventional western, but will get over in right houses."—M. P. News.

SHOCKING NIGHT, A (UNIVERSAL) LYONS-MORAN.....
"Not substantial enough for five reels."—M. P. News.

SHORT SKIRTS (UNIVERSAL) GLADYS WALTON.....JULY 16
"Gladys Walton does good work in mildly interesting story."—M. P. News.

SIGN ON THE DOOR (FIRST NATIONAL) NORMA TALMADGE..JULY 30
"Famous stage melodrama retains dramatic strength on screen"—M. P.
Exhibitor Comment—"Exceptionally well received by everybody. Absolutely A 1, splendid." "Fine picture and one which had good business during run." "Fine picture. Played to big houses."

SILVER CAR, THE (VITAGRAPH) EARLE WILLIAMS.....JUNE 4
"This picture falters after a couple of reels."—M. P. News.

SINGING RIVER (FOX) WILLIAM RUSSELL.....AUG. 6
"Ordinary western makes real offering for Russell."—M. P. News.

SNOWBLIND (GOLDWYN) SPECIAL CAST.....JUNE 4
"Snow picture that impresses because of splendid acting and scenic values."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"One of the best of the snow pictures. Has interesting plot and beautiful scenic backgrounds. Good box office attraction." "Special exploitation helped this to do excellent business. A fine hot-weather picture, but it ought to make money in any kind of weather."

SOWING OF THE WIND (LOUIS B. MAYER-FIRST NATIONAL)..JULY 2
"Moments of interest in theatric story."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Excellent drama with good business all week despite unprecedented hot weather." "Picture had to be cut a great deal. Interesting story and acting good."

STING OF THE LASHS, THE (ROBERTSON-COLE) PAULINE FREDERICK .....AUG. 27
"One big punch; balance average Western movie stuff."—M. P. News.

STRAIGHT FROM PARIS (EQUITY PICTURES-STATE RIGHTS) CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG.....JULY 23
"Well mounted production makes satisfactory entertainment."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Excellent Clara Kimball Young picture which pleased our audiences and proved a good box office attraction."

STRAIGHT FROM THE SHOULDER (FOX) BUCK JONES.....JULY 2
"Average Western with Jones in a character study."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Average picture to poor business." "An ordinary Western drama full of punch."

SUCH A LITTLE QUEEN (REALART) CONSTANCE BINNEY....JULY 9
"Hardly substantial enough for the grown-ups."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"My patrons were well pleased with the production. A good business for the week." "Terrible. Sugary, impossible stuff, done to death. Business was very bad." "The start the best part of the production."

TEN-DOLLAR RAISE, THE (FROTHINGHAM-ASSOCIATED PRODUCERS) SPECIAL CAST.....MAY 21
"Wonderfully human and genuinely entertaining."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Fine picture which seemed to please. Business somewhat more than usual." "Did excellent business and is a good production. Here's something aside from the regular cut and dried movie plot." "Good picture which brought fine business all week." "Just an average picture which played to fair business."

THERE ARE NO VILLAINS (METRO) VIOLA DANA.....SEPT. 3
"Perfectly satisfactory romantic-crook play with Viola Dana."—M. P. News.

THREE MUSKETEERS, THE (UNITED ARTISTS) DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS .....SEPT. 10
"Doug's masterpiece one of the screen's most likeable productions."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Fairbanks does his greatest work in this splendid picture. One of the big offerings of the year and a sure-fire box-office attraction. Played to tremendous business the first week of its run."

THROUGH THE BACK DOOR (UNITED ARTISTS) MARY PICKFORD .....MAY 28
"Mary Pickford's talent and personality will put this over."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Very entertaining story." "A typical Pickford production. Tied up with old time Pickford show and the two together went over fairly well, although Pickford seems to be losing her hold on the public." "Fine box office attraction. Miss Pickford gets over in her customary style." "Large crowds at each performance."

THUNDERCLAP (FOX) SPECIAL CAST.....AUG. 13
"Great for the gallery gods."—M. P. News.

THUNDER ISLAND (UNIVERSAL) EDITH ROBERTS.....JUNE 25
"Dull artificial story very badly titled."—M. P. News.

TO A FINISH (FOX) BUCK JONES.....AUG. 27
"Buck Jones Western entirely satisfactory in every respect."—M. P. News.

TOO MUCH SPEED (PARAMOUNT) WALLACE REID.....JUNE 18
"Wallace Reid has another entertaining auto story here."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"The picture was selected as the feature in conjunction with the second anniversary musical revue at my house and went over big." "Best Wallace Reid picture. Held over for second week." "Went big with Wally Reid fans and we are holding it over for second week's run." "Weather considered, this went over very well. It is only average, however, and is, basically, a repetition of one of his previous racing pictures." "A very good picture; pleased immensely, and played to very good business despite the extreme heat." "Very good; receipts fair." "Delightful story with star at his best. Boosted attendance figures despite minimum." "Fine production. Pleased my patrons and brought good business." "Had great business on this one in spite of the hot weather. Sure is a knockout."

TRAVELING SALESMAN, THE (PARAMOUNT) ROSCOE ARBUCKLE .....MAY 7
"Fatty Arbuckle has an interesting picture here."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A mediocre picture. Business didn't amount to much." "My people liked Fatty in two-reelers, but they just won't see him in feature length stuff. Business very poor." "Fatty's poorest—and not doing business, either." "Excellent comedy. Arbuckle and the salesman role fit each other nicely. Drew big." "Not much picture. Too slow, not enough action. Did not afford 'Fatty' the means for being really comical, and this semi-funny stuff not so popular with local movie fans. Mild all the way through, to say the least. Comment none too good, and business only up to the average, despite a favorable turn in the weather for the past week."

TRIP TO PARADISE, A (METRO) BERT LYTELL.....AUG. 27
"Lytell splendid in a fascinating, human picture."—M. P. News.

TWO WEEKS WITH PAY (REALART) BEBE DANIELS.....JUNE 4
"Light in substance, but thoroughly pleasing."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Drew nicely. Bebe is building up a big following." "Very clever picture, immensely pleasing but not a big drawing card." "Bebe draws like a house afire, and Walter Hiers made a personal appearance, so it was great stuff. Business fine."

TWO WISE WIVES (LOIS WEBER-PARAMOUNT) SPECIAL CAST .....JUNE 4
"Interesting especially to women because of character contrasts."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A rather tiresome thing which was only a fair box-office attraction."

"MOONLIGHT FOLLIES"

(Universal)

Fluffy Little Romance Presents Marie Prevost as Star

UNIVERSAL has tacked an attractive title on its picture which brings Marie Prevost into stardom. As pictures go, "Moonlight Follies" does not carry much weight. The serious-minded will call it silly; the patrons easily pleased with their film fare are liable to call it a little bit of fluff. True it scampers about—this plot—like a fleeting shadow, paying no attention to continuity, action, or any other element of the drama. It is episodic and brittle, yet it carries a spirit of make-believe that makes it attractive in spite of all the shortcomings. It's a picture of a baby vamp who lowers her eyes, bites her lower lip, shrugs her shoulders, arches her eye-brows, assumes all the other graces and poses characteristic of her sex and age and the stupid male capitulates in the end according to the ways of Adam.

In putting over the romantic chase, the heroine is presented as a pampered daughter who breakfasts in bed, takes milk baths, drives around in a sporty roadster, scampers around at a private pool in a nifty bathing suit, and has a good time at these various frivolities. Of course one can see that such a collection of pranks is certain to be episodic in action and very much to the powder-puff in substance. However, Universal, seems to have a sure box-office asset in the personality of Marie Prevost, erstwhile Sennett bathing girl, who is blessed with oodles of pep and poise and piquancy, and, who indicates that she might go far on the screen, so capably does she understand lights and moods and whims of the younger set.

Many patrons will be surprised to notice that she is attractive of feature, their attention heretofore having been focused below the waistline in her bathing girl ensembles. The camera has caught her in various poses—even the bathing suit is used—as well as the bath-tub. Miss Prevost has screen magnetism that is certain to make itself felt when she becomes thoroughly engaged in her work. Just at present there is a tendency to be a trifle conscious owing to the desire to make a big first impression. But there is no effort on her part to emote or strut or emphasize the ingenue whims and impulses beyond the demands of the story. Indeed Miss Prevost possesses a charming naturalness.

The picture may be fluffy, but the star's personality, the exploitation possibilities of the title, and the fact that it carries snap and ginger—these will insure box-office receipts. The humor is of the sparkling kind in many of the scenes, particularly when the cave-man touch is applied. The plot may be inconsequential, but Marie Prevost's figure is substantial enough to warrant masculine patronage any night, anywhere.—Length, 4,600 feet. —Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

This picture, "Moonlight Follies," presents Marie Prevost as a star. It will be the feature attraction at the ———— theatre next ————. Miss Prevost was formerly associated with Sennett comedies where she won deserved recognition through her piquant personality and an adaptability for youthful expression. Her figure endowed her with much physical appeal which combined with her beauty of face and her whimsical mood is sufficient to make her a star. "Moonlight Follies" presents her as a temperamental daughter of an indulgent parent. Knowing her power to intrigue the susceptible male, she employs all the familiar artifices. She is really a baby vamp. Yet she plays the wrong card for when the trap is set the man involved refuses to stumble. Which of course causes her to use other tactics. In the end it is she who capitulates. Miss Prevost is assisted by Clyde Fillmore and others and the picture is handsomely staged.

PROGRAM READER

Remember Marie Prevost, the pretty girl on the extreme end of Mack Sennett's galaxy of bathing beauties? Well, she has become a star—a full-fledged star. And well she deserves this position. This dainty little personality possesses a fragrance—a disposition—a piquancy—a beauty of poise and expression and figure which entitle her to some share of recognition. And she has in "Moonlight Follies" an ideal vehicle to win your affection. Marie Prevost will charm and intrigue you. It is a dashing picture of a twentieth century maid. Don't miss it. At the ———— next ————.

SUGGESTIONS

Here you have a new star for exploitation who has built up a following despite the fact that her name has never been prominently featured. But she has been one of Mack Sennett's most charming bathing beauties. And her pretty figure and features—her stylish wardrobe and charming personality have earned her the right to stardom. So concentrate upon her name. Emphasize the fact that she is going to win your favor. Also play up the title, which is a sure winner. Feature the picture with plenty of stills and describe it as a lightsome, frolicsome study in young girlhood. Use a snappy teaser campaign.

CATCH LINES

"GOOD AND EVIL"

(Herz Film Corp.—F. B. Warren Corp.)

Attractive European Star in Pictorially Gorgeous Subject

THIS is a Sascha production, made, it is announced, in Bohemia, and featuring a Franco-Slav actress, who might be, from her appearance and personality, a native-born American. "Good and Evil" is not such a radical departure from screen traditions as "Caligari," but it is a picture that is different from the average run of American productions.

Pictorially it reaches heights that American producers still gaze at with hope and aspiration. It is an artistic triumph, but not all the credit can go to the director. One sequence shows the Royal Palace of Vienna and thousands sporting themselves on the lawn. Such a background as St. Marks in Venice, for instance, is used only for one unimportant flash. This proves the superabundance of rich exteriors which were at the disposal of the producers. The story also allows for varied and rich interiors. The tale is an allegorical one, and switches from present day Paris to Monte Carlo, to old Japan, to France in the Colonial period, and to fantastic Persia. Each interior scene is a portrait, arranged with infinite care. There are bizarre sets; luxurious, sensuous sets; and dainty, whimsical sets of Japan. In some scenes thousands are before the camera.

Dramatically the picture is not according to the formula which has been offered for American fans. It is more like the American picture than "Caligari," but less like it than "Passion." Opening with an exceptional, gripping sequence of a convict escaping from prison and finding his way to the chateau of a wealthy duchess, it promises to be a world-beater. But then the story is told largely by sub-titles. We are not accustomed to one wordy title explaining action which might well be told in a full reel.

The allegory enters in when the hero is dissuaded from suicide at Monte Carlo by a figure who calls himself Fate. This gentlemen objects to being blamed for so many of the world's ills, and proceeds to show the hero several pages from the book of life, illustrating how Temptation, Intrigue, and Passion seek ever to destroy Youth. This allows for episodes which sweep from Persia to eighteenth century France and Japan. These episodes are not complete enough to be dramatic in themselves, nor are they strung together with any dramatic force. The main thread of the story is taken up again in the end. Lucy Doraine is a European star who is going to be very well received by Americans. The pictorial beauty of the feature will so charm many audiences that they will pass by its somewhat sketchy and hazy story. Undoubtedly editing has helped it immeasurably.—Length, 6 reels.—Matthew A. Taylor.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

A picture which has been called "the successor to 'Passion'" will make its appearance on ———— at the ————. It is entitled "Good and Evil" and was produced in Bohemia. The cast of this spectacular photodrama is headed by Lucy Doraine, a Franco-Slav screen celebrity, whose exquisite beauty and personality places her with the greatest screen stars of America and Europe. She is supported by a cast of 10,000 people.

Many of the scenes were actually taken at the Royal Palace in Vienna, and the production, all-in-all, is the most beautiful picture ever made from a dramatic and photographic standpoint.

"Good and Evil" is a story of love and sorrow told in the most impressive manner. The theme is a man's love for woman, and his battle with Fate to win out in the contest of life. How he has to battle Temptation, Love, Intrigue and Passion before he can finally find his true love.

Lucy Doraine and her co-workers in "Good and Evil" illustrate this story in a most tense and interesting manner. It is an artistic accomplishment that should merit the approval of every picture fan and pleasure-seeker.

PROGRAM READER

The management of the ———— theatre announce as the feature attraction on ————, a stupendous European sensation, entitled "Good and Evil."

The cast of this spectacular photodrama is headed by Lucy Doraine, whose exquisite beauty and personality places her with the greatest screen stars of America and Europe.

Built upon the eternal influence which woman has had over man throughout all stages of human history, and proving how, nine times out of ten, woman is directly responsible for every action and deed of man, the story tells how a convict effects a successful escape from prison and hides in the chambers of a beautiful Duchess. She takes a liking to him and endeavors to make a man of him. Successful in her attempt, she is later stunned when she realizes his love for another.

It is this comedy which suggested Jeanie MacPherson's photoplay of the same name which Cecil B. De Mille has produced for Paramount. It will be shown at the ———— theatre for ———— days beginning ———— next.

An unequalled cast including Wallace Reid, Gloria Swanson, Elliott Dexter, Bebe Daniels, Monte Blue, Wanda Hawley, Theodore Roberts, Agnes Ayres, Theodore Kosloff, Polly Moran, Raymond Hatton, Julia Faye and others appear in this superb all-star production.

UNWILLING HERO, AN (GOLDWYN) WILL ROGERS.....JULY 23
"Will Rogers at his best—undeniably high-class light comedy."—M. P. News.

VIRGIN PARADISE, A (FOX) PEARL WHITE.....AUG. 20
"Pearl White plays a female Tarzan in adventurous melodrama."—M. P. News.

VOICE IN THE DARK, A (GOLDWYN) SPECIAL CAST.....JUNE 18
"This is not good screen material."—M. P. News.

WALLOP, THE (UNIVERSAL) HARRY CAREY.....MAY 14
"Good incident and detail spell interesting western for Carey."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"An ordinary western picture. Business fair." "This is a fair offering." "Fairly entertaining. Business fair." "Great picture. Patrons well satisfied. Box office receipts satisfying."

WEALTH (PARAMOUNT) ETHEL CLAYTON.....JULY 9
"Ethel Clayton has emotional opportunities here and expresses them."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Found this to be a mediocre production, which did not attract strongly." "Audiences liked this picture. Did fair business."

WEDDING BELLS (FIRST NATIONAL) CONSTANCE TALMADGE .....AUG. 27
"Constance Talmadge well cast in good audience picture."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Clever and amusing. Business excellent." "Constance Talmadge's name was sufficient to draw a good house all week, without any special effort on the par of the management in the way of exploitation." "Not as good as some of Constance Talmadge's former attractions." "Average feature to usual business."

"Some good incident in ordinary western."—M. P. News.

WET GOLD (WILLIAMSON-GOLDWYN) SPECIAL CAST.....AUG. 13
"Grim melodrama carries adventure and atmosphere."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Good melodrama. Exploitation comes easy for this picture and in our case the exploitation paid, did fine business." "Nothing extra. Had average business throughout run."

WHERE LIGHTS ARE LOW (ROBERTSON-COLE) SESSUE HAYAKAWA .....JULY 9
"Good vehicle for Hayakawa."—M. P. News.

WHITE AND UNMARRIED (PARAMOUNT) THOMAS MEIGHAN..JUNE 11
"Fair entertainment in Meighan's latest."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"An excellent picture, which, coupled with the popularity of Thomas Meighan, brought good houses during its run." "Well received, receipts pleasing." "Do not consider picture up to standard set by 'City of Silent Men' nor was business as good. But nothing to complain of. This picture did a satisfactory business for a week's run and pleased patrons." "Pleased patrons although not type of picture usually shown at this theatre. Meighan admirably suited to part." "A good box office attraction." "Fairly entertaining feature with average business." "Fine picture. Business was very good considering the extreme heat." "The first three reels are very good; the rest is cheap melodrama. They seem to be making a mistake in putting this star in too many crook pictures. Business fell off because of the heat." "Not as good as other Meighan pictures. Business was fair."

WHY GIRLS LEAVE HOME (HARRY RAPF-WARNER BROS.-STATE RIGHTS) SPECIAL CAST.....SEPT. 10
"Modernized version of stage play makes interesting picture."—M. P. News.

WIFE'S AWAEKNING, A (ROBERTSON-COLE) FRITZI BRUNETTE .....SEPT. 10
"An average society drama; entertainment of the heaviest sort."—M. P. News.

WILD GOOSE, THE (COSMOPOLITAN-PARAMOUNT) SPECIAL CAST .....MAY 21
"Conventional picture of the eternal triangle."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Fairly entertaining, but it brought more than usual business." "This is an exceptionally fine picture with well sustained interest but it failed to draw good business owing to the very warm weather." "Something unusual. Drew fair-sized crowds." "Just an ordinary picture which did an average week's business." "Fairly good feature picture. Weather had been exceedingly warm and many people out of the city along the beaches, but attracted pretty good business." "One of the very best to be seen in a long, long time. Receipts fair."

WISE FOOL, A (PARAMOUNT) SPECIAL CAST.....JUNE 11
"Good direction makes this picture very human."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A very good picture. Not much business because of hot weather." "Business so poor on this that it had to be taken off after three days, though booked for a week. Think it failed to appeal because the locations and costuming did not appeal to my clientele of 'flappers,' and young matrons." "Good business followed extensive exploitation." "A good picture, but only a fair business."

WITHOUT BENEFIT OF CLERGY (ASSOCIATED EXHIBITORS-PATHE) .....JULY 2
"Famous Kipling story presented in fine atmosphere."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Wonderful picture which everybody liked, but due to hot weather attendance was cut down somewhat."

WOLVES OF THE NORTH (UNIVERSAL) EVA NOVAK.....MAY 21
"Conventional Alaskan story carries wonderful backgrounds."—M. P News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Mediocre picture, but it drew the crowds." "Fair business. Star not so well known." "Average picture to average business." "We advertised this one heavily but couldn't put it over.. Box office receipts very poor."

WOMAN GOD CHANGED, THE (COSMOPOLITAN-PARAMOUNT) SPECIAL CAST .....JUNE 4
"Regeneration picture certainly holds the interest"—M. P News
Exhibitor Comment—"Quite a good picture which brought good business." "Pleased very much. Really a good picture. But unequalled hot weather ruined business." "Only pleasing, receipts fair." "Very good show and business was quite up to the average, at least, despite inclement weather, and the fact that so many people are out of the city on the Gulf beaches." "Ran with Harold Lloyd's 'Among Those Present' and held 'em out every night and every matinee. Result big week and satisfied crowds. Holding second week." "Title has box office value. Audience liked it." "Did very well at box office and satisfied." "We are having too many productions on this same subject—why not a change? An average week's attendance." "Good drawing card and satisfied." "Well directed picture. Patrons were pleased and spoke of beautiful scenes." "This is a big production and no time, trouble or expense have been spared to get realism."

"Flashbacks" on Earlier Releases

"The Stealers" (Robertson-Cole)—"This is a good picture, but is too much of a 'steal' on 'The Miracle Man,' and follows too closely on the latter's heels. Consequently it fails to thrill very much and the box office receipts were only fair."

"Kismet" (Robertson-Cole)—"Fair houses this week. Second run."

"Mid-Channel" (State Rights)—"Only a fair picture, but played to a good house all week, helped along by a live comedy, 'The Punch of the Irish,' which luckily was shown the same week in which St. Patrick's Day came."

"Isobel" (State Rights)—"Had packed houses with this picture. Audiences were very much pleased with it."

"The Parish Priest" (State Rights)—"A picture that pleased a certain element of every audience. Poor run on account of Holy Week."

"The Furnace" (Realart)—"Played to a good house for a week. The picture offers an unusual field for unique exploitation."

"Broadway and Home" (Selznick)—"Better than previous O'Brien pictures. People seemed satisfied if not over enthusiastic."

"World's Apart" (Selznick)—"Just a fair picture which attracted only fair business."

"The Untamed" (Fox)—"Went over well and brought good business. Fine picture."

"The Devil" (Asso. Exhibs.)—"Had very good business with this picture. Very entertaining."

"Pink Tights" (Universal)—"Gladys Walton is gaining a following among the admirers of 'flapper stuff' and this picture while it isn't a knockout by any means, is entertaining."

"The Testing Block" (Paramount)—"Hart has gone back. Box office value of name nil. Good production, but not a sensation."

"Thoughtless Women" (Pioneer)—"Two days to average business."

"The Barbarian" (Pioneer)—"A story of the North which pleased. Three days to big business, two days and average one."

"Below the Deadline" (Ascher Productions-State Rights-Warner Bros.)—"A well made melodrama full of action."

"Silk Hosiery" (Paramount)—"Many liked it. Two days to average business."

"Chicken in Case" (Selznick)—"Owen Moore is impossible. He is as lazy as a hound, at least this is what my patrons say. Average to poor business two days."

"Alias Jimmy Valentine" (Metro)—"This one should have been the greatest box office sale I have ever had, but a great many maintained that they had seen it and there was no use to try to talk them out of it. Average business two days."

"City of Comrades" (Goldwyn)—"This went over good. Tom Moore very satisfactory star. Average business one day."

"Vengeance of Durand" (Vitagraph)—"A very fine production and Alice Joyce highly pleasing."

"Held in Trust" (Metro)—"Very good picture and star is most popular. Average business two days."

"The River's End" (First National)—"Patrons said this was the best picture ever shown here. Big business two days."

"When a Man Loves" (Vitagraph)—"Good picture and Earle Williams doing fine. He is surely a finished actor. Average business one day."

"The Penalty" (Goldwyn)—"A good box office attraction. Big business two days."

"The Perfect Woman" (First National)—"A decided improvement over 'The Love Expert.' Business not up to the standard on account of depression; no fault of the picture. Average business two days."

"The Cost" (Paramount)—"Not what it's claimed to be, a super-special; however, it is a pleasing picture, especially for the ladies; some didn't care for it, however. Average to poor business two days."

"The Jack Knife Man" (First National)—"This picture is a wonderful production. Settings and characters perfect, photography good, drawing power fair, but business very weak owing to the time of year and business depression."

"Daughter of Devil Dan" (Buffalo Film Corp.)—"This is a very pleasing picture; however, the title is bad for the elite; people didn't know what to expect. Pleased those that came. I give 'Son of Tarzan' serial credit for the business done on it."

"Are All Men Alike?" (Metro)—"A very good picture; drew good business for one day."

"Madam Peacock" (Metro)—"Terrible picture for star of this calibre. Business good; opening, fell to nothing second night."

"Home Spun Folks" (Ass'd Producers)—"A very good character play; pleased greatly with comedy."

"Black Roses" (Robertson-Cole)—"Fair business, but business not commensurate with value of picture."

"Heliotrope"—"A production which is above the average and a good box-office attraction."

"Billions" (Metro)—"Worse than 'Madam Peacock.' Business just fair. Nazimova's following remains loyal to a certain extent."

"Are All Men Alike?" (Metro)—"Just about fair, with only fair business. Not much appeal."

"The Price of Redemption" (Metro)—"This is a big picture from a spectacular point of view, and Lytell's work is satisfactory, but it is decidedly draggy and has little to hold on the spectator's interest. Business was fair."

"Idols of Clay" (Paramount)—"Perhaps I'm wrong—this may be a great picture, but my patrons agree with me that it was the reverse. Consider it an average program picture, but by no means worthy of the featuring it has had."

"What's Worth While"—"This is a splendid feature picture and good box office attraction. We did big business for the week it played at our house."

"Forbidden Fruit" (Paramount)—"Picture up to the usual De Mille standard as to photography and settings, but story seemed to be somewhat improbable. Played to average business for a week."

"To Please One Woman"—"Nothing exceptional either about the production or results from playing it."

"Peaceful Valley" (First National)—"The usual type of Charles Ray picture which drew well."

"The North Wind's Malice" (Goldwyn)—"Played to a capacity house for a week, principally because of the fact that Vera Gordon, who is featured in the picture, played in vaudeville here the same week, which resulted in some effective advertising."

Making Your Theatre National
NATIONAL advertising of "The Sheik", including a two-page double spread in The Saturday Evening Post of November, 19, 1921, makes the theatre that shows it a national institution. It lifts it immediately from the neighborhood showhouse, from the small town theatre, or from the big city picture palace to a national landmark, known to the public, respected, approved, praised, supported, overflowingly patronized. The exhibitor of "The Sheik" is more than a local theatre manager or owner. By booking it, advertising it and showing it, he immediately makes his house a National Institution.

GOOD AND EVIL

"Gorgeous!" "Showy!" "Magnificent!"

–Say the Trade Critics

Motion Picture News: "Good and Evil" is a pictorially gorgeous subject. It reaches heights that American producers still gaze at with hope and aspiration. Lucy Doraine looks like a native-born American and is going to be well-received over here.

Exhibitors Trade Review: An elaborate and spectacular production with an excellent array of principals and thousands of extras. Some of the sets are marvels of cinema art. Staged with a lavish hand.

Moving Picture World: The many adjectives used by P. T. Barnum can be applied with truth to this gorgeous spectacle. Throughout the entire production it is the stupendous, showy and magnificent backgrounds which will attract audiences.

We challenge

AFTER fifteen years of producing pictures whose success is known to every exhibitor in the whole wide world today, Universal makes this flat statement. You get more for your money in Universal Special Attractions than in any other brand of features issued weekly by any producer on earth. Universal absolutely and categorically defies the picture producers of the world to give you for the same money, fifty-two pictures a year whose average quality will even approach that of your fifty-two Universal Special Attractions.

"The Pictures Are Amazing"

New York Times

Never in the history of motion pictures has a production, BAR NONE, received such unanimously glowing criticisms.

WHY? Because there never was a picture like it!

The New York Times.

Photoplays come and go, and there's no denying that the screen must live by them to a great extent, at least for some time to come, but if there were nothing but photoplays to see, the regular attendant at motion picture theatres would have long periods of unrelieved boredom to endure, the really entertaining productions come so seldom. But there are other kinds of motion pictures, and whenever a manager has the fortune or the fortitude to devote the main part of his program to a good specimen of what the trade calls a non-dramatic film, spectators are in his debt. And this week they owe something to S. L. Rothafel for presenting Martin Johnson's latest record of exploration and adventure in a strange land, tho locality this time being Borneo. It is called "Jungle Adventures."

Mr. Johnson, and his wife, too, penetrated this wild island of the Malay Archipelago and brought back one of the most interesting, and excellently photographed, films of human, animal and plant life beyond civilization's domain that has reached Broadway. Some of the pictures are amazing, considering the difficulties under which they must have been made, and all of them are entertaining. That's exactly what they are. The spectator with imagination cannot feel that he is being instructed. Unconsciously, he feels entertained.

It is good to be able to add, too, that Mr. Johnson's film is shown as a full-length feature of a program. It is not chopped up into fillers. Also it seems honest. Its subtitles do not try to make things appear as they obviously are not.

"The Times" is conceded the severest of all New York daily newspaper critics.

Acknowledged the most severe of all Trade paper critics is "Wid's Daily"

Exceptional Pictures Corp.

DIRECTOR ..... Martin Johnson
CAMERAMAN ..... Martin Johnson
EDITED AND TITLED BY ..... Arthur Hoerl
AS A WHOLE.....A picturesque and thoroughly interesting and intimate photographic trip into the wilds of Borneo
STORY.....A filmed narrative, beautifully presented and exceedingly well photographed; of especial entertainment and educational value
DIRECTION.....Apparently had unusual influence over the players—native and animal inhabitants of a savage island
PHOTOGRAPHY ..... Excellent, often remarkable
LIGHTINGS ..... Natural effects; good
PLAYERS.....Ethiopians, orang-outangs, elephants, bears, crocodiles, cranes, herons and other animals, most of them performing unknown to themselves
EXTERIORS ..... Beautiful
INTERIORS ..... None
DETAIL ..... All that is required
CHARACTER OF STORY.....Very interesting photographic record of Mr. and Mrs. Johnson's exploration of the Borneo jungles
LENGTH OF PRODUCTION.....About 5,000 feet

"Jungle Adventures" is the first important photographic expedition made by Martin Johnson and Mrs. Johnson since "Among the Cannibals of the South Pacific," which was released in the summer of 1918, and after seeing the latest production you're liable to think that they are too few and far between. "Jungle Adventures," a picture without plot or players—as we know them—but consisting merely of a series of pictures depicting the life of the natives of Borneo and best of all, pictures of the wild animals that inhabit the jungles, taken in their own environment usually without their consent.

Besides being an unusual offering, inasmuch as the obtaining of these exceptional pictures is concerned, the Johnsons' production has an artistic, entertaining and educational value that is unmistakable—artistic in that, besides the natural beauty filmed, the photography and camera work is high grade. This is particularly noticeable in observing the variety of angles from which scenes are shot. Those of the explorer's floating home taken at different stages of the journey are quite beautiful. The picture is educational inasmuch as it takes you to a land that you are never likely to see in reality, and is a fine example of the old saying, "one half of the world never knows how the other half lives."

The picture opens with a prologue in which Mr. and Mrs. Johnson are entertaining guests with an account of their trip, followed by the actual pictures. The early reels deal with the happenings prior to the arrival at the jungle—interesting bits pertaining to the peoples, and their manner of living, together with many interesting shots taken from the little boats which carried the party down the river to its destination. The capture of a crocodile is only one of the thrills.

The most unusual feature of the production is the remarkable pictures obtained of the jungle dwellers taken in their natural surroundings. Those of an orang-outang performing on a trapeze of vines are truly wonderful. There are innumerable close ups of strange wild creatures, such as a little fellow that looks just like the Teddy bears so popular with youngsters, and other unfamiliar animals.

Arthur Hoerl has edited and titled the film and his intimate chats that connect the various divisions help make the picture the definite entertainment that it is.

Properly Handled Should Make Money

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

This will make money for you if you go about it in the proper spirit. With a little intelligent exploitation you can make it go big. You have a large variety of talking points, and especially the fact that "Jungle Adventures" is first of all a novel offering and something that they can't see every day in the week. Play it up from an educational as well as entertaining standpoint. Tell them they'll enjoy the trip as much as if they had actually experienced it. Tell them to surely bring the kiddies—who will eat it up.

"Roxy," in presenting the picture at the Capitol, decorated the lobby with caged birds and a monkey, and the same stunt should prove attractive everywhere. "Polly Wants a Cracker" always gets attention and if you can only secure talking parrots, they will do the trick. You can be liberal with promises and any expense incurred in putting the film over should be amply repaid by the box office receipts if you go about it in the right way. It's pictorial side will appeal to everyone.

Our Opinion

SKILLFULLY CONSTRUCTED DRAMA OF POLITICAL DIPLOMACY ROMANCE AND HEART INTEREST

George Arliss' impersonation of "Disraeli" is one of the best if not the most faultless character portrayal that the screen has yet given us. As the mind reverts to Emil Jannings' Henry VIII we wonder which of these two masters betrayed the keener conception of his art, for each impersonation stands out as an individual and masterful performance. The role of "Disraeli", the unconquerable Jew, the seer, the diplomatist, the man of many moods but unshaken purpose is defined by George Arliss with vivid realism. In watching his performance you are conscious that it is the varied emotions by which the master craftsman—he lives the part. The varied emotions by work of the master crafts-touched, the artfulness of the Jew, the sovereign, strategy of the diplomatist, loyalty as a subject and ambition for his sovereign, tenderness and devotion as a husband, sympathy with romantic youth, fearful apprehension of calamity to his loved ones, all of these flow as naturally as life itself under the guidance of the finished interpreter. The picture itself stands out as a splendidly constructed work of art. It is played by a group of artists all of whom work with assurance. It is beautifully photographed and has been assembled in a masterful way. The story based on one of the great strategic moves in British history, and adapted from the famous play by Louis N. Parker offers a tensely dramatic situation which author, adapter and director have grasped to the full. The staging of the picture is artistic, many beautiful interior and exterior sets being used. Louise Huff as Clarissa is exquisite, and Reginald Denny fits the role of Count Deerford well. The excellent work of Margaret Dale as a Russian spy is worthy of mention. And in fact so capably have all the players performed their respective roles that it seems hardly fair to single out any particular individuals for special praise. While "Disraeli" is a distinctive production we believe that the very human qualites with which it has been imbued will recommend it to all classes.

STORY OF THE PLAY

Disraeli, a Jew who entered the British Parliament in 1837 and was appointed Prime Minister in 1867 by Queen Victoria, devised the plan to buy the controlling interest in the Suez Canal. Prejudice and jealousy caused Sir Michael Probert, president of the Bank of England, from whom Disraeli expected to gain backing for the purchase which he deemed an immediate necessity for the protection of the British Empire, to refuse. And when Russia, kept posted by her secret service, sank the vessel carrying Argentine gold to be loaned him by Hugh Meyers, now bankrupt, and whose check had already been accepted in payment for the controlling stock, he saw disgrace staring him in the face as well as failure to accomplish the dream of his life in making his sovereign, Empress of India. The master mind again arising to the occasion convinces Probert that he, Disraeli, is vested with power to command him to sign a paper already prepared, giving Meyers unlimited credit at the Bank of England. And so the scheme that helped make British history was forced to a successful ending.

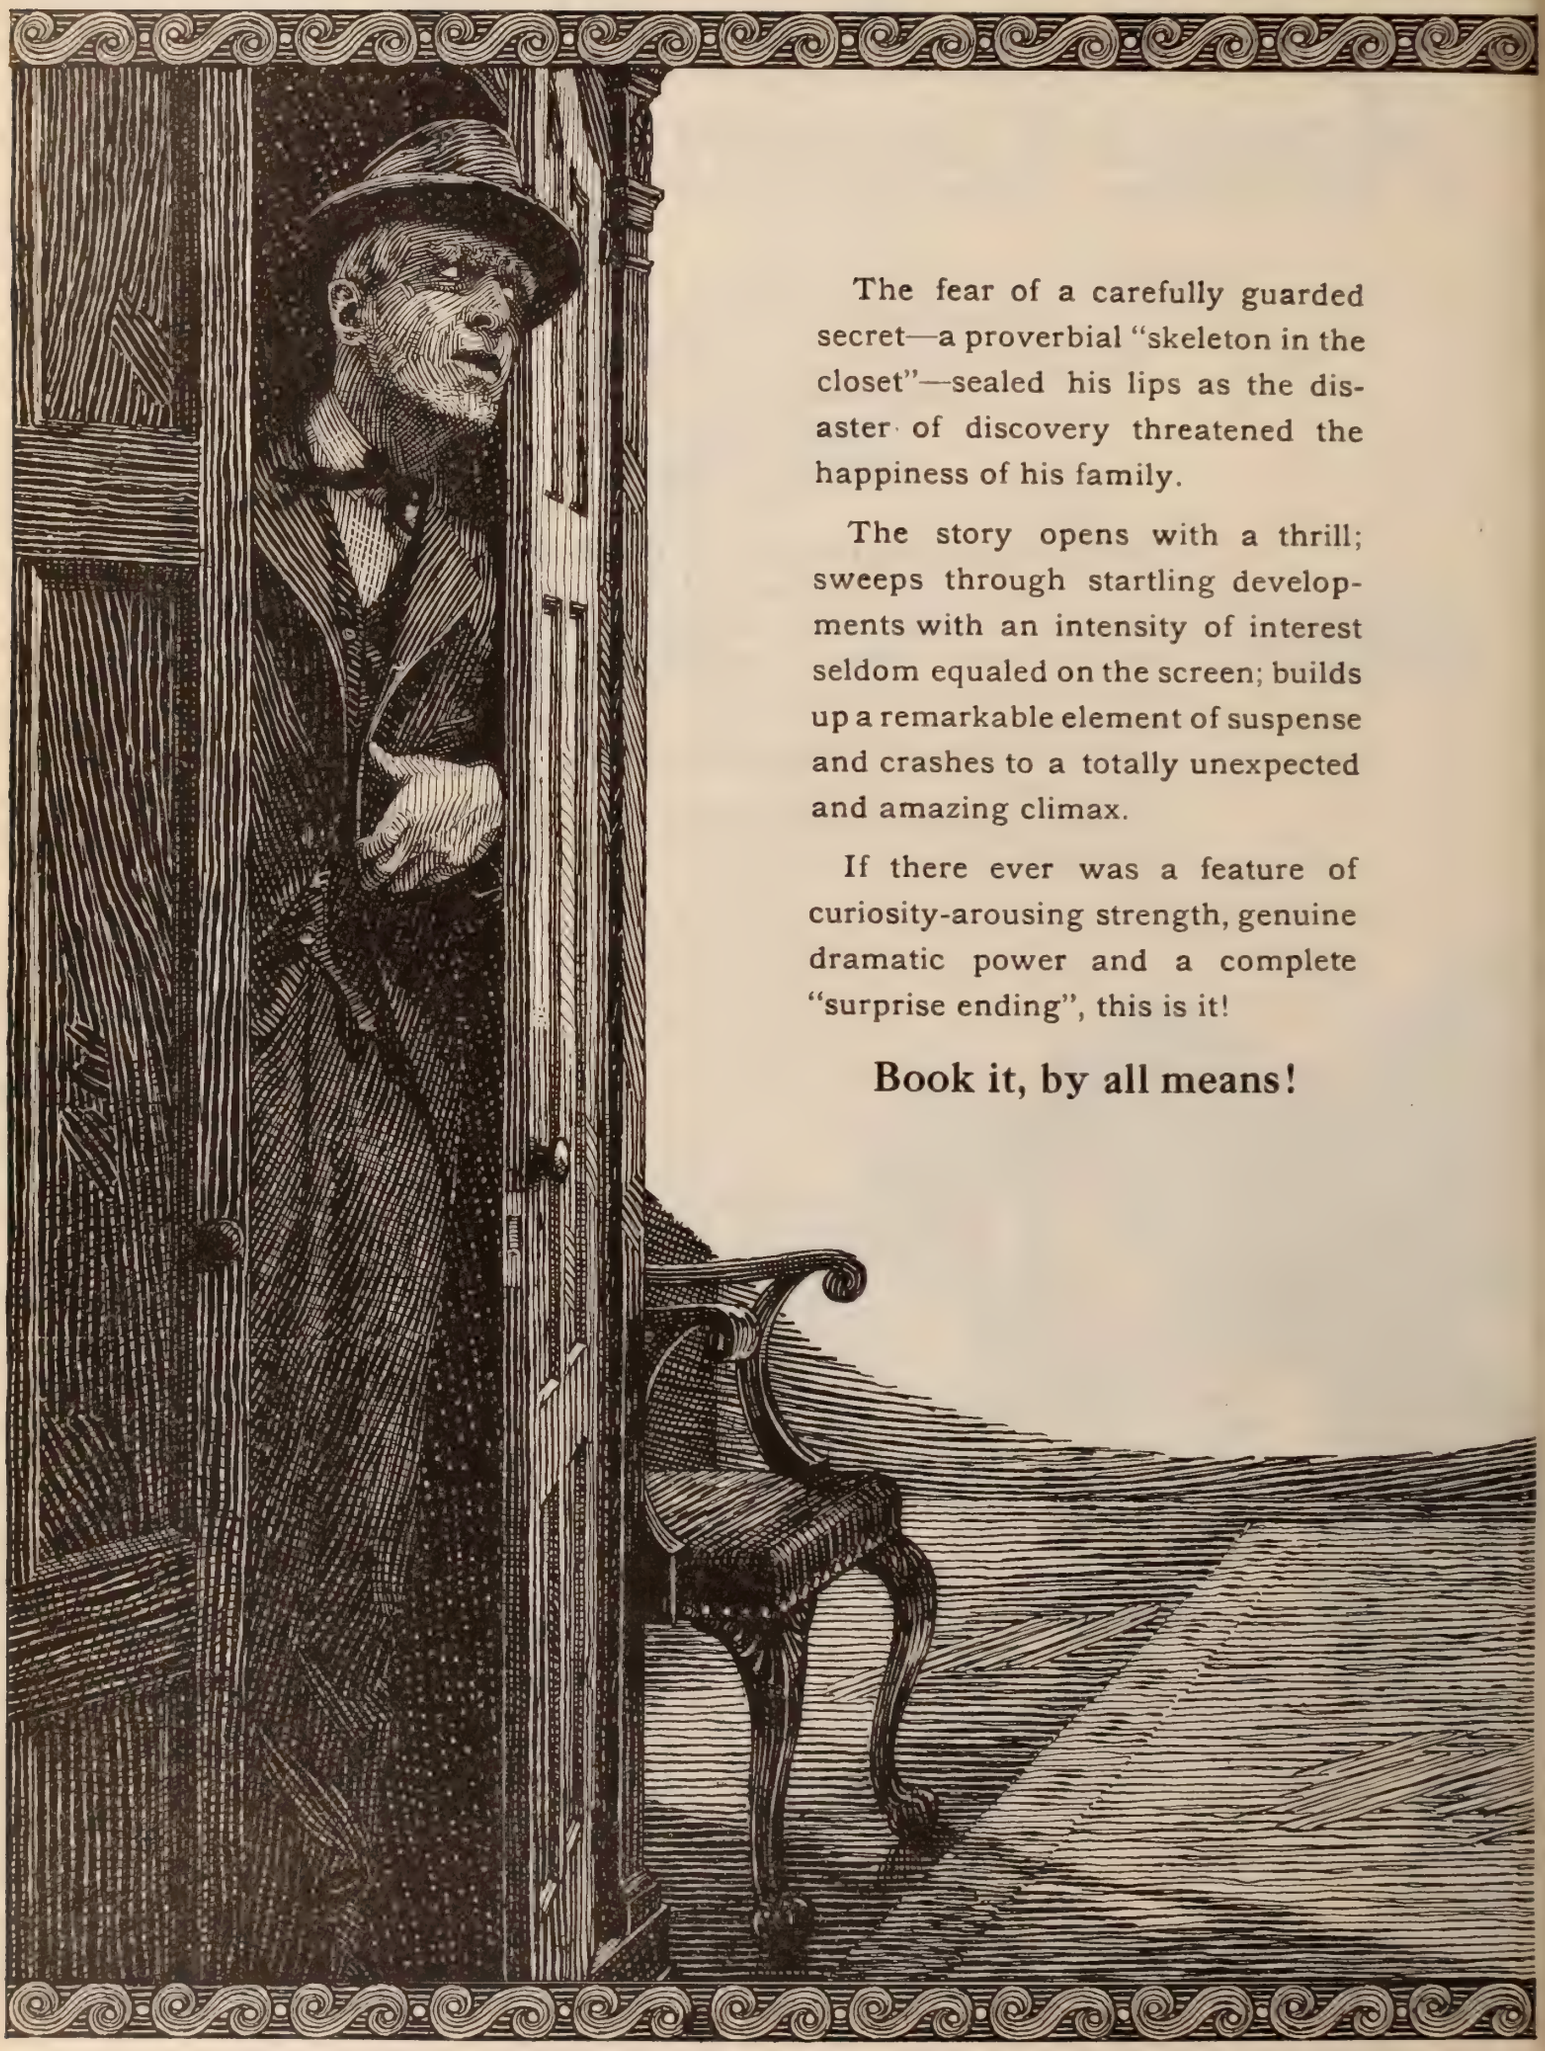
Direct, sincere, inspiring and trully entertaining "Home Keeping Hearts" is bound to please your patrons. It is a drama of rural America, a story of the lives of real people. It is perfect in atmosphere, plot and dramatic presentation.

Exhibitors and public agree in declaring that it "rings true".

It is a feature which will produce profits and promote good will.



The fear of a carefully guarded secret—a proverbial "skeleton in the closet"—sealed his lips as the disaster of discovery threatened the happiness of his family.

The story opens with a thrill; sweeps through startling developments with an intensity of interest seldom equaled on the screen; builds up a remarkable element of suspense and crashes to a totally unexpected and amazing climax.

If there ever was a feature of curiosity-arousing strength, genuine dramatic power and a complete "surprise ending", this is it!

Book it, by all means!

AMERICAN 10 POINT PRINTS

Your Negative is Safe When Entrusted to American

Point 3: Responsibility

It's natural for the owner of a valuable negative to entrust it to others with some hesitation. It represents a tremendous investment. A few seconds of carelessness on the part of an inexperienced laboratory employee may ruin it. That's why more and more producers are insisting on American "10 Point Prints."

American laboratories are equipped throughout with the most modern apparatus known to science. Its technicians are men who have spent years in perfecting their skill. Above all else—the company is financially responsible, assures the negative owner against "duping" of his product—or the sale of unauthorized prints.

In the little box at the left you will find itemized a few of the many reasons why American "10 Point Prints" are preferred above all others. Call or write our Chicago or London offices for further information.

The Why of the 10 Points

1. Quality. Prints known for brilliancy and clearness. Expert staff, trained by years of experience, assures highest quality prints obtainable.
2. Reputation. Gained in 10 years of experience.
3. Responsibility. A concern of strong financial standing.
4. Location. In the proper geographical location, assuring quick delivery anywhere.
5. Equipment. All of the most modern obtainable.
6. Cleanliness. Within two blocks of Lake Michigan. Away from dirt and dust.
7. Safety. Plant approved by both city of Chicago and Board of Fire Underwriters.
8. Promptness. Accustomed to serve exacting requirements.
9. Prices. Reasonable and competitive.

Guy de Maupassant's CLASSIC

THE ORDERLY

A Confession Dragged from the Depths of a Girl's Heart

The young wife just out of her teens; her elderly husband, the colonel; the handsome young officer; and the sly, slinking, susceptible orderly. With these characters De Maupassant created a story that the world knows and has read again and again.

She wanted to be square, so she told her husband what was torture to drag from her heart. Her confession was the climax to a life drama that burned like a branding iron.

Daring, realistic, powerful like De Maupassant's story

From the collection of: Lambert Gaudiner

The Principal Characters in

"ONE ARABIAN NIGHT"

A-A-A-Ah!

The Dancer!

The wild desert dancer—more beautiful madcap ne'er threw careless kiss. Scoffer at all men's love yet slave at last to her own.

Beware!

The Mighty Sheik!

Master of the Palace Magnificent—Lord of a hundred wives – swift to wrath, avenging disloyalty with death—but himself disloyal ever. His one ungratified wish the love of the beautiful dancer.

Oh, Man!

The Hunchback Clown

Behold in him symbol of man's folly—the old fool's folly longing for youth's caresses trust in a woman's guile! A sad, sad jester is he—yet noble is his love and beautiful, for his wild desert dancer.

Beauteous One!

The Favorite Wife

Unwilling recipient of the Sheik's favor, risking life for true love, spared the block because of the nobility of an unwanted lover. Behold Zuleika, who finds happiness where another would have found despair. She is the best beloved.

The Rogue (a bad one)

The Slave Dealer

He knows where the beauties grow, he knows women's hearts, he knows men's greed —he slinks and grovels and loves nothing but gold. Coward! Miser! Victim of eunuch and slave, yet master of humankind. A creature of no regrets —a merry jester.

Hist!

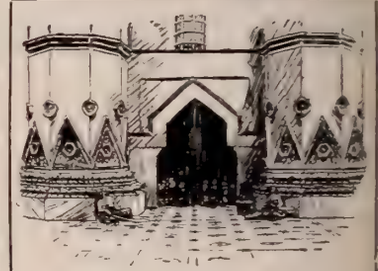
The Chief Eunuch!

Tough is his lot—verily his is a dog's life—keeper of the hundred jealous wives in the mighty Sheik's harem. Sorry the day for him when the Sheik commands, "Go forth and bring me the beautiful dancer!" Some job! as you shall see.

She's Sly!

Haidee, the Schemer

What cares she for the law of the Harem? The mighty Sheik! Bah! A fool for his wives' entertainment. Harem guards! Eunuchs! Sleeping dolts all when Haidee smuggles a guest to the harem—she foils all men.



Keep Out!

These are

The Gates of The Harem

Strange secrets they guard, veiled lives, beautiful wives. Of' living men, none but the mighty Sheik may pass their frowning portals. Intrigues, a low whistle in the night, murmurings, the kiss of sword and scimitar.

The supreme court of the screen, The National Board of Review, says in its official report on this picture:

"This vivid, swift moving picture is the peer of Oriental dramas on the screen. It has the true atmosphere of an Arabian Nights tale and must rank as one of the exceptional photoplays of the year. It has both dramatic intensity and comic relief of an unusual order. The acting of Pola Negri may be said to be the finest and most convincing of her career before the American public and the supporting cast is one of great ability."

Motion Picture News

Now for Unity

The pity of it!

The shame of it!

Week by week, month after month; now this event, now that happening; always—SOMEWHERE, SOMETHING is shrieking aloud to the picture industry:

"When are you going to present a united front? When are you going to select authorized spokesmen? When—in the name of all that is associated with common sense—when will you reach the age of reason?"

What need to recount disagreeable memories, to rake over unpleasant recollections?

And still we flounder along; waddle about; goose-stepping to the battle-cry, "All the king's horses and all the king's men can't put Humpty Dumpty together again."

The pity of it!

The shame of it!

It is all so simple.

It is all so inevitable.

Sixteen words have stated the entire need: "The formation of a joint committee with full power to speak and act for an industry."

Just a "Contact Committee"—a point of contact with the world outside; speaking for the motion picture; answering for the motion picture. A united front on the field of battle regardless of any family spats that may arise behind the doors of our own house. And our door closed when there is dirty linen to be washed!

So simple! Exhibitors, producers, distributors—each selecting representatives on a joint committee. Empowering that committee to speak and act on legislative matters, to state the industry's position in such other crises as arise and state it clearly and distinctly at the moment that declaration has value. Not after hurtling brickbats have broken all our windows.

There are no entangling alliances here for any branch of the industry. There need be no discussion of internal business relations on the part of such a committee; by its very existence the committee insures a fair and square deal for every branch in external affairs.

So inevitable. For, gentlemen, there are forces in nature that control men who cannot control themselves. Whether we bring about this united front, or successors do it, come it must, come it will. Our own importance in the scheme of affairs will be measured by our weight after the industry has achieved reason, not by appearances in its adolescence.

What is wrong?

Who is wrong?

Mr. Cohen has stated that the Motion Picture Theatre Owners welcome cooperation.

Mr. Brady has not been backward in stating the need of unity in action.

Well—what on earth is delaying the inevitable?

We believe heartily that both Mr. Cohen and his associates and Mr. Brady and his advisors are at this very moment equal in a sincere and ardent desire to see the formation of a Contact Committee.

At this very moment!

Then, if this be the case, the neglect of a moment so rich in opportunity will be to the never-ending shame of every individual who owes his being to the motion picture.

Are invitations needed?

A guarantee of faith?

From the Theatre Owners to the National Association?

Or the National Association to the Theatre Owners?

Buncombe! Let's get out in the great wide open—away from political side-stepping, away from the eternal motion picture fear of what's in the other fellow's sleeve—and put this thing over.

Let this be the invitation! And let the free, pure air of publicity be the guarantee of faith. The NEWS, for one, will pledge its columns to the fulfilment of that guarantee; and back the pledge with all the impartiality, strength and vigilance at its command.

That goes!

There's nothing in the way. The invitations are out. Two men and a telephone can start the wheels moving. Two Executive Committees in joint session can complete the deed. Let's go!

WM. A. JOHNSTON.

Western New York Exhibitors Hold Meeting

Charles L. O'Reilly, president of the New York Exhibitors' State League, and Sam Berman, secretary, spoke before the Western New York unit of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners at an overflow meeting in the Hotel Iroquois, Buffalo, Tuesday. Howard J. Smith, president of the unit, presided. Fifty-one theatres were represented at the meeting.

The organization went on record against daylight saving in Buffalo, against showing pictures on percentage and against the tax on music. The members also voted to aid in the fight to get First National to lower the exhibiting value on pictures. Messrs. O'Reilly and Berman also assured the members that they would help in bringing about the elimination of the 30-day production clause given by Buffalo exchanges to some houses. A committee was appointed to procure speakers to conduct a campaign of education on the motion picture industry before local business men and luncheon clubs.

Mr. O'Reilly and Mr. Berman spoke in Rochester Tuesday night before the Flower City Theatre Owners. Binghamton and Syracuse will be the next fields for organizing. When the state organization is complete the next convention date will be set.

Pickford and Fairbanks to Sail for Europe Sept. 24

Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks are ready for their departure to Europe next Saturday (September 24) on the White Star steamship Olympic from New York. The popular pair of film favorites will remain abroad for several months, principally for a rest after the long strain of work on their latest production.

Miss Pickford and Mr. Fairbanks contemplate taking a house in Paris and making it their home and headquarters while abroad, taking brief trips to other foreign European capitals.

During their stay abroad plans will be completed for releasing "Little Lord Fauntleroy" and "The Three Musketeers" in Paris and London and others of the principal cities of the European countries.

Stage-Workers' Union on Strike in Los Angeles

One hundred and eighty members of the Los Angeles stage workers' union went on a strike on Friday last as the result of differences over wage demands. Their places were filled by stage workers formerly employed at local studios, and the theatre owners claim a complete victory.

The theatre owners asked the union to agree to a reduction of ten per cent in wages, but while the union agreed to a five per cent cut, they demanded a six-day week, with an extra to work in place of the man off. This demand was refused and the strike followed.

Again—Get Together!

Motion Picture News,
New York, N. Y.
Gentlemen:

I believe that if every theatre in the United States will circulate a petition and use slides to bring it to the attention of patrons that twenty-five million names can be gotten to a petition to Congress asking that they remove the ticket tax, film tax and seat tax.

It would be the duty of the trade papers to unite in this and give it all the publicity possible and urge every theatre to join in the movement.

The exchanges should furnish these petitions to the theatres in their territory so every one would have a proper petition and then every one of these petitions should be mailed by registered mail on a certain date to the Senator from the district in which the theatre is located.

I believe that a concerted effort by the trade journals, producers and exchanges with the theatres that Congress would heed the "voices" and that these taxes would be removed.

What do you think?

Very truly yours,
Jay Allen Glenn, Mgr.,
Gay Theatre, Inc.,
Newport, Tenn.

We are not at all sure that public interest can be aroused in matters of taxation, as Mr. Glenn suggests. At the same time a strong appeal could be launched and it should be tried at least. We are certain, however, that the method Mr. Glenn suggests, is just the way to stop censorship. The public today, practically the entire public, doesn't know what censorship means. And if the public did know the public would protest against it.

The public can be told all about censorship through the screen. And if censorship is ever to be stopped the screen must do it. But the trouble today is that we have no unity in this industry, not enough at least to use forcefully our own weapon of defense. The producers want to help, the exchanges want to help, the trade papers want to help, the advertisers' association want to prepare material—and of course, only the exhibitors can flash the campaign to the public.

We need today—and immediately—a juncture between our existing organizations of producers and exhibitors and distributors so that this all-important end—of unification—can be had. And Mr. Glenn and every other exhibitor and every individual with an investment at stake has a RIGHT—an UNANSWERABLE right—to demand that this unification be brought about.

WM. A. JOHNSTON.

Joseph Aller Comes East

Joseph Aller, resident head of the Rothacker-Aller Laboratories in Hollywood, came east recently for a conference with officials of the Rothacker enterprises.

Mr. Aller had two busy days in the Windy City. Saturday evening he was Lake Michiganed and dined by executives of the Chicago Laboratory. Court Restrains Use of "Rialto" by Orchestra

The Rialto Theatre Corporation calls attention to a decision enjoining certain persons from using the name of "Rialto" in connection with an orchestra now playing at the Manhattan Opera House.

The decision was handed down by Justice Richard P. Lydon, Special Term, Part I, of the Supreme Court, held in and for the County of New York, September 16.

Augustus Thomas Admitted to M.P.D.A. Lodge

The regular semi-monthly meeting of the Motion Picture Directors' Association, September 20, was unusually well attended. In fact, it brought together one of the largest gatherings in the history of the New York Lodge of M.P.D.A.

Augustus Thomas, dean of American playwrights, a man known to every department of the theatrical world, was made an honorary member.

A unique combination of three presidents of three of the largest factors in the amusement world included President J. Searle Dawley, who succeeded Charles Miller for the balance of the term, and who, for the second time, is president of the New York Lodge of M.P.D.A. He served previously in 1917 and was one of the founders of the eastern chapter.

Mr. Thomas, in addition to all other honors, is president of the Authors' League of America, a figure in the history of the American theatre. The meeting was addressed by Mr. Sydney S. Cohen, president Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, following the conclusion of the initiation.

Plan Enforcement of Missouri Deposit Law

One of the questions brought up for active discussion during the Missouri-Kansas exhibitors' convention held last week was that concerning the Missouri deposit law and its enforcement. Some exhibitors declared that various exchanges were disregarding the law entirely. Complaints were also made that in certain instances deposits had been withdrawn from the banks by exchanges after the first of a series had been shown. The Missouri theatre owners decided to finance the case of a single exhibitor to determine the validity of the law, so that if proved flawless all exchanges may be obliged to live up strictly to the requirements of the measure.

The questions of organization finance and the place of the next convention were submitted to the executive committee for its decisions.

Universal to Open Up New Exchanges in Argentine

Ever since Carl Laemmle placed George E. Kann in charge of the direction of foreign business and foreign markets of the Universal it has been his aim to have the Universal represented in as many countries as possible by its own agencies and releasing machinery.

In line with this accepted policy of the company, Mr. Kann has just announced the appointment of Monroe Isen as his representative to open up and operate Universal exchanges in the Argentine. He will establish headquarters in Buenos Aires and, using this as his basis of operation, he will establish five or six branches in Argentine at strategic points, to be decided after he reaches there.

Richard A. Rowland Resigns from Presidency of Metro

Resignation Effective on Return from Europe the First of the Year

RICHARD A. ROWLAND, president of Metro Pictures Corporation, announces his resignation from the organization, to take effect when he returns from Europe at the first of the year. To set at rest rumors which have recently been current along Broadway, the announcement is made before Mr. Rowland's departure for his trip abroad, during which he will present the Rex Ingram production of "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" in the leading capitals. He sails Thursday, accompanied by Mrs. Rowland, on the Berengaria for Southampton and will go immediately to London.

"I am leaving Metro with the kindliest feelings for Marcus Loew and for my other associates in the Metro organization," Mr. Rowland said. "Since the merger last year of Metro with the Loew organization our associations have been uniformly pleasant. The only reason I have for leaving Metro is because of a desire to get into business for myself. I have not formulated my plans for the future, but will make an announcement on my return of any I may have then.

"In going abroad I am taking with me prints of 'The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse.' The first foreign presentation of the picture will be made in London. Vincente Blasco Ibanez, the author of the book, will meet me in London and will be present for the premiere of the picture. After the London presentation the picture will be shown in Paris and in the other European capitals.

"I am quite sure that the picture will duplicate in Europe the sensation it created in the United States. This confidence is based not merely upon the universal appeal of the story and its success as a novel in Europe, but upon the opinions of hundreds of European experts who have seen the picture here and who have predicted an unprcedented success for it abroad. I have received hundreds of letters about it from European exhibitors. They are all extremely anxious to show it.

"With the completion of my European tour, which will bring me back the first of the year, I shall be in New York ready to lay my future plans. I am leaving Metro after having been with the organization since its beginning. I have watched it grow year by year into a steadily more important producing firm. I have seen it outdistance many competitors and continually forge ahead, making better pictures every year. I am proud of the organization as it now stands, with an excellently balanced producing concern at Hollywood and with the highly developed distributing organization of Mr. Loew to spread the pictures through the country.

"I have given to Metro some of the best years of my life and my unceasing efforts for its success. I cannot help having a feeling of personal pride in the achievements of the organization and I shall follow its future developments confident that it will go on to still finer achievements. All of the members of the organization are my personal friends and I look to them to carry on as splendidly as they have in the past. They all have my best wishes."

Chaplin Wins Injunction Suit Against the Rollo Sales Corporation

A DECISION of extreme importance to all exhibitors booking the productions of Charles Chaplin, especially those which he has made and is making for distribution by Associated First National Pictures, was handed down by Judge Hough, of the United States District Court, on Setpember 15, in the action brought by Chaplin against the Rollo Sales Corporation.

Through Nathan Burkan, his attorney, Mr. Chaplin sought to restrain the Rollo Sales Corporation from putting out three films purporting to be Chaplin productions, but which he charged were nothing but "hash" made up of cut-outs from numerous of his pictures.

Judge Hough, after hearing the argument, decided that the motion should be granted, and that an order should be made restraining and enjoining the defendant, Rollo Sales Corporation, from making any use of these pictures for public exhibition. Chaplin was required to file a bond for $1,000.

According to a statement from First National headquarters, in an affidavit submitted by Stanley J. Rollo, it was acknowledged that the films complained of were, in part, made up of cut-outs taken from original Chaplin pictures.

A supporting affidavit submitted by Joseph La Rose in behalf of the Rollo Sales Corporation set forth that these cut-outs were assembled into three pictures, says First National, bearing the titles of "The Bootleggers," "Dollars and Doughnuts" and "The Movie Nut."

The matter was laid before the Federal Trade Commission, and that body took steps to compel the use of the old titles on the paper for the reissues, along with the new ones, fairly giving the public notice that these were old productions.

If Film Tariff Passes Pay Cut Likely, Gompers Told

Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, was visited in Washington last week by William A. Brady, president of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, and Saul E. Rogers, chairman of the association's taxation committee, who placed before him the industry's arguments against the proposed 30 per cent ad valorem duty on imported film. At the labor leader's request Chairman Rogers has embodied the principal arguments against the tariff in a letter which he has forwarded to President Gompers.

"It is my opinion," said Chairman Rogers, "after very careful consideration of this tariff question, that if the measure is passed it will be disastrous to the industry and the labor employed therein. It will mean either driving American producers abroad in order to enter the foreign market or a material reduction in the wage scale of labor employed in order to meet the material diminution in business and profits."

Michigan Exhibitors Will Convene October 4-5

With the assurance that Sydney S. Cohen, national president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, and Senator J. J. Walker, counsel of that organization, will be present as headliners, the second annual convention of the Michigan Motion Picture Exhibitors Association, to be held at Jackson, Mich., October 4th and 5th, promises to be a notable event.

Added to the above speakers slated for the convention, the organization has been assured that Lieut. Governor Thomas Reed of Lansing will be present and also their former manager, A. J. Moeller of New York, who is now general manager of the national organization. It is very probable that Governor Grossbeck of Michigan will accept the invitation extended to him.

It is anticipated that 300 exhibitors will turn their faces toward Jackson this year, as the convention this year is of very vital importance. At the present time the organization has a membership of 581 theatres of the 612 in the state. A year ago the membership was 275.

The convention headquarters will be at the Otsego hotel, with business session at Castle hall and a banquet at the Jackson City Club.

Alfred Cheney Johnston to Open New York Studio

Alfred Cheney Johnston, the prominent artist-photographer, will on October 1st open a new studio in New York City.

Iowa and Nebraska Exhibitors in Convention

Theatre Owners of Sister States Plan Co-operation; Optimistic Over Future Business

OPTIMISM as to the early return to big business was the keynote of the second annual convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Iowa and Nebraska, held in Omaha, Neb., September 20th and 21st.

It was a joint convention of the Iowa and Nebraska associations, with the proposed permanent amalgamation of the two organizations as an important issue. It was also the first birthday of the Nebraska M. P.T.O. Eighty members of the organizations of the two states attended. Business sessions were held in the Paxton Hotel. The sessions were marked by important addresses by various leaders on the real duty of picture theatres to the public.

Sentiment was voiced against the Federal music tax law.

The convention opened with a meeting of the executive committee, with A. R. Pramer, manager of the Alhambra theatre at Omaha, presiding, and J. Erle Kirk, manager of the Grand theatre, Omaha, acting as secretry. Stewart Gould, executive secretary of the Nebraska organization, and G. B. Flint, secretary of the Iowa organization, also were present. Harry Hiersteiner, president of the Iowa association, could not attend.

Mayor J. C. Dahlman delivered the address of welcome, praising the good work of motion picture in community life. The response to the mayor's address was made by Thomas Arthur, manager of the Cecil theatre, Mason City, Iowa.

On the second day of the convention various committees were appointed, including those on resolutions, auditing of accounts, co-operation of the Iowa and Nebraska units, ways and means, and nomination of officers.

Stewart Gould read the financial report of the Nebraska association and made a strong talk in favor of amalgamation. Lawrence W. Golman of Kansas City, Mo., counsel for the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Missouri and Kansas, addressed the convention on the music tax law. "Don't play this copyright music," he pleaded. "Popularize other stuff. You will find that it is not so difficult. There is plenty of other music without using melodies on which you have to pay a tax."

Al. Steffes, president of the Minnesota M.P.T.O., made an interesting speech, dealing with many exhibitor problems. A. R. Pramer read the report of the national committee's meeting in Washington, D. C. J. Erle Kirk won the hearty approval of the convention with a talk on the type of pictures most appreciated by the public. "Be careful about the pictures you chose, but let the pictures be the judge," Mr. Kirk urged. His talk was in endorsement of the policies announced by Governor S. R. McKelvie of Nebraska, who vetoed the state censorship bill at the last session of the legislature.

Officers Elected by Iowa and Nebraska League

A WIRE received on going to press advises that the Iowa and Nebraska units of the M. P. T. O. will not effect a permanent amalgamation. They have created instead a board of control which will be representative of both state organizations and will work together in issues that affect both.

The following officers were elected for the Nebraska association:

President, A. R. Pramer of Omaha; vice-president, H. F. Kennedy, Broken Bow; secretary, J. Erle Kirk, Omaha; treasurer, S. A. Hayman, Omaha.

The executive committee comprises the following: George Macardle, H. F. Kennedy, George Munroe, J. C. Jenkins, Fred Thornburg, J. Erle Kirk, H. S. Goldberg, F. B. Honey, W. D. Fisher, F. L. Smith, J. A. Schoonover, and A. G. King.

The board of control consists of the following Nebraska members: George Macardle, J. Erle Kirk, and George Munroe.

The following officers, who will serve until the meeting of the state convention in Des Moines, were elected for the Iowa unit:

President, Alex Frank of Waterloo; vice-president, Morris Cohn, Council Bluffs; secretary, W. E. Waterhouse, Charles City; treasurer, M. R. Tourneur, Mason City.

The directors are: Dr. Parry, Tom Brown, W. A. Dutton, W. H. Simpson, Ralph Fyfe, J. Eyrley, E. Metzger, W. Beardsley, W. Johnson, and Nathan Dax.

A banquet at the Hotel Paxton concluded the convention. The exhibitors who were present included:

Nebraska.—Rohde and Freeman, Yutan; P. H. Happen, York; E. Garley, Wayne; F. L. Smith, Wahoo; M. L. Rodee, Westpoint; I. C. Hon, Waterloo; Swan Olsen, Walthill; R. W. Small, Wymore; R. C. Markel, Wymore; C. E. Byers, Valley; L. A. Furniss, Tilden; F. W. Huston, Tekamah; S. E. Broadright, Tabor; F. J. O'Hara, Spalding; Jack Rousek, Schuyler; W. J. Larson, Oakland; W. L. Douglas, Newman Grove; D. F. Thornburg, Nebraska City; H. L. Howard, Norfolk; Elias Yeager, Humphrey; W. A. Bowker, Huntington; W. D. Fisher, Grand Island; H. O. Peterson, Genoa; L. B. Seamore, Glenwood; E. C. Preston, Grand Island; S. A. Hammer, Grand Island; Bob Wahl, Fremont; R. B. Thomas, Fremont; A. R. Moore, Eustis; F. N. Brown, Dixon; W. W. Hughes, David City; George Munroe, Beatrice; Albert E. Dallemand, Arapahoe; Joseph Schoonauer, Aurora, and Wilfred Ledoux, Omaha.

Iowa.—Charles DeWulf, Cedar Rapids; C. M. Perlgeive, Corning; Morris S. Cohn, Council Bluffs; Benjamin Harding, Council Bluffs; W. E. Waterhouse, Charles City; Phil A. Schlumberger, Denison; Peter Kurth, Denison; B. J. Van Dyke, Des Moines; J. Smith, Fort Dodge; F. F. Wise, Fort Dodge; William Johnson, Fort Dodge; O. J. Hosack, Missouri Valley; E. N. Hardin, Malvern; H. W. Kerr, Sioux City; D. E. Arries, Lemars; H. Haskell, Demars; H. H. Russell, Humboldt; Howard Coulon, Hamburg; F. M. Childs, Villisca; W. W. Walt, Sioux City; Nathan Dax, Sioux City; Thomas Arthur, Mason City.

Col. W. N. Selig to Produce for Export and Import

L. Auerbach, general manager of the Export and Import Film Company, announced during the week that his company had closed a contract with Col. W. N. Selig whereby the latter will produce exclusively for the Export and Import Film Company for a period of three years. It is further stated that Selig will immediately begin the production of a fifteen-reel chapter-picture for Export and Import.

Southern Picture Exposition Date Changed

Word from the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of North Carolina advises that the date for the Southern Motion Picture Exposition has been changed to November 29th and 30th and December 1st and 2nd. The exposition will be held in the City Auditorium at Charlotte. It is expected to be "the biggest thing of its kind ever held in this country," according to advance reports.

New C. O. D. Rule Made on Express Shipments

The express companies have adopted a new and important ruling affecting C.O.D. film shipments whereby, after October 10, the amount of the C.O.D. will be accepted as the value of the shipment and charges assessed accordingly, unless a higher or lower value is declared by the shipper, inserted in the receipt and marked on the shipment by the shipper.

The attention of all company members of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry has been called to the new regulation in a bulletin just issued by P. H. Stilson, Chairman of the association's Transportation Committee. Mr. Stilson states that the C.O.D. valuation clause is contained in Supplement No. 9 to the Official Express Classification No. 27, issued September 1st.

New Million Dollar Corporation in N. Y.

With one million dollar corporation and approximately $500,000 represented in the capitalization of twelve other companies, the incorporation of motion picture concerns in New York state showed a decided increase the past week in comparison with the past two months. These companies, with the amount of capitalization and directors for the first year, are:

Torino Films, Inc., $1,000,000, Harry R. Raver, B. Wheeler and J. L. Dudley, New York; K. E. & L. Amusement Corporation, $25,000, Bernard Edelhertz, Isador and Samuel Kraus, New York; Orpheum Music Publishing Corporation, $10,000, William and H. S. Hechheimer, David Schneer, New York; Skorand Corporation, $20,000, Samuel Riegelhaupt, Pawtucket, R. I.; Charles Wolf and Benjamin Guttman, Brooklyn; Pande, Inc., $50,000, E. Ellis, Jr., C. J. Brucker Co., Inc., $100,000, Arthur P. Buckner, Louis C. Whiton, J. Anthony Minott, New York; the Italian American Theatrical Corporation, $200,000, Ario Flamma, New York; Albert J. D'Andrea, Benoit Mauro, Brooklyn.

Censor Board Recommended for Los Angeles

A board of censors of seven persons was recommended to the city council of Los Angeles at its last meeting by the public welfare committee.

A public hearing on the question was held last week. Film interests, the chamber of commerce, and various business organizations pleaded against censorship, but church interests threatened to take the initiative if the council did not enact such an ordinance. The committee recommends four members from the film industry at a salary of $2,100 annually.

The church organizations of Pasadena have petitioned the city council there for the passage of a censorship ordinance creating a board of three members and providing for a tax of twenty-five cents a reel for examination.

All branches of the film industry here are united in the fight against both ordinances.

British Exhibitors' Commission Coming

COLONEL FRED LEVY, original Associated First National franchise holder for Kentucky and Tennessee, has returned from a summer spent in Europe, the climax of which has a pleasant and profitable sojourn in London as the final chapter of his maiden trip abroad.

The Colonel had scarcely set foot upon American soil again, when a cable arrived from England, announcing that a committee of British exhibitors would cross the Atlantic next month, to study the American motion picture industry at close range. They will avail themselves, in particular, of the opportunity afforded by the united invitation of Colonel Levy, Bruce Johnson and David P. Howells, to make a thorough and exhaustive study of Associated First National Pictures, as a practical and successful example of co-operative exhibitor distribution on a national scale.

The committee, representing the Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association of Great Britain and Ireland and British exhibitors in general, will be composed of between three and six exhibitors. They sail for America October 15, and it is hoped and expected that they will make arrangements to remain for at least a month and possibly longer. Though the personnel of the committee has not been decided upon finally, W. Gavazzi King, secretary of the C. E. A., is thought to be a likely member of the visiting group.

Universal's New Contract Clause

AS a direct result of the unfortunate affair in the St. Francis Hotel, San Francisco, the Universal, on advice of its counsel, Stanchfield & Levy, has taken action which will, it is hoped, have a three-fold effect. It has telegraphed to Irving C. Thalberg, its general manager at Universal City, to insert in all existing and future contracts with actors, actresses and directors the following clause:

"The actor-actress agrees to conduct himself-herself with due regard to public conventions and morals and agrees that he-she will not do or commit anything tending to degrade him-her in society or bring him-her into public hatred, contempt, scorn or ridicule, or tending to shock, insult or offend the community or outrage public morals or decency, or tending to the prejudice of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company or the motion picture industry. In the event that the actor-actress violates any term or provision of this paragraph, then the Universal Film Manufacturing Company has the right immediately to cancel and annul this contract by giving five (5) days' written notice to the actor-actress of its intention so to do."

The statement from Stanchfield & Levy's office further states:

"The Universal has no reason in the world to doubt the moral integrity of any player on its payroll. It never has had any difficulty with an actor on moral grounds. It doesn't expect to have. But as contracts in the picture business are now drawn a company, through no fault of its own, is liable to suffer both a great monetary loss through moral delinquency on the part of one of its players and an even greater loss of prestige through still having to retain him as a salaried employe, though he may be dead as a doornail as a theatrical attraction. No case of this kind has come up in the courts as a precedent, and it is idle to speculate on how the courts would rule, but it is the part of wisdom to be prepared against any such occurrence, no matter how little expected it may be.

"Furthermore, the clause is likely to have a salutary effect. The industry is faced with the danger that the public, or some portion of the public, will lose their interest in other stars through the widespread publicity which has been and is being given to this unfortunate incident. In this way the investment of the various companies in their stars would be jeopardized. For this investment consists largely in the popularity of the star, whether that popularity has been built up by advertising, publicity or by good pictures. It is only fitting that the public should realize that the companies will not be a party to any dereliction from the moral path by their stars and that they have in their own hands the means of discipline. This they have never had before and when they have built up the popularity of a star have frequently been placed at the mercy of that very popularity. This clause should be a safeguard to public interest.

"From the standpoint of the players it should also prove an acceptable and protective move. It is hard to imagine an actor who would not sign this clause. In the first place, it would put him or her immediately under suspicion by the company officials. In the second place, the clause is so drawn that no earnest, normal player has anything to fear and everything to gain by signing it. Furthermore, most players have sufficient respect for the profession to wish to see it purged of anything or anybody by whose agency disgrace or injury may be brought upon it. The clause is a protection to every branch of the industry, and affects producers, distributors, exhibitors and players equally."

"Filma" Annual to Cover World's Film Industry

Announcement is made that the French publication, "Filma," is getting out an illustrated annual, covering the motion-picture industry of the entire world. All producers, directors and artists are informed that they may be enrolled in their proper classification by sending their names and addresses to the editor of "Filma," located at 3 Boulevard des Capucines, Paris.

Exceptional Pictures Acquires Famous Stories

IT became known this week that Exceptional Pictures Corporation has acquired the rights to "Grumpy," the well-known play by Horace Hodges and T. Wigney Percival, in which Cyril Maude has made such a tremendous success in England and the Colonies over a period of four years, and in which he is still appearing.

This company also owns "The Smart Aleck," a Saturday Evening Post story by Irvin S. Cobb.

New York F.I.L.M. Club in Active Session

President Chadwick at last meeting of the New York F. I. L. M .Club appointed a new grievance committee as follows:

Lester Adler, chairman, Realart Exchange; Joseph Klein, Robertson Cole; Sam Zierler, Commonwealth, and W. E. Raynor, Pathe.

Reelcraft Pictures Corporation, represented by Mr. Murray Beier, was initiated. F. B. Warren Corporation was voted to membership. Mr. Wm. R. Wilkinson will represent exchange at meetings.

Graphic Film Corporation tendered its resignation, which was accepted with regrets.

Mr. Earl Kramer has been transferred from managership of Select's New Jersey Exchange to their Albany branch. The members voted him a fond farewell.

Many Changes Among Buffalo Exchangemen

A number of important changes have been made in Buffalo exchange circles. Ray Powers, assistant manager at R-C Pictures Corporation, has resigned to accept a similar post at Realart. Al Barnet, formerly with Select, has succeeded Mr. Powers at R-C. Frank J. Young has resigned as R-C booker to accept the assistant management and booker job at Select. H. C. Bissell has resigned from the R-C sales staff and has joined the Realart forces. George Schaefer has left the Realart sales force

Buffalo Exhibitors Elect New Officers

The Buffalo Theatre Managers' Association at a meeting held in the Iroquois Hotel last week elected the following new officers for the ensuing year: John R. Oishei, Teck, president; E. O. Weinberg, Mark-Strand, vice-president; Bruce Fowler, Elmwood, treasurer; W. W. Bradley, United Theatrical Enterprises, secretary. Ira M. Mosher, retiring president, was given a rising vote of thanks for his excellent work during three years in office and, because he is no longer connected with the theatre end of the business, Mr. Mosher was unanimously elected an honorary member.

Lichtman Names Representative A. P. Managers

Al. Lichtman, general manager of Associated Producers, announced this week the field organization which will become a part of the First National exchange system as representative managers of Associated Producers.

A representative manager will be retained in each of the territories of the United States and Canada by Associated Producers and will work under the direction of Mr. Lichtman, whose headquarters will be at the executive offices of Associated First National Pictures in New York.

The staff will be headed by J. R. Seidelman, at present assistant to the general manager of Associated Producers in charge of sales. He will continue as Mr. Lichtman's assistant.

The territorial appointees are:

Atlanta, W. R. Liebman; Boston, George S. Jeffrey; Chicago, Charles Goetz; Buffalo, W. J. Price; Cleveland, G. W. Erdman; Cincinnati, J. M. Johnston; Dallas, E. C. Leeves; Denver, Ed. Grossman; Detroit, H. K. Moss; Kansas City, G. W. Hinton; Los Angeles, V. P. Whitaker; Minneapolis, R. C. Buttolph; New York, J. J. Unger; New Haven, J. Lieberman; Philadelphia, Harry Laskin; Pittsburgh, F. C. Bonistall; San Francisco, Chas. Muehlman; Seattle, Harry Sigmond; St. Louis, J. Desberger; Washington, Chas. F. Schwerin; Western Canada, Ted Harcastle, and District Manager, H. A. Bandy.

Although the distribution of productions previously released by the Associated Producers, as well as forthcoming pictures, becomes the function of the First National exchange system under the merger of the companies, the representative managers of Associated Producers will specialize in the sale of the release of the group of Associated Producers, it is stated.

Prominent Buyers Close for Biblical Films

J. L. Friedman of the Celebrated Players of Chicago, controlling distribution in Indiana, Northern Illinois and Eastern Wisconsin, contracted for the Biblical films last week, according to a report from Larry Weingarten, Western representative of the Sacred Films, Inc.

The Skouras Bros. Enterprises of St. Louis will distribute the films in Missouri and Kansas, while Bud Barsky, Pioneer manager in Omaha, has Iowa and Nebraska.

The Skouras Bros. are presenting the initial episode, "Creation," at the New Grand Central theatre, St. Louis, next week. This theatre is the largest and most beautiful in St. Louis.

Sol Lesser will distribute in California, Arizona and Nevada, while Mike Roseburg of the De Luxe exchange in Seattle, has arranged for Oregon and Washington.

Weingarten is now in Minneapolis and with the closing of that territory the entire middle west will have been sold.

Wire Briefs from Coast

BRUCE JOHNSON, of the legal department of Associated First National Pictures, has been in San Francisco supervising the merger of the Associated Producer and First National exchanges. He is due to arrive in Los Angeles this week.

Marshall Neilan is now en route to the West Coast after completing distribution arrangements for his new production, "Penrod."

Robert Vignola, director, and Marion Davies have arrived in Los Angeles from San Francisco and will work on their next production in Hollywood.

Mason Litson will announce distribution plans for Will Rogers' two-reel subjects this week. Mr. Rogers is scheduled to start for New York October 1 for a series of personal appearances.

Union Operators Back in Kansas City Theatres

A settlement with the operators' union has been reached by nine Kansas City suburban houses, following two weeks of dispute. The operators, in conjunction with the musicians' union, demanded a head organist or pianist be employed where two or more were maintained in a theatre, and demanded a continuation of the 1920 wage scale. The exhibitors refused to be burdened with the expense of a head organist, but agreed to the wage scale.

Several exhibitors involved in the controversy, however, have refused to sign contracts calling for a continuation of the 1920 wage scale and have employed non-union operators.

Operators' Strike Settled in Providence, R. I.

Trouble motion picture house proprietors in Providence, R. I., have been having with the operators' union has been settled and the men who were out a couple of days have returned to work. The Rialto, Strand and Imperial in Pawtucket, R. I., were affected, but the performances were pulled off, however, by various attaches of the house filling in the breach caused by a sudden walkout. The differences were adjusted by Harry L. Spencer, assistant president of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes and Motion Picture Operators.

Tivoli at Chicago to Have Noted Organist

Milton Charles, noted California organist, has been brought to Chicago by Balaban & Katz to preside at the organ in their Tivoli theatre and already has established his popularity with the patrons of this big house.

Jesse Crawford, who has been the organist of the Tivoli since it opened, will be at the keyboard of the splendid instrument which is now being installed in the Chicago Balaban & Katz's huge loop theatre, which will open within a month.

Conditions Rapidly Improving in Michigan, State Survey Shows

Exhibitors Optimistic Pushing Extensive Theatre-Building Campaign

IN spite of the fact that Michigan was hit by hot weather and business depression, a combination that all but delivered the knockout wallop to the motion picture show business in this section, one of the most sudden and remarkable comebacks ever recorded in business annals is now being written into the right side of the ledgers of the film houses hereabouts. These facts are established by a survey conducted by Associated First National Pictures, Inc., and which is being extended to every territory in the country.

Keen business minds at the head of the motor car industry, however, have fought their way back and at the present time, through some radical but sagacious moves, have brought business to a point closer to normal than any person in the most optimistic section of the gallery believed possible. With no war orders and no high prices possible for motor cars, the manufacturers decided on a price-cutting war and a bid for volume business. One by one the manufacturers slashed prices, some as many as four and five times within the past six months, and now automobiles are down to a low buying level and the manufacturers are working on a basis that gives them a fair profit into the bargain. The Ford plants in Detroit report the largest production in history and are months behind on delivery orders.

The General Motors Company, which recently completed the largest office building in the middle west, announce plans for extensions and increased labor in Jackson, Saginaw, Flint, Pontiac, Lansing and other key cities of the state where they manufacture either cars or car parts.

The Durants have announced plans for a large plant in Lansing and another in Flint.

Furniture manufacturers, hit by a slump two months ago, are now coming back strong with new lines and increased labor, which puts Grand Rapids strongly to the front again.

Copper in northern Michigan is once more coming into its own again.

Crops are reported to be the biggest in the history of the Wolverine state.

The State Labor Commissioner's reports each week show a gradually increasing number of men being returned to work. These reports are regarded as one of the most accurate barometers of business conditions.

Spurred on by all of these hopeful business tidings and a lessening pressure on money at the banks, Michigan exhibitors are harkening to the times and are in the midst of an extension and building campaign that indicates a 100 per cent degree of optimism in the possibilities of the show business.

Billy Sunday Denounces Screen Censorship

BILLY SUNDAY will champion the motion picture anti-censorship cause. The famous evangelist has been "converted" and in the future will "hit the trail" against the partisans of screen censorship.

Cecil B. DeMille is responsible for Billy Sunday's "conversion." It was he who placed the facts of the motion picture industry's case before the dynamic evangelist which resulted in winning Mr. Sunday's allegiance.

Several years ago, Billy Sunday conducted one of his whirlwind crusades in Los Angeles. Mr. DeMille was requested by one of the local papers to write his impressions of Mr. Sunday. He did so with his usual frankness. The sincerity of this article appealed to the evangelist and resulted in the establishment of a firm friendship between the two.

"There is no more justice," said the evangelist, "in allowing a few people to say what shall be seen on the screen than there would be in setting up a policeman to teach a Sunday school."

Nearly a score of theatres are nearing completion in Detroit, while others are being enlarged or remodelled. The biggest venture, of course, is John H. Kunsky's new Capitol theatre, which will be ready on December 15th, according to the present outlook, and which will house 4,200 people. It will be one of the largest theatres in the United States. The Capitol is situated directly across the street from the Kunsky Madison, in the heart of the Detroit business and hotel district, and will give the Kunsky interests three large first-run theatres within a stone's throw of each other.

According to announcement made last week, Mr. Kunsky will divide his First National productions between the Madison and new Capitol, while the Adams will be turned over to special productions, which will be given as long runs as they will stand. Heretofore the policy of week runs at the Madison and Adams was unbroken only at unusual instances, but the new plans will give Mr. Kunsky the opportunity to play long runs whenever he thinks that a picture merits it.

Other new theatres in Detroit are: The Tuxedo, 1,800 seats; the Harmony, 1,800 seats; Cinderella, 1,500 seats; Grand River, 3,500 seats, and the Northern, 2,000 seats.

There are also more than a dozen smaller theatres that will seat from 1,000 to 500 persons in the course of construction in various neighborhods of Detroit. They will be completed before November 1st, according to present plans.

The state immediately outside of Detroit is also opening up with many new theatres and extensions.

Mt. Clemens, heretofore a controlled city, makes its fall bid with a brand-new 2,500-seat house, called the New Macomb, which is under the guidance of Bert Williams, the well known Detroit legitimate and picture theatre house proprietor.

Adrian, another long controlled town, will have some healthy competition with the opening of Angell & Codd's house, which is being remodelled at a cost of $30,000. Angell and Codd are the present First National franchise holders at Niles and have decided to extend their operations to several other cities.

Fitzpatrick and McElroy, who control more than a dozen theatres in fifteen cities on the western lake shore of the state, announce the erection of a new theatre in Benton Harbor, which will make the third in that city now under their operation. After a shutdown of several weeks, all of the Fitzpatrick houses have again reopened.

Announcement has just been made at Grand Rapids that J. W. Goodspeed will take over the Powers' theatre, which has hitherto housed only legitimate attractions, and will turn it into a first-run motion picture theatre. This will give Goodspeed two first-run houses in the centre of the city, the Isis and Powers, if the report is true.

The Regent theatre, which has been in the course of construction for the past two years in Grand Rapids, has also taken a sudden spurt and it now appears that this house will be completed in about six months. Present plans call for a policy of first-run pictures and vaudeville. The house will seat 3,500.

With the Regent theatre completed and Powers transferred into a picture house, Grand Rapids would support four downtown first-run picture theatres, where it now has but two—the Isis and Majestic Gardens.

Herbert Weil, who eight months ago sold his Port Huron interests to the Reid brothers in Port Huron, they later reverting to W. S. Butterfield, has made announcement of plans for a new 2,000-seat house in Port Huron. His company has been organized and ground will be broken within a few days, it is stated.

At Midland, W. A. Cassidy, First National franchise holder, is pushing plans for the erection of his new theatre, which will seat 1,700.

John N. Kunsky has announced that he will break ground for a new theatre in Highland Park some time next spring.

Powers Protests Shelving of Fordney Tariff Bill

P. A. Powers, president of the Powers Film Products, Inc., on Tuesday of this week, addressed a note of protest to Senator Boies Penrose, chairman of the Senate Committee on Finance, following announcement of the shelving of the Fordney Tariff Bill. Copies of this letter have also been forwarded to the other members of the Finance Committee.

After stating that German manufacturers since the armistice have been able to deliver and sell goods in this country "at prices approximately 25 per cent less than our actual cost of manufacture," Mr. Powers declares that his organization has been obliged to close down its plant, and that for the past six months the Powers company has been "carrying the expense" in the hope of some relief from Congress. Mr. Powers further asserts that the German companies are now selling film in this country at $.0135 per foot. He continues: "This product has been costing us $.021 per foot to manufacture in this country."

In concluding, Mr. Powers declares "every dollar's worth of goods imported into this country . . . displaces labor here, causing unemployment, which as you know, continues to exist to a very dangerous extent in the United States."

Numerous Foreign Films Held in Custom House

A large number of foreign motion-picture films rushed here from abroad in the hope of stampeding the American market are in the "cooler" in the New York Custom House because importers will not pay the two cents a foot to release them, according to Saul E. Rogers, chairman of the taxation committee of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry. In a letter to Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, Chairman Rogers says that hundreds of other foreign-made films are lying idle in the vaults of importers here and will never be released in this country, because they do not measure up to American standards. These films are being salvaged for the silver that is used on the celluloid, it is declared.

E. Hyman Presents Opening Program of N. Y. House

Edward L. Hyman, managing director of the Brooklyn Mark Strand, presented the initial program at the new Sheridan theatre, located at Sheridan Square, New York. The theatre opened Saturday, September 17th. The bill presented follows the general outline of the programs given weekly at the uptown New York theatres and of those given by Mr. Hyman at the Brooklyn Mark Strand.

WE are glaid to welcome Arthur Friend back to the ranks of picture production—and pleased to discover that his association is renewed in connection with such a distinguished contributor to the screen as Arliss's "Disraeli."

Mr. Friend's association with the industry dates back to the formative days of the Lasky Company in 1913. He has been associated with the most progressive strides the screen has made in the past and may be counted on to continue an exponent of sincere effort and a desire to achieve the best. Such a man could be counted on to come back to us and, again we say, we are glad he is here.

Still Debating Operators' Scale in Baltimore

Developments to August 31 in the Baltimore situation concerning 20 per cent wage reduction for projectionists and musicians were:

Exhibitors' League of Maryland and Theatrical Managers' Association advertise for employees after reduction is refused.

Local 181, Motion Picture Operators' Union, expects lockout September 1, renewal contract date, claiming contract automatically renewed by failure to receive 20 days' previous notice of its abrogation.

Musical Union spurns offer to place question in national body's hands on ground it would preserve own autonomy.

According to G. Kingston Howard, president and business manager of the projectionists, 85 cents an hour, with time and a half for overtime and Christmas, New Year's Day, Fourth of July, Thanksgiving Day and Labor Day, is not too much for the men to fight for. He says 50 per cent work from 2 to 11 each day and are paid weekly $48.45; a large number on shift for $33.15 and 25 or 30 men on only night turn get $29.33.

The Theatrical Managers' Association says if the workers take a reduction a decrease in admission prices will follow.

The Musical Union's president, Roscoe M. Packard, declares the present scale and conditions serve to elevate the standard of the profession.

The Exhibitors' League 1920 committee referred projectionists to a new committee, with which the projectionists will no longer deal.

New Freight Rates for Film Shipments

THE National Association of the Motion Picture Industry has bulletined its members the following table on freight rates on film and printed matter from New York to the various exchange centers:

NEWSY BRIEFS FROM CENTRAL FILM BELT

Chicago and the Mid-West

L. H. MASON, REPRESENTATIVE, 910 S. MICHIGAN AVE.

K. D. Kotsonaros, nomadic cameraman with headquarters in Nauplion, Greece, last week brought negative for developing to the Rothacker Chicago laboratory commercial department. He is on a trip around the world, shooting adventure scenics.

Manager Aschman, of Pathe's Chicago Exchange, has resigned to handle the Dempsey-Carpentier fight pictures in the state of Wisconsin and Minnesota. Mr. Aschman had been connected with Pathe for a long time coming to Chicago from Milwaukee, where he was in charge of the Pathe office. He is one of the best liked and most popular men of the Chicago film colony and very active in all affairs which tended to promote the welfare of the entire industry. The employees of Pathe's Chicago Exchange presented Mr. Aschman with a handsome gold watch and chain in token of their high regard for him, when he announced his resignation. District Manager R. S. Shrader is in charge of the office pending the appointment of a successor to Mr. Aschman.

Frank Zambrino, of Unity Photoplays, reports that his company has taken over the Illinois and Indiana Film Exchange, operated by Arthur Lowy, who, it is reported, will devote his entire time to the medical picture which he imported from Austria, and which is causing great interest in the medical profession. The merger of the Illinois and Indiana exchange with Unity will give the latter a number of additional releases including Neal Hart series and a number of short subjects. Mr. Zambrino is spending a week in Indianapolis where Unity maintains a branch exchange.

Samuel Cummins of New York, has just disposed of the state rights of his motion picture "Some Wild Oats" to the Preferred Pictures Enterprises, of 79 W. Monroe Street, Chicago. This is a new company which was recently formed to take over the exploitation of this firm. The territory purchased involves Illinois, Wisconsin, Indiana and Iowa for the present time with an option for all the middle west states. The film is being released as a road show at present and five companies are in operation in these states.

George Gibson, superintendent of the Chicago Rothacker Laboratory, spent his vacation seeing picture shows and learning how to be a golf beginner. H. J. Aldous, Rothacker treasurer, spent Labor and nearby days fishing with Scout Younger up north. Those desiring to remain in Mr. Aldous' favor should refrain from asking him how many fish he caught. Director George Kilgore and Cameraman Verne Blakeley, of the Rothacker Film Company, are producing a practical picture at LaSalle, Illinois. Douglas D. Rothacker spent two days with them. H. I. Walker obtained the contract.

At a meeting of the executive committee of the Illinois Vigilance Association held last week in Chicago, Doctor Wilbur F. Crafts, superintendent of the International Reform Bureau, announced that he will renew the fight against the motion picture industry.

Resolutions were passed at the meeting that the industry be investigated and a petition was drawn which will be presented to congress urging that producers doing an interstate business be licensed by the federal government.

The People's Liberty League, the Illinois branch of the newly organized national organization, announces receipt of its charter as an Illinois corporation.

Among the objects of the organization as set down in its charter are: "To advance by all lawful means the cause of personal liberty; to this end to advocate for all of the people the largest measure of individual freedom consistent with the general welfare in their conduct, opinions, occupations and amusements; and to organize and operate nationally and locally for this purpose."

The People's League approves, among other things, of the opening of motion picture houses on Sunday and is against censorship of the screen.

A number of prominent Chicagoans are interested in the movement, including Earl M. Stevens, president; George C. Stevens, vice-president; Albert Jampolis, secretary; and Frances W. Walker, general counsel, the incorporators. Offices are located in the Consumers' Building.

Unity has transferred George Levy, who has been covering the north side territory in Chicago, to Indianapolis, where he will have charge of Unity's recently opened exchange. Bert Phelps, who has been traveling the Indiana territory for Unity, will cover Mr. Levy's Chicago territory.

Celebrated reports that the big serial, "Miracles of the Jungle," is one of the fastest selling pictures ever put out in this territory, and that eleven days after starting booking it, virtually two-thirds of the city territory had been sold, including the entire Lubliner & Trinz circuit.

The Chicago office of Associated Producers will be removed from 808 South Wabash avenue to 837 South Wabash, on September 24th, at which time the office will be incorporated with the First National Exchange at the latter address.

Three more salesmen have been added to the staff of Celebrated Players Chicago Exchange. They are C. H. Dingman, recently connected with Fitzpatrick & McElroy; D. O. Reese, who for a long time was associated with Reelcraft, and L. M. Delson, who will work the Indiana territory.

Sam Saxe, general salesmanager of Robertson-Cole, visited Chicago last week for a conference with Manager Gallas, and is scheduled to return again this week for another short visit. Mr. Saxe, who recently took the general salesmanagership, is making a tour of the exchanges of the central west getting acquainted with local conditions and conferring with the managers on sales policies. Jack Mallace, who for some time has been shipping clerk for Robertson-Cole's Chicago exchange, has been promoted to booker to fill the position made vacant by the resignation of F. E. Williams, who now is connected with Vitagraph.

elections the duties of the committee will be important and it is intended to get in touch with all candidates, particularly those for the legislative bodies, and give them the real facts as to motion picture conditions in Chicago and find out whether they are friends of the movies or adherents of the blue law or Sunday closing reformers.

The Allied Amusements Association, of Chicago, with a membership which controls more than two hundred moving picture theatres, has signed an agreement with the musicians' union identical with the one which expired on September 1st. The new agreement will run until September 1, 1922.

It is understood that many exhibitors who are not members of the Allied Amusements Association are signing up individually with the union on the same basis.

Allens, in Canada, Have Hodkinson Product

AN ANNOUNCEMENT from the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation this week bears the news that a recently signed contract disposes of the Canadian rights for all Hodkinson releases to the Famous Players Film Service, Ltd., of Canada which is controlled by the Allen Bros. The fact that Famous Players Film Service, Ltd., has a very great number of branches scattered through the Dominion insures a very wide distribution for all Hodkinson subjects. Famous Players Film Service, Ltd., maintain exchanges in Toronto, Montreal, St. Johns, Winnipeg, Calgary and Vancouver—in fact, in every important center.

The contract made by Hodkinson with Famous Players Film Service, Ltd., disposes of the Canadian rights of all releases including the productions of Hugo Ballin, Irene Castle Productions, Irvin V. Willat, Zane Grey, Winnipeg Productions, T. Hayes Hunter, Ward Lascelle and the various other independent producers whose output reaches the screen via Hodkinson.

Instrument Installations in Picture Theatres

By Charles D. Isaacson

S I promised in last week's NEWS, I am anxious to offer my observations upon instrument installations for the movie theatres. At that time, I pointed out that the tendency among the managers, in view of the various musicians' strike, was to make for more attention upon fixed instruments easily operated by one or two men. (By the way, in New York City, the local union has been practically ousted by the film theatres, men being imported from other cities. I said I thought that the theatres would now cut down their orchestras; but I am evidently wrong as regards the Riesenfeld and Rothafel interests, for now they are back to their former quota! But to my mind, this is no criterion. The mass of the theatres using orchestras unquestionably will seek to hold down the size of the ensembles.)

If the theatre manager can afford it—or rather, I should say if he feels he cannot afford to be without it—he ought to have some kind of an organ. A church is no more in need of an organ than a motion picture theatre. Even where there is an orchestra, there are intervals where for contrast, where while the men rest, some kind of substantial music is demanded. Next to the orchestra, in matter of sufficient, complete accompaniments, only the organ can be mentioned. If I were a theatre manager, I would never feel satisfied until I had installed an organ. No matter what else I had, that would have to be part of my equipment. After the projector machine and the screen—then the organ.

As to the type of instrument—that is a matter for discussion. A pipe organ, capable of being played by hand or roll, would be first choice. Then would come the other type of fixed installation, of which there are any number of excellent choices. It is not my business nor my intention to single out one make of instrument over another. Personally, from contact with certain types, I would be rather skeptical about their eventual profit to me; musically some do not measure up—and I will be very quick, on request, to say when a proposed choice is about to be bought—and ought rather to be evaded! In other words, I will not tell you which to buy—because so many are really worth their price—but I'll tell you what not to buy, if you seem to be about to select one of the questionable kind.

There are certain very important points to be kept in mind when buying an organ or organ-type of instrument.

In the first place, have you someone to play it? And if that someone dies or leaves you, will you be in a fix? That is to say—is the field of musicians capable of operating the instrument fairly well populated? To buy an instrument when you later have difficulty in paying reasonable prices for musicians is poor policy. Another point: Is the house the kind of house which suits the instrument? Any architect, especially one acquainted with acoustical problems, will inform you upon the point. A too loud organ, one not loud enough, one which does not lend itself to your formation of architecture, etc., is a bad buy. To show you what I mean, recently I was asked by a picture theatre owner to advise him on his organ. At first, knowing the capacity of his house, his financial resources, etc., I was anxious for him to get one of the very finest pipe organs. But when we investigated further we found that the theatre was so constructed that all it needed was a much smaller layout than we had figured at first. It cost him $15,000 less—and his instrument will sound better than the more expensive one would have done. Indeed, we came to the conclusion that the larger instrument, at $15,000 more, would have been a nuisance and would not have produced as satisfying music.

If you buy an instrument run solely upon a mechanical basis—with rolls only—then you want to make sure that the library of the company is sufficiently large to meet all demands which will arise. It is a sad thing to have an instrument which hasn't available music to fit your pictures. In such an event you are like the family who bought a phonograph because it was cheap, because it seemed to sound all right. But after a few weeks, the family discovered that there were only a few records manufactured by the company, and the records of other people, like Victor, Columbia, Edison, couldn't be played upon their machine.

After the organ, then what? I am one who favors the purchase of a piano, for its use in accompaniment of soloists, and for its all-around use as solo instrument, accompaniment for pictures and use in orchestra, with organ, etc.

A grand piano, if you can afford it, makes a better appearance—the fine, graceful lines spell aristocracy and art.

The new types of reproducing piano, of which the Ampico and DuoArt are specimens, are of value only to the bigger houses, where the occasional appearance of the spirit of "Paderewski" and "Hofmann" and "Grainger" and "Godowsky" means a real feature in box office results.

By the way, speaking of Paderewski and Hofmann, I am in receipt of a letter from my friend, Hofmann, on the subject of "Movies." Mr. Hofmann is not yet ready to play in the theatres, although he and Paderewski are "fans."

Josef Hofmann on Pictures

My Dear Isaacson:

I have given the motion picture "some" consideration since I have spent more quarters on movies than cents on concerts. But Mr. Paderewski—as usually—"leads." He and Madame go every night (in Paso Robles) to spend 2 hours in a movie house. As to my playing in a movie house? Certain people dine only at Delmonico's. I play only in Carnegie Hall.

Very sincerely,

JOSEF HOFMANN.

[EDITOR'S NOTE: Mr Hofmann is very humorous, exceedingly witty and always interesting. I venture to say that Mr Hofmann without leaving his beautifully high standard, will find that motion pictures have come so near it, that we will find him playing in one of the theatres within a couple of years.]

Music Plans for Fall

BY HAROLD B. FRANKLIN
Shea's Hippodrome, Buffalo

At the beginning of the fall season of each year we inaugurate at Shea's Hippodrome what we term an Anniversary Week. These Anniversaries are milestones by which we measure our progress, and it is gratifying indeed to compare notes with Anniversaries that have gone. At these times we take "stock" of ourselves and endeavor to polish up on our weak points, and there usually is a great deal of polishing necessary.

Of the various departments that contribute much to the art of presentation, Music is uppermost. It is here that the ultra theatre can distinguish itself. Bearing this in mind we have left nothing undone to make our orchestra as fine as we know how. The writer personally made many trips to the more important cities where large orchestras were maintained and studied the good as well as the weak points in these different organizations. The conclusion I came to as a result of this research was as follows:

First: That the most important requisite for a good orchestra was the musical director. Every man in the orchestra reflects the spirit of the man who swings the baton.

Second: Good music does not necessarily mean the maintenance of a large symphony orchestra. I would much rather have an orchestra of ten good musicians than fifty that are mediocre. With these two points in view, we gradually weeded out those in our orchestra who did not come up to the standard we set, and we procured Creatore as principal conductor. The result has been a very splendid combination, and resulted in the reduction of our orchestra from thirty-seven men to thirty-five.

Trend Toward Organs

Answering your letter of the 24 inst., I believe that the attitude of the musical unions, dominated by the orchestra players, is bringing to pass a condition which the majority of them will not be glad to see. I know that in Chicago last summer the organists, minority members, were against the policy of striking, and that so many of them were drawing salaries above the scale that the proposed increase would not affect their income. A recent film, one of the first of Aesop's Fables, fits the situation very well. The orchestra players have succeeded in putting more than one symphony orchestra out of business and have caused a number of theatres to dispense with orchestras permanently, giving a very good imitation of the man who killed the goose that laid the golden eggs. Some of the radicals among the organists are helping them, but the majority of the organist members have sound ideas.

The trend undoubtedly is towards the installation of organs in theatres, and especially towards high class orchestral organs—those which can satisfactorily fill the place of an orchestra and do more—instruments of really musical character, abounding in quiet effects while having ample power. From my observation the trend is away from slap stick accompaniment to motion pictures.

Mr. John Hammond, president of the Society of Theatre Organists in New York, stated a fundamental truth in his speech before the National Association of Organists at their meeting over the Kimball Unit Organ in the Stanley theatre, Philadelphia, when he said that the organists had the matter of salaries in their own hands, and inferred that it was not by union rules or strikes but by making themselves individually indispensable to the theatre owners through the artistic character of their performances that they were going to continue to enjoy incomes above those paid for inferior work. They are undoubtedly helped in this by the superior type of musical instruments now provided by some few of the leading firms not altogether dominated by the commercial spirit which is akin to that working so much harm within the unions.

EXHIBITORS' REPORTS ON NEW RELEASES

What the Big Houses Say

EARLY RETURNS FROM WEEK RUN THEATERS

FAMOUS PLAYERS

The Affairs of Anatol—
Opened to nice business and doing well but not breaking any records. The lightness of the production has caused much favorable comment in addition to the galaxy of stars. (Middle West.)

Picture attracted large audiences. Wonderful production. (East.)

Too Much Speed—
Went over successfully with us. Seemed to be very well liked. That is, comment most favorable. Business was much better than for the preceding week, but it should also be noted that the change in the weather should be credited for part of this improvement. (South.)

Did some exploitation on this and cleaned up. (East.)

At the End of the World—
Excellent except for trunk scene which was scored locally as most ridiculous. Pleasing receipts. (East.)

Pretty good picture. Little bit spectacular in places. Fair business. (Middle West.)

The Great Impersonation—
Fairly entertaining with the usual business. (West.)

Experience—
This one proved popular with patrons and did a good week's business. (Middle West.)

Footlights—
Splendid picture plus popular star, plus personal appearance of Mae Murray, packed our house all week. (Middle West.)

The Golem—
Did good business for a week's run. Did not do business, however, that was expected. (East.)

The Great Moment—
A wonderful show. (Middle West.)

GOLDWYN

The Old Nest—
Went over wonderfully big. Breaking all records. Held over for another week. (West.)

Great picture. It sure did bring the people. (West.)

This picture is especially good and stood up first week for advanced prices. Fell down on second week. (East.)

Broke all house records, with throngs turned away. One of the best seen here this year. (Middle West.)

Great! Smashed some records for me. (East.)

This picture was considered an excellent one here and drew a good week's attendance. (Middle West.)

Wonderful picture. So acclaimed by every critic and patron. Business so big first week had to hold it over for a second week. (Middle West.)

A great box office attraction which did such excellent business that it was held for an entire week at both houses. (East.)

Beating the Game—
Tom Moore did not prove a strong drawing card in this one, due perhaps to vaudeville competition. (Middle West.)

Snowblind—
The picture did a fair week's business. (Middle West.)

FIRST NATIONAL

The Sign on the Door—
A first class melodrama, well constructed. Norma Talmadge does some of the best work of her career in this picture. Excellent box office attraction. (Middle West.)

Not up to Norma Talmadge's standard. Receipts good. (East.)

Nobody—
An ordinary picture on which we had the usual business. (West.)

The Truth About Husbands—
Well staged and fairly entertaining production. Did only the usual business. (East.)

Courage—
More or less well liked but opinion of patrons seemed to be divided. Not much of a drawing card. A bit too depressing. Middle West.)

The Golden Snare—
Good average picture and with the change in the Southern climate, business picked up considerably over the preceding week. (South.)

Scrap Iron—
Good show. Lots of pep. A man's show. Business better than average. (Middle West.)

Stranger Than Fiction—
A good crook story, well acted. Good box office receipts. (Middle West.)

METRO

The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse—
Playing the fifth week and going bigger all the time. (Middle West.)
Two weeks' run to big business and highly pleased audiences. (West.)

Extravagance—
An entertaining picture which brought good business. (West.)

Life's Darned Funny—
Fairly good production with average business. (West.)

Over the Wire—
Very good. Big attendances. (East.)

The Man Who—

REALART

One Wild Week—
The recent Arbuckle case on the coast and the title of the picture made it rather unpopular. Only an ordinary week's run with a star who usually draws big. (Middle West.)
Pleasing results. (East.)

The Magic Cup—
A bright and entertaining picture, which drew the crowds in conjunction with Harold Lloyd's "I Do." (Middle West.)

Room and Board—
Not as good as previous Binney pictures, plot very slight, but a fairly entertaining summer picture. (East.)

Her Sturdy Oak—
Fair picture that did only moderately well. (Middle West.)

SELZNICK

The Fighter—
Conway Tearle does good work in a thriller, which keeps up the interest throughout. (Middle West.)

The Lone Wolf—
A fine picture which brought good business. (West.)

A Divorce of Convenience—
Nice little picture and played to fairly good business thru week. (East.)

Greater Than Love—
Strong picture with plenty of action and a universal theme. Played to splendid business at two houses simultaneously. (Middle West.)

Remorseless Love—
Better than its title would indicate. Good entertainment. Business satisfactory. (Middle West.)

UNIVERSAL

Action—
Lives up to its title. Something doing every minute. Splendid downtown and outskirt picture for audiences that want plenty of thrills. (Middle West.)

Gilded Lies—
Nothing unusual. But did pretty good business at our house. (East.)

FOX

After Your Own Heart—

The Night Horseman—
Old-fashioned "movie stuff." Staunch fans of the star satisfied, but most patrons "couldn't hand it much." (East.)

Ever Since Eve—
A very mild production and business equally mild. (East.)

ASSOCIATED PRODUCERS

Mother O' Mine—
Very good picture, title that appeals and parts played well. Comment favorable and business good. (South.)

Devotion—
Rather trite subject, well acted. Good for a number of laughs. Fair box office attraction. (Middle West.)

Home Talent—
Drew big. Receipts dandy. (East.)

UNITED ARTISTS

The Nut—
Good in parts and punk in parts, but altogether is a little above the average. "Doug" is very popular with local fans. Albeit "The Nut" did not add anything to his fame, to express it mildly. (South.)

Way Down East—
Finished second week and drew splendidly. (East.)

WARREN

The Blot—
Business bit below average on this subject, which is fair entertainment. (East.)

Good business on this picture Pleased patrons. (West.)

EQUITY

The Black Panther's Club—
Good entertainment and pleasing picture. Good box office value. (West.)

New York Rivoli's Prologue Is Extravagant Operetta

Reisenfeld-Zuro Creation Meets Great Favor with Audiences

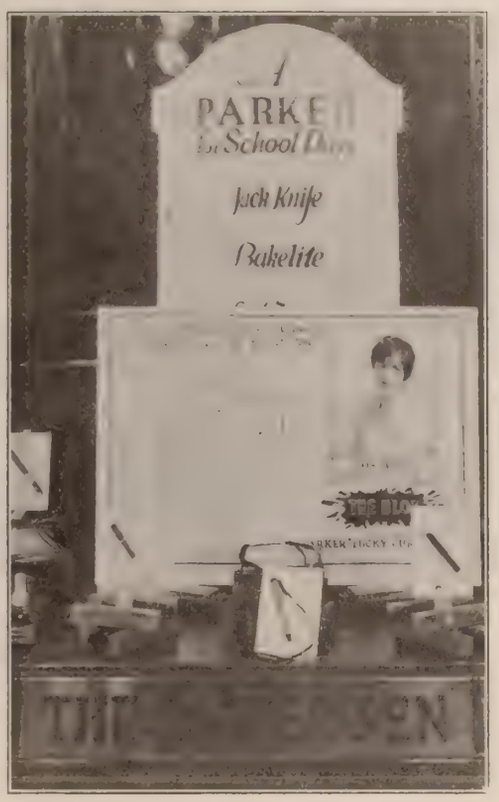
HUGO REISENFELD, managing director of the Rivoli, Rialto and Criterion theatres, New York, assisted by his stage director, Josiah Zuro, has created a tabloid operetta of fifteen minutes' duration, which used as a prologue number for "The Affairs of Anatol," at the Rivoli theatre, that is a gem of dramatic and musical construction.

The big number is a mixture of light opera music from the American, Russian and French, and yet retains the unity of spirit essential for a successful number. And that unity is found in the spirit of abandon, of real life and "pep," to harmonize with the carefree adventures of the young hero of the play.

Four solo dancers, a popular baritone and a chorus of ten singers that have appeared in solo parts, and a balalaika orchestra—these are the players in "Extravaganza"—the title under which the prologue number is presented.

The number opened with the ensemble on the stage—an ensemble consisting of Ocy Shoff and Mary Dimaira, sopranos; Susan Ida Clough and Miriam Lax, mezzo-sopranos; Vincenzo Vitti, Roberto Adorni and Irving Lavitz, tenors, and Martin Lilienfield, Fausto Bozzi and Maurice Kestroff, baritones, singing "Good Day."

The scene is simple, golden curtains with bizarre decorations hanging behind the singers. At the sides are chairs and tables, giving the atmosphere of a cabaret. George Richardson, the baritone, enters and sings "Absinthe Frappe," one of the popular song numbers of Victor Herbert's "It Happened in Nordland," the ensemble joining in the chorus. The audience applauds and seems to be under the impression that the number is over—but then comes the surprise. Richardson draws back the curtains, and there is revealed a throne standing upon a series of transparent, colored glass steps. Russian dancers are posed near the top, and the members of Kirilloff's Russian Balalaika orchestra in native costume are seated upon the steps. Light seems to come from all directions.



Window display tie-up on "The Blot" appearing in the New York Parker Pen Co. Broadway store

The Balalaika orchestra plays a famous old Russian folk song, and finally swings into a Saint-Saens gypsy dance. Immediately the three girl dancers — Vera Myers, Grace Eastman and Myrtle Immel —break into a dashing dance, whirling about the stage and thumping their tambourines. Richardson again takes up the theme at the close of the dance by singing "Otoydi Nie Gliadi," one of Russia's most famous gypsy songs, a composition which created a furore when first sung by Mme. Vialtzeva.

At the close of the famous melody the dance again takes the attention, Paul Oscard, ballet master of the Riesenfeld theatres, leading the trio of girls through a dashing piece of Slavonic dance to the music of Alexander Glazounov, the entire ensemble joining in the striking ensemble.

Preparing the score for "Extravaganza" entailed much musical care and rearrangement on the part of Mr. Zuro. To blend one song number and dance music after another into a continuous musical thread involved several weeks of careful transposition and adaptation, a problem that was accenuated by the necessity of keeping each mood distinct. While the prologue is a potpourri, there is no conscious break in the continuity, but an easy flow from one number to the next.

Prize Offered for "Virtuous" Men

The Electric theatre at Coyle, Okla., has offered a prize for any virtuous man that can qualify and substantiate his statements.

Questionnaries verbally given by a jury of twelve ladies will be the basis for the contest, which will be had at a regular performance in the theatre, one and only one candidate has announced for a try out at winning the capital prize, and he is one of the City Aldermen. Much mirth and some embarrassment is expected to be in evidence, together with full house to witness both the performance and the contest.

Three "Old Nest" window displays which E. R. Rogers, managing director of the Tivoli theatre, Chatanooga, used during his recent engagement of this picture

One side of the lobby display originated for "Action" by Noble Hearn, manager of the Frolic theatre, San Francisco. Another view of the display appears on the opposite page

Another "Anti-Deception" League Organized

An "Anti-Deception League," was organized by Leslie Whelan, Paramount exploiter at Greely, Colo., as exploitation for "Deception," playing recently at the Sterling theatre.

All the Greely merchants fell into line and pushed straight dealing sales talk with window cards tieing up with the picture.

Moore and Graves, owners of the Sterling, cash in on the returns of the tie-up.

Pittsburgh Press Cooperates with Exhibitors on Paramount Week

A tie-up in connection with Paramount week at Pittsburgh, won 33 local exhibitors, $12.00 ads free in the Pittsburgh Press. In return for the free space the theatres ran slides for the Press.

The stunt was engineered by Wm. N. Robson, Paramount exploitation man at Pittsburgh. The Paramount week advertising in the Sunday, Sept. 4th, issue filled a page and a half of pages two and three.

Float for the engagement of "The Man of the Forest" which G. R. Stewart, manager of the American theatre, Casper, Wyoming, used to advertise the picture

Lima, Ohio, Newspapers Run Big Movie Supplement

What is said to be the biggest special supplement ever gotten out for any motion picture was issued recently by the Lima News and Times-Democrat, of Lima, Ohio, for "Dream Street" when this film was shown at the Sigma Theatre.

The supplement consisted of six full-sized newspaper pages, well filled with news and feature stories and cuts illustrating the principal scenes in "Dream Street." Scattered through the supplement were advertisements of Lima business houses, all offering prizes of free tickets for the picture, the prizes to be won by those finding a misspelled word in the "ads."

The supplement carried the regular title line of the newspaper on the first page, with the "ears" bearing the words "Special Supplement."

Cooperative Ads Help "Experience" Engagement

"Experience" lends itself to co-operative ads so easily that Oscar Kantner's campaign for its run at The Circle Theatre, Indianapolis took on the proportion of a knock-out. The Paramount exploiteer tied up twenty-seven windows on the principal streets. All were featured with artistic window cards and studious avoidance of over-crowding.

Cowles Gets Results with Window Tie-ups

Manager A. C. Cowles, of the Rex Theater, Spartanburg, S. C., has achieved an enviable reputation in the Carolinas through his effective tie-ups with local merchants.

Mr. Cowles' method is founded upon the theory that the easiest way to stage effective tie-ups is to form a pleasant acquaintance with the persons who will later be able to assist him in exploiting a picture.

Recently Mr. Cowles engineered two displays for his showing of "The Ten Dollar Raise." One, that of a dealer in electrical supplies, was designed with a view to showing the passersby how much household equipment could be purchased with a "Ten Dollar Raise." Just a couple of doors away, and on the opposite side of the street from the Rex Theater, Mr. Cowles arranged for one of the most prominent groceries in Spartanburg ten dollars' worth of groceries, based on prices prevailing during the inflated period. This display stressed for the merchant the idea he wanted to impress upon prospective customers, that groceries are becoming cheaper. Just beneath this display was another array of groceries, with another placard stating, "This is what A TEN DOLLAR RAISE will buy now." The contrast presented by the two displays made a deep impression upon passersby, and in addition to impressing readers with the perceptible drop in the prices of groceries, these displays proved excellent drawing cards for the "Ten Dollar Raise" playing across the street at the Rex Theater.

Small Town Exhibitor Uses His First Ballyhoo

Frank Warfel, publicity man for the Princess and Majestic theatres, Florence, Ala., has recently had occasion to exploit "Man, Woman, Marriage" in a way that was new in Florence—the ballyhoo.

Mr. Warfel built a prison cage on a truck and inside placed a man and woman, chained, each looking the other way. The body of the truck was covered with appropriate reading matter to identify the float, and then the outfit with the chauffeur dressed as a prison chaplain was paraded about the city for three hours.

The unusual sight soon notified every person in the town of the engagement of the picture.

Brooklyn Strand Lobby Display for "Way Down East"

A lobby display, something not often given any great attention by Manager Edward L. Hyman of the Brooklyn Mark Strand theatre, was one of the most effective of exploitation mediums used for the recent two weeks' showing of "Way Down East." Painted pictures of stars and scenes of "Way Down East," were placed in conspicuous places. Outside the lobby were paintings of stars.

Lobby decorations for "Stranger Than Fiction" originated by Frank Lacey, manager of the Majestic theatre, Portland, Ore.

"Peck's Bad Boy" display by the Star theatre, Portland, Ore.

Newark Theatre Stages Effective Campaign

Sidney Ascher, manager of the Halsey theatre, Newark, N. J., has recently put over comprehensive exploitation campaign for "Why Girls Leave Home."

Mr. Ascher started his campaign by inserting a number of seven line slugs in every newspaper in town reading: "Do You Know Why Girls Leave Home?" This was followed up by adding the names of prominent officials, as follows: "Mayor Archibald, Do You Know Why Girls Leave Home?"

No permission to use the names was asked, and considerable publicity was derived when some of the people whose names were used wrote the newspapers asking why they were linked up with "Why Girls Leave Home." The ads were used in every conspicuous section of the newspapers except the amusement columns.

Special interviews with the police captain of Newark and human interest stories on girls who had left home were also printed by the Star-Eagle.

Another street stunt was the use of an attractive young lady who walked around the town with a very forlorn expression. At times she would sit down on a doorstep and pretend to weep, and when a crowd gathered about her she would rise and let drop one side of a suitcase she carried, exposing a card with the words: "Do You Know Why Girls Leave Home?" Judicious use of the billboards with twenty-four teasers and other lithographs of the production, teaser window cards and colored pictorial window cards, in addition to tie-ups with many of the mercantile stores in town made it possible for Mr. Ascher to pack them in to capacity business on his opening day.

Novel Post Card Originated by Vogel

"If you are 'white and unmarried,' call Main 1779."

More than 5,000 of these cards were printed and distributed by the Strand Theatre, Seattle, Wash., at the instance of A. Mike Vogel, the Paramount exploiteer. Manager Wright reports the telephone girl had to be carried out for Main 1779 was the theatre's number.

Old Idea Works Well for Helmts

Manager Edward Helmts of the Strand theatre, Des Moines, Iowa, offered $15 in cash and eleven admissions as prizes in a test to see who could write "Thomas Meighan in 'The Conquest of Canaan,' at the Strand theatre," oftenest on a regulation post-office one-cent post card.

Max Doolittle, Paramount exploiter, tied up with The Des Moines Capital, to conduct the test. As usual the newspaper came across with good space.

Doolittle also experimented with insert cards. These consisted chiefly still—cut-outs and mounted stills.

Southern Enterprises Appoint Exploiter

The Southern Enterprises, Inc. announces in the Spotlight, the house organ published at Dallas, Tex., that E. C. Jeffress, who has been a house manager for the firm for the past two years, will henceforth an exploitation man for the circuit. He has been given the title of "Ad-Venturer," and will help the local manager put over the show in the same manner as the exploiteers sent out by the producers.

This is the first record we have of a circuit appointing an exploitation man who will do nothing else.

WHAT THE MAKERS SAY ABOUT PICTURES

Chaplin in Novel Role in "Idle Class"

"IDLE CLASS," which stars Charlie Chaplin, opened at the Strand theatre in Milwaukee on last Sunday. It is the best thing that Chaplin has done from the artistic standpoint. The picture comes at a particularly opportune time as it is exceptionally clean and free from anything objectionable. Chaplin at work in a straight role is a great novelty; there is just enough of the novel in the part to enable him to get over bigger than ever and yet to keep the old role which he never will be able to get away from.

The golf scenes contain much comedy of a new sort and are a riot. The picture is very snappy and shows evidence of being slashed rather than padded. Chaplin's first appearance in the early portions of the picture is decidedly novel, but there is a letdown in the closing sequences and the finish is weak. The story is interesting and holds the interest throughout. Chaplin's work in a dual role as husband and tramp is very cleverly worked out.

While easily the star of the picture, Chaplin gives Edna Purviance and Mack Swain plenty of opportunities. The production is well-staged, fully adequate. It takes some time for the audience to recognize Chaplin working as a straight but when they do he wins a big laugh.

"Idle Class" is playing to big business despite very rainy weather. The picture should prove a big money-maker and should help off-set criticisms caused by recent unpleasant publicity. It is clean, with laughs, well-produced and staged, and the photography is excellent.

J. Robinson Company Back From France

John S. Robertson has brought his company back from France where scenes have been shot for the Paramount picture "Love's Boomerang" with the Cirque Pinder. Though somewhat hampered during the first week of his stay by unfavorable weather conditions, Mr. Robertson expressed himself on his return to London as exceedingly satisfied with the material he had assembled.

"Jungle Adventures" Acclaimed

PRESS, public, and the trade joined in acclaiming Martin Johnson's "Jungle Adventures," one of the screen sensations of the season, according to word just received from the offices of the Exceptional Pictures Corporation which is handling this production. The occasion of the general expression of high praise for "Jungle Adventures" was the showing of the picture at the Capitol theatre, New York, where it played to an unusually heavy business.

Alexander Beyfuss, vice-president and general manager of the producing company states that the favorable expressions have been received from all departments of the industry and from all over the country, where the news of the triumph of "Jungle Adventures" has already penetrated.

Mr. Beyfuss further stated:

"It is so obviously natural that the creation of anything unusual will immediately meet with the favor of everyone that we were certain of the reception that Martin Johnson's 'Jungle Adventures' would be given; because we knew that we had something different to offer.

"The result we expected was unanimous: the critics proved it by their unqualified praise, the public by the number in which they attended the Capitol theatre and by the report the theatre gave us after the showing. Without exception every audience enthusiastically applauded the picture. Producers, distributing organizations and state right buyers voiced their approval by sincere expressions of praise to Exceptional Pictures Corporation for having given the industry a product as unusual as Martin Johnson's 'Jungle Adventures.' Exhibitors, throughout the city and from other large centers throughout the country demonstrated their interest, in inquiries concerning the production.

"The reception accorded this picture has shown us beyond question that the path we have outlined for Exceptional Pictures Corporation, namely the building of unusual, exceptional productions, cannot be successful. The demand for this type of product is universal—distributors, both national and state right, need them, and the public want them. The organization we now have, has been assembled because it can build them."

Unstinted praise was accorded Martin Johnson's "Jungle Adventures" by the New York daily newspaper critics. In the criticisms, particular stress was laid, in all cases, upon the fact that here at last was something away from the everyday form of photoplay, which brought fascinating scenes, remarkable both for their photography and interest, such as the eye of man had never seen before.

"Vivid," "amazing," "remarkable," "exceedingly interesting," "a rare treat," "like nothing you have ever seen," "daring," "a screen masterpiece," are not words which are commonly written by the critics on the New York newspapers, yet these are only a few of superlatives they used in describing "Jungle Adventures."

The New York Times' comments are submitted as typical of the others: "This week they (the film spectators) owe something to S. L. Rothapfel for presenting Martin Johnson's latest record of exploration and adventure in a strange land, the locality this time being Borneo. It is called "Jungle Adventures."

"Mr. Johnson, and his wife, too, penetrated this wild island and brought back one of the most interesting, and excellently photographed, films of human, animal and plant life beyond civilization's domain that has reached Broadway. Some of the pictures are amazing, considering the difficulties under which they must have been made, and all of them are entertaining. That's exactly what they are."

Seven Goldwyn Releases Ready

List Includes "Dangerous Curve Ahead" and "Old Nest"

GOLDWYN PICTURES CORPORATION is releasing seven pictures for current showing, all of which are said to have an unusual fan-appeal. They run the gamut from mystery-melodrama to comedy-dramas of every-day American life. Included in the list of new productions ready for Goldwyn Week are the two Rupert Hughes pictures, "The Old Nest" and "Dangerous Curve Ahead!" which have been given great national advertising campaigns.

The seven pictures, with brief descriptions, are:

"The Old Nest," Rupert Hughes' heart-gripping story of home with the greatest star cast ever assembled, including Mary Alden, Dwight Crittenden, Cullen Landis, Richard Tucker, Theodore von Eltz, Helene Chadwick, Louise Lovely, M. B. Flynn, Nick Cogley, Fanny Stockbridge, Johnny Jones, Marshall Ricksen, Lucille Ricksen, Buddy Messenger, Billie Cotton and others. Directed by Reginald Barker.

"Dangerous Curve Ahead!" Rupert Hughes' comedy-drama of American married life, with a star cast including Richard Dix, Helene Chadwick, M. B. Flynn and Kate Lester, directed by E. Mason Hopper.

"The Invisible Power," a thilling drama of the hidden forces of life, written by Charles Kenyon and directed by Frank Lloyd, with a great cast including, House Peters, Irene Rich, Sydney Ainsworth, and DeWitt C. Jennings.

Betty Compson in her own production, "For Those We Love," a gripping story of small town life, from a story by Perley Poore Sheeham.

Tom Moore in an original scenario written directly for him by Charles Kenyon, "Beating the Game," and directed by Victor Schertzinger, with a supporting cast including Hazel Daly, De Witt C. Jennings, Dick Rosson and Nick Cogley.

"All's Fair in Love," written by Thompson Buchanan and directed by E. Mason Hopper, with Richard Dix, May Collins, Raymond Hatton and Marcia Manon.

"Ace of Hearts," written by Gouverneur Morris, directed by Wallace Worsley and including one of Goldwyn's greatest all-star casts.

Scenes from "One Arabian Knight," the latest Pola Negri feature which First National is releasing

"One Arabian Night" Exceptional Picture from Every Angle

ERNST LUBITSCH, the creator of "Passion" and other screen masterpieces, has produced his wonder picture in "One Arabian Night," which presents Pola Negri as a star. Certainly everyone who is fortunate enough to witness this Oriental drama will be transported through its unsurpassed splendor of settings, the vivid, colorful story that takes the spectator back through the ages, and the marvelous pantomime of the star, director and their gifted company. Events so thrilling, so fascinating, so fraught with mystery and dramatic intensity follow each other with such lightning rapidity that one can only marvel over the stupendous task that must have been the director's and how easy the accomplishment of it. Only a master director could have achieved this unusual picture.

One of the most remarkable points about the offering is the coherence of the narrative which, analyzed, is as intricate as the pattern of a Persian rug. There is a deftness—a sureness of touch which indicates a skilled artisan as the designer. And the spectator sits back in his seat—receptive to every scene in this fantastic, bizarre kaleidoscope of life in ancient Bagdad. The spirit of the Orient is marvelously caught. The replica of the wonder city of the ages is awe-inspiring. There are the minarets, the grottos, the crooked, winding streets, the market places, the temples, the sheik's palace which stands out conspicuously as one of the most artistic sets ever created, and moving against this background are thousands of people who live and love, sing and dance, hate and kill with an intensity of passion which makes the spectator feel an actual participant. This is Lubitsch's gift. He makes you feel his own impressions. He creates life and movement.

And dominating this spectacle is the vivid personality of Pola Negri who, as the wild, dancing nymph of the desert, for love of whom men fight; in turn, herself loving with the fierceness of a gypsy and yet scoffing at the proffered love, gives a performance which again stamps her as a superb artiste. Lutbitsch's pantomime as the hunch-back clown is uncanny in its realism. And the players interpreting the knaves, slaves, harem girls, eunuchs, and merchants are exceptionally gifted. Like the original story it weaves a spell of enchantment. Lesley Mason's titles are excellently written and always suggestive in weaving a skein of romance over the spectator.—Length,10 reels.—LAURENCE REID.

Ray Release Due Oct 17.

Football Story in "Two Minutes to Go" Gives Element of Timeliness

ANNOUNCEMENT is made this week of Charles Ray's newest celluloid offering "Two Minutes to Go," which is set for nation-wide release on October 17th. Arthur S. Kane, who presents this popular star's attractions for First National distribution, in making announcement of the release date, stands sponsor for the statement that Mr. Ray's forthcoming college football story is one of the most unique and timely films on any current program of fall offerings.

"Coming as it does at the very beginning of the football season," said Mr. Kane in his statement, "'Two Minutes to Go' goes into the theatres with an actual avalanche of national enthusiasm to insure its success. Nothing in the field of advertising and exploitation could possibly equal, in psychological value, the timely nature of the production itself."

End Universal Sales Drive

West Coast Branches Best the East in Drive Ending Sept. 3

THE West Coast branches of Universal are proud of the unusual showing made by that part of the country in the recent Universal Sales Drive, just closed, and in which three out of four prizes were won by exchanges in that part of the country. The three West Coast winners were San Francisco, Seattle and Spokane.

The Sales contest began June 12th and ended September 3rd. The various Universal exchanges were striving to surpass their own sales figures for the same period in 1920. In order to insure an equitable contest, the various exchanges were divided into groups including exchanges of about the same volume of business.

In the first group were Chicago, Pittsburg, Detroit, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Toronto and Buffalo. As a result of the close race in this group, Clair Hague, manager of the Toronto office, has received $1,750 to divide among the employees of his exchange. This division will include all employees, from the top salesman down to Film inspectors, office boys and janitor.

The second group included the exchanges in St. Louis, Kansas City San Francisco, Los Angeles, Okla homa City and Indianapolis. Mr C. A. Nathan, manager of the San Francisco office, also gets $1,750 to distribute. San Francisco got an early lead and easily outdistanced the others of this group.

The Seattle exchange was pitted with Charlotte and Denver. The prize for that group was $750. Mr George Bourke is the manager of the winning Seattle exchange. The Spokane exchange, Mr. A. H McMillan, manager, also won a $750 prize, in competition with Salt Lake City, Butte and Portland.

The results of the sales drive held during the most depressing period ever experienced in the moving picture industry, are said to have been exceptionally good. The drive received great impetus by reason of the Laemmle-Universal Anniversary Celebration, during which several thousand theatres throughout the United States and Canada put on a Gala Week of Universal pictures.

Await Doris May Vehicle

"The Foolish Age" to Reach Screen Oct. 16; First of Comedy Series

FOLLOWING the announcement by R-C Pictures Corporation that it would present Doris May as a star in a series of productions, the interest of exhibitors in her forthcoming first release, "The Foolish Age," has served further to insure her position as one of the foremost comediennes on the screen.

The consensus of opinions of exhibitors as to Miss May's qualifications for starring honors is that she not only is entitled to her position because of her achievements in such laugh-provoking successes as "23½ Hours' Leave," "What's Your Husband Doing?" and "Mary's Ankle" but that she has shown her exceptional versatility by playing dramatic roles with high skill in such productions as "The Bronze Bell" and "Foolish Matrons"

It is as a comedienne, however, that Miss May will be offered to exhibitors by R-C Pictures and is believed that in that role she will be able to do her greatest work. "The Foolish Age" is light entertainment in which Miss May will have plenty of opportunities to put into effect the graceful talents she exhibited in her productions with Mr. M'Lean. Her second production for R-C Pictures will also be fashioned to create laughs.

National Joy Week will begin on October 16 when "The Foolish Age" will be released to exhibitors through the country. It was conceived for the purpose of obliterating as much as possible the feelings of doubt and misgiving that obtain in some quarters as a result of industrial depression. Already it has been adopted by many exhibitors who see in it not only an opportunity to exploit the first Doris May production but a chance to spur their general business as well.

Exhibitor Is Urged for Governor in Ohio

FIRST NATIONAL franchise holder George J. Schade, owner and manager of the Schade theatre, Sandusky, may be Governor of Ohio some day. If he isn't it will not be the fault of James W. Faulkner, Columbus correspondent of the Cincinnati Enquirer, generally recognized now and for a quarter of a century as one of the nation's leading political writers.

Some time since Schade was put forth as a candidate for one of three city commissionerships to be bestowed by the voters of Sandusky in November. He accepted the proposal and shortly thereafter issued a statement in which he let the people of his community know just where he stands in matters of municipal government.

Schade's statement attracted the attention of Faulkner, and shortly thereafter the Enquirer carried what the exhibitor's friends contend is a tribute that may eventually land him in the gubernatorial mansion at the Ohio capital.

Brown to Again Direct Hope Hampton

Clarence F. Brown, one of the best known of the younger director's whose work has caused many flattering predictions to be made, recently arrived from the West Coast, in the interest of Hope Hampton, whose direction he will supervise in her next photoplay.

Some of the screen's biggest successes have been made under the direction of Mr. Brown, who with Maurice Tourneur gave to the silent drama such wellknown productions as "The Last of the Mohicans", "Deep Water", "Foolish Matrons" and "The Great Redeemer."

With the work of titling and editing of "Star Dust," Miss Hampton's last production practically completed and ready for release, the winsome Hope is only awaiting the word from Mr. Brown to begin work on her next starring vehicle.

Vieller Directing His First Comedy-Drama

Bayard Veiller, director of special productions for Metro, will when he stages a screen version of "The Right That Failed," a prizering story starring Bert Lytell, engage in making his first comedy. The motion picture plays Mr. Veiller has done so far for Metro followed in the main the dramatic and melodramatic trend of his own theatrical hits, such as "Within the Law" and "The Thirteenth Chair."

J. P. Marquand is the author of "The Right that Failed" and the story appeared originally in the Saturday Evening Post. Lenore Coffee, of the Metro scenario department, has translated it for the screen. In the cast will be seen Bull Montana and Otis Harlan.

New Serial Policy for "U"

Is Changing Method of Presenting Serial to Public, Declares Berman

STRIKING and novel changes in Serial policy and production are announced by Universal. Harry M. Berman, general manager of exchanges for that company, predicts that his organization is taking the first steps of a new departure that will make history in the motion picture world.

Universal not only is changing the form of its serials, but also is changing its method of presenting them to the public, says Mr. Berman. The change in production is best exemplified by "Winners of the West," a new Art Acord serial based upon the exploits and adventures of Capt. John C. Fremont, and which is said to preserve the actual incidents of history with faithful realism and startling climaxes.

The future presentation of Universal chaptered photodrama, it is outlined by Berman, will be based upon a nation-wide exploitation campaign. Universal intends to "sell" its serials to the public just as it sells its Universal-Jewels, or other super-pictures, it is announced.

"Universal is going to startle the film world with its future serial policy," said Mr. Berman. "We now are making serials that are so different from all serials which have gone before, that we even are tending to get away from the name 'serial.' Our new chaptered product, 'Winners of the West,' really is a 'continued feature.'

"Following 'Winners of the West' Universal is projecting a chaptered film woven around the famous expedition of Henry M. Stanley into Africa to find Dr. David Livingston. Eileen Sedgwick will play the leading role in this feature, that of a young newspaper woman who joins the expedition.

Big Theatres Play Revivals

"Really Good Pictures Never Grow Old," Declares Selznick Executive

THAT good pictures — really good pictures — do not lose their vitality or cease to draw as boxoffice magnets when revived has been conclusively proven, according to Sam E. Morris, general manager of Select Exchanges, who has compiled definite data from the records of the various branches. It will be recalled that four Talmadge revivals were released by Select this spring and summer, and it was upon the record established by these four productions that Lewis J. Selznick based his decision to release six Norma and six Constance subjects during the ensuing year as units in the "Forty from Selznick" that have been announced.

Sam Morris has caused to be compiled the record of first-run houses in the cities throughout the country where "Panthea," "Ghosts of Yesterday," "Up the Road with Sallie" and "The Moth" have played since 'Panthea,' the first of the Talmadge revivals, was released about six months ago. Select's contract department after going over the lists and rendered a report which names hundreds of the best theatres in the largest communities where revivals have been played full time and handled exactly similar to the advertising and procedure with new offerings.

Some of the larger circuits that have played Talmadge revivals include Loews, Pantages and Polis where Norma and Constance have appeared in the pictures they mde two or three years ago and have been an adjunct to vaudeville in the same measure that the newer releases are programmed.

Hodkinson Congratulated on Its Exchange Plans

THE announcement of W. W. Hodkinson's decision to establish a Hodkinson distribution system has brought a flood of congratulatory telegrams and letters to the home office of the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation. In addition, exchange men throughout the country have offered to turn over completely equipped offices to the Hodkinson Corporation. In a statement issued from the Hodkinson headquarters during the week P. N. Brinch, general sales-manager, said:

"We have always wanted our own exchanges and were working to the time when we would have them. Now that time has arrived, and it finds us correspondingly happy. The spirit displayed by our men has been nothing more nor less than remarkable. Each one of them has taken occasion to express himself to Mr. Hodkinson and the feeling which has been stirred up can result in only one thing—a vast increase in business."

Finishes Picturization of the "Rubaiyat"

Announcement is made of the completion of the picturization of "The Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam" by Ferdinand Earle. Mr. Earle has been engaged in the production of this picture for the past two years, it is stated, and the results are reported to be a genuine departure in the way of novel camera effects, sets, and artistic atmosphere. The picture is also described to represent an unique combination of art and economy, over 500 paintings used as sets having been involved in the production, thus leading to an enormous curtailing of expenses. William Clifford, not aware of the tremendous saving effected, is quoted as having pronounced the picture a "three-million dollar spectacle." Four cutters are now busy on the finished picture in Hollywood with Arthur Ripley supervising the quartette.

In a letter addressed to his New York representative, Mr. Earle writes in part:

"We invented new gauze effects, new lens combinations, new lightings. We modified the exposure of the film, modified the development of the negative, modified the treatment and development of the prints. And lo!—something new. It is mathematically certain. Incidentally, we did nothing to appeal to the commercial mind, and would not be convinced that the Public was too stupid to recognize novelty and daring of conception and imagination."

Prominent Exhibitors Optimistic Over Future of Business in West

THE theatrical lighthouse of the West Coast Theatres, Inc., forecasts no breakers ahead, but smooth and calmer weather" for the coming season. Every indication with the August business serving as criterion, points to a more healthy condition not only in theatrical endeavor but in such lines as building, contracting, etc. a direct benefit for theatrical expansion such as the Gore Bros., Ramish and Sol. Lesser interests in Los Angeles and Southern California are centering their new season's activities upon.

While it may be said, speaking with the observation of sane conservatism, that the coming season will not strike the high water mark of the previous prosperous years, the outlook nevertheless is far more promising than many would be led to believe.

"I feel that with the recent absorbing of the productions of the Associated Producers into the Associated First National exchanges the forthcoming year is being given just the sort of impetus necessary to create a feeling of security among exhibitors," said A. L. Gore, secretary of the West Coast Theatres, Inc.

In brief both the Gore Bros., Adolph Ramish and Sol Lesser anticipate that the productions which will be released by their exchange by virtue of the First National Franchise for Southern California and Arizona represent the bullwark of box office optimism.

"Nothing could be sweeter," said these prominent exhibitors, when the merger was recently announced. "We will go right ahead on our expansion plans, we will keep on remodeling and repairing where necessary, and absorb theatres or acquire an interest in theatres where the opportunity offers itself."

Frisco Acclaims Fairbanks

"Three Musketeers" Showing at the Strand Attended by Great Crowds

SO great are the crowds that attend the daily showings of Douglas Fairbanks' "The Three Musketeers" at the Strand theatre in San Francisco that the management had to call on the authorities for police protection, and from ten-thirty in the forenoon till long after the house has been jammed for the last performance in the evening, a big squad of policemen keep the pressing thousands in order, declares a statement from the United Artists' home office.

Among the press comments are the following:

San Francisco Examiner: "Flashing swords, great sacrifices, and daring deeds of heroism make Douglas Fairbanks' "The Three Musketeers' a thrilling picture. Fairbanks' work as D'Artagnan is excellent. He is more restrained, more dramatic, than in anything he has ever done before. His love-making is sincere. The scene in which he comes to the Queen exhausted, but with the jewels he was sent to recover, teems with drama and realism. Every role in this feature is ideally filled."

The San Francisco Chronicle: "Assuredly Dumas would enjoy his story of 'The Three Musketeers' theatre. Douglas Fairbanks gives the performance of his life as D'Artagnan; a splendid cast supports him; settings and details are provided with a lavish hand, and the immortal story is given a thoroughly fitting screen presentation. Fairbanks' D'Artagnan is a revelation. His Gascon cadet is portrayed with the aid of innumerable characteristic Fairbanks' absurdities of gesture and business, but everyone of these touches that Dumas did not originate is so completely in the spirit of the thing that the effect is merely heightened. Fairbanks holds the role to the last second; the gay little toss of his head, the last gesture before the final scene closes, is vibrant with the spirit of D'Artagnan."

Free Vitagraph Trailers

Sales Qualities of Trailers Win Praise from Exhibitors

ENTHUSIASTIC comments have been received at Vitagraph's various branch offices on the action and sales qualities of its trailers. Exhibitors who have seen the trailers for Vitagraph's new productions, "The Son of Wallingford," a special, "Breaking Through," the new serial, and other Vitagraph pictures, have stated that these trailers, seldom, length, are so superior in arrestive if ever, over a hundred feet in and sales value to the old slide system, that there is no comparison.

Trailers are available on every production that the Vitagraph studios turn out. This includes special productions, star features, serials and comedies. In each case, in a Vitagreph trailer, flashes of the important scenes blend into interesting action sequence without telling too much of the story or exposing the plot.

Vitagraph has been supplying trailers on its special productions for well over a year, and so successful have these been that they have created a demand for trailers on all Vitagraph productions. Accordingly, an exhibitor may now secure a trailer on every Vitagraph production made.

Synchronized Music Makes Radical Change

AFTER a year's experience in preparing musical scores for motion picture theatres, the Synchronized Scenario Music Company, of 64 East Jackson Blvd., Chicago, and with offices in all the principal cities of the country, makes the announcement that in the future their Synchronized Music Stores will be published in one book form, designed to meet the requirements of the organist or pianist.

When this company first undertook the task of preparing a separate and individual music score for each of the releases of all standard producers it was thought that they would by these publications render the theatre owner the greatest service. Twelve months spent in the field, however, have proven that it is the organist and pianist, more so than the orchestras that is in need of Synchronized Music Scores, so, with that knowledge gained after a year's hard introductory work, the company, starting with Goldwyn's "The Old Nest" will publish their scores for the Organ or Piano only. However, where a two or three piece orchestra is used and the players are seated close to each other, as is often the case they can all use the same score.

In keeping with the standard that the Synchronized people have always set in the personnel of their musical staff, it is announced that Fermin Swinnen, organist of the Rivoli Theatre, New York City, will supervise the preparation of the new Synchronized Scores.

Mr. Swinnen will personally do all of the registration work in connection with the preparation of the organ scores.

Associated Exhibitors Reports "Road to London" Booked Heavily

"ONLY during the past few weeks," says a statement from the offices of Associated Exhibitors, "have contracts been received in such great volume on Bryant Washburn's 'The Road to London,' as would prove conclusively that this comedy drama has fully hit the bulls-eye of national popularity. Throughout the summer it showed sufficient business to make it a big success, but, with the coming of the fall, bookings have jumped tremendously and the rush is still on.

"Letters from branch offices of Associated Exhibitors state that a great many of the leading exhibitors throughout the country purposely held back on their showings until fall in order to gain the abundance of business which they felt sure Byrant Washburn would bring. Their judgment is proving correct.

"In this connection, among the leading theatres throughout the country which have run 'The Road to London,' might be mentioned the Loew Circuit of New York, Strand of Hartford, Conn., Comerford Amusement Co. of Scranton, Pa., Knickerbocker of Washington, Goldwyn of Newark, Allen of Cleveland, Circle of Indianapolis, Criterion of Atlanta, Rialto of El Paso, James of Columbus, Walnut of Louisville, Family of Cincinnati, Criterion of Oklahoma City, Tudor of New Orleans, Grand of Topeka, Liberty of Kansas City, Pantages of Memphis, Hippodrome of Los Angeles, Loew's State of Long Beach, Cal., Loew's Hippodrome of San Francisco, Hippodrome of Spokane, Adams of Detroit, Rialto of Indianapolis.

"Lee H. Ochs was the first to take a big star to Europe and there make a feature for the American market. He brought back 'The Road to London' which, to quote a recent newspaper review, 'is a carefree, spirited, energetic and swift moving comedy that is as good as a holiday.' Throughout the entire outdoor story, the picturesque scenery in and around London never intrudes itself into the plot, but is always there—interesting, historic and novel."

"Kismet" Is Booked in Small Towns

The autumnal business drive of R-C Pictures Corporation, already productive of approximately one million dollars in bookings, has developed an exceptional demand for "Kismet" on the part of exhibitors in towns where the notable Gasnier spectacle has not been shown, states the releasing corporation.

Louise Fazenda Plays in Comedy-Drama

COSMOPOLITAN Productions have accorded unusual recognition to Louisa Fazenda in seeking her for their comedy production, "The Beauty Shop," in as much as the role will be the first important one she has essayed which brings her definitely into the realms of straight comedy. In "The Beauty Shop" she abandons her eccentric make-up. The story requires that she shall blossom from a plain peasant girl into a modern beauty.

It is probable that Miss Fazenda will henceforth devote herself exclusively to comedy-drama, to productions in which the savor of slapstick which has been one of the main features of her work heretofore, is not needed.

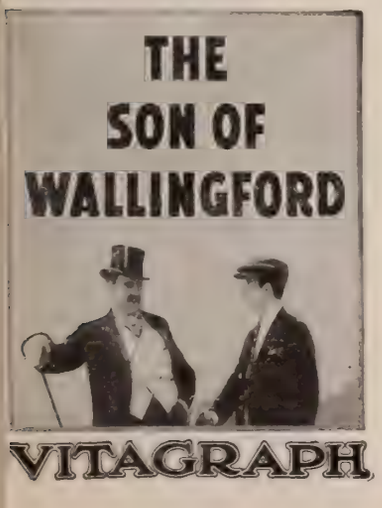
Vitagraph Unit Goes to Canadian Location

Albert E. Smith, president of Vitagraph; Jean Paige, who plays the leading feminine role in "The Prodigal Judge," the Vitagraph special production based on the famous novel by Vaughan Kester; William Wright, Production Manager, Edward Jose, the director, and Frank Walton, his assistant, and Joe Shelderfer, cameraman, left Wednesday night for Cedars, a small Canadian town on the St. Lawrence river, where many of the scenes of the picture will be made. On Saturday thirty-five members of the company left in a special car for the same destination.



Whitman Bennett in New Deal

THE formation of the Bennett Pictures Corporation, of which Whitman Bennett is president, establishes the management and ownership of "The Iron Trail" and the other important Rex Beach productions to be released this season by the United Artists.

The new company is capitalized at $250,000 full paid and non-assessable; and, in addition to this cash capital, Mr. Bennett has arranged for the use of other financial resources far in excess of the greatest possible requirements. This company has nothing whatever to do with any of the other Whitman Bennett enterprises or with any productions heretofore released under his name. The Bennett Pictures Corporation has been formed and exists only and exclusively for the producing of the Rex Beach pictures—the first of which, "The Iron Trail," is shortly to be released—and has been financed on the theory that these special productions must be the biggest and best outdoor subjects on the market.

In announcing the new corporation, Mr. Bennett says:

"I want to distinguish clearly and emphatically between the activities of the Bennett Pictures Corporation, organized and financed expressly for the Rex Beach work, and any of my other productions—either those already released or those to be released at later dates.

Whitman Bennett

The negotiations with Mr. Beach required nearly a year of thought anl labor, for the importance of his position in the literary and picture worlds gave him the right to expect unusual guarantee as to the calibre of the productions to be made from his novels and the manner in which these productions would be released. The production problems were disposed of long before the releasing problem, which was finally settled only when I came to an understanding with Mr. Abrams of the United Artists.

"One most important provision in my producing contract with Mr. Beach is his distinct and specific adaptation of his stories, the supervising of his productions and the final cutting and titling of his pictures.

"'The Iron Trail' has been made under the direction of R. William Neil, a noted expert for this type of work. In addition to my regular technical staff I employed a number of specialists in outdoor picture making, all individually approved by Mr. Beach. The cast, which has been announced, is in itself proof of the very special efforts we have made.

"I am convinced that the field for fine, virile, censorproof dramas of the Rex Beach type is better and bigger than ever before. For that reason I formed the Bennett Pictures Corporation, myself assumed the major burden of all risk and determined to go the limit regardless of pessimists and hard-time prophets. In a season when most people are doing small and inexpensive pictures, I have played my cards exactly the other way and have attempted, with the help of Mr. Neil and Mr. Beach, to turn out a genuinely big picture, many times more pretentious than anything I have undertaken heretofore."

Titling "Flower of the North"

WHEN the film version of James Oliver Curwood's famous novel, "Flower of the North," was shown at the Vitagraph's studio last week, it was agreed that David Smith and his special company on the West Coast had made a film that will live, and that the picture is a combination of splendid acting, thrilling sequence, artistic direction and logical continuity. The special is now undergoing the titling and editing process.

For months and months, Vitagraph has labored to make "Flower of the North" a special that would stand out. When it was first determined to produce this picture, long lists of leading male and female artists were gone over in order that the cast might be in the same class as indexed by the name of the famous author and the record of its director, David Smith, who gave to the screen such successes as "Black Beauty" and another Curwood story, "The Courage of Marge O'Doone."

Henry B. Walthall, famous star of "The Birth of a Nation," was finally selected and engaged to portray the role of Philip, the young pioneer to whom the virgin forests of the great Northwest with their myriad of fish-laden streams, awakened such dreams as can come only to those capable of mounting the physical and mental heights. It is conceded that Walthall ranks as the greatest actor of his type on the screen, not only today but for years past. His uncanny insight and portrayal of feeling has never been seen to greater advantage than in "Flower of the North." In appearance, Walthall is romance personified. There is the Edgar Allen Poe spirit of depth and mysticism blazing in the epressive Walthall eyes and yet, pervading this magnetic presence, there lies a ready smile that reaches into and win the heart of an audience. The female star who can live up to the challenge of Walthall's artistry was found in Pauline Starke. Her work in the previous James Oliver Curwood Northwest classic, "The Courage of Marge O'Doone," proved conclusively that she was the perfect type of this later Curwood story.

"Flower of the North" is, more than anything else, a love story. Walthall, the lover type, is splendidly cast opposite Miss Starke, who, as the flower of the snow country, expresses all the yearning and heart-hunger that may have been expressed generations before by her fair ancestors in the gilded circle of the French court. Emmet King plays the father.

Pathe Serial Booked in Highest Class Houses

PRECEDENT is being swept aside in the success being recorded by Charles Hutchison's newest serial for Pathe, "Hurricane Hutch," which will be released the last of September.

Many high class theatres, which never before booked a serial, will play "Hurricane Hutch." This is not a mere press agent stunt, but is backed up by absolute fact, states Pathe.

Fred Meyer, of the Palace theatre, Hamilton, has broken "no-serial" policy established when the Palace was opened, and will give "Hurricane Hutch" an extended run.

It is many a month since the U. S. theatre in the Bronx, New York, has advertised a serial, but "Hurricane Hutch" will be shown. The Valentine theatre, also in the Bronx, never has run a serial, but will play the Hutchison production. The Empress in Omaha will give "Hurricane Hutch" the greatest number of play dates it has ever accorded a serial.

Some of the circuits that will play "Hurricane Hutch" are the Ascher Brothers, and Lubliner and Trinz, Chicago; the Southern Enterprise circuit, which directs many of the theatres in the South; the Saenger circuit of fourteen New Orleans suburban houses; the Chamberlain circuit, in Pennsylvania.

Metro Names Cast for "Hole in the Wall"

The engagement of Allan Forrest, as leading man; and of Charles Clary and Frank Brownlee for character parts in Alice Lake's latest Metro special, "The Hole in the Wall," is announced this week from the company's studios in Hollywood. This picture is a Maxwell Karger production, from Fred Jackson's play. The scenario is by June Mathis.

Realart Has Booking Aid

Attractive and Complete Date Book Is Offered to Exhibitors

A DATE book is being given to all exhibitors who sign up for the Realart 1921-22 Star Franchise. This book, about nine inches by five, is very substantially made. It has a durable cover of imitation leather, and the pages are printed on strong paper stock. These two factors will insure the preservation of the date book for the period for which it was designed—two years.

This booking aid carries no advertising aside from a small trade mark on the front cover, and the booking pages contain ample space for the names of pictures booked by the exhibitor, other than those of Realart. These pages have accommodations for a week's booking, and opposite each, as shown in the accompanying photograph, is a detailed box office statement, which permits the exhibitor to keep an accurate daily account of his business without any other bookkeeping journals or ledgers. These statements, also designed for a complete week, are divided into four sections, the first being subdivided into four partss, showing the Title of the Feature, Matinee Receipts, Evening Receipts and the Total.

The next section shows the House Overhead, Cost of Features, Cost of Other Service, Express and Advertising, Other Expense and Total Expense. The third section provides for Gross Receipts, Less War Tax, Net Receipts, Less Expenses, and Net Profit. In the last section are spaces for the Date Feature Rental is Paid, Weather, Opposition and Audience Comment, the whole statement offering a complete record for future reference.

Cosmopolitan Names Fall Release

One of the fall releases of Cosmopolitan Productions will be "Boomerang Bill," with Lionel Barrymore in the title role.

The story, originally written by Jack Boyle, is told in the first person, adding greatly to the dramatic effect. The scenario was written by Doty Hobart. Tom Terriss directed. Marguerite Marsh plays opposite Mr. Barrymore.

Nagel and Jack Mower in DeMille Cast

Conrad Nagel and Jack Mower have been chosen by Cecil B. DeMille to play the leading male roles in his next special production for Paramount, "Saturday Night," in which Leatrice Joy and Edith Roberts will have the feminine leads.

RARE OPPORTUNITY FOR BUYERS AND SELLERS

Production Notes from Goldwyn Studio

CULLEN LANDIS, who recently finished acting before the camera the leading role in Goldwyn's production of Alice Duer Miller's original screen story, "The Man With Two Mothers," has been assigned to the leading role in Julien Josephson's original photoplay, "The City Feller."

Lon Chaney has been signed up to play the role of the doctor in "The Octave of Claudius," a screen version of the novel by the same name of Barry Pain.

Rupert Hughes has selected Colleen Moore to play in his next screen story. Richard Dix has been assigned to the leading role in one of the two Gouverneur Morris stories now going into production, "Yellow Men and Gold," from his novel of the same title. In the cast with Mr. Dix are Rosemary Theby, William Carroll, Joe King and Goro Kino.

Jack Abbe has been giving the leading role in the second of the Gouverneur Morris stories, an original scenario entitled "What Ho! the Cook," which went into production on September 21, under the direction of Rowland V. Lee. The screen version of Anzia Yezierska's volume of short stories, "Hungry Hearts," went into production on the same date, under the direction of E. Mason Hopper.

Newspaper Has 6-Page Supplement on Film

What is said to be the biggest special supplement ever gotten out for any motion picture was issued recently by the Lima News and Times-Democrat, of Lima, Ohio, for D. W. Griffith's "Dream Street" when this film was shown at the Sigma Theatre.

The supplement consisted of six full-sized newspaper pages, well filled with news and feature stories and cuts illustrating the principal scenes in "Dream Street." Scattered through the supplement were advertisements of Lima business houses, all offering prizes of free tickets for the picture, the prizes to be won by those finding a misspelled word in the "ads."

The supplement carries the regular title line of the newspaper on ing first page, with the "ears" bearing the words "Special Supplement."

Lois Weber Starts on Tour of the World

Lois Weber sailed for Europe on the S. S. Aquitania on Tuesday, September 13th. Accompanied by her husband, Phillips Smalley, she will make a tour of the entire world, visiting important spots in England, Spain, France, Switzerland, Belgium, Germany, Sweden. China and other countries. She will return to Hollywood by the way of China in the course of six to eight months.

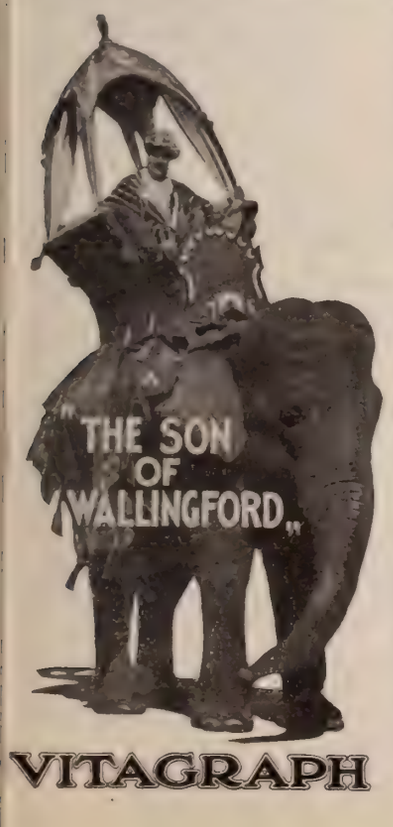
French First-Run Record for "Gilded Lily"

WHAT is believed to be a new record for first run exhibitions of a motion picture has been established in Paris, following the initial trade showing of "The Gilded Lily," the Robert Z. Leonard production starring Mae Murray, held by Societe Anonyme Francaise des Films Paramount. As a result of the big hit scored by this Paramount picture, the first to be released under the newly organized Paramount distributing company for France, it will be given ten first run presentations in Paris.

Other important Paramount productions, including Cecil B. De Mille's "Forbidden Fruit," are to be shown to the French trade. Beginning with the first release on October 21, a super-special Paramount will be released every other week with two regular releases on alternate weeks.



"Wallingford" Due Shortly

Cosmopolitan Announces This Subject is Listed for Early Release

COSMOPOLITAN PRODUCTIONS announces that "Get-Rich-Quick-Wallingford" has been scheduled for release at an early date. The picture is based on George M. Cohan's famous stage play of the same name, "Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford," relates the crowning adventure of J. Rufus Wallingford and "Blackie" Daw, his partner in sharp practice. Cosmopolitan Productions claims for this comedy drama more laughs per foot than any other comedy drama ever produced. It abounds in humor, says the company, that is wholesome, irresistible and thoroughly American.

The picture is a convincing illustration of the value of playing the game straight.

Cosmopolitan Productions selected the cast of "Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford" with great care. For the part of J. Rufus Wallingford himself Sam Hardy was chosen. Hardy has all the breeziness, suavity and eloquence called for by the character that is known to hundreds of thousand of Americans. Norman Kerry was decided upon as the inimitable "Blackie" Daw—sleek, well-groomed and an extremely able co-adjutor of the slippery Wallingford. For the part of Eddie Lamb, the jolly, trusting and fat salesman who never doubts the sincerity of Wallingford, Edgar Nelson was engaged.

Doris Kenyon is appealing and lovely in the part of Fannie Jasper, the girl whose trust and affection inspire Wallingford to walk the straight and narrow path. Billie Dove, as Dorothy Wells, accomplishes a similar result in the life of "Blackie" Daw. Diana Allen has a character part—that of Gertrude Dempsey, the daughter of the hotel owner. Others in the cast notable for the excellence of their characterizations are: W. T. Hays, Horace James, Jerry Sinclair, John Woodford, Mrs. Charles Willard, William Robyns, Patterson Dial, Mac M. Barnes, Eugene Keith, Theodore Westman, Jr., William Carr, Benny One and A. J. McGuire.

New Century Comedy Star

Baby Peggy, Two Years Old, Elevated to Stardom by Julius Stern

BABY PEGGY, the talented, versatile little two year old, famous for her work as co-star to Brownie the wonder dog, has been elevated to stardom by Julius Stern, president of the Century Film Corporation, producers of the Century Comedies. This was Julius Stern's first official act in behalf of his comedies, upon returning from his prolonged stay in Europe.

Julius Stern says of the child's stardom, "It is my intention to advance to stardom every deserving actor or actress working for me, regardless of age, who shows merit necessary in the producing of comedies. The day of just the handsome or pretty face, devoid of any talent, is over. I have starred Brownie our wonder dog only because of his merit. The same of Harry Sweet, my twenty-one year old star; he advanced unaided, winning only through his merits. Charles Dorety advanced from the ranks—and now comes Baby Peggy. Any actor or actress who proves to me that he or she can act, advances, and as to age—Baby Peggy my newest star is but two years and two months old. Baby Peggy deserves her stardom, for she has played and worked equally well and has made a fine co-star to Brownie the dog. Occasionally I will have her play with Brownie, but she will be a star so long as she is with Century Comedies."

Selig Adds to Coast Zoo

Producer Finds More Rare Animals for Use in Future Pictures

THE world-famous Selig Zoo, from which the animals have been selected that have been used in the Selig-Rork Photoplays being made for Educational, has just received a number of unusual animals and birds.

Although the Selig Zoo, which is the only place of its kind in the United States where animals and birds are bred for commercial purposes, is already one of the world's finest zoological collections, Colonel Selig is still most active in acquiring new and rare specimens. He has agents all over the world who are constantly shipping rare denizens of the jungles, each of which becomes available for use in the subjects to be distributed by Educational.

When the Steamer Wolverine State docked at San Francisco from Singapore a few days ago it brought many specimens for the Selig Zoo. The new arrivals included six sacred monkeys from the temples of the Ganges, three marvelously crested Australian pigeons, which are twice the size of the American species, one baby clouded leopard, two baby tigers, four black maribu storks, three very rare yellow parrots and four jabiru storks from New Guinea.

The Selig Zoo can now boast the possession of more sacred monkeys than any other zoo in the world. These monkeys can only be secured in India by special permit. As to the rest of the incoming collection, the storks and parrots are of the rarest varieties in the world.

"Anatol" Breaks Records of B'way Houses

THE biggest record in the history of the Rialto and Rivoli theatres is being set this week by Cecil B. DeMille's twelve star Paramount production, "The Affairs of Anatol," which opened Sunday simultaneously at those two Broadway houses.

On Sunday, the opening day, each house beat the previous Rivoli record for a single day held by John Barrymore in "Dr. Jekyl and Mr. Hyde." The paid attendance at the Rialto was 10,166 and at the Rivoli, 9,959. The record set by the Barrymore picture at the Rivoli a year and a half ago was 9,842, made on a Saturday with two more hours than were allowed the DeMille picture last Sunday.

This is the first time that a production was ever booked into both the Rialto and the Rivoli at the same time. Present plans are to run it at both houses two weeks, during which brief time, according to present daily attendance figures, it will be seen by more than 200,000 people or three per cent of the entire population of Greater New York.

Fourth Mermaid Comedy Is Completed

Completion by Hamilton-White of the fourth of the new series of Mermaid Comedies for Educational release is announced. The picture, in which Lloyd "Ham" Hamilton has the leading part, bears the working title "The Dumb-bell."

"The Dumb-bell" is said to provide Hamilton with one of the best comedy roles of his career. He is seen as a young fellow studying to be a lawyer via the correspondence school route, while working in a bowling alley and lunch room at the same time.

Pathe Releases for Oct. 2nd

Picturization of De Maupassant's "The Orderly" Heads the Schedule

THE French presentation of Guy De Maupassant's story, "The Orderly," is announced by Pathe Exchange, Inc., for release the week of October 2nd. A number of important short subject features and one serial episode are also included in the releases for the week.

It is said that the feature measures up to the highest production standards in story, characterization, acting, and magnificent settings. Nathalie Kovanko, a beautiful Russian actress, is seen in the leading role; K. Kolas, of the Odeon in Paris, plays the tragic role of the girl's father; and Paul Hubert, a favorite with Paris audiences, is the orderly.

"The Cycle Bullet" is the second episode of the new Pathe serial, "Hurricane Hutch," starring Charles Hutchinson. Lucy Fox, Warner Oland, Harry Semels, Ann Hastings and Diana Deer support the "stunt star."

"Lorraine of the Timberlands" is the next offering of the new series of Tom Santschi two-reel dramas. Santschi is supported in the offering by Ruth Stonehouse, Andrew Waldron, Clark Comstock, and Earl Hughes.

"The Lucky Number" is the second of the new series of Hal Roach comedies featuring Gaylord Lloyd, brother of the famous Harold, produced by Hal Roach. The new funmaker is assisted by Estelle Harrison in the comedy. "Gone to the Country" is the title of the current Hal Roach comedy featuring "Snub" Pollard.

"The Wolf and the Crane" is the next of the series of Aesop's Film Fables" produced by Fables Pictures, Inc., and created by Cartoonist Paul Terry.

Pathe Review No. 123 presents a number of interesting and entertaining subjects. "Dinner Time in Frogland" is an amusing animal study presented by Dr. Ditmars of the New York Zoological Park; "Slick Clicks" presents a few pool specialties demonstrated in slow-motion by Nova-graph; "Daown to th' Fair" is the current Capitol Travelaugh, presented by Cartoonist Hy Mayer; and "The Gold-Fish Peddlers" shows a queer street trade in Japan in Pathecolor.

J. Parker Read Starts Work on "Pawn"

J. Parker Read, Jr., member of the group of Associated Producers, left New York last week for Los Angeles where he will start work at once upon his first picture for Associated First National Pictures. It will be adapted from the story "Pawned," the latest novel of Frank L. Packard, author of "The Miracle Man."

Melford's "Sheik" Finished

Lasky Claims Sensation in New Picture; Story of Desert Love

"THE SHEIK," George Melford's Paramount production of Edith M. Hull's sensational novel of desert love, which has been months in the making at the Lasky studio and on desert locations in Southern California, is completed. The finished print was shown to the executives at the Lasky studio a few days ago and is said to have fairly swept them off their feet with enthusiasm over its magnitude, color and dramatic action.

Jesse L. Lasky voiced the unanimous opinion of those present when he pronounced it the most genuinely enthralling picture he had seen in years. "I don't think we have ever made a production in which we were more constantly confronted with the realization that we simply had to satisfy the public's expectations," said Mr. Lasky. "The advance interest in the picture has been amazing. 'When will The Sheik be finished?' has been asked of me not once but a hundred times.

"With this necessity of making good confronting him at all times—a decided handicap, one must admit—Mr. Melford has produced a picture that will stand a most acid test. Nobody can help being delighted, and those who have predicted that 'it couldn't be done' are in for the surprise of their lives. Agnes Ayres, in the role of Diana Mayo, secures for herself a place among the greatest dramatic stars of the screen, and as for Rudolph Valentino, he will be remembered as the sheik, I believe, even after his masterful performance as Julio in 'The Four Horsemen' is forgotten."

Make New Curwood Drama

"The Girl from Porcupine" Gives Faire Binney a Strenuous Role

FAIRE BINNEY, the beautiful young girl who has achieved stellar honors in motion pictures, has some strenuous work to do in the Curwood production, the second of this noted author's series, which will in due time be released by the Arrow Film Corporation. This is a strenuous story calling for big exciting scenes and at times, action of the most violent kind. Curwood is not a kid glove, lingerie, writer of the upper Fifth Avenue class in which the characters live most of their lives round the pink tea table. He takes you into wilder regions than Central Park. With him, "life is real, life is earnest." The real work of the world is done in mines; in camps; in mills; in factories; sometimes in deserts; on pathless seas; in forests—wrestling wealth from Nature. And Curwood knows this.

This story gives opportunity for some lovely effects in photography—for big groupings; above all, there is a powerful plot and a strong human interest theme.

Curwood has studied his types at first hand—he has lived with them—he understands them. The characters are drawn from actual observation. They are not merely type writer products—they are flesh and blood; they are realistic.

One of the objects of the screen is to hold the mirror up to nature—and Curwood is exceedingly successful in doing this. His writings are life-like; but the screen renderings of them are even more so.

"The Girl from Porcupine" is expected by Arrow to be one of the sensations of the year. Time, labor and money without stint are being expended in its preparation and its release is being eagerly awaited by all lovers of the best that is in motion pictures.

New Alice Brady Feature

Realart to Release Popular Star in Dramatic Story of the Orient

"DAWN of the East" is to be the next Alice Brady feature, announces Realart. It is to succeed "The Land of Hope" and "Little Italy" and is from the pen of E. Lloyd Sheldon, who wrote the story upon his return from the Orient recently.

In "Dawn of the East," Alice Brady portrays the role of Natalya, a Russian beauty, who, compelled by adversity to become a dancer in a Tien-Tsin restaurant, later falls a victim to the guile of Wu Ting, her employer.

Realart says that the story is a melodrama with a powerful current of dramatic action sustained throughout, culminating in an amazing climax. Unusual and lavish sets, typical of the Far East, furnish a colorful background for this latest Alice Brady picture.

An unusual cast supports Miss Brady. In the role of Roger Strong, is Kenneth Harlan. Sotan, the scheming Oriental, is played by Michio Itow, the famous Formosan dancer. Wu Ting is portrayed by Sam Kim.

The remainder of the cast is composed of Betty Carpenter, Harriet Ross, America Chedister, Frank Honda, H. Takemi and Patricio Reyes.

The direction was in the hands of E. H. Griffith, who is also credited with "The Land of Hope." Gilbert Warrenton, well known for his exceptional camera work in "Humoresque," photographed "Dawn of the East."

Thomas H. Ince

"Man's Home" Easy to Exploit

Numerous Advertising Angles to Be Found in This Picture

THE showman who plays Selznick's "A Man's Home" is promised more than the average chance to attract patronage to the box office through the many advertising angles that the photoplay possesses, acording to a statement received from the Selznick office. An uncommon number of "slants" are cited as productive "pegs" on which to hang appeals to the theatre-going-public in behalf of a picture Selznick declares is the best product they have ever screened.

The story and its authorship, the presenting cast and director, the elaborateness of its settings and the basic appeal of the plot to the American's proverbial love of home are general headings under which direct advertising may be classified. The home of the average American means so much to him that, after all, it is the direct play upon the domestic side of "A Man's Home" that is depended upon to reap the greatest reward.

That Ralph Ince directed the production of this Selznick special is an incident of first importance. Mr. Ince has a record of more than 300 photoplays to his credit during the years he has been supervising pictures his comparatively recent stellar appearances in "The Highest Law" and "The Land of Opportunity" being a well defined part of his contribution to the Selznick product with which exhibitors and public are familiar.

When Anna Steese Richardson and Edmund Breese's story was entrusted to Mr. Ince for preparation, Myron Selznick, vice-president in charge of production, gave instructions that in the matter of cast, sets and production detail Ince was to be unhampered by expense and was to exercise his best instincts in creating a special that should be measured as this season's standard of Selznick production.

The cast of "A Man's Home" fairly bristles with "names" that are familiar to theatregoers in every locality—names that have been "up in lights" that told of attractions on both stage and screen. The advertising value of a cast of favorites means money to the box office and when each one of these favorites is provided with a part that keeps the individual prominent throughout the action of the photodrama there is an attendant satisfaction to the playgoer that means, in the instance of "A Man's Home" additional satisfaction and advertising.

Harry Morey, Cathlyn Williams, Faire Binney, Matt Moore, Grace Valentine, Rowland Bottomley and Margaret Sedden are names that have been associated with scores of screen offerings and stage attractions.

The aids prepared for this subject include not alone the "stock" necessities of the exhibitor such as slides, lithographs, one and three-sheet stands, banners, heralds nad standard accessories, but there are novelties in publicity devices that will give picture showmen an opportunity to advertise to their public in an effective manner. It is said that few, if any, photoplays have ever been equipped in an advertising way to equal "A Man's Home."

Special Showing Bringing $5 per Seat

SOCIETY leaders in New York are going to pay five dollars a seat at a special showing of "Forever," when this Paramount picture is presented on October 14 in the new ball room of the Hotel Plaza, New York. Arrangements for the showing ere made by the Paramount publicity office with the Film Mutual Benefit Bureau, an organization which secures the use of the homes of prominent society people in and around New York as "locations." The fees charged for these "locations" are contributed to Miss Anne Morgan's American Committee for Devastated France and the Maternity Centre of New York. The proceeds of the Plaza showing will also go to these charities.

George Fitzmaurice made "Forever" from Du Maurier's novel, "Peter Ibbetson," with Elsie Ferguson and Wallace Reid as co-stars. Exterior scenes for this production were photographed at the beautiful estate of Meredith Hare, at Pigeon Hill, L. I.

Ince at Work on New Schedule

THOMAS H. INCE has actually begun work on what is described as "one of the most important production schedules in the history of motion pictures." A report just received from the offices of Associated Producers declares that Ince's special, "Hail the Woman," due for fall release, is now being cut and that "Lucky Damages," which will follow "Hail the Woman" on the releasing schedule, is now more than half completed. In addition the news is conveyed that Ince will have four more producing units at work on new subjects within a few weeks.

John Fleming Wilson, the prominent magazine writer, has been signed by Mr. Ince to prepare a series of special stories for forthcoming production at the Ince studios. Mr. Wilson has already joined the Ince staff on the Coast and is now at work on the first of his stories. It is declared that a special staff of directors and technical men working with a specially selected star and character casts would probably film the Wilson stories.

Another important item of news concerning Mr. Ince's activities is the announcement that he had bought the motion-picture rights for "The Hottentot," the recent stage success in which Willie Collier was starred. The play was written by William Collier and Victor Mapes.

It has been announced that C. Gardner Sullivan, who has been a member of the Ince literary staff for some time and to whose credit are a number of big stories, has renewed his contract to write exclusively for Ince. Mr. Sullivan is responsible for "Civilization," "Hell's Hinges," "Shark Monroe," "The Poppy Girl's Husband," "Mother o' Mine," and other successes. He is the author of the forthcoming Ince special, "Hail the Woman."

Mr. Ince's big schedule is declared to be the direct result of his faith in the independent exhibitor, and his belief in the enlarged possibilities resultant from the merger of Associated Producers with First National.

"We will no longer be hampered by restricted distribution or a trust monopoly," he said. "Productions heretofore impossible will come to the theatres as a direct result of the amalgamation.

"The possibility of any restriction or limitation being placed on the showing of our productions was one of the factors which decided us to make the amalgamation. The distribution bogey is dispelled. The tremendous cost of distribution has kept up the cost of pictures, and made many of our biggest producers hesitate in undertaking productions which they knew would add greatly to the exhibitor's profits and to the public's enjoyment.

"The exhibitor and patron are entitled to the very best pictures that brains and money can make, and such a move as this merger will contribute greatly to the permanent growth of our industry. It is a great stride toward stabilization of our business and toward putting it on a permanent basis."

Heavy Circuit Bookings for "The Blot"

The F. B. Warren Corporation announces continued enthusiasm regarding circuit bookings of Lois Weber's great American drama "The Blot." It has been booked to play the leading theatres and circuits of the country and bookings are still coming in with early play dates as a special request, it is declared.

Warner Feature Opens at Broadway Theatre

"Why Girls Leave Home," the Warner Brothers production made by Harry Rapf and directed by William Nigh, will open for an indefinite run at B. S. Moss' Broadway Theatre on Sept. 26th. A tremendous advertising and publicity campaign is said to have been evolved, and the initial billing was made with twenty-four sheet teasers reading: "Do You Know Why Girls Leave Home?" with a big question mark in the center of the sheet. This is being followed by the placing of door knob hangers on all doors in the early hours of the morning, pasters and buttons, two trailers, hand colored window cards placed in every conceivable commercial shop, and several exploitation stunts with aid of two girls, one carrying a suitcase and the other wearing a mask known as Miss Mystery.

Mr. Moss, of the United Booking Office, at a luncheon held between the U. B. O. Managers and the Warner Brothers organization, at the Claridge Hotel, New York, declared that his entire staff should bend every effort to make it the biggest attraction that has yet been shown in the Keith theatres.

Morris Fink Sees Improvement in South

Morris Fink, who was recently elected President of Peacock Productions, Oklahoma City, Okla., arrived in New York this week with the news that conditions in the film field in the Southwest were steadily improving. Mr. Fink believes that the rise in the price of cotton, oil and wheat in his territory is a sign of better times.

Coast Studio for Guinan

Star to Make Twelve Two Reel Westerns in Fine Arts Studio

WORD comes from the West Coast that Texas Guinan Productions have taken over the Fine Arts Studio, 4500 Sunset Boulevard, Hollywood, where General Manager Jesse J. Goldburg, of that organization, is busily engaged in supervising the production of the new series of twelve two-reel Western and Northwestern dramas in which Miss Guinan is starring. This is the studio where D. W. Griffith produced "The Birth of A Nation," "Intolerance" and "Broken Blossoms," and is one of the most completely equipped studios on the West Coast.

The veteran director, Jay Hunt, has been engaged to direct the new Guinan series. Mr. Hunt has directed many important productions, including "His Brother's Keeper," "The Mills of the Gods," etc., for Thos. H. Ince, "The Promise," for Metro, and many others for Pathe, Universal, Vitagraph, etc. The lighting effects are under the supervision of Chief Electrician Andrew Reid, who formerly served in this capacity for Mr. Griffith, and Ernest Johnson has been appointed head property man.

The story material of the new series, it is stated, wil be on a higher plane than heretofore has been the rule in productions of this class. "For the first time in the history of Western and Northwestern productions, "stated the producers, the story is to be of basic value and not merely two reels of wild horseback riding and close-ups. Three of the stories so far purchased are from the pen of Charles A. Short, a man of mature years who himself is considered an authority on early-day Western life. The policy of the Texas Guinan Productions is to secure only stories of real merit, stories that unfold the great drama of the development of the West, and they consider that only such stories are worthy of the art of Miss Guinan, who herself was reared amidst the romantic life and surroundings which she portrays on the screen.

Blake-Coyle Finish Film

Bobbed-Hair Craze Figures in First Industrial - Educational

THE completion of the first feature industrial-educational production of Blake and Coyle, who recently formed an organization for the production of industrial-educational films, is announced this week.

While this is their first production since they have become independent producers, great interest has been centered upon their work, and upon their first product, in that, for many years Ben K. Blake and Walter Coyle, who form the producing organization, have been known in the industrial field. Mr. Blake was a pioneer in the picture-directing game, having started in the old Imp days—and he was one of the first directors to see the possibilities of the educational films. Mr. Coyle won his spurs as director in the old Biograph days, and has written as well as directed many features. The fact that these producers are also directing their own features bring them into closer touch with the picture itself, and with the people who are to see it.

As their first independent educational feature, they have done a particularly timely and entertaining thing—and one in which there is a tremendous exploitation and publicity tie-up. With the agitation going at full swing for and against the bobbed-hair craze, they have made hair the subject of their photoplay, and are releasing it under the title "Woman's Crowning Glory."

Not that this picture is propaganda for or against—for it is not—for the treatment is purely historical—tracing through the ages, by means of a definite story, the various styles of hair-dressing, its lengths, breadths, colorings, and ornamentations.

Great interest in this picture has already been manifested by the Inecto Company of New York, who have already arranged for its distribution in foreign countries, chief among them Paris, London, Milan, Brussels, and other large cities. Other tie-ups are also being effected, it is announced.

Jane Thomas, who played a leading role in the production of "Heedless Moths," appears in "Woman's Crowning Glory." Miss Thomas has also played leads in several Fox features. Dick Martin plays the male lead. Ben Blake personally directed the production.

Burlingham Adventure in Nat'l Magazines

THE series of Burlingham Adventure Pictures, which are being offered on the state rights market by the Truart Film Corporation, will be the subject of several articles to be published in the near future in the National Georgraphic Magazine and the Travel Magazine.

These special articles are now being prepared by Dr. Frederick Burlingham, under whose personal supervision the series of twenty-six one-reel pictures were taken by a staff of special camermen.

In conjunction with the publicity and exploitation departments of the Truart Film Corporation, it will shortly begin work on the syndication of a long series of short travel talks.

M. H. Hoffman, who is vice president and general manager of the Truart Film Corporation, states that he has found the independent buyers have been favorably impressed with the Burlingham Pictures.

Arrow Film Starting Effective Campaign

Arrow Film, or "Arrow," as th motion picture productions ar known to the public, announces a advertising stunt of uncanny powe and effect. It is done by means o a little arrow head made of card board. Upon it is printed the sim ple legend, "Ask to see Arrow pic tures, at your nearest motion pic ture theatre."

Titles a Feature of the "Tarzan" Serial

The Great Western Producing Company, responsible for the mak ing of "Adventures of Tarzan," now being distributed on the stat right market, are particularly proud of the background effects achieved in connection with the main titles and sub-titles for this serial.

Particular attention has been paid to the photographic and artistic possibilities of the sub-titles. In many instances the jungle backgrounds have been woven into the titles while the principal animal characters, Numa, the lion, Tantor the elephant and Joe Martin the ape have been used to bring out the wild animal atmosphere.

"HEEDLESS MOTHS"

The latest Equity State Right Attraction is going to make 'em sit up and take notice in every city in the U. S. A.

20 MILLIONS OF PEOPLE

For 20 solid weeks in 41 Metropolitan newspapers have read the wonderful stories published under the heading "INTIMATE SECRETS OF STUDIO LIFE REVEALED" by Audrey Munson, Queen of the Artists' Studios.

Twenty millions of people, covering every State in the Union, have read, heard of or know of the sensational special Sunday single and double page Feature Stories on Audrey Munson, which means that twenty millions of people are prepared to pay money to see the famous Audrey Munson in her first great film—"HEEDLESS MOTHS." Forty-one newspapers, big metropolitan Sunday papers have spread broadcast, oceans of publicity on Audrey Munson that couldn't be purchased for more than a million dollars in spot cash. What feature picture offered now or at any time in the history of the industry do you know of that has presented a star who has had publicity that compares with Audrey Munson?

It's the biggest State Rights proposition on the market by miles, not only because the picture is there, and that the star is known to almost every man, woman and child throughout the country, but also because we have prepared a tremendous exploitation campaign to put "HEEDLESS MOTHS" across in every territory in the U. S. A.

Elaborate advertising campaign books are now ready. Write us for a copy. In the meantime wire us for terms. We are apportioning territory at "living prices" so that everybody can get in and make a clean-up. Mail is quick—telegraph is quicker, long distance phone beats 'em all. Let us hear from you today. Brandt Reports More Sales

"The Heart of the North" Sold for Three Territories in Week

ONE of the biggest triple-header sales was made this week when three territories were signed on "The Heart of the North," the feature of the Canadian Northwest which Joe Brandt and George H. Davis are State Righting. The feature was made by Quality Film Productions, Inc., the new Davis-Brandt producing organization.

Federated Film Exchange of New England, it is announced, have contracted for rights to this production, in which Roy Stewart is featured, with Louise Lovely supporting him, and will handle it throughout the New England territory. This announcement is the result of an arrangement consummated between Sam Grand of Federated Film Exchange of New England, and Joe Brandt, immediately following the latter's arrival in Boston.

Another new sale on "The Heart of the North" was that made this week to True Films of Dallas, whereby this company will handle the feature in the Texas, Arkansas, and Oklahoma territory. In addition to this, Supreme Photoplays of Denver have contracted for the territory covered by Utah, Denver, Montana, Washington, Idaho, Colorado, and New Mexico, whence come reports of much special exploitation which is being planned to put the feature over on the largest possible scale.

Inquiries and wires are coming in daily regarding this feature states the distribution territory is going rapidly. Joe Brandt, who is now on tour for the purpose of closing pending negotiations on this picture, and affording States Right buyers who cannot get to New York an opportunity to see it at once, reports several other big sales in the making.

With the feature on the market so short a time, the territories closed, including Greater New York to and New Jersey Commonwealth Film Corporation of New York; Upper New York State to Nu-Art Pictures of Buffalo; California, Arizona, Nevada, to All Star Feature Distributors, Inc. of California; The Dominion of Canada to Canadian Film Import, Ltd.; and the new sales closed this week make this sales on this feature of record-breaking proportions.

"Four Seasons" at Rialto

Broadway Will See Chas. Urban's Four Reel Production Next Week

A PRE-RELEASE showing of Charles Urban's "The Four Season's," the nature spectacle produced by Raymond L. Ditmars for the Kineto Company of America, will begin next Sunday at the Rialto Theatre in New York. Dr. Hugo Riesenfeld has prepared a special orchestration for it.

"The Four Seasons" is said to be one of the oddest feature productions ever made. The entire cast is supplied by Nature; also the settings. The woods, the trees, the sky, the marshes—these and many more supply the settings; the storms, the rainbows and all the other expressions of Nature furnish what might be called the "effects" and as far as the actors are concerned, these are furnished by the animals. It is distinctly a picture of Nature; human beings have little part in it except to supply the direction.

"Of course," states Kineto, "this is an important part and the men who have done this work know the particular business of putting Nature's story in motion pictures. They are Mr. Urban and Mr. Ditmars. Mr. Urban is largely known as a motion picture man and Mr. Ditmars is largely known as a scientist and an expert in animals, but it happens that each of the men are thoroughly acquainted in each other's field and they have made an ideal combination in producing and editing 'The Four Seasons.' The picture is in four reels and will be released by the Kineto Company of America, as an Urban Popular Classic.

"Each season of the year has one reel devoted to it in 'The Four Seasons,' spring, summer, winter and autumn make up the natural subdivisions of the feature. They tell the complete story of Nature; they take a full year and in motion pictures describe what happens in the woods and marshes and fields in every season of the year.

"The work has been done with great attention to detail; simplicity has been the keynote throughout, creating an effect so powerful that it will reach even the most unimaginative."

New Comedy Series for Reelcraft Pictures

President R. C. Cropper of the Reelcraft Pictures Corporation is preparing an announcement to the trade concerning a new series of two-reel comedies soon to be added to the Short Subject program of Reelcraft.

"This new series," says Cropper, "will have for the featured comedian one of the best known short subject comedians in the business. We intend to feature this new series, and hope to have these comedies surpass any we have as yet given to the exhibitors."

A formal announcement and advertising on the new series will appear in this trade paper shortly.

Will Exploit "Judgment"

Many Novel Ideas Offered to Independents on Victor Hugo Drama

THAT the spectacle drama, "Judgment," World Film Corporation's offering to the independent market, is to have an unusual line of advertising acessories, is the announcement which comes from the World offices concerning the exploitation of this production.

A principal character in the photoplay is the sinister Black Headsman—and his figure, in silhouette, has been given prominence in "Judgment!" advertising matter. It is said that the one-sheet, in which the headsman with upraised sword stands out boldly in black against an orange back ground, has rarely been surpassed for effectiveness.

The press book for "Judgment!", compiled by Harry Chandlee and Wm. B. Laub, who also wrote the sub-titles for the picture, contains a novel suggestion for "teaser" advertising, consisting of copy for six post cards. The first five have various inscriptions in which the title of the picture is used prominently, and in a way to excite curiosity. For example, the first reads, "How is your Judgment?" the second, "What you need is Judgment!", etc. The last of the series, of course, gives the answer, and the fact that "Judgment!" is playing at local theatres.

Another important advertising point is the fact that "Judgment!" is a picturization of the drama "Mary Tudor," by Victor Hugo.

Special Service Section on "Burn 'Em Up Barnes"

"BURN 'EM UP BARNES" is melodramatic farce of the rt that has heretofore been used most exclusively by Douglas Fairnks. It takes a plot that might ve been developed as a serious elodrama and surrounds it with ll sots of farce comedy incident nd reinforces the whole with tles that miss no opportunities for ringing out the entertainment gles of the production.

The star, Johnny Hines, is cast s an energetic young man, son of rich father who after a quarrel th the pater, decides to strike ut for himself, thereby bringing mself in for a series of adven-rcs that end in a small town with e winning of an automobile race nd a wife, the daughter of one f the local merchants.

The role fits Mr. Hines exceedngly well, giving him opportunity r the display for his particular dents which have become generally nown to fans through his roles in he Torchy comedies.

In support of Mr. Hines is one f the strongest casts ever appearng in pictures.

Betty Carpenter, who played Hope" in "Experience" and has ppeared in other big pictures is Mr. Hines' leading woman. Her le is that of a small town belle.

Edmund Breese who might well hare starring honors in the picture ot only from the role he has but ecause of his reputation on stage nd screen, is cast in a likeable part f a poetic souled hobo. His role s one of the most likeable characterizations of the season.

George Fawcett perhaps one of he best known character actors who has ever appeared in pictures nd who can always be counted upon to make his roles interesting and usually amusing has a comedy part which adds not a little to the features' entertainment and box office value.

J. Barney Sherry another veteran player, star in his own right and featured player in many of the past great successes such as "The River's End," Marshall Neilan's "Northwest Mounted" picture recently released is a member of the cast. His name may be counted upon to bring people into the theatre.

Julia Swayne Gordon who has been playing grand dame roles since pictures got out of the store theatre days has a suitable part in "Burn 'Em Up Barnes," while another player who has a reputation in heavy roles is Matthew Betts. One of Betts' recent roles was that of the villain in "Salvation Nell."

Other players who have a place in the cast are Dorothy Leeds, former of Ziegfield's Follies and Richard Thorpe recently appearing in Torchy comedies.

The picture was directed by Johnny Hines and George Beranger. The scenario was written by Raymond Schrock and the titles are by Ralph Spence who is credited for a large portion of the success of "A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court" in a similar capacity.

The picture screens in six reels, 5,600 feet, boasts some very fine exteriors, a thrilling automobile race and much entertaining incident which while not essential to the story is responsible for the success of the production.

EXPLOITATION SUGGESTIONS

THIS picture is one where the bars are down for the use of all sorts of hokum exploitation. Nothing which does not offend is out of place so long as it sells the picture as entertainment.

The publicity campaign for "Burn 'Em Up Barnes" should begin in the newspapers and stay there until the close of the run no matter what other exploitation is used. It would seem advisable to sell the production as all star in view of the fact that the picture has so many players of note and that Johnny Hines has heretofore been identified as a star only in two reel comedies. Your selling talk should remind the public of other pictures in which the various members of the cast have had leading roles, stress the fact that "Burn 'Em Up Barnes" is farce comedy, mention the automobile race is a thrill, etc. with little or no attention paid to the story in the way of detailing the plot.

Display ads should carry cuts of the principal players and the selling talk should be couched in vernacular and slang. Every ad should promise a lot of fun.

With the newspaper advertising taken care of, the next best exploitation bet is the opportunity to tie up with automobile firms for a ballyhoo. Racing cars properly identified with signs should be easily available, at small cost. Window displays on a cooperative basis can be arranged with automobile agencies and local motor car advertising can be tied up to the showing.

Barnes is a name which in most sections contributes liberally to filling the directory. The different people in your city by the name of Barnes can be used in advertising the picture. Suppose you run small teaser ads reading on the order of this: "Attorney "So and So" Barnes says that Burn 'Em Up is not his relative so far as he knows but he would be willing to adopt him as a "son" or "Patrolman Barnes states that Burn 'Em Up Barnes is an Eastern cousin worthy of the good old English name. He expects to see him in this city soon."

If you don't object to an unusual free list you might offer passes to the Barnes family in your city, possibly putting some strings on the idea that would bring some paid admissions along with the dead wood.

Without question, aside from the verdict of the trade press and newspapers, this cast of well-known players, most of whom are stars in their own right, insures Johnny Hines support worthy of the name and adds to the pull at the box-office.

" Johnny Hines, bubbling with a desire to please, burned 'em up yesterday at Keith's-Strand where he appeared in ' Burn 'em up Barnes.' Just how ' Burn 'em up Barnes ' got away from Wallace Reid is a mystery, for it is a typical Wallace Reid picture. Mr. J. Justice Harmer,
Pres. Sun-Light Arc Corporation,
1600 Broadway,
New York City.

Dear Sir:

We are sending you some still photographs from our production "Burn 'Em Up Barnes" which is creating such a stir in the independent market. These pictures were made with the Sun-Light Arc. The excellence of the photography has been commented on in the trade paper reviews.

Although we had an unusual camera staff in Hal Young, Ned Van Buren and Ted Beasley, we feel that much of the credit is due your lights. Brilliant lighting is much more important in comedy, in fact it is of paramount importance in bringing out the "gags" plainly, so that they do not miss fire. Your lights have helped us tremendously in getting the desired result.

We also believe if directors and camermen would appreciate the value of brilliant well lit scenes, so that audiences do not have to practically strain to get the action, pictures would be more pleasing to the majority of people today. The so termed artistic affect and soft photography is possibly more pleasing in the big first run theatres than the brightly lit almost stereoscopic negative that was in demand some years ago, but if some of the big directors could see their pictures in the shooting-gallery like theatres which make up the majority of the moving picture theatres in the country, they would understand why the so called cheaper class pictures seem to please the audience more generally. It is simply a question of visibility, and for my part, I thank God for the "Sun-Light Arc."

Yours very truly,

hokum variety. Pictures of big automobile races with famous drivers identified to which you could add facetious captions tying the still up with the auto race of the picture should attract attention. Cut-outs of the principal players identified with reading matter, toy automobiles on a minature speedway with a stage setting suitable to mask the mechanics of the stunt would be inexpensive and effective. Display of cups that have been won in local speed events in the lobby is still less expensive and sure of attention.

SUITABLE PROLOGUES

THOSE who desire to use a prologue have a variety of suitable numbers from which to select.

The Joe Jackson tramp acts of which there are a large number would be ideal. Also an automobile race on the stage in the same manner as the tread mill horse races are pulled is also a practical proposition with exhibitors who have sufficient stage room and can obtain the tread mills.

The prologue which we suggest however is musical with a stage setting painted for the event.

Begin with a plain white picture curtain without a filler of any kind on it so that a motion picture projected from the rear would show through. In front of this place a stage freight car, practicable so far as a floor and doors is concerned. Make the car big enough so it will extend across the proscenium opening and disappear in the wings on one side without showing the end. This would bring your door openings nearer to the wings on one side than the other. With both doors open and a quartette dressed as tramps lying on the floor of the car project a series of rural scenes preferably those which have been shot from a train on the old fashioned picture screen, the picture machine being located back of the sheet. The audience will view the scenic through the opening and the fact that the doors are not in the center of the stage will keep the red spot of the arc visible when a film is projected in this manner from showing. You can wake up your quartette after pulling what lighting and train effects you desire and launch them into suitable vocal numbers.

If you have available for use a panoramic spot of the sort used often in staging effects of this kind for dramatic shows a suitable panorama can be obtained at less expense and trouble. Also houses that can build transparencies and fade out the audience side of the box car showing the musical hoboes only after this was done. The songs to be used are of course suggested by the fact that "Burn 'Em Up Barnes" is a tramp story.

For exhibitors where a stage setting of the magnitude of the above is out of the question a woods drop with a hobo camp, fire, tin cans, logs etc. is suggested, using the quartette as the tramps and perhaps adding to the number by use of a freak orchestra, with people playing on various instruments like the harmonica, jewsharp, a battered cornet, Piccolo, banjo, etc. With this sort of a prologue nothing in the way of hokum is barred. The number can be built up into a vaudeville act with any number of performers used. The poker game scene of the picture might be reproduced although most managers who know the prologue best, do not approve of trying to reproduce scenes from the play, claiming that it is bad technique and never satisfactory since it gives away a part of the film and can never be done so well as it was originally. A number of newspaper displays originated by exhibitors who have already played the picture are reproduced in preference to original suggestions.

PLEASED TO HAVE HAD OUR SHARE IN THE SUCCESS OF "BURN 'EM UP BARNES"

"Burn 'Em Up Barnes" Sure-Fire from Every Angle :

"BURN 'Em Up Barnes" considered from the angle of star, story, cast, and production is one of the strongest box-office bets that has latterly come to the screen. In "Burn 'Em Up Barnes," which is being handled by Affiliated Distributors, Inc., Charles C. Burr presents Johnnie Hines, who has won an abiding place in the hearts and allegiance of the movie fan as the irrepressible "Torchy."

"Burn 'Em Up Barnes" is a whirlwind auto racing story from the pen of Raymond L. Schrock. The story, which concerns the escapades and experiences of the young son of a manufacturer of high powered motor cars, who revels in road races and other sensational pastimes to the detriment of discipline and the depletion of the paternal cash reserve, is replete with thrills, comedy and love interest—well blended into an appealing and swiftly moving screen story.

Assisting Johnny in providing entertainment is one of the most talented casts ever assembled for a motion picture production and includes Edmund Breese, George Fawcett, Betty Carpenter, J. Barney Sherry, Julia Swayne Gordon, Matthew Betts, Dorothy Leeds, Harry Fraser, Richard Thorpe and a host of others equally well known.

The "knock-out" scene of "Burn 'Em Up Barnes" is the thrilling road race in which Johnnie as Barnes himself, drives his way in a grilling and thrilling contest to victory, a bride, and parental forgiveness. The race was staged in Westwood, N. J., and the adjoining country. The residents in the towns of Bergen County turned out in large numbers as the race took on all the semblances of a genuine death-defying road race.

Johnny was the hero. That was clear to all, and winsome Betty Carpenter as "the Gal" was as demure as one could wish. Edmund Breese, with more than a week's growth of beard on his face to add reality to his characterization of a Good Samaritan tramp, lounged about as a tramp might and smoked his pipe with an air of indolence that was most contagious, as did George Fawcett, who plays a similar character. Others present were Matthew Betts, that "gray derby gangster," looking as hard as nails, which is exactly how a villain should look, and Dorothy Leeds, as his browbeaten sister, surely wasn't gay. The pride of the village was J. Barney Sherry as the hero's papa and who at the opportune moment and not one second before stood ready to present the laurel wreath to his irrepressible son.

The 400 extra people engaged for the day as spectators might as well been left at home. The crowd did not need augmenting. The enthusiastic townsfold turned out for a full quota, and the "country cousins" brought along their lunches and seated themselves to "make a day of it."

Almost without suggestion from George A. Beranger, the director, they cheered, advanced to the middle of the road to watch the cars speeding down the stretch, fell back as the next racer drew up, waved flags and arms and howled with delight as each car left the starting line and flashed away. As "extras" these good natured, hospitable folk were literally worth their weight in gold.

Stimulating their enthusiasm to fever pitch was a group of well-known professional racers under the technical direction of the famous Ray Howard, who has driven in every road race of importance in the East and a consistent winner with his Feugeot Special. Foremost among the drivers was Frank Davidson, who recently won three out of five races at the Olympic Park, Newark; Frederic S. Hadley, the Sheepshead Bay winner and gentleman jockey; T. W. Patrone of the Indianapolis track fame; Tom Devito, winner of last year's hill climbing contest, Giants Despair, Wilkes-Barre, Pa., and several other drivers of reputation.

Incidentally Devito narrowly escaped serious accident when the driver of a heavy touring car, escaping the vigilance of the police and ignoring the warnings of the spectators, got out upon the course. Traveling at the approximate speed of ninety miles an hour, Devito, striving to avert a collision, locked his brakes on his rear wheels, lashing his car from side to side. Despite the ever present danger of the car turning turtle, he clung to the wheel and finally steadied down the racer and guided it safely past the touring car, which drew off the road on to a lawn, where it remained until the conclusion of the race.

The automobile, which was built especially for Ray Howard, the famous speedster, began its career on the Eastern tracks and won several grand prizes. Later it was entered in the famous Sheepshead Bay race, where in the course of a trial spin, the gas tank caught fire and the entire body of the machine ruined, the driver and his mechanician having narrow escapes. The automobile was overhauled and rebuilt and entered the big race at Indianapolis, during which it overturned on a curve, breaking Mr. Howard's legs and killing the mechanician.

Howard again rebuilt it and entered it at the Allentown dirt track race, which he won, and later repeated the performance at several other meets. Johnny Hines says that it is the best car in the world, except his, and he ought to know since he drove it at a seventy mile an hour clip for a goodly part of a day during the filming of the racing scenes.

The story of "Burn 'Em Up Barnes" is of the sort that moves swiftly from start to finish, and its picturization has lost none of the interest, thrills, or suspense of the original. "'Burn 'Em Up' Barnes," youthful and speed-mad son of Whitney Barnes, millionaire manufacturer of high powered motor cars, was born on the Twentieth Century Limited, en route from Chicago to New York. Whether or not this had any influence in making him the most flagrant violator of speed laws in all New York can only be surmised. The fact is that he was such.

Not satisfied with confining his racing ability to the race tracks, he was the Nemesis of all the traffic officers in the country round about. Driven to desperation finally, by his son's indifference to business, Barnes, Sr., takes the youth to task for his shortcomings and intimates that were it not for the family name and millions, he couldn't make good in a position even as lowly as a street manicure in a one horse town.

Stung by the taunt, Barnes, Jr., abruptly leaves the office and resolves never to return until he has made good. He goes to his club where his fellows finally persuade him to be a good boy and run home for forgiveness, which counsel he accepts and enters his motor to return to his father. Meanwhile, the fuel tank of his racer has been drained by a couple of crooks and after riding a few miles into the country to calm his ruffled temper, his machine stalls. Discovering the empty tank, Barnes hails a passing motor and asks to be given a lift to the nearest garage.

As he sinks into the seat beside the driver, he is attacked from behind by the driver's crook confederates and rendered unconscious by a blow upon the head. They rob him, even to his clothes and garbing him in the cast-off garments of one of the crooks, they carry him to a freight car into which they fling him. Upon awakening from his coma he learns from one of a group of tramps that he has now become a member of "The United Travelers of America." At the next junction the train crew, suspecting that there are tramps aboard the train, make an attack. All of the "Travelers" scatter to the fields, except Barnes, who is too weak to make the attempt. Cole refuses to make his escape and instead sacrifices himself to be beaten by the trainmen in order that Barnes may receive a minimum of punishment. Once away from the train, Barnes voices his determination to adopt the "Life on the Broad Highway" with Cole as his partner and this proposition Cole eagerly accepts. Together they make their way into Westwood, Pa.

Oddly enough, it has been predicted by some of Barnes' club mates that he was to find "The Right Girl" in this very town, the prediction following a game in which he was a participant and, in the course of a foraging expedition, Barnes meets her in the person of Madge Thompson, the "Belle of Westwood."

After meeting Madge, Barnes determines to remain in the town and win her. Describing himself as a novelist in search of material for a new book and Cole as his valet, Barnes and Cole take up their residence in Westwood's only hotel. But Cole is more than a valet—he is also the nurse for a baby Barnes has rescued from the path of an onrushing train just prior to their entrance into Westwood and which they had concealed for fear of arrest on suspicion of being kidnappers.

Barnes' marked attentions to Madge incurs the jealousy of young Francis Jones, the "catch of the town," who had already proposed to Madge, and Jones seeks to rid the town of his rival. In this he is assisted by Ed. Scott, a paroled convict whom Barnes had offended in protecting Madge from Scott's advances. Scott, in the pay of Jones, gains entrance to Barnes' rooms and discovers the child. He recognizes it as his niece, his sister's child that disappeared a few weeks before.

Scott and Jones charge Barnes and Cole with kidnapping which results in their arrest. Jones arranges to have the identification of the child made in the Thompson home and in the presence of Madge. After the identification has been made which establishes the child as that of Betty Scott, secretly married to Madge's brother Stephen,

Walton Scenery Transfer Used by Burr

A fleet of nine auto trucks were responsible for the transfer of scenery during the producing production of "Burn 'em up Barnes." The Walton Scenery Transfer was the company that did the job. This company has always on hand nine huge auto trucks which have been built especially for the transportation of studio necessities.

Transporting scenery of any sort is one phase of the show business which requires infinite care and experience. This, it is claimed, is offered by the Walton Scenery Transfer. But this is only one of their assets. They have made "speedy, careful and prompt," their slogan. When a delay of minutes means a loss of dollars to a producer speed is a thing of paramount importance, but it is useless unless coupled with care. And all the speed in the world will not compensate for a delay in half an hour or more in arriving at the starting place. Hence the "promptness."

The Walton Scenery Transfer has some of the largest and best known, as well as the most discriminating producers in New York as the customers. Among them may be mentioned, in addition of C. C. Burr, president of Affiliated Distributors, the producers of "Burn 'em up Barnes," in which Johnny Hines is starred, are Famous Players-Lasky, International, Metro, and and many others.

The officers of the company are at 314 East 28th Street, sufficiently near to the heart of the city to be easily accessible from all points.

Eaves Costume Company Awarded Credit

One of the most important agencies tied up with the production work done on "Burn 'em up Barnes," Affiliated Distributors' release, starring Johnny Hines, is the Eaves Costume Company located at 110 West 46th Street, New York City. Johnny Hines, who is popularly known on the screen under the name of "Torchy," appears in this picture arrayed in every manner and sort of clothes ranging from top hat and full dress down to hobo's rags. The women of the cast appear in many of the sequences in costumes that are sure to attract the favorable attention of the ladies in the audience.

The credit for "dressing the production" goes to the Eaves Costume Company, and the work done by this organization in connection with "Burn 'em up Barnes" has won the hearty endorsement of all connected with the production of this thriller. The efficient work along these lines performed is due entirely to the facilities and equipment of the Eaves organization and to the expert handling of the matters submitted for its attention. The Eaves Costume Company has established a reputation for costume service among professional and amateur theatricals as well as in motion picture circles. Costumes of all historical periods are in its stock as well as uniforms of every sort. A large and complete assortment of fancy dress and masque costumes is also available.

How They Did It in Cleveland

JOHNNY HINES was in Cleveland a few weeks ago. So was his latest picture, "Burn 'Em Up Barnes." Both were appearing at Loew's State theatre four times a day. Hines made a big hit on his first appearance last Sunday when he rode right on the stage in a special model Stearns' racer with the muffler cut out.

In connection with Hines' appearance in person, Manager George H. Dumond arranged an elaborate prologue setting which he called "FOUR KNIGHTS OF THE ROAD." The State theatre has a very workable stage. It has three parts. The stage proper, which is stationary, and an apron wing on either side which swings. For "FOUR KNIGHTS OF THE ROAD" Dumont used the entire stage including the wings. The left wing was a set that resembled a ticket office in a boob town. The center set was a box car on a railroad track, train signals and all the parapernalia that goes with railroading. The right wing contained a pastoral set. Fruit trees in blossom; a cow; a broken down picket fence.

As the curtains are drawn aside, four tramps crawl out of the box car. They gather around an impromtu wood fire. And they sing in harmony. It was charming. The audience liked it. Encores were called for.

And it reflected the character of the feature that was to follow.

Barnes and Cole are incarcerated in the town jail to await trial.

Meanwhile, Barnes, Sr., having learned of the prediction made at the club that his son would meet "The Right Girl" in Westwood and becoming alarmed over his protracted absence, sends a detective to investigate. Upon his arrival, the detective learns of Barnes' arrest and wires his employer of "Burn 'Em Up'" predicament. Barnes, Sr., selects his fastest racing car and speeds to Westwood, arriving on the morning of the Annual Road Race.

The Constable who refuses to set his prisoners at liberty, is spirited away while Barnes, Sr., by breaking jail, liberates his son and Cole. At that moment, Madge enters the jail to notify the authorities that Ed Scott and a companion, taking advantage of the holiday and the noise of the races, have blown the vault of the bank and are making their escape in a racing car.

"Burn 'Em Up" bounds into his father's racer and in company with Madge, ultimately overtakes the crooks, regains the loot and unknowingly wins the race. Returning to Westwood, he is greeted as a hero, obtains his father's forgiveness, wins Madge and later they leave for New York and home.

Cole sadly refuses to accept the responsibilities of Barnes' Jr.'s small business in Westwood and will not return to New York with them, takes his leave and as the train draws out of the station, Cole, with his bundle on his back, is seen far down the track, tramping into the setting sun.

Novelty Color-Work in Johnny Hines Films

One of the real novelties in motion picture photography is to be found in card game sequence of "Burn 'em up Barnes" the Affiliated Distributors' six-reel comedy-drama starring Johnny Hines.

The "spots" on the several hands held by the different players in the game are colored as they are in the original deck. All the heart and diamond cards are a vivid red while the black cards appear in their original colors.

This innovation in color photography was turned out by the Colorcraft Corporation of New York and is admittedly something new in the way of color effects.

The method by which the effect is achieved is a matter of mystery among even expert cameramen and Colorcraft's stunt is causing all kinds of talk in the trade. The novelty is being received by audiences as little short of a marvelous display of photographic ingenuity and adds no little to the picture's entertaining qualities.

Inasmuch as Colorcraft has accomplished the apparently impossible in this instance it seems probable that other effects of a similar nature and of as startling originality may be expected from this studio in future releases.

Attractive Slides and Photos in Feature

To the Photo Reproduction Company belongs the honor of producing the excellent slides and photographs which are used in Johnny Hines' new feature, "Burn 'em up Barnes" which was produced by Affiliated Distributors. These slides and photographs have already won the highest praise from capable critics ,and are said to offer to the exhibitor who intends to use them ample opportunity to catch the eye of his prospective patrons in such a way that it is almost certain they will be attracted to see the inimitible Johnny and his first feature.

The Photo Reproduction Company have their offices in Long Island City, New York, in the Queens Subway Building, at Hunters Point and Van Alst avenue. They claim to have the largest and most completely equipped plant in the world devoted to the manufacturer of photographs, lantern slides and lobby displays of all kinds. Their work is already known to a large majority of the Eastern producers, who have taken advantage of the excellent workmanship and service offered by this concern.

New Rialto Is Wonder Playhouse of Arizona

Rickards and Nace Theatre in Phoenix Is Truly Modern

One of the most modern and finest theatres in the State of Arizona—the Rialto at Phœnix—was recently opened by Jo E. Rickards and Harry L. Nace, doing business under the name of Rickards and Nace Enterprises. The Rialto is a work of art, and it is doubtful if any other town of 50,000 inhabitants in the country has such a magnificent and up-to-date theatre in every respect. From the time that one enters the shallow lobby of the Phœnix house one forgets he is in a small city. The interior is that of a theatre in a large city, with its massive stairway and attractive foyer, the Tiffany blend walls and frescoed pilasters.

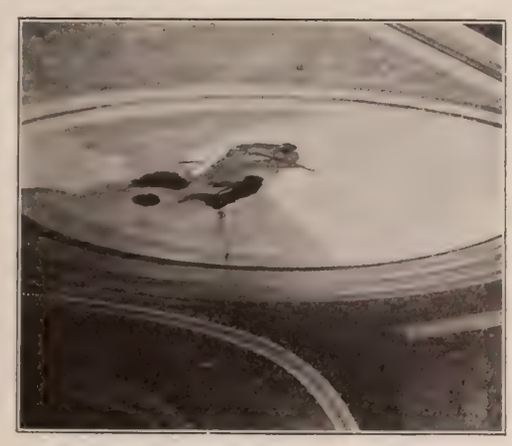
The Rialto conforms to no particular style or type of architecture, it being a composite collection of all of the successful ideas in the biggest picture theatres of both the East and West Coast. When the Rialto was conceived a member of the firm journeyed to New York, and through the good offices of the big picture makers in the East was able to secure drawings, sketches, photographs and detailed plans of the most successful of the many wonderful picture theatres throughout the East. A similar trip was launched in the West, and ideas were gleaned from the several successful picture houses of the Coast cities. Taking these groups of theatres with their many features and advantages, Rickards and Nace secured the services of Tom Weatherford, and with his assistance laid out and carried to completion what experts both East and West have pronounced as one of the most perfectly constructed, fireproof, concrete, motion picture theatres of its size ever built anywhere in the United States.

The front of the theatre covers 59 feet, the width of the lot, and rises to a height of 46 feet. A shallow lobby furnished in imitation of antique stone and with real Italian travatine base, has on each side two small business rooms, one devoted to the Cinderella Bootery, and the other to a modern shoe parlor.

The front of the building contains a giant steel reproduction of an Arizona sunrise, lifting its rays from just above the decorative marquise to a height of more than 40 feet. Intersecting and interwoven in the giant sunburst are the letters, "RIALTO." The sign contains many incandescent electric lights, and is connected with an automatic flasher which produces a continuous effect, as of a big golden sun coming up in the morning.

One passes to the right and left of the grand stairs on a black and white checkered tile floor into small subfoyers at each side. These foyers are most artistically decorated with shimmerings gold silks extending from the ceiling to the floor and a border valance drape of blue velour.

Stepping into the main auditorium on the ground floor, one is confronted on both sides by the Tiffany blend walls, which are done in perfect imitation of English tapestry. The pilasters which line the sides of the auditorium proper are richly frescoed in vivid orange, yellow and black from original drawings by Martin Sevision, who was responsible for the decorative scheme in Grauman's "million-dollar" theatre in Los Angeles.



Light dome ceiling of auditorium center. It is 30 ft. in diameter and has 380 40-watt lights on a four-color circuit

The lower floor is seated with French satin, gray finished, especially designed chains bearing on their standards the monogram R & N, and upholstered in blue Russian calf skin. The sloping floor of the lower auditorium leads to a commodious orchestra pit, in the center of which is the four-1manual console of the giant pipe organ. The pipes and effects of the organ which is the four-manual console of the giant are located on either side in the front of the auditorium, the music coming out through beautiful ornamented staff work which is lined at the back with yellow silks. The attractiveness is further enhanced by hidden lights which shower their mellow rays down over the colored silk, giving to the patron the effect of a giant French window through which the yellow evening light is shining. Surmounting these organ chambers are two pieces of Italian art modeling, representing two Cupid figures, one with violin, and the other with mandolin, on either side of a gold music lyre. Directly in front of the organ chambers circling the proscenium opening of the stage, is an exclusive Italian rococo scroll design in decorative staff relief which gives to the openings of the stage a massive and artistic appearance.

The reviewer in returning to the foyer of the theatre sees before him a grand staircase leading to a landing with the entrance of the balcony proper on either hand. This balcony is divided into three distinct classes. The lower section is equipped with especially designed semi-Morris chairs, and on each side, reaching toward the stage, are mezzanine boxes, which contrary to the usual run of box seats afford a most excellent view of the entire stage and picture screen. Rising in graduated steps back of the loge section is the balcony proper, containing specially designed upholstered seats, carrying in effect the French gray satin and blue tones of the bottom floor. The last 10 rows of the balcony at the top are separated from the main portion by a rail and contain the seats of the gallery, which has a separate entrance from the balcony leading over the court exit.

Perhaps nothing in the construction of the Rialto is more impressive than the beautiful mezzanine waiting room or ladies' parlor, paralleled with the top of the grand staircase. This ladies' room extends the entire width of the building on Washington street, and artistic French windows look out upon the principal business thoroughfare of the city. The inside wall of the ladies' rest room is cut into several arches which afford an excellent view of the audience passing in and out of the building. This arched section is artistically done and upholstered in blue velour. The ladies' room proper contains a tasteful set of wicker furniture, done in the prevailing gray tints of the house. The entire room is lighted by a number of exquisite floor lamps. This mezzanine floor will be at the disposal of the lady patrons of the theater afternoon and evening. Bridge tables will be available for parties who wish to take advantage of the cool theatre room in the afternoon.

For the comfort of the patrons the box-office of the theatre has been placed at the side, close to the sidewalk line. On entering the theatre one is greeted by usherettes in costume, who have stations at the right and left of the doors in the lower foyer. An attractive, exclusively original feature, and seen for the first time in the Rialto, are baby spot lanterns artistically hung just above the heads of the usherettes and supplied with colored plates which throw rays of tinted light down on the girls standing below.

At the right and left of the grand staircase are men's and ladies' retiring rooms, said to be the last word of the kind.

The stage of the Rialto, while mentioned last in the story, is perhaps the most up-to-date and unique feature of the entire theatre. It differs from all other stages in that not a piece of painted scenery is found within its walls. Under the direction of Edward H. Flagg an especially designed innovation has been introduced on the Rialto stage. When the theatre is thoroughly equipped a fine advertising drop curtain will be used as a working curtain against the proscenium and directly back of it will hang the largest velour drop ever constructed for a Western theatre. This beautiful plush drop is in harmony with the color scheme of the house and parts in the center, revealing the picture screen proper at the back of the stage. Instead of imitation painted scenery on the stage, it has from the proscenium opening to the picture screen plush furnishings, and Mr. Flagg has designed and placed in the Rialto a complete set of plush tabs or wings and drops. This plush scenery is in the color scheme of the house, and is high-lighted with burnished gold. Above the proscenium opening and extending entirely across is a blue velour valance drape, containing in its center a monogram R & N. and a giant R & N also occupies prominent place on the big velour front curtain, which parts in the center.

Grand stairway leading to ladies' waiting room

Stage and screen of Rialto, showing opening organ grilles

In the Rialto theatre much attention was paid to the staff decorating scheme. There is perhaps nothing in the State of Arizona equal in beauty to the frieze panel which extends in a semi-circle on each side of the grand staircase. It represents a number of nude cherubs at play, the artist having conceived a dozen or more postures for the little advance agents of happiness. The walls of the Rialto are green, gold and blue Tiffany blended with the ceiling done in a rich golden brown surrounding the giant plaster dome in the center of the auditorium.

This dome contains a painting, originally conceived by Hernande Villa, of Los Angeles, one of the foremost picture painters of the West Coast. It is symbolic of Arizona, in that it contains a bit of the desert in the foreground, with the cactus and mesquite and shows in bold relief the kneeling figure of a Hopi Indian looking up into the face of a magnificent semi-draped female figure symbolic of music. Mr. Villa has named this picture "The Birth of Music to the Savage," and in painting it has caught the spirit of the mountain and desert and the unmatched Arizona skies. It is really the show piece of the theater and the figure of music in the dome is from original drawings of Miss Maureen Olsen of Phoenix, who consented to pose for Mr. Villa.

In the Rialto one finds everywhere rich Oriental rugs under foot, soft yielding carpets on the stairs and in the aisles. Aisles, stairways and stair landings are covered with Klearflax linen rugs. A wonderful cooling plant rushes into the building a fresh supply of cool and washed air every five minutes. The seats are wide and comfy. The space between them is ample, the vision is unimpaired from any seat in the big auditorium, either on the lower floor or the balcony. The front seats are as desirable as those in the rear, by reason of the fact that the screen is at the back of the stage and is thrown into deep shadow by the drapes or tabs that run from the opening to the picture sheet.

One of the novel bits of equipment which is sure to attract attention at the Rialto theater is the automatic ticket selling machine installed in the ticket office—the first in the state.

The automatic ticket selling machine prints and delivers any number of tickets in a single strip. More than that, it automatically gives the purchaser the correct change.

The combined ticket selling and money changing machine is practically "fool proof", and the possibility of mistakes in making change has been entirely eliminated. The machine is manufactured by the Automatic Ticket Selling Machine and Cash Register Co.

The Rialto is equipped with a Sturdevant ventilation system, representing an expenditure o $16,000.

The cooling plant is the type C washer, guar anteed to furnish air cooled to within fiv degrees of the wet bulb temperature. In opera tion, a huge fan sucks fresh air from outsid the building down into the cooling chambe where it is rushed with tremendous velocit through a fine spray of mist. The mist is cre ated by a powerful engine which forces wate through tiny spraying jets.

When cooled to within five degrees of th wet bulb temperature of the chamber the ai is forced into the theater, coming out throug some 600 mushroom vents. When it has serve its purpose it travels upward and is drawn b another big fan through the many ventilatin openings in the roof.

Drafts are eliminated in the cooling syste by the fact that the fan which draws air into th building drives 34,000 cubic feet of air a mir ute through the washer, whereas the fan whic draws the air out of the theater has a capacit of only 24,000 cubic feet a minute. Thus n suction is produced.

James F. Dailey, of Monsoon Co., Gives His Views

"But, have you ever considered the point of the exhiibtor as regards the installation of a ventilation system?"

This question was addressed to James F. Dailey, President of the Monsoon Cooling System, Inc., by a representative of the Motion Picture News, and the following was Mr. Dailey's reply, which is, by the by, as full of interest to the exhibitor who has a ventilating system as it is to the exhiibtor who is only thinking about installing one.

"Whenever we plan a cooling, heating or ventilating system," said Mr. Dailey, "we consider the 'point of view' of the exhibitor, FIRST. As a matter of fact we began to think about the exhibitor long before he had any idea we were in business. We were planning for his benefit. Our installations are always designed to meet the conditions at hand; in other words, the exhibitor does not buy, what you might call, a 'stock' installation when he buys a cooling, heating or ventilating system. Every installation is made according to its particular requirements. As different engineers have varied ideas as regards the best way in which to cool or heat or ventilate a theatre or any other building for that matter, there are many different systems; the same as there are different makes of boilers used for heating purposes. And for this reason I say there can be no 'stock' installations, no set scheme that will work as well in one theatre as in another.

"For example, a system that will prove successful in a theatre without a balcony will not give the same results where a balcony is installed. The size of the unit, or the motor must be figured according to the work required of it. If a system is installed properly it will prove a boon to the exhibitor installing it; but he must remember that there are specialists in this line of endeavor, and he cannot expect to get the same results from a wall fan that he will receive from a scientifically designed and constructed cooli system.

"During the warm months the great problem the exhibitor has to face is t loss of business due to hot weather, a therefore, his greatest need is a cool th tre. In fact, this problem confronts h as early as April and stays with hi sometimes, until late October. With t first feeling of warm weather the hibitor's business begins to slide. patrons crave a cool place. It's up to h to give it to them. And it's not an i possibility! This is a proven fact. Th are hundreds of theatres with cooling s tems installed wherein the business normal and the owner laughs at the he

"For illustration, here is a typical stallation (see Fig. 1 and Fig. 2) for t usual small type of theatre with only first floor to contend with. A penthou large enough to house the proper instal tion necessary, is built upon the roof the theatre. Cool, pure air may be s plied through openings in the ceiling above the screen in sufficient quantities to insure comfort at all times.

"Another and very efficient installation for a larger house is where we have a theatre with a first and mezzanine floor and balcony. (Fig. 3 and Fig. 4.) The apparatus may be installed in the attic space between the roof and ceiling (Fig. 5) or, if this space is not large enough, upon the roof. The unit above the proscenium arch supplies fresh air sufficient to cool the main auditorium and mezzanine floor, while another unit above the balcony takes care of the balcony portion.

This installation provides an excellent, even distribution of air at all times, insuring a cool theatre during the hottest weather.

"There are times when it is impossible to place an apparatus either in the attic space or on the roof. In this event a single unit may be installed on each side of the screen with the fresh air intake in the rear wall, and, with a slight change in the position of the apparatus, the intake opening may be placed in the side walls with equal effectiveness. This provides an excellent installation for a small theatre (Fig. 6 and Fig. 7).

"Simple construction (Fig. 8) is used when a roof penthouse is required. Steel framework, cut to correct lengths, with holes properly punched and each piece lettered in accordance with a diagram and list of instructions make it easily assembled. The house carpenter can build it without difficulty."

"But," continued the interviewer, "are not these installations costly? Perhaps the average small exhibitor cannot afford to install a system that will give him satisfaction."

"Any exhibitor can afford anything that will make or save money for him. That is within reason. I don't mean to say that an exhibitor should go to the expense of installing some elaborate system of ventilation just for the sake of having a cooling system, and, moreover, he doesn't have to. He can get an efficient system; a system that will take care of the conditions at his theatre at a reasonable cost and the expense of operation and maintenance well within his abiilty to meet. A careful man places insurance on his building and contents against fire. A cooling system is, certainly, insurance against loss of business in hot weather.

And, after all, what does the expense amount to? A little carpenter work, material and labor and the cost of the equipment. It certainly should more than pay for itself the first year. It is, truly speaking, an asset."

Cases Aid Schade

The "announcement case" is the latest idea of George J. Schade, owner and manager of the Schade theatre, Sandusky, O., who enjoys a wide reputation as an originator of ideas.

Schade has had half a dozen of these cases constructed and they occupy conspicuous places in the lobby of the Schade establishment.

The latter part of August found the all filled with cards announcing the coming of First National attractions.

A few days before the cases—neat contrivances made of wood, brass and glass with spaces for four lobby cards—were delivered, Schade contracted for seventeen First Nationals for showing during the months of September and October.

The Sandusky newspapers considered the contract insuring a big run of First Nationals at the Schade of sufficient importance to write a news story around the fact.

Simplex float in the Labor Day parade at Boston, Mass.

Operators in Labor Day Parade

In the annual Labor Day parade, held on Monday last at Boston, the division headed by the Moving Picture Machine Operators' Local attracted much attention. The operators carried a huge American flag and closely following behind were auto trucks showing motion picture machines and equipment.

The second float in line, that of the Boston branch of the United Theatre Equipment Corp., was fitted in a unique manner with a U. T. E. Proctor Automatic Projector, so arranged as to prove to the public the fact that this is an absolutely fireproof motion picture projector.

The Boston Post makes the following comment: "The second float showed the admirable safeguards from fire with which the projectors are now supplied."

Simplex Had Novel Float in Parade

As a contributing feature to one of the most successful Labor Day parades that the Central Labor Union of Boston has yet attempted, the exhibits and floats used by the Boston Motion Picture Operators' Union, Local 182, met with tremendous favor by the thousands who witnessed the annual outpouring of labor's hosts through the Hub's crowded but historic thoroughfares.

The members of the Boston Motion Picture Local under the leadership of President Thad. Barrows and business agent James F. Burke, assembled at th starting point 180 strong.

The position in line occupied by th movie men afforded a splendid opportu ity of showing their elaborately dec rated floats, the most conspicuous ar popular one being that staged by the Bo ton Motion Picture Supply Co., Southe New England distributors of the Simpl Projector.

This float represented a miniature sta setting in which was placed a moti picture screen. Facing this screen was sloping floor upon which were mount several rows of regulation theatre sea In line with these seats and shooting c rectly at the screen was a large comple Type "S" Simplex motor driven proje tor finished in French ivory enamel wi nickeled trimmings. A member of t Operators' Union with an assistant sto in charge of the machine, both men bei attired in the marching costume. T "Audience" occupying the theatre sea upon the float consists of five extreme pretty young women representing many popular movie stars while the ma contingency of movie stars was repr sented by one young man who imperso ated the well-known Mr. Chaplin.

The Simplex machine in its attracti setting received a great share of attenti not only along the line of march but the start and finish of the parade or whe ever a halt was called for, which stop stantly seemed to be the signal for hu dreds of curious folk to press clo against the truck in their efforts to obta a "close-up" of the machine which is a vertised as being in 75 per cent of t downtown Boston theatres.

Manager John F. Dittman turns the first shovelful of dirt on his new "Lincoln" theatre, Freeport, Ill.

Break Ground for Lincoln Theatre

John F. Dittman is rushing work on his newest enterprise, the Lincoln theatre at Freeport, Illinois. The new project was inaugurated on August 29th, when Mr. Dittman personally turned the first shovelfull of dirt for the excavation, and he will push the erection of the house in every possible manner in order to open its doors at an early date.

Freeport was the scene of the historic debates between Abraham Lincoln and Steven A. Douglas, and the fact that the theatre will be a memorial to the great emancipator, as well as one of the most elaborate and handsome theatres in the country, makes the interest in this house, not only local, but national in its scope.

Monsoon cooling system installation in Palace theatre, Wichita, Kans. On the roof are one No. 8 Duplex Set and one No. 6 Duplex Set, both enclosed in roof pent houses

Rapp & Rapp, the Chicago achitect who are responsible for the plans of suc theatres at the Tivoli, Riviera, and th newest of Balaban & Katz's houses, th Chicago, prepared the plans for the Lin coln, according to Mr. Dittman's idea and it is expected that when the Linco is completed it will rank well up with th other houses which these architects hav designed.

The plans call for a fourteen hundr seating capacity theatre with every .co ceivable sort of modern improvement the way of lighting, heating, ventilati and electrical device, and will be a re cinema palace.

Mr. Dittman has dreamed over th house for years and visited the most cel brated motion picture theatres in Ameri for ideas, and then set about going the one better.

The success of the Lincoln will sho that the most expensive and elaborate theatres are possible in cities of the si of Freeport, as well as in metropolit centers.

Society of Motion Pictur Engineers

The motion picture industry in general may look forward to the annual convention of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, with anticipation. Important discussions and some exceedingly interesting papers are under preparation. The fall meeting promises to be even more worth while than any of the past successful sessions.

The fall convention is scheduled to take place in Buffalo, N. Y.

The dates are October 24th to 27th inclusive.

No arrangements have been perfected as yet, for hotel accommodations. These will be made within the next few weeks and will be announced by mail to the members and through the trade papers to the industry at large.

The annual election of officers will constitute one of the important phases of this coming session.

Altogether, the event will be worthy of attention by all interested in the welfare of the motion picture industry.

Wallerstein Bros. Plan Another

Plans are being made by the Michig City Theatre Corporation to erect a ho in Michigan City, Indiana, to be called Tivoli. Plans are being drawn by arc tects Newhouse and Bernham of Chica Ill. The Tivoli will have a capacity 2,080. Abe and J. Wallerstein, who o the Starland, Idle Hour and Dreaml theatres in Michigan City, are on board of directors of the Michigan C Theatre Corporation.

"Blind Hearts." Hobart Bosworth's initial independent production to be released through the Associated Producers, Inc., is the first picture to be entirely photographed by the "flickerless" camera, an invention of J. O. Taylor of the Thomas H. Ince Studios. This new apparatus, which has been patented by Taylor, entirely eliminates the flicker or the annoying jumpy action that the finest theatre projection has been unable to overcome.

Briefly and simply Taylor explains his principle which removes the flicker.

All standard makes of cameras operate with the shutter closed a larger portion of the time than it is open. For instance, if the shutter was theoretically open for one second while the film was being exposed it would be closed for more than one second while the film in the camera was changing. Accordingly, one-half of the action taking place is lost by the camera. The new camera reduces the proportion of time so that the shutter is open three times as long as it is closed. As a result one-quarter of the action is lost against one-half of the action with the old camera.

"The Toreador"

(Clyde Cook Comedy—Fox—Two Reels)

IT is fitting tribute to Clyde Cook that his comedies carry such a fine brand of humor that they have been selected for a conspicuous place in the New York Hippodrome's new show, "Get Together." "The Toreador" is another feather in Cook's cap—that his versatility knows no bounds. He seems to be especially gifted to find merriment in any type of characterization. And his bull-tosser may be placed alongside of his guide, sailor, huntsman, et-al, as something quite extraordinary in humorous pantomime. A huge audience capitulated to his talent in extricating fun from dodging big cannon balls. He was one of a quartette led forth to sunrise slaughter. When his predecessors marched through the door, he remarked that they made an awful noise closing it after them. He little dreamed that the cannon balls were making the tremendous concussion.

Again he had the audience laughing when he exploited some of his acrobatic agility—a trick which cannot be duplicated by his contemporaries. He simply doubles up with his hands in his ankles and a false head is carried around. The huge villain didn't know what to make of the dwarf—who walked around even when his false head was decapitated. The bull-throwing episode is another laugh-getter. The snorting beast comes up very much bandaged, and Cook walks off in a triumphant manner. The final shot discloses him operating his meat market like a born butcher. There is no doubt that the comedian starts the Hippodrome show with a bang.—LAURENCE REID.

"Winners of the West"

(18 Episode Serial—Universal)

UNIVERSAL has solved the censorship question regarding serials in such an eloquent fashion that its policy will serve as a beacon light for its rivals in the field. Holding the idea that the "continued photoplay" is patronized largely by children it has gone ahead and produced a serial which will not only satisfy the censor but delight the children as well, for it depicts what may be considered the most stirring period of American history—the gold rush of '49. Every child has conjured up in his imagination the glorious days of the West. Now the history book is visualized as it pertains to the colorful period when John C. Fremont opened the trail to California, and Kit Carson, the picturesque scout, carved his name for deeds of adventure and daring.

"Winners of the West" is not only rich in its educational values, but it serves in stimulating the pulse because of its stirring action—all of which is as authentic as a history book can make it. It is about the first serial within our memory which has not relied upon a series of wildly melodramatic incidents for its appeal. Every character, every scene is a visualization of the days of '49. So the spectator approaches this picture responsive to its authenticity and the fact that he is witnessing stark realities. Fremont, the romantic, dashing pioneer, Carson, the Indian fighter and idol of every American boy—these are figures here who will cause any audience to sit fascinated and enraptured. Time and environment will be forgotten, so faithful is the incident, so enlivened the action, so keen the suspense.

"Winners of the West" is a red-blooded American history transferred to the screen with undeniably rich dramatic strokes. You follow the start of the expedition from Boonville, Missouri. The hardy pioneers have heard the astonishing news that gold is flowing from Sutter's Creek and the big prairie schooners are on their way. It is a thrill that will capture the heart of every spectator. His pulse will respond to the suggestion that danger lurks everywhere. They were makers of history—these doughty pioneers. And they have reached the screen with wonderful fidelity. Certainly the first three episodes indicate that here is the real serial—a true adventure story and one altogether wholesome. The backgrounds are awe-inspiring, the acting reaches a verisimilitude of life itself. And with Art Acord, the popular cowboy, interpreting a romantic role, there is no reason to doubt the absence of thrills. Edward Laemmle has seemingly directed this feature with an inspiration born of enthusiasm for his work. It has great exploitation possibilities—the schools, the Boy Scouts will find it a constant source of entertainment as well as an authentic picturization of a stirring period. Get ready to cash in here. You'll have them flocking to your theatre in droves.—LAURENCE REID.

"The Stork's Mistake"

(Campbell Comedy — Two Reels — Released Through Educational Exchanges, Inc.)

W. S. CAMPBELL offers the first of a new series of comedies for Educational release in "The Stork's Mistake." It has the advantage of being a whimsical, unusual piece of work with children playing the leading roles. A large part of it deals with a fairy story. Dr. Stork, a grotesque individual with elongated nose, is shown at work in Babyland. Infants of all sizes and colors sit upon shelves, awaiting the call that will send them into some earthly family. In the workshop are eight and ten-year-old children playing the part of gnomes who model the future babies out of clay, bake them in an oven, and then draw forth laughing, live babies. These gnomes neglect one of their prospects to roll the dice, and he is overbaked and comes forth a shiny-skinned negro baby. Then comes some trick photography as a stork takes the baby in his beak and flies across the country in true accord with the fable.

The comedy is sufficiently whimsical to overcome its shortcomings in the way of rapid-fire action or comedy gags.—MATTHEW A. TAYLOR.

"No More Gasoline"

(Chester Outing—One Reel—Released by Educational Exchanges)

CHESTER takes his followers to Rio de Janeiro in Brazil in this scenic, but he does not bother much about the city or its types of inhabitants. Instead his screen travelers climb the mountain which pokes its head, an exceedingly elongated one, far into the heavens in back of the city. Interspersed between the mountain climbing shots are views of various Brazilian hospices and titles eulogizing Brazilian coffee. The Brazilian maxixe is also illustrated by two natives. A few really beautiful views of the picturesque city and its curving harbor, as seen from the mountain summit, end the reel.—MATTHEW A. TAYLOR.

"The Vagrant"

(Mermaid Comedy — Two Reels — Released Through Educational Exchanges, Inc.)

LLOYD HAMILTON is the star of this Mermaid comedy, which even a number of reasonable new gags cannot make really laughable. It jogs along at a fair pace with Ham always in hot water with a burly policeman. Careful attention has been paid to the production and there is an earnest attempt to bring in new hokum. There is no story. Hamilton is a tramp and an officer of the law is intent upon forcing him to get a job. The two reels are practically one long chase, with all the variations known to comedy-makers thrown in.—MATTHEW A. TAYLOR.

"LITTLE LORD FAUNTLEROY"

(Mary Pickford-United Artists)

THERE are probably not very many readers of Frances Hodgson Burnett's appealing study of childhood, "Little Lord Fauntleroy," who have not at some time remarked to themselves what a wonderful subject it would make on the screen for Mary Pickford. Certainly the figure of the gallant little Lord (whose tenderness and playfulness are qualities associated with the star) might seemingly have been written with her in mind so ideal is her impersonation. If "Stella Maris" was her histrionic triumph, certainly "Little Lord Fauntleroy" is her artistic triumph. You unconsciously associate Mary Pickford with the role because it is suggestive in every whim and impulse with her personality. And so she comes into her own here in this sweetly sentimental study of childhood.

Every juvenile will take this picture to his heart and the star will be further visualized in the memory as a living symbol of youth. And those who have grown to maturity will become children again for a night. Certainly its appeal is undeniably tremendous for it tugs at the heart by encouraging sentiment and tenderness. The pictorial qualities of the feature will excite the highest admiration. Particularly are they noticeable in the exceptional double exposures, which present Mary in the dual role of the little Lord and Dearest, his mother—the camera work being so artistic that it surpasses anything of the kind ever before attempted. Even an expert cannot discover the dividing line. The embraces, the walks together, the various conversations indulged in by the figures—these not only bring forth the star's ability to differentiate them but the double exposure work is so exceptionally fine that her performance is accentuated.

The picture could be profitably shortened in the early reels since it emphasizes atmosphere and characterization with very little play of action. However, when the little Lord comes into his inheritance and, moving to England, takes up his abode in the castle of his crotchety, old grandfather Earl, the picture develops a sweep of dramatic clashes which offer full compensation. Pathos accompanies humor in nearly every scene. And there are pauses to emphasize some trait of character. Indeed the story is adapted with splendid fidelity and is told clearly. The staging brings credit upon the directors, so in harmony are the scenes with the atmosphere and period of the story. The castle is a massive piece of mid-Victorian architecture. You catch the pathos of the Earl's lonely life and that of the tiny boy as they stamp through its exceptionally large chambers—so cold and medieval in appearance. This is a triumph too. It shows no expense has been spared to make it accurate and distinctive.

The playful interludes are brought forth in fine relief, the scene when the boy tenders a dinner party to the tenants being rich in mirth and humanity. But the most conspicuous moments are those which feature the transformation of the grouchy Earl. So subtly, so delicately, does Claude Gillingwater show this regeneration that it seems like a work inspired. Here is character acting of the highest order—a study unique in the sense that you can almost look inside the man's brain and see it dictate its impulses. Joseph J. Dowling and Kate Price are in the cast and render good performances.—Length, 10 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PROGRAM READER

Manager ———— takes great pleasure in announcing the appearance of Mary Pickford in her greatest triumph, "Little Lord Fauntleroy," at the ———— theatre next ———— for a limited engagement. This adaptation of Frances Hodgson Burnett's fascinating story of the little boy whose mother never allowed him to grow up is one that appeals to every person, parents and children alike. It makes a charming picture since it details with all the sentiment, pathos, humor and characterization intact. The picture takes the spectator from America to England and the charm of the settings, the wonderfully fine acting by the star and her able assistants are sufficient to enlist the sympathy and regard of every audience.

CATCH LINES

Come to the ———— and see Mary Pickford, America's sweetheart, in her greatest triumph, "Little Lord Fauntleroy."

See Mary Pickford in "Little Lord Fauntleroy," adapted from Frances Hodgson Burnett's story. Wonderfully appealing and charming. Positively her greatest triumph.

"JUNGLE ADVENTURES"

(Martin Johnson-Exceptional Pictures Corp.)

Certainly a Novel and Picturesque Film Entertainment

WHAT could be more diverting than a presentation of Martin Johnson's "Jungle Adventures" after one has become surfeited with the photoplay? Certainly here is a screen novelty which is bound to interest everyone because of its wealth of scenic investiture, and the fact that Mr. Johnson has conducted an exploration into a land only partially discovered by the spectator. The geography has only given an inkling of this fascinating jungle country of Borneo. And now it is visualized with such a display of color and atmosphere that the appeal of this photographic record takes on a force which is irresistible in its power to fascinate the onlooker and cause him to marvel at the risk that the explorer took upon himself. For it must have been some risk.

An eerie feeling sort of sweeps over one in accompanying the Johnsons on this adventure. One instinctively feels danger lurking everywhere. It might be found just around the bend of the river. For the jungle swarms with wild animals and poisonous reptiles—to say nothing of the lost tribe who may be cannibals or head hunters. But as you feel this glow of suspense which makes you grasp the arm of your chair, at the same time you are drinking in as marvelous an assortment of picturesque scenes as Nature has in her collection. You are in intimate contact with the awe-inspiring jungle.

The Johnsons are accompanied by a faithful retinue of natives. Every member of the party is enthusiastic and seemingly happy. And so they paddle up the Kinabatangan River. New and strange vistas appear before them at every twist and turn of the stream. And thrill after thrill is caught. Particularly thrilling is the capture of a huge crocodile which had succeeded in devouring one of the native boys, according to a subtitle. But the outstanding shot in this highly interesting record is the filming of the elusive orang-outang who is caught silhouetted against a network of vines, performing with all the agility of the specie. Again a herd of wild elephants lends a thrilling touch. Mr. Johnson has used a highly magnified lens to make a close-up of a long shot. Even so, the goodly distance he maintained was hardly sufficient because of the charge they made toward the camera.

When the lost tribe is discovered and some other strange animals are registered, the party floats back with the current. It is a beautiful shot which discloses the explorer's floating hut. And the camera has caught the scene from many surprising angles. We have never seen finer photography. In all "Jungle Adventures" is a rare treat. It is artistic, novel, and instructive and certain to be appreciated everywhere. Arthur Hoerl deserves tribute for his editing and titling. He has accentuated the humor and brought forth the adventure in the shape of a most interesting story.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

The feature attraction at the ———— theatre next ———— is Martin Johnson's "Jungle Adventures," which is a rarely beautiful scenic, a fascinating adventure in Borneo. The picture does not present any plot other than the desire of the adventurers to find excitement and thrills as they go in search of jungle birds and beasts and discover a lost tribe. Martin Johnson has long been recognized as one of the most intrepid travelers. He undertakes his journeys with an eye toward satisfying his curiosity as well as recording his trip by means of the camera so that those who have not his gift for adventure may be able to participate in the beauty of scenery and the excitement of hunting big game. "Jungle Adventures" is mostly a river cruise in the heart of Borneo. Mr. and Mrs. Johnson are accompanied by natives. Canoes, rafts, and other primitive methods of navigation are employed and the spectator is certain to be transported as his gaze rests upon the marvelous scenery. There is a thrill attached to every scene.

PROGRAM READER

How would you like to take a trip through the wilds of Borneo—to see the various jungle birds and beasts—to tremble with excitement in watching wild elephants in pursuit of you—to catch a thrill over the capture of a huge crocodile—to glide in a canoe or a raft along a river that carries you into the heart of the jungle. Perhaps you will encounter head-hunters and cannibals. At every turn of the river, there is the enchantment of the scenery, and a new vista carries tremendous appeal. "Jungle Adventures" the Martin Johnson picture will be the feature attraction at the ———— theatre next ————. This is a picture you cannot afford to miss. It is a fascinating and thrilling journey.

CATCH LINES

See Martin Johnson's "Jungle Adventures." The thrill of a lifetime. All you have to do is watch the screen. No danger attached for you. Yet you catch the thrill.

"Jungle Adventures," the Martin Johnson picture of life in Borneo, is coming to the ————. Don't miss it.

"THE PRIMAL LAW"
(Fox)

Dustin Farnum Returns to the Screen with an Interesting Western

DUSTIN FARNUM returns to the Fox fold as a star in "The Primal Law," a picture which has seemingly been written with him in mind, so well does it fit his personality and style of acting. There are Western stars and Western stars, but Dustin, the brother of William, is unique in the sense that he does not rely upon the familiar heroics. When he uses a trigger finger or mounts a pony the effort is incidental to the plot and not featured as a typical stunt. The star is endowed with more emotional expression than his rivals who are featured in Westerns. Perhaps that is why he makes "The Primal Law" so interesting.

On the face of it the offering is not original, but there is such an abundance of sure-fire touches brought forth in snappy action, an element of pathos, juvenile interest, and heart appeal, that the picture is certain to score with most any class of audience. There is considerable plotting which involves a group of crooks who are determined to secure title to valuable oil lands held in joint partnership by the hero and his partner, and the complications build in a progressive manner straight to a denouement which carries a deal of suspense. The title finds meaning in the friendly hand-shake by which a Westerner measures the quality of sincerity. Once a man has proffered his hand a friendship is sealed. However, the oily villain takes advantage of the custom to serve his scheme. The partner dies and his little boy shares equal rights to the property.

It is the heavy's purpose to weave a net of intrigue by employing the lad's mother, a disreputable character, to claim relationship and thus freeze the hero out eventually. Before the plot hits its stride a thrill is offered when the boy tumbles down a hill. Which is the occasion to introduce the heroine. This thrill is followed by another which features a raid on the ranch. Here is the moment for Farnum to show his mettle with some hefty "in-fighting" a la Dempsey. The conclusion is somewhat glossed over in regard to the big battle. Which might be blamed on the cutting. There are one or two instances when the piecing together of the film has gone astray. This is noticeable when the "heavy," wearing a gray tweed suit at the raid, is observed in the subsequent scene seated in a saloon dressed in a suit of quiet colors. The impression is given that he had never left the place. The promotion of the oil stock is rather arbitrary in development. However, that is a minor flaw in a picture which contains plenty of sure-fire elements. Farnum plays his part with fine sincerity and his company is competent.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

A thrilling story of danger and daring in the West is "The Primal Law" which comes to the ———— theatre. The offering introduces Dustin Farnum as a Fox star after an absence of several seasons. And this ever popular star has in this fascinating drama of the West a picture which affords him an excellent opportunity to flash his well known talent. The picture presents an intense Western story of a man among men, of a child over whom a mysterious menace hangs, of a band of conspirators who will stop at nothing to gain their ends unless halted by death or the fear of death, and of a girl from the East who finds her greatest in life in the man and the boy. Farnum as Brian Wayne, becomes involved in fierce fighting and an interesting romance. Throughout he is the big pal of little Bobby Carson, the motherless son of his partner, whom he is pledged to guard against the strange menace of circumstances. The element of mystery is effectively developed and suspense is admirably sustained. The love interest is interwoven with stirring events. Mr. Farnum is supported by Mary Thurman and others of competent ability.

PROGRAM READER

Dustin Farnum, again a Fox star, will come to the ———— theatre next ———— in "The Primal Law," written by E. Lloyd Sheldon. He plays the part of a dashing and daring Westerner—a type in which he has won many of his hosts of friends. It provides him with many daring exploits and no actor is better equipped to take care of dangerous stunts than this same Dustin Farnum. The plot revolves around a fierce struggle between determined men for possession of valuable lands. It is the type of picture which the star has made famous because of the association of every element which has characterized a true Western. The picture is filled with dramatic moments—carries fine suspense and action and is bound to be popularly received. Remember the date.

CATCH LINES

Dustin Farnum will appear at the ———— theatre next ———— in "The Primal Law," a thrilling picture of adventure and mystery in the West.

Dustin Farnum, the noted screen star that everybody likes in any role he enacts will be at the ———— theatre next ————. See him in "The Primal Law."

"HER WINNING WAY"
(Realart)

Miss Minter Truly Entertains as a Mild Type of Vampire

IF you have any confidence in swift-moving broad comedy, sprinkled with even broader hokum, and brightened by such a charming star as Mary Miles Minter, "Her Winning Way" belongs in your theatre. It is a light piece of entertainment, leaving that eminently satisfying feeling of a want fulfilled. Make no extravagant claims upon its lavishness, its heart interest; or its conformity to life's verities—for the picture could not live up to them. But as for wholesome entertainment—that is a different matter. It's just that and nothing more.

Like many other broad comedies, the difficulty in the story is to make an audience gulp down an unconvincing premise. In "Her Winning Way," while they may not accept the situation of a girl reviewer leaving her work and changing her residence to obtain an interview with a popular author, they will forget all about it. They will forget it because mistaken identity and its consequent complications result in comedy situations, certain to hold the interest and most liable to prove enjoyable.

The theme of the picture is the modern cave-girl who pursues her victim. The literary critic is assigned to obtain an interview from a bashful author. She is a decidedly unethical heroine, for she sneaks into his rooms in his absence to prowl about among his private papers. When he returns unexpectedly she poses as the maid. Then she begins her vamping process. She naively suggests that he kiss her in order that his literature may hold more of realism. The author is about to marry an intellectual affinity, a choice of his mother, but the star sees to it that it is broken off. She hides feminine slippers under the bed, and a dainty silk thing under the pillow. The result is of course, that Miss Affinity is shocked beyond all conciliation. The author, upon learning that he has been tricked, demands that the girl leave him forever, but she, still the cave-girl, is awaiting his return that evening, and finally the young man capitulates. He has been vamped in a very pretty and inoffensive way, beyond human endurance. The little touch of naughtiness suggested by the above synopsis, cannot give offense to anyone. The girl in the end, evidently regrets her lack of scruples, and does not publish the story of his private life she has obtained by deceit.

Mary Miles Minter is, as ever, decidedly attractive, and in the farcical scenes, when she pretends feeble-mindedness, she is careful not to overact. Altogether she is admirable. No better leading man than Gaston Glass could be found. He is especially good as the bashful romanticist. The entire cast is satisfactory; the development of the story well planned in detail and the direction keeps the story going.—Length, 5 reels.—Matthew A. Taylor.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Dainty Mary Miles Minter is the star of "Her Winning Way," which is announced by the management of the ———— theatre as the feature attraction on ————. This charming photoplay has been adapted for the screen by Douglas Doty from the play "Ann," by Lechmere Worrall.

Mary Miles Minter has a host of followers who are expected to turn out in full numbers to view "Her Winning Way." Although this winsome star is young in years she has been before the public for considerable time. She enjoys the reputation of being one of the most distinct personalities on the screen, and when only seventeen years of age, had risen to the most hallowed heights of filmdom. "Her Winning Way", allows her a part which is certain to please her admirers. She plays the role of a young girl reporter on a big city daily, who, in order to obtain the interview assigned to her, finds it necessary to take employment as a maid in the home of a handsome young author. This author was a dreamer, who wove his theories of love in solitude. But the young newspaper girl taught him how they work out in practice.

PROGRAM READER

Hargrave, the author, had finely spun theories of love. Dreaming all day over his books, he thought he understood women—thought he had gleaned an insight into feminine manners and feminine fashions from the printed page. It took his new maid to teach him differently. The new maid is Mary Miles Minter and the play is "Her Winning Way" which will be the feature attraction at the ———— theatre on ————. The story is an admirable one of Miss Minter, and she will be welcomed in it by her thousands of admirers throughout the country. She is supported in "Her Winning Way" by an exceptional cast including as the leading man Gaston Glass. Others in the cast are Fred Goodwins, Helen Dunbar and Grace Morse. The picture was directed by Joseph Henabery, who has a number of screen successes to his credit. The story was adapted to the screen by Douglas Doty from the play "Ann," by Lechmere Worrall and the novel by Edgar Jepson.

CATCH LINES

See Mary Miles Minter in her most charming play, "Her Winning Way." A picture rich in romance and with plenty of action and thrills thrown in.

The story of a clever newspaper girl who "got" her story, although she had to pose as a maid to do it.

"PEGGY PUTS IT OVER"
(Vitagraph)

Rural Comedy Drama Affords Satisfactory Vehicle for Alice Calhoun

WHILE this feature is pretty much Alice Calhoun's in the manner in which she dominates most of the action, there is plenty of variety of scenes and characters, which coupled with some good rural comedy and effective backgrounds spell an entertainment likely to satisfy any audience patronizing the program house. The director has kept the plot sustained to the end, which is quite a feather in his cap considering the limitations of the story. The idea concerns putting pep into a sleepy town. And Alice Calhoun has the job of adding the jazz.

The picture is quite a departure for the star, who heretofore has basked in light romantic comedies. She has developed rapidly enough to be given roles of more serious expression and her Peggy Conrow, while it fits into a story of little consequence insofar as dramatic highlights are concerned, is substantial enough to make her reckoned with in future productions based upon serious themes. That is if she wants to play heavier roles. There is an elusive quality, an ephemeral touch, about her acting which makes her adaptable to the type of story which she interprets here.

We look upon her as a graduate of a technical school with a degree of civil engineer. Her father is the most influential citizen of the sleepy town. It is his object to compel the town to show some civic pride. But when he is called away to Washington the duty devolves upon the daughter. The humorous slant is found in her conflict with some truly rural specimens of the regular "by heck" brand. And these quaint figures certainly provide fitting atmosphere. The love interest is found when the town physician appears on the scene. He is as up-to-date as his fellow villagers are antiquated. When the girl is opposed by the stingy tax-payers she resolves to use her own property in establishing a new town. The doctor opposes her on the ground that it is better to build up rather than tear down. Things are progressing smoothly for Peggy until she discovers that the citizens of her new town will be forced to go to the sleepy village for their mail. The picture develops its romance by emphasizing the conflict. The doctor is kidnapped and when the villagers put a wrong conclusion on a scene the girl jumps to the rescue of her honor by stating that she is party to an enlopement. The picture is just a character study of a modern, progressive girl, who is able to adapt herself to every situation with which she is confronted. It offers a good spark of adventure and is interesting despite the effervescent quality of the plot.—Length, 5 reels. —Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Alice Calhoun, the Vitagraph star, has a charming picture in "Peggy Puts It Over," which comes to the ———— theatre next ————. This production features a rural story which has to do with a girl who is ambitious for the welfare of her town. The town in question has literally gone to sleep. So Peggy, with a civil engineer's degree comes home and proceeds to put pep into the hamlet. When she is discouraged in certain quarters, she hastens to transform her property into a new town. But she has trouble getting the post-office concession.

The picture develops some real flashes of rural life—flashes which are indeed humorous. And the picture is well punctuated with humor, sentiment and romance. The star excels in this type of story. The role of the ambitious Peggy becomes her. She attempts and succeeds in a building project which her father and others have tried and been forced to abandon. The picture is marked by beautiful locations.

PROGRAM READER

A picturesque rural comedy with a touch of emotional acting in which a clever, beautiful star is supported by a strong cast is "Peggy Puts It Over," the Vitagraph production which comes to the ———— theatre next ———— featuring Alice Calhoun. It is a picture that is certain to entertain the whole family since it conveys a wholesome impression of life as it exists in a small town where the inhabitants need waking up. It is a picture you are bound to remember. All the characters are drawn from life. The sleepy little hamlet of Oldtown was suddenly awakened by the activities of a young girl who had graduated from an institute of technology with the degree of civil engineer. How did she fool them?

SUGGESTIONS

Snappy paragraph advertising seems to be the best angle to exploit this feature. You can get out catchy ads such as "You're Asleep! That's what they'll say about you if you fail to see this film of a young girl who wakes up a whole town and starts them on the right road." Play up Alice Calhoun and tell that she has a fascinating romance of rural life here—one that offers much comedy, sentiment and romance. Describe it as the unique story of a girl who decided to do something big in her home town and succeeded beyond her own expectations. Blind teaser ads sprinkled about your town featuring the title would attract interest. You can feature an all-comedy bill the day you put on the picture.

CATCH LINES

Can a sleepy town be awakened by an ambitious girl? Or is it possible that the natives would merely tolerate her activities? See Alice Calhoun in "Peggy Puts It Over."

A human document of rural life with plentiful touches of sentiment and comedy is "Peggy Puts It Over" starring pretty Alice Calhoun.

KANSAS CITY

James M. White has been appointed manager of the Fox branch office in Kansas City, following the resignation of John Payne.

M. E. Williams has been elected vice-president of the Kansas City Film Board of Trade to fill the vacancy of Lynn S. Card, who resigned.

Managers of down-town theatres in Kansas City, at a meeting last week, organized a club to be known as the Down-Town Theatre Managers' Club. The organization includes motion picture houses, vaudeville and legitimate theatres. The club will hold monthly meetings, discuss problems most vital to their interests and are planning to hold a large entertainment in Convention Hall for the benefit of various charitable institutions. The officers elected were:

Lawrence Lehman, Orpheum, president; Louis Shouse, Convention Hall, treasurer; Milton H. Feld, Newman theatre, secretary, and Cyrus Jacobs, Globe, business agent.

A school for motion picture operators is being planned by the Kansas City Motion Picture Men's Association, according to Jack H. Roth, business agent.

Dwight Thatcher Harris, chairman of the Kansas Board of Motion Picture Review, has requested the aid of Attorney General Hopkins in prohibiting the showing of a film called "Contrast," which presents the side of union labor and emphasizes the power of strikes. The film was rejected by the Kansas Board August 25, it is stated, but was shown in Topeka, Kas., two days later, under the auspices of the Typographical Union No. 121, according to Mr. Harris, who has announced that he will confiscate the film if it is found in the state of Kansas.

CLEVELAND

G. W. Blen of Associated Exhibitors was one of the film guests of the city this week. Mr. Blen expects to make a stay of several weeks, to meet local exhibitors personally and get in touch with the local film situation which is very optimistic at this time.

J. S. Toland is the new exploitation manager at the First National exchange in Cleveland. Toland took command of his post the end of last week, succeeding George Gregg, who has gone back into straight advertising.

Toland also becomes office manager at First National, but not before November first, when present Office Manager Lillian Kohn severs her connection with the film industry to enter domestic partnership with Joe Rothchild of Cleveland. Miss Kohn has been office manager for First National for the past five years and is one of the most experienced film women in the business.

M. J. Weisfeldt, local Fox exchange manager, made a hurried trip to New York this week.

Road shows of "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" start in Ohio on September 19 at the Victoria theatre, Steubenville. The set policy of $1.50 top price will prevail.

DETROIT

The new Tuxedo theatre, at Toledo and Hamilton theatre, is scheduled to open next month.

The Doric theatre, formerly the Northwestern, newly decorated and furnished, with a brand new entrance and marquise, re-opened last week.

Harry Breneau has been appointed manager of the Holbrook theatre.

H. M. Richey is the new manager of the Michigan Motion Picture Exhibitors' association, succeeding A. J. Moeller, who has become manager of the national association. Mr. Richey hails from Auburn, Ind., where he was engaged in newspaper work.

John H. Kunsky plans to use the Adams theatre for extended runs on the bigger pictures. He opened Sunday, September 11 with "The Old Nest."

W. S. Butterfield has decided to offer pictures instead of vaudeville at two of his theatres in the state, the Majestic, at Battle Creek and the Orpheum in Jackson.

Second annual convention of the Michigan Motion Picture Exhibitors' association will be held in Jackson on October 4 and 5. Automobile caravans from various points in the state, will be formed to make the trip to Jackson.

George Wilbur announces that the Oakland theatre in Pontiac will offer four acts of Keith vaudeville in addition to photoplays during the winter season. The Strand, Howland and Eagle, under the same management, will confine their programs to pictures and special music as heretofore.

Royal Baker, one of Detroit's two police censors of photoplays, burlesque, drama and amusements in general, has shown himself to be an artist by painting a portrait of John Burroughs. It is displayed in Hanna's art store in the David Whitney building, and is later to go on display at the Museum of Art.

CONNECTICUT

David Novograd, manager of the Central and Lyric theatres at Westerly, R. I., will also be in charge of Bliven's Opera House in that place the coming season, the change becoming operative Labor Day. The three playhouses are now controlled by Black's New England Theatres, Inc.

John F. Cooney, proprietor of the Union Square theatre at Pittsfield, Mass., suffered a shock at a ball game in that city on the eighth and was taken to a hospital in a precarious condition. He has long been prominent in motion picture and general theatrical activities of western Massachusetts.

Samuel and Nathan Goldstein, Inc., of Springfield, Mass., have bought the Casino at Ware, Mass. The Goldsteins also own the Bijou, the leading Ware motion picture house. Their plans relative to the Casino have not been announced.

Through a community committee and use of the opera house at Dalton, Mass., the people of Dalton are again to have regular motion picture programs during the coming season. It is said that this plan is likely to be continued until the community is made the location of a privately-owned playhouse. Reports are current that motion picture interests operating theatres in western Massachusetts have looked the Dalton field over and are contemplating locating a house there in the near future.

ITEMS OF THE EXCHANGES AND THEATRES

ST. LOUIS

Paul C. Schroeder, formerly of the Western Vaudeville Association in Chicago, has arrived in St. Louis to assume managerial directorship of the Grand Opera House. In addition to the vaudeville program which will be offered at the down-town house, Manager Schroeder will also institute a revised motion picture plan. Schroeder has formerly been identified with motion picture and vaudeville interests in Kansas City and St. Joseph.

J. W. Higgins, who was in charge of the Palace theatre, Milwaukee, has been appointed manager of the Rialto theatre here, and will assume his duties at once. The Rialto, according to Higgins' course, will show features and comedies in connection with the Junior Orpheum variety program. Higgins comes to St. Louis after four years in Milwaukee.

William A. Shalit announces the booking of "The Three Musketeers" by the Skouras Brothers Enterprises for first run in the New Grand Central.

Fox's "Over the Hill" went into its second week at the Liberty theatre. Manager Greenman reports very satisfactory attendance.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Providence Opera House, which for 50 years has been devoted to the legitimate, became on September 12 a straight moving picture house, under the management of Col. Felix R. Wendelschaefer, who took the house over 23 years ago this present date. The opening attraction was "Over the Hill," while negotiations are now under way for some of the bigger films of the day.

William J. Mahoney, manager of the Rialto theatre, was married August 30 to Miss Mary Flynn. The couple left following the wedding for a two-weeks' trip to the Bermudas.

"The Four Horsemen" is being shown at the Shubert Majestic theatre and thus far has done a very creditable business, considering the hot weather. It is booked for six weeks.

The new Strand theatre in Pawtucket opened August 29 under the managership of A. A. Spitz. The opening production was "The Three Musketeers." The prices range from 15 cents to 35 cents. A special orchestra interprets the music.

SO. CAROLINA

The Southern Motion Picture Exposition will be held in Charlotte, N. C., under the auspices of the theatre owners of the two Carolinas November 29 and 30, December 1 and 2. This decision was reached at a meeting of the committee of the North Carolina Motion Picture Theatre Owners' Association, held at Charlotte on September 12. The exposition will be held in the spacious city auditorium.

One of the features of the exposition will be the production of a picture in which will appear girls of North and South Carolina. All the large film companies will have booths at the exposition, and interesting displays of how pictures are made and produced will be included in the exposition building. Southern exhibitors will also have booths.

Each night during the exposition a dance will be given by the exposition management, and on the final evening a grand ball will be given.

The exposition committee includes: R. D. Craver and E. F. Dardine, of Charlotte; H. B. Varner, of Lexingon; D. M. Bain, of Wilmington and James A. Estridge of Gastonia.

KANSAS CITY

Educational offices in Kansas City have undergone a consolidation. H. E. Schiller has been made manager of the distribution in eastern Missouri and Kansas.

Exhibitors of St. Joseph, Mo., have formed an organization to be known as the St. Joseph Motion Picture Exhibitors Association. The organization will be a unit of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Missouri, which is in turn affiliated with the M. P. T. A.

W. W. Wertenberger was elected president; Edward Peskay, secretary, and John English, treasurer. Lawrence Goldman, counsel of the Missouri State organization, and Major Robert Carnie of Kansas City assisted in the formation of the new organization.

The Odeon theatre, Columbia, Mo., has been purchased by Rex Barrett, Pierce City, Mo., and renamed "The Cozy."

The Liberty theatre at Nevada, Mo., has been purchased by M. J. McGinnis.

Richard Melvin has been appointed assistant manager of the Kansas City Fox office. Mr. Melvin was formerly in the contract department of Fox in New York.

H. J. Bayley, who has been in charge of the Kansas City Vitagraph office, has been transferred to the Dallas, Tex., office, while Burt King, former manager of the Dallas office, has been transferred to the Kansas City office.

R. H. Fairchilds, Vitagraph representative in the Kansas City territory, after returning from a trip last week, reported the largest business that he has brought in in eight weeks. He is a firm believer that prosperity is only a short distance ahead, with both arms outstretched.

As a result of high rents, local exchange organizations are putting up two and three story buildings for their own use. Structures are now being erected by Metro, Realart and First National.

CANADA

Metro's "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" saw the start of its third week in the first Toronto engagement at Toronto, Ontario, on Monday, Sept. 12. During the previous two weeks this feature had drawn tens of thousands of people, literally, the large Massey Hall, in which it was presented, being crowded on many occasions. This is the second big run that the picture has had in eastern Canada, the first engagement being that at the Princess theatre, Montreal, where it was shown for four weeks during the hottest part of the summer.

A new moving picture theatre was opened in Vancouver, B. C., when the doors of the new Fraser theatre, 49th and Fraser avenue, were thrown open on September 5. The house was constructed for Mr. A. Young to replace the old theatre four blocks north, which was erected by Mr. Young seven years ago. The new Fraser seats 750 people and is equipped with two Powers projection machines of the latest model. The Fraser has an orchestra.

The offer of a reward of $50,000 for information leading to the finding of Ambrose J. Small, the missing Toronto theatre millionaire, expired on September 1 and will not be renewed, it has been announced. Mr. Small disappeared on December 2, 1919, after closing a big theatre deal.

OKLAHOMA CITY

Clara Smith Gorman's name will not blaze in the lights in front of movie theatres in Missouri, according to announcement made by Lawrence H. Goldman, official censor, as the films have been officially barred from the State.

A new motion picture operator license board at Dallas, Texas, was appointed by Mayor Aldredge the first of the week to replace the board discharged recently.

Members of the new board are Henry Putz, supervisor of park pictures; Henry Garret, superintendent of the city radio plant; and J. J. Schaeffer, operator. The appointments were confirmed by the board.

The Liberty theatre at Oklahoma City, Okla., has been enlarged to eight pieces, with the following personnel: Frank J. Feral, director; Mark Sanford, violin; Mrs. Mary Forsyth, piano; Vic Eslick, clarinet; M. A. Bowman, cornet; Paul Lainhart, trombone; Alfred Langhammer, bass; and Claude D. Scribner, drums.

Musical programs will be added to the regular programs of vaudeville and pictures, according to the management.

Mrs. Gertrude Dee has taken charge of the Happy Hour theatre at Hominy, Okla., having purchased the same from W. G. Shinn, who has accepted position as traveler for the R. D. Lewis Film Company, at Dallas, Texas.

H. B. Hopps, local attorney, addressed the Oklahoma City Screen Club at its last meeting. Mr. Hoops in his talk insisted that the public is the final and only proper censor and that the public should be educated to demand good pictures.

At the State conference of the Seventh Day Adventists, held at Oklahoma City last week resolutions were adopted branding the proposed "blue law" legislation as an attempt to puritanize America and revive the blue laws of Colonial times. The resolution decried legislation of a religious character as contrary to the federal constitution as opposed to the best interests of the church and State and as plainly un-American.

The Lyric theatre at Brady, Texas, has been reopened, after having been dark for the past two months. Manager Julius Levy will shortly install two new picture machines and will show feature pictures.

Failure to secure a permit from the secretary of the censor board at Houston, Texas, last week, resulted in one movie theatre being closed, and several others are expected to be closed unless permits are taken out at once. Only the small houses have failed to take out permits under the new law.

WESTERN NEW YORK

Tom Breakey, former owner of the Star theatre, Bradford, Pa., and well-known in western New York, is in Buffalo looking for a picture house.

J. L. Cook has resigned as a Pioneer salesman to accept a similar post at the Buffalo Fox office.

William L. Sherry was in Buffalo last week screening "The Parish Priest." Mr. Sherry is forming a new company.

District Manager H. H. Buxbaum was in Buffalo last week for a conference with Paramount Manager Allan S. Moritz.

Paul Barron, formerly with Fox in Syracuse, and lately working in the State right field, is in Buffalo seeking a connection.

Bob Wagner, manager of the Star theatre, Dansville, N. Y., was a Buffalo visitor last week. He announced his company is planning to put several other theatres in western New York soon.

Manager Harry Green, of the Premier theatre, Buffalo, has installed a seven-piece orchestra. Harry reports business getting better.

Alfred Moulton has resigned as conductor of the Shea Hippodrome orchestra, Buffalo. He has been succeeded by Adolph Schmidt, formerly of Convent Garden, London.

The Buffalo Educational Exchange has moved from the Palace theatre building to the Nu-Art offices in Franklin street.

Sydney Sampson, of the Buffalo Grand & Warner exchange, gave a "Jungle" luncheon in the Hotel Statler last Monday, where he screened the first three chapters of "Miracles of the Jungle" for western New York exhibitors.

E. J. Hayes, manager of the Buffalo First National Exchange, has added another franchise holder to the long list in this end of the State. It is the Crescent theatre in Newark, N. Y., owned by Harold P. Dygert, who also has the F. N. franchise for his Rialto theatres in Fairport and East Rochester, N. Y.

H. L. Levy has closed a circuit of three houses in Rochester, the Palace, Murray and Empress, for 60 pictures each.

The Colonial, Utica, has opened the season with three solid weeks of F. N. attractions. Mr. Hayes has arranged for the personal appearance of Hope Hampton at the Victoria theatre, Rochester.

Mell R. Edwards has resigned from the Select sales force to join the Goldwyn staff. He is covering the Southern Tier. Otto Siegel is looking after the central part of the State and Sol Mannheimer is in the north.

"Over the Hill," the William Fox special production, closed its Seattle run on Saturday night, September 3 after playing to large houses twice daily at the Metropolitan theatre for five full weeks. It is announced that approximately ninety-five thousand persons saw the picture during its engagement at the Metropolitan. From Seattle the film goes to Spokane, where another large run is predicted.

Vicente Blasco Ibanez's "Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" had its first Seattle showing on Saturday, September 10, at John Hamrick's Blue Mouse theatre. The feature has been advertised on the billboards and in the newspapers of the city for several weeks.

Mr. Hamrick presents the picture four times daily. Matinee prices are seventy five cents and one dollar, plus war tax. Evening prices are one dollar and a dollar and a half, plus the tax. Seats are already being sold for the first three weeks.

The Blue Mouse orchestra, under the direction of Emil Birnbaum, will accompany the production with an elaborate musical score.

FOR two years the people have been waiting for another picture by the producer of "The Miracle Man."

At last you can give them one—Mr. Tucker's only production since that record-breaking masterpiece.

Built on a theme as mighty, produced with the same great artistry, "Ladies Must Live" will stand equal with "The Miracle Man" as a box-office sensation.

OH BUDDY!

A Most Drastic Critic Says: In "LIFE" of Aug. 11, 1921

"'Falling for Fanny' and 'Oh Buddy!' were EXCELLENT. Both had amusing stories with definite ideas, so that (unlike most comedies) they did not give the impression that they had been written backwards in Esperanto by the occupant of a padded cell. Moreover, they were well played by Vera Steadman, Neal Burns and Eddie Barry.

"Miss Steadman, in our humble opinion, is the BEST ACTRESS appearing in ANY COMEDIES of ANY DESCRIPTION, ANYWHERE."

"LIFE" has a reading circulation of 1,190,000, and its dramatic editor is regarded as a drastic critic, and an accurate one.

IN this great picture—the first Western Super-feature ever produced—the ambition of a lifetime is realized.

I HAVE always known that a great spectacular drama of the West could be made which would rouse the admiration of every age in every audience, big city or small town, and "THE FOX" proves it.

THANKS to Carl Laemmle's unstinted support and personal inspiration, Mr. Thornby and myself have been able to give you the biggest scenes that any Western picture has ever had, for we have worked with the biggest masses of men. In addition, we have had the time and the money with which to fill "THE FOX" with romantic adventure, love interest, humor and those striking Western types which are a joy to everyone forever—to all of which you may say I have contributed in due measure.

YOUR patrons will thank you for "THE FOX" because it has in it everything that my years of screen-work have told me ought to be in a Western Super-feature, and because it is at once the biggest and the best picture of its kind ever thrown on any screen.

YOU, the showman, will like it because it will bring the money in a flood.

"THE CUP of LIFE"

A Romance of Two Worlds

By CAREY WILSON

A FIRST NATIONAL ATTRACTION

WHAT THE EDITORS SAY

Tense

"The Cup of Life" is one long drink of adventure and devotion. The combination is good and the drama is tense and real. No time is wasted in getting under way. Exhibitors can always find enough patrons who like red-blooded and two fisted adventure pictures. This picture contains just enough sex and woman's honor interest to appeal to that section of your patrons.

—WID'S.

Thrilling

The Ince-Bosworth combination is at it again, which means that a picture is presented which carries all the ear marks of success. Not since "Below the Surface" has this duo co-operated and "The Cup of Life" is as brimful of action, incident, adventure and romance. The opening shot is a thriller. Above the average and well worth anyone's time.

—MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

Beautiful

From both the artistic and dramatic standpoint, "The Cup of Life" satisfies the most critical demands. Of three it is difficult to decide which is the outstanding feature: the excellent character portrayals of the all star cast, the Oriental splendor and beauty of settings and costumes or the powerful and gripping dramatic situations and sequences.

—PITTSBURGH PRESS.

WHAT THE EDITORS SAY

Swift

Dyed-in-the-wool drama with box office appeal, entertainment value and dramatic strength masterfully combined. A picture to look at, to book for a run and to advertise with conviction. Thomas H. Ince's best in years. Swift, picturesque, clean and convincing. It tells a big "bang-up" yarn in vigorous, forceful incidents snugly strung together on a single taut thread of the plot. It should make money for many exhibitors.

—EXHIBITORS HERALD.

Colorful

Audiences of every character will enjoy this picture, which is of a distinct melodramatic type, full of color and action. Besides the remarkable acting of Bosworth, Tully Marshall does some fine character delineation. The photography is one of the really great achievements.

—EXHIBITORS TRADE REVIEW.

Gripping

Here is a story that will grip and hold. The plot is worked out with admirable effect. The production is excellent and the cast finely balanced. Hobart Bosworth presents another of his powerful studies of unregenerate but forceful manhood. Tully Marshall is remarkable. Madge Bellamy is a charming and dramatically competent Pain.

WHAT THE EXHIBITORS THINK

Loew has booked "The Cup of Life" for ONE HUNDRED DAYS over his metropolitan circuit, New York.

Paul Gusdonavic of Cleveland screened "The Cup of Life" before a test audience against one of the season's most touted specials, and "The Cup of Life" won, THREE TO ONE.

"WHAT'S YOUR REPUTATION WORTH

A story that is unique.

It is so different from the usual motion picture that a New York Supreme Court Justice called attention to it during a sensational trial before him. While this story is so true to life that its plot found a parallel in real life, it does not follow the conventional and hackneyed grooves of life. The Supreme Court Justice characterized its real-life parallel as "a case in ten thousand."

It is a poignant love story, in which a woman risks all for the man she loves. Rather than be a bad woman with her reputation secure, she prefers to be a good woman with her reputation in doubt.

The setting and costuming are superb. The action moves from the grandeur of the city and the luxury of wealth to the great open spaces. Corinne Griffith is seen in varied costumes from Parisian gowns fashioned of ropes of pearls, to rugged togs in which she is shown participating in snow-shoeing and other winter sports.

A fashionable wedding in her father's mansion and then she found herself in the squalid mining cabin of the man who sought to wrest from Nature, the gold he would lavish upon his tender wife.

She wondered if love could survive the loneliness of a strange, rough country; if duty could overcome the ache in her heart for the luxury to which she had been accustomed.

Thus begins the drama of a crisis in a strong man's life and the struggle of a girl's selfish nature against her better self.

"Discontented Wives" is a feature made doubly attractive by the strength of its title and the appeal of its absorbing theme; by the sweep of its Western action and the color of its New York intrigue; by the strength of a man's fight to keep his wife's love and the revelations of a woman's nature.

By all the laws of popular appeal, "Discontented Wives" is

Neilan Presents an Unusual Novelty

"BITS OF LIFE"

Neilan Prod.—Asso. First National Pict.

DIRECTOR ..... Marshall Neilan
AUTHOR.....Short stories by several well known authors adapted for the screen by Marshall Neilan
CAMERAMAN ..... Not credited
AS A WHOLE.....Very interesting novelty which, while episodic, proves very fine screen material. Will please
STORIES.....All of a different nature, but tied together by a very clever letter signed by the director
DIRECTION.....Just like all of Neilan's work—excellent, with many fine touches
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Very fine, especially the Chinese sequence
CAST.....Lon Chaney probably gives best performance, but Frederick Burton is fine and natural, while Rockliffe Fellowes is also good
LIGHTINGS ..... Very good as a rule
EXTERIORS ..... Look natural
INTERIORS ..... Correct
DETAIL .....Neilan shines in this CHARACTER OF STORIES.....Nothing offensive and one of best things he has ever done
LENGTH OF PRODUCTION.....6,339 feet

Marshall Neilan has given a novelty to the screen in "Bits of Life," which might well prove the forerunner of more entertainment of this description. He has taken four short stories and by cleverly tying them together has given an excellent piece of screen entertainment. The stories are presented as part of a letter which Neilan has signed and which explains the difficulty of finding material for pictures. All of the stories are different. They have no relation whatsoever to each other and three of them have powerful punches. Three of them appeared in various publications, and the last is an original story which has a true O. Henry surprise finish.

In the first Rockliffe Fellowes has the star bit. He is a tough New York boy who develops into one of the great crooks of the world and who, after doing a real kindness to a man in want, is arrested by the detective who has always trailed him waiting [illegible] to be made. Wesley Barry appears in the ea[illegible]ci-dents when he is sold into Eas[illegible]side slavery [illegible] of course his usual clever self. B[illegible] his fr[illegible] ing. There is a lot of natura[illegible] probably the weakest of [illegible]

Frederick Burton [illegible] which tells the [illegible] who-[illegible] red [illegible] all of the [illegible] knocked at [illegible] story. He finds [illegible] so much is ar-[illegible] wife, whom [illegible] loves with true [illegible] orthless broth-[illegible] e. Finally, [illegible] to the little [illegible] pieces. Bur-[illegible] is splendid.

[illegible] s the finest and [illegible] d Lon [illegible] has [illegible] Chink [illegible] and [illegible] his first child is [illegible] then goes into [illegible] Mission brings [illegible] She [illegible] ow on the [illegible] other side of the [illegible] nail has [illegible] eam [illegible] ugh [illegible] and [illegible] min-[illegible] s a clever [illegible]

The last is an [illegible] ive idea which [illegible] which John B[illegible] as while being manic [illegible] and [illegible] wild events saving a princess [illegible] wakes up to find Noah Beery, his barbe[illegible] ister and the pretty manicure girl is the prince[illegible] twist and will surprise your people.

Bank on Director's Name-This Should Be Enough

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

You can safely play this and by clever advance work do good business with it. You can talk about it as one of the real novelties of the coming season and can make promises with safety. You might take a chance and ask your crowd whether they want more of this sort of entertainment, and as contests usually work, [illegible] the front of the house you can accomplish more result. This is the first time anything like it has been attempted.

Your crowd knows Neilan, but if there is any doubt about it tell them this novelty is by the same man who produced "Dinty," "Rebals" and some of his other successes. Bank on Neilan and play him up. But you can mention the fine work of Lon Chaney and Frederick Burton. Chaney should be known and you can talk of his [illegible] successes.

Charlie Chaplin Has Done It Again With "The Idle Class"!

Mr. Exhibitor:

We want to give you a straight from the shoulder report on Charles Chaplin in "The Idle Class"--not what we think the picture will do for you, but what it is actually doing.

There isn't any doubt ever as to how a Chaplin picture will go over. But there are always a few who think that Charlie can't keep up the pace and put over a knock-out every time. There are some who think "The Kid" was so good it couldn't possibly be equalled.

Well, we are glad to report that Charlie can keep up his standard and has. "The Idle Class" is playing this week at the New York Strand, the big Broadway house. It has, and still is, drawing vast crowds. Not a day but the theatre has been filled to capacity--and still the throngs fight for admittance.

And he is causing just as many and just as hearty laughs as ever before. Every audience has left the theatre thoroughly tickled. So you will know that the picture is a money getter and that your patrons will be thoroughly pleased. Big box office returns and pleased patrons. That's a combination you can't beat. Go to it!

Yours very truly,

FIRST NATIONAL.

Motion Picture News

The Magnanimous Act

THE Motion Picture Theatre Owners' Association is, by far, the strongest exhibitor organization the industry has ever possessed. In truth, it is the strongest body of any sort that the industry has seen.

With remarkable political sagacity and skilled organizing genius, Sydney Cohen and his associates have built a well-knit, efficiently functioning national association.

Its work in legislative halls, its appearances before the public on behalf of the industry have been extremely valuable. Its strength has steadily grown, its scope of usefulness widened. Never, since the first forward step was taken, has there been a hesitant period, a time when its power seemed on the wane.

THE National Association of the Motion Picture Industry is not all that it should be. This is stating in a rather roundabout way a fact that every producer, distributor and trade paper man in the industry knows.

The reasons are as many as the individual opinions of the men giving them.

But the reasons are aside from the point. The fact remains that the National Association does not command the active cooperation of all those forces that are listed in its membership and these that are not but should be on its rolls.

However, the National Association has its place as an industrial representative. Through the individual efforts of Mr. Brady, Mr. Hess, Mr. Rogers, Mr. Zukor and many others, it has at times given yeomen service to the industry.

And, with all its present faults—real and alleged—the National Association possesses the possibilities for value to every branch of the industry—and this includes the exhibitor—that can scarce be reckoned.

THESE are the facts as they stand and as they must be faced when putting forth any proposals for unity—any hopes for a Joint Committee that will represent all factors in outside work.

The M. P. T. O., a strong, vigorous, growing body—well knowing its own strength, and confident that it has the upper hand and need make overtures to no person or organization.

The National Association, big in potential value—but missing on several cylinders.

What is the magnanimous, unselfish, manly thing to do in such a case?

Can't we count on Sydney Cohen and the M. P. T. O. A. to extend a friendly hand? Let the past be a closed book, and an unselfish whole-hearted act on the part of the M. P. T. O. A. the signal for the building of a better future.

UNITY we must have. Take the Senatorial sop which the industry received this last week or so. All legitimate tax requests disregarded and a lollypop extended in the form of a proposal to lift the admission tax from all theatre charging ten cents or less.

Is any further proof needed that Washington—and every other legislative center—looks upon the motion picture industry as a house divided against itself?

The mental processes of the Senate tax committee are plain. The manufacturers can be disregarded, the exhibitors will probably be satisfied with a little "pap." So we have the decision to exempt ten cent admissions. Of what value to the great bulk of theatres? To the whole industry?

No, we've got to have unity. We've got to have that joint, representative, battling committee. We've got to present a solid front.

Let's have the magnanimous thing. Let Mr. Cohen take the first step. He—and his association—will gain still further prestige by the act.

Universal to Keep Censor on Its Coast Staf

W. J. Willis, of Chicago's Censor Board, Will Recommend Deletions Prior to Release

UNIVERSAL has engaged a censor who will be a permanent attache of its studio forces in Universal City. The appointee is W. J. Willis, the censor in charge of the Chicago Board of Censorship. It will be Mr. Willis's task to review Universal productions and suggest deletions. In a statement just issued from Universal headquarters in New York it is declared that Universal while opposed to legalized censorship "has to face the fact that we actually have censorship. Furthermore, we are going to have it for some time to come." The plan of engaging a censor was adopted to make censorship as bearable as possible, it is declared. The Universal statement, after referring to the recent conference of censors called to the Coast by Carl Laemmle, continues as follows:

"Time after time during these conferences the producers asked, What do you want us to cut out, and the censors fully as many times, Why do you put such things into the films in the first place. In other words the producers indicated a willingness to protect their property by cutting out whatever the censors did not want if they only knew what they didn't want, and the censors at least inferred that they knew what should come out and that it would help all concerned if it could be done before the picture was started. Universal felt that the matter was worth trying.

"In order to do this Universal must have a censor of its own. No board could be expected to pass upon the films of any one company and no definite set of eliminations was decided upon by the conferences. So just before the censors were to return to their homes Universal made a proposal to W. J. Willis, the Censor-in-Charge of the Chicago Board of Censorship. After a short deliberation and after wiring Charles C. Fitzmaurice, general superintendent of Police, his immediate superior, for his approval, Mr. Willis consented and wired his resignation.

"Mr. Willis is today at work at Universal City, viewing pictures, and maki suggestions for the deletion of an oc sional point, which, in his judgme might be objected to by one or anot of the numerous boards of censorship, of which operate under widely diverg rules, municipal ordinances and st laws.

"W. F. Willis is particularly suited the position which has been created him in the industry. Seven years ago was appointed a motion picture censor the Civil Service Commission of Chica and has continued to function as a Cens in-Charge for over five years until the ti he left to join other censors on the rec expedition to Universal City. In t time he has viewed every picture of i portance produced, and has been inst mental in protecting the producer agai unreasonable deletions and changes wh would injure the story without serving altruistic dreams of censorship."

Home-Rule Censorship Obviates Legal Bran

Exhibitors of Louisville, Ky., Do Their Own Censoring with Wide-Spread Results

THE exhibitors of Louisville, Ky., have demonstrated how "home rule" applied to censorship has disposed successfully of that bugbear. The Louisville theatre owners have formed an association, one of the chief purposes of which is to censor pictures and refuse bookings to all films which they know in advance will conflict with public sentiment on the subject of clean screens. According to an account from the home-office of First National, the plan has been unusually successful in ridding Louisville and in fact practically all of Kentucky, of agitation in favor of legalized censorship. Says the First National statement:

"If this is not a practical demonstration of the superfluous character of legalized censorship, it would be hard to imagine a more convincing one. The history of the present state of affairs in Louisville is an exceptionally interesting one:

"Committeewomen of the Church Women's Federation made, in the Spring, an exhaustive survey of Louisville motion picture theatres for the Russell Sage Foundation. They didn't find everything to their liking.

"However, after conferences with leaders of the exhibitors' organization—the Louisville Photoplay Association — they were impressed, they said, with the exhibitors' anxiety to clean house.

"On the conduct of motion picture houses in the State this autumn may depend whether or not a fight for a State Board of Censors will be made by reform elements at the approaching session of the General Assembly.

"Every member of the Louisville Council, Knights of Columbus, is commissioned, it was learned, to observe closely films shown at theatres he visits and to report anything objectionable to the organization.

"Then, a committee is appointed to wait on the exhibitor. No such complaint has been made in the last six months, J. Raymond Barrett, head of the council, said last week.

"In addition to this watchfulness, both the Churchmen's and Church-women's Federations are on the alert, according to officers.

L. J. Dittmar, president of the exhibitors' body, declares that nothing but clean films are being shown in Louisville and that members of the association are not permitted to show the other kind.

"Crowds, he said, have grown larger and larger, during the two years of the organization's campaigning.

"Movie films are undoubtedly improving, he added, and the producers are doing their best to place the highest character of films on the market.

"Mr. Dolle explained that it now is possible for a theatre manager to reject any film that may offend and that, while t is done occasionally, the necessity is coming more and more infrequent. F merly, he said, contracts did not allow rejection on viewing the film, but now i authorized by about 70 per cent of producers and, speaking from a practi standpoint, can be done in any case.

"When one exhibitor here rejects a f because it is objectionable, the rules of association will not allow any other me ber to show it, he said."

While there is no official censorship the smaller towns, it is pointed out, Mayor and city officials always can obt the withdrawal of a film that they consi objectionable.

Business Revival in Kentucky and Tennessee

Reports from Kentucky and Tennessee advise of the revival of business on a most encouraging scale after the most unfavorable summer season in the history of the industry, to which excessive heat and poor industrial conditions were the main contributing factors. Business has taken a special spurt forward in Memphis, Tenn., where the rise in cotton has worked a decided change for the better.

In Louisville, Ky., the new Kentucky theatre, built by Col. Fred Levy and M. Switow, will be ready for opening at the end of this month. The Majestic, which has been closed for the greater part of the summer, has re-opened with extensive alterations. The National theatre opens with vaudeville and pictures.

Only a few weeks ago reports to the First National exchange indicated that at least 40 per cent of the houses in Kentucky and Tennessee had closed or cut down. Now they are going back to their pre-summer schedule, says First National, and it has been found necessary to increase the First National exchange sales staff by four men.

Sandusky Exhibitor Nominated for Office

George J. Schade, owner and manager of the Schade theatre, Sandusky, Ohio, is a candidate for a seat on the City Commission, the five-man body that governs the city of Sandusky under a charter.

Mr. Schade's candidacy was materially popularized when, a few days after Mr. Schade had entered the Sandusky race, James W. Faulkner, the Columbus, Ohio, correspondent of The Cincinnati Enquirer, wrote him up in The Enquirer as a man who ought to be nominated for governor.

Connecticut Theatres to Obtain Permits

In connection with the new law in Connecticut, requiring managers of motion picture theatres to secure certificates of character from the state police, the commission, at a meeting held last week in Hartford, voted to issue such certificates through Superintendent Hurley, who has already received a score of applications. There are about 230 moving picture theatres in the state.

Nazimova Signs Contract with United Artists

HIRAM ABRAMS announces this week that a contract has just been signed with Charles Bryant, representing Alla Nazimova, whereby the Nazimova productions following "Camille" will be released through United Artists Corporation. This announcement gives the final approval to reports that have been current in film circles for many months.

When it became definite that United Artists Corporation was going to distribute certain product in addition to the pictures of its principals, Mary Pickford, Charlie Chaplin, Douglas Fairbanks and D. W. Griffith, it seemed almost an accepted fact in the minds of the majority in the industry that the Nazimova productions would eventually be released under the "Big Four" auspices.

Madame Nazimova now takes her place as an independent producer, making her pictures absolutely in her own time and with the utmost freedom in every detail.

Court May View Pictures in Deciding Suit

Judge Hough in the United States District Court of New York on Thursday of last week granted Charlie Chaplin a temporary injunction restraining the Rollo Sales Corporation from showing or distributing three pictures alleged to have been compiled by Ralph Spence, a film editor, for Rollo Sales out of a quantity of surplus film or "left-over" scenes from twelve pictures made by Mr. Chaplin for the Mutual Company. Chaplin maintains the distribution of these pictures will injure his reputation; Rollo claims that Spence has created three pictures equal to anything the famous comedian has made.

It is probable that one of the Chaplin-edited pictures and one of the Spence-edited pictures will be shown in the court before the judge and a number of prominent exhibitors and producers in order to secure opinions as to the relative merits of the pictures.

Sen. Walker Taken Ill

Senator James J. Walker, National counsel for the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, collapsed on Sunday, September 18th, and was taken to Broad Street Hospital, and the next day underwent an operation for appendicitis. The latest reports of his condition are very favorable.

Rothacker Laboratories Be Synchronized

Although the Rocky Mountains st between them, the Los Angeles Rothack Aller Laboratories and the Chicago R acker laboratories are henceforth to o ate as one. The two plants are to be synchronized that a portion of the pr on a release can be made in one laborat and the remainder at the other—and the prints will have identical screen b liancy and tone values.

Watterson R. Rothacker and Jos Aller are looking forward to a day in near future when they can take two pr of a release, one made in Los Angeles, other in Chicago, and screen these prints before an audience.

On his trip east Joseph Aller, resi head of the Los Angeles plant, spent best part of a week with executives of Chicago plant. They worked out in f detail just how standardization is to effected in the two laboratories.

They fixed a common system of tim The printing machines of the two pl will hereafter operate at the same sp and with printing lights of the s strength. The same chemicals will used in the developers and mixed acc ing to identical formulas. The cont of the amber tint tank in the Chi plant will color a roll of film precisely same as the amber tank in the Los Ang laboratory.

Two laboratories might be synchron as to time cards and printing machines use the same developer formulas yet not turn out the same quality of print water from the Los Angeles city n were used in mixing up one develo solution and Chicago city water use the other. Therefore, from now on distilled water will ever be poured int developing tanks of either laboratory

Second Annual Convention of Michigan Exhibitors

The second annual convention of the Michigan Motion Picture Exhibitors Association will be held in Jackson, Michigan, on Tuesday and Wednesday, October 4th and 5th, 1921. The convention headquarters will be at the Otsego Hotel and the meetings will be held in Castle Hall. This promises to be the greatest gathering of exhibitors yet seen in Michigan and the anticipation is that the attendance will by far surpass the convention held at Lansing a year ago at which approximately 300 exhibitors were in attendance.

A very comprehensive program has been arranged, and it is the intention of the officers and the committee in charge to follow out as nearly as possible the schedule. Arrangements are being made for President Sydney S. Cohen, National Counsel James J. Walker, and General Manager, A. J. Moeller, of the National Organization to be present.

Many issues of vital importance to large and small exhibitors alike will be brought before the convention for action, and while the convention will devote the major part of its time to business, the social side has not been overlooked.

J. D. Williams Present at Unemployment Meeting

At President Harding's conference on the unemployment problem, J. D. Williams, Manager of Associated First National Pictures, Inc., represented the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry as spokesman for the organized producers and distributors as well as for the 4000 motion picture theatres which constitute the membership of First National. He attended the first conference in Washington on Monday, September 26th and will return there on October 5th for the adjourned meeting at which representatives of the nation's leading industries will receive the reports of various committees appointed at Monday's gathering.

To Start Motion Picture Basketball League

Initial steps have been taken for the continuation of motion picture athletic sports through the formation of a basketball league as the result of the successful season of the Motion Picture Baseball League which is just drawing to a close.

Tentative steps for the drawing up of a constitution have been arranged, and a meeting of all interested companies will be held at Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, 485 Fifth Ave., next Monday afternoon at 5:15 in the offices of the publicity and advertising department. An urgent request is made to any organization which may not have already received notice to be represented at the meeting when officers will be elected and steps taken to put the league into operation.

Trophies for which motion picture men neglected their offices for the golf links last week. The large cup on the left is offered by Wid's Daily and must be won three years by the winners of Class A and B in competition. Beside it is the cup offered by Moving Picture World for the winner of Class A; next, offered by Warner Brothers for lowest gross score. Fourth from the left the cup is offered by Felix Feist for the winner of Class B. The small receptacle is the "Duffer's Cup," for poorest score

Y'gotta Hand It to Him

Mitt him, boys! He put it over. With a bang. Who? Joe Dannenberg. Of course. Sometimes found in the offices of Wid's Daily. More often a straight spoken bird at a banquet. Latterly promoter of the big golf tournament.

News was scarce. Advertising managers of trade papers cursed. Phones rang in vain in a score of film offices. And the old "in conference" line wasn't pulled. 'Cause Joe had 'em all up on the Oak Ridge Club golf links.

The winners won. The losers lost. But all had ahellofa good time. Banquet followed. Long winded speakers were, almost without exception, barred. That's all. S'enough.

Mitt Joe!

Winners
Class A—F. S. Sherman
Class B—P. A. Powers
Booby—J. W. Alecoate

P. S.—Apologies for swiping Joe's literary style.

Church and Film Interests on Coast Co-operate

A movement started by the Brotherhood of First Presbyterian Church of Los Angeles several weeks ago to bring about a closer relationship between film industry and church people resulted in the affiliated picture interests officials planning a series of meetings, the first of which was held on the evening of September 16th in Los Angeles, under the direction of Secretary Ted Taylor and Manager Edward Roberts of Affiliated Pictures.

Frank E. Woods presided as chairman of the meeting and introduced Sylvester Weaver, President Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce. In his remarks he declared emphatically that the Chamber of Commerce would stand back of the film industry on any movement for the betterment of the industry. John E. Barber, vice-president of the First National Bank, told of the bankers experience in financing film companies, stating that millions had been loaned and the bank and its clients had no losses. Furthermore, the motion picture producers were the only creditors who paid their loans promptly in 1921.

Victor Herbert Starts on Motion Picture Tour

President Warren G. Harding welcomed Victor Herbert at the White House last week when Mr. Herbert launched his first personal appearance tour through the leading screen temples of the country. The scene of the composers debut was Tom Moore's Rialto Theatre at Washington, where he took the city by storm, and where his leadership of the orchestra in selections of his own composition won him on ovation from the crowds that flocked to the Rialto throughout the week.

The reception of Victor Herbert by the President was a signal for a series of official and civic ceremonies in honor of the composer's coming. Members of the Cabinet, Women's Clubs, the Rotary and Kiwanis organizations and a host of diplomats and functionaries joined to entertain America's representative composer-conductor. The New York Concert League is arranging his tour.

Nebraska Exhibs Confer on "Blue List" Grievances

Following the close of the Iowa-Nebraska exhibitors' convention in Omaha last week, the executive committee of the Nebraska organization conferred for two days with the grievance committee of the Omaha Film Board of Trade.

T. E. Delaney of the Vitagraph office in Omaha and E. J. MacIvor of the Goldwyn office in Omaha represented the Omaha Film Board of Trade. A. R. Pramer, president of the Nebraska M. P. T. O.; Stuart Gould, executive secretary; J. Erle Kirk, secretary; and H. F. Kennedy, vice-president, represented the M. P. T. O.

The M. P. T. O. association objected to an exhibitor being named on "the blue list" of the film board of trade for a single breach of a contract. Messrs. Delaney and MacIvor upheld the policy of the film board of trade. The discussion concluded with all exhibitors who in the past were "blue listed" being given a clean slate.

French Director, Product Sold, Returns Home

Brimming with enthusiasm over the possibilities which he believes the American market is destined to offer the intelligent foreign producer, generally, and the French ones in particular, provided the tariff is not made prohibitive, Louis Nalpas, the French director and producer of many screen classics, sails for France on the S. S. Paris on Wednesday, October 5.

M. Nalpas, who for five years was managing director of the Film d' Art and who founded the Cine Studios at Nice, France and there supervised or personally directed the production of some of the biggest films made in France since 1916, came to America to study conditions in the film industry here, with a view to producing especially for the American market.

During his stay here, M. Nalpas disposed of three of his most recent productions, "The Sultaness of Love," which he sold to First National, "Mathias Sandorf," a multiple reel production based on Jules Verne's story of the same name and "Tristan and Isolde," an elaborate picturization of the immortal love story made famous by Richard Wagner's opera. The last named were both sold to independent companies and M. Nalpas stated that a later announcement as to their release and method of distribution would be made.

Ince Rebukes Reissue of "The Three Musketeers"

The resurrection of the somewhat "ancient" and original production of "The Three Musketeers" to compete with the modern Douglas Fairbanks masterpiece came in for a scathing rebuke from Thomas H. Ince, the original producer.

Ince warns exhibitors as well as the public that although he produced the original many years ago it is not a "Thomas H. Ince production," nor has he any interest in or control over its distribution.

Mr. Ince also issues a good natured suggestion to the newspaper reviewers who have seriously compared the two productions that the one picture was made with the limited resources of the pioneering days of picture making and cost approximately $15,000, while the Fairbanks production had all the advantages of the most modern cinematographic developments at a cost of about a million dollars.

"It Might Happen to You" Given 3 Weeks' Run

S. and E. Enterprises advises that its animal comedy, "It Might Happen to You," has been booked by the W. H. Bradley Productions of Boston to the Park theatre of that city for three weeks' run, beginning Monday, September 26th. Jack Lourie is the proprietor of the Park, and also controls the Modern and Beacon in the same city.

Censor Seal on Film to Be Enforced in New York

ON and after October 1, no motion pictures are to be shown in New York state without the seal or serial number of the Censorship Commission. George H. Cobb, chairman of the New York State Motion Picture Commission, has sent a two-paged letter to every motion picture theatre in the state, calling attention to the law. While a month's leeway was given by the Commission to those who had failed to supply themselves with the necessary permits, Mr. Cobb now believes that there is no need of any further excuses or delays.

In calling attention to this particular section of the law, Chairman Cobb in his letter to the owners and managers of the motion picture houses, makes it plain that the running of any picture without the seal or serial number, constitutes a violation of the law, and makes the owner or manager of the house liable to a fine of $500, or a year in jail, or both.

Commissioner Cobb also notifies all owners and managers that representatives of the Commission will visit the theatres from time to time and that they are not to be asked to pay any admission charge, provided that they can show a card signed by either the chairman or the secretary of the Commission.

Wage Cut Causes Strike in Springfield, O.

Several Springfield theatres were dark last week as a result of a strike of musicians, motion picture operators and stage hands. It is said that the strike had its inception in a summary demand of the theatres, that the musicians employed in the theatres accept a wage cut of $5 per week, effective immediately. All the theatres were open the two following nights and the owners said that they will remain open. Non-union musicians are employed in some of the theatres, while in others there is no music. The owners of the theatres say that the operators struck in sympathy with the musicians and charge that when they struck they violated an agreement claimed to exist between the owners and the operators that in any event of a disagreement, two weeks' notice was to be given by either side before any action was taken.

Work on "Leather Pushers" Series Progressing

The first two episodes of "The I Pushers" which the Knickerbocker Photoplay Corporation is producing, with Reginald Denny as the star, have been completed in record time, according to H. L. Messmore, president and general manager, and work on the balance of the series is going forward rapidly.

Mr. Messmore organized the Knickerbocker Photoplays Corporation to produce "The Leather Pushers" from the stories by H. C. Witwer, which have had the widest vogue, appearing first in Collier's and later in book form. Announcements as to their releasing arrangements will be made shortly.

Hammons, of Educational, Back from Europe

E. W. Hammons, president of Educational Films Corporation and of Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., is back in New York, having returned a few days ago from Europe, where he went to confer with leaders in the motion picture industry abroad. Mr. Hammons reported that his trip had been most successful, and that good new connections had been made for Educational that were sure to increase business for Educational Pictures overseas.

Recent visits to London by notables in the American motion picture industry have increased interest in American pictures in that center, according to Mr Hammons, and the outlook is brighter than ever before for American films.

Plans for Southern Exposition Maturing

Plans are rapidly maturing for the Southern Motion Picture Exposition which is to be held at Charlotte, N. C., in the City Auditorium from November 29th to December 2nd inclusive.

While the Exposition is promoted primarily by the Exhibitors' League of North and South Carolina it is expected that the industry throughout the entire South will be represented. It is the intention of the committee to make this one of the most comprehensive affairs of its kind ever held.

Aside from the usual Exposition features, consisting of exhibits, grand ball personal appearances of stars, there will be produced a real feature motion picture A professional director will be engaged who will select the cast. The finished product will be available for showing in the home theatres of the players.

M. P. T. O. Establishes a Public Service Bureau at Washington

Millions of Feet of Educational and Historical Film to Be Issued

[N an announcement issued during the week from the headquarters of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America it is declared that the M. P. T. O. A. has established at Washington, D. C., the Department of Public Service with Dr. Francis Holley as the Director-General. It is further announced that through the agency of this Washington office millions of feet of educational, historical, and other forms of films devoted to progressive lines of thought and action are available for the use of the theatre-owners of the country. The M. P. T. O. A. statement follows in full:

"To Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America:

"It is very essential at this time to press forward our public service work in all communities as the true position of the motion picture theatre everywhere should be made more apparent. This communication is sent out now in view of the fact that conventions will soon be held in many states and it is very important that action be taken at these gatherings which will entirely comprehend all phases of our Public Service Work.

"Realizing that the motion picture theatre through its practically unlimited scope in the visualizing of worldly events is a tremendous power for good in all communities, the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America have established the Department of Public Service at Washington, D. C., with Dr. Francis Holley as the Director General. Millions of feet of educational, historical and other forms of film devoted to progressive lines of thought and action are available in our Washington headquarters for use of the theatre owners of the country.

"We must bring the service up to a high point of efficiency. It represents the best and noblest there is in American life—service for all the people. If a state convention is to be held in your state soon, see that this phase of the activities of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America is made a very conspicuous part of the same. If no state convention is scheduled it would be well to arrange for one so that we can carry this work along in your state.

"In this relation we establish lines of association with the schools to teach history and other lessons in the theatres and with the heads of government everywhere to carry on every serviceable public program and make your theatre a part of the educational forces of the community. We have great power for good and we want to exercise and extend its usefulness. Your knowledge of events and those with whom you establish these relations will be best able to determine just what should be done. But you are always at liberty to communicate with the Washington office on any matter effecting this or other phases of our work.

"We desire to take a very positive stand on the question of exhibiting only wholesome pictures and avoiding always any exploitation of indecency on our screens, whether the same be in the lines of the play or the public life of the performer. Our plain duty is to give the people what they want in screened plays and we know they want only decent shows and want to see only reputable performers. We cannot tolerate any element of scandal as the burden always falls heaviest upon the exhibitor.

"We are the dominant element. Let us elevate and dignify our business. We come in contact with the public daily in our theatres. Yet we have nothing to do with the productions of the shows. We must therefore, insist on wholesome and honest pictures and refuse to accept others. Let the present opportunity be ours to make our position clear on all points.

"You will readily see how important this is. It means everything to you as a theatre owner. It affects the life and the future of your business and is of so much consequence to the welfare of your community, that it becomes necessary for you to take a personal interest in this work.

"Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America,
"Sidney S. Cohen, President."

Kineto's First Feature Conspicuous Success

A SUBJECT of extraordinary merit is Kineto's first feature, "The Four Seasons." Conceived and executed by Charles Urban and Raymond L. Ditmars, it is distinctive in the sense that it visualizes Nature's great dramatic scheme—a scheme fashioned by the Divine Playwright and which has gone on unceasingly through infinite time wherever the temperate zones have featured the seasons in natural sequence.

Spring, summer, autumn and winter are expressed through a variety of scene and color with the elements accompanying each season dramatically emphasized. The settings are Nature's own background. And against these eloquent scenes is enacted the drama of life with the birds and beasts composing the cast. Each has its mission to perform; each lives its strange destiny. And the instinct of self-preservation, coupled with the nobler instinct of procreation, provides the dramatic theme of this play.

"The Four Seasons" offers the original unit program—a program harmoniously arranged, surging with life and expression. It is artistic and highly instructive. And exceptionally entertaining. The designers have created a wonder work—one that is certain to be deeply appreciated everywhere.—(THE EDITOR.)

Eight Picture Companies Incorporated in N. Y.

Eight motion picture companies, with an aggregate capitalization of $150,000, filed the necessary papers with the Secretary of State's office, permitting the concerns to enter the business in New York state.

These companies include the Budd Inn, Inc., $5,000; William F. Budd and J. J. Crimmins, Napanoch; Albert E. Jones, Ellenville; Campbell-Hall Corporation, $500; Argyll Campbell, L. J. Hall, George P. Breckenridge, New York; Lillies of the Field, Inc., $30,000; Sylvia Schwartzmann, H. S. Hechheimer, David Schneer, New York; Arista Film Corporation, $6,000; Abe Greenstein, Jack Ellis, S. C. Davidson, New York; Equity Theatres Corporation, $50,000, John Wagner, George J. Byrne, H. S. Thornton, New York; Sunray Pictures Corporation, $25,000, Frank and Vincent DeMaria, August Bertolotto, New York.

Minneapolis to Consider Citizen Censorship

As the result of a majority vote taken at a recent open forum conducted by the Civic and Commerce Association, the question of a citizen's censorship committee as a detail in a new charter for Minneapolis is to be considered by the charter committee. The vote was 33 to 12.

Rev. Roy L. Smith, pastor of a local church, spoke in favor of censorship, saying a volunteer committee should be appointed to safeguard the public against undesirable pictures. The committee would be very carefully chosen, care being taken to avoid "old women" of either sex, according to Smith's plan. According to Theodore L. Hays, general manager for the Finkelstein and Ruben Enterprises, it would be a physical impossibility for the committee to handle the hundreds of films shown each week.

"All's Well That Ends Well"

By Watterson R. Rothacker

OSTENSIBLY, the late unpleasantness which unfortunately existed between the Allied Film Laboratories' Association and the Eastman Kodak Company is to be treated as a lamentable misunderstanding and placed on the closed-book shelf. That's good!

Forgetting the broadsides which were fired by the Allies thru the Trade Journals during the controversy, let us dwell upon the significance of Mr. George Eastman's statement written September 14th, and the official announcement of the Allied Film Laboratories Association made immediately afterwards.

Mr. Eastman very definitely states: "Owing to the statement of the Allied Film Laboratories, Inc., that it is their intention to use only American-made film, the menace from the German-made film has become so lessened that we have decided not to operate our own laboratories."

Mr. Eastman very frankly remarks: "It was unwillingly that we entered this field in the photographic industry," and then, with delicious candor, continues: "and we have no intention of re-entering it SO LONG AS THE BUSINESS OF AMERICAN FILM MANUFACTURERS IS NOT THREATENED WITH EXTINCTION BY THE IMPORTATION OF FOREIGN, AND PARTICULARLY OF GERMAN-MADE FILM."

No fair or fairly intelligent person will question Mr. Eastman's sincerity. Once a tentative understanding was reached, he reduced the price of raw film to a point where it was possible for independent laboratories to cope with the distressing situation brought about during the first skirmish in the now dormant price war.

With splendid judgment, Mr. Eastman concludes his public announcement of the price reduction—by saying: "In making our reduction it was the ultimate consumer whom we had in mind."

The catch-phrase of the Allied announcement is: "the American motion picture industry must be preserved for America and Americans;" to which patriotic thought every good American instinctively subscribes.

The Allies have agreed to use only American-made film and have sincerely laid down a program evidently intended to make the present truce a permanent peace. We may reasonably expect the Allied Film Laboratories Association to stand fairly and squarely on their published platform and to do everything within their power to govern the situation so that Mr. Eastman will not be invited to resume his laboratory activities. All those who have the privilege of knowing Mr. George Eastman believe, without reservation, that he will keep his word as literally given.

Mr. Eastman's business, as far as the motion picture industry is concerned, is making and selling raw stock. The laboratory while actually the direct customer, is really but the means through which Eastman raw stock reaches the ultimate consumer. The ultimate consumer is the customer of the laboratory. So, the Eastman Kodak Company and the laboratory occupy a common ground which, for the good of the industry, should be industriously cultivated along lines of harmony and co-operation rather than distrust and antagonism. And, if the promised harvest of good will and good deeds is threatened, from within or without, the disturbing influence should be corrected or properly dealt with.

Suspicion can be dissipated, doubt removed, and a complete understanding arrived at, when every producer, distributor and exhibitor is convinced of the fact that it is the height of unwisdom and extravagance to use any film merely because it is cheap. Quality should always be the first and most important consideration, and, naturally if quality and price are the same with foreign and American raw film, the American manufacturer should have the preference. We can very properly be selfishly American without being selfish Americans.

It is not possible to frankly discuss th current laboratory situation without men tioning the tariff problem — and it is problem. Too many of us know too littl about this momentous subject. All of u should know more about it; and to kno we must listen and learn and study, intelli gently and dispassionately, and, when w have decided, for or against, get busy s that the enlightened voice of our industr is heard at Washington before it is to late. It is our business duty to safeguar our independence and encourage our in dustrial prosperity.

In my humble opinion the solution o the difficulty is, after all, more within th power of the producer—distributor—ex hibitor than within the grasp of the labora tory and raw stock manufacturer, for th laboratory is the servant who can recom mend, while the ultimate customer is th master who instructs the laboratory t print what he orders ON WHAT HE ORDER

You, Mr. Producer—you, Mr. Distrit utor—and you, Mr. Exhibitor, are th ultimate consumer. To you I earnestl say: "Down with the extravagance o cheapness."

Fairbanks Denies He or Miss Pickford Has Contemplated First National Alliance

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS brands as "utterly and absolutely untrue" a rumor to the effect that he and Miss Pickford have been contemplating an affiliation with Associated First National Pictures. The signed statement issued during the week from the headquarters of the United Artists Corporation follows:

"I wish to set right, now and for all time, the fact that neither Miss Pickford nor I have ever considered or will consider an affiliation with the First National Exhibitors Circuit. Where these rumors come from I do not know. There has been no thought or intention of this kind in our minds ever or will there be. We have nothing in common with these people for we conduct our business on a different plan altogether.

"The association with the members of our organization is a pleasing one. I doubt very much whether this would obtain elsewhere. It strikes me that whoever the people are who persist in circulating rumors such as are referred to above are either malicious or are seeking an affiliation to strengthen themselves. We will all appreciate it if in the future you will consult with one of our organizations before printing any rumors of this kind.

"United Artists Corporation today is giving the exhibitors a splendid line of pictures. Our business is firmly established and we have earned the good-will of theatres the country over. Together with Miss Pickford, Mr. Chaplin and Mr. Griffith, I am one of the owners of this corporation, and any idea that we could be induced by First National or by any other organization, in order to strengthen their position, to give up the business that we have built is absurd. In this I am speaking for Mr. Chaplin and for Mr. Griffith as well as for Miss Pickford and myself and we assure the exhibitors of the country that any report that the principals who make up United Artists Corporation are considering a departure from their present plans is utterly untrue.

"As a matter of fact, at this very moment, negotiations are practically completed with a number of the foremost artists in the motion picture business who will very shortly release their new productions through United Artists Corporation. We are glad at all times to consider taking over the distribution of the product of individual artists if such product measures up to the standards that we have set, but there isn't a distributing organization in the business that could induce us to give up the independence that we are now enjoying; the liberty we now have to serve exhibitors; our own absolute freedom of action in settling for ourselves every question of production and distribution.

"United Artists Corporation, as was intended from the beginning, has become a safeguard and a meeting place for the independent exhibitor and the independent producer. We intend to keep it that.

(Signed) "Douglas Fairbanks."

Strike Differences Settled in Many Sections of East and Mid-West

Kansas City Strike Still in Force; New Bedford, Mass., Operators Out

REPORTS from many sections of the country received during the past few weeks bring news of the amicable settlement of difficulties between theatre managements and union operators, musicians and stage hands.

Word from Kansas City describes the strike in that city to be still unsettled. The local exhibitors have established open-shop conditions in their theatres and have filled the places of the strikers with non-union help. H. Daeighton, head of Local No. 170 in Kansas City, was arrested on the charge of participating in an attack upon the non-union operator at the Apollo theatre, and was fined fifty dollars by Judge Edward J. Fleming, it is stated in a report from Kansas City.

In New Bedford, Mass., the union operators have quit, following the rejection of a new contract for the coming year, and their positions have been filled by non-union operators. In Waco, Tex., the local operators have declined to accept a ten per cent reduction in wages for the new term.

The Detroit Managers' Association has come to a satisfactory understanding with the local operators, musicians and stage hands. Several of the smaller exhibitors are operating open shop. In Springfield, Mass., the operators and stage hands of the Broadway, after being out a day, conferred with the management and reached a settlement. The Plaza theatre, in the same city, has decided to engage 100 per cent union help during the coming term. A threatening strike has also been averted in Ottawa, Canada, the local managements and the union organizations having reached satisfactory settlements of their differences. In Lansing and Grand Rapids, Mich., the operators and musicians have accepted cuts in wages ranging from ten to sixteen dollars. In Providence and Pawtucket, R. I., the exhibitors and operators have reached a settlement which provides that the operators will retain their present scale of $48 for a 36-hour week, the union agreeing to adjust the wages where the working hours are less than 36.

The controversy between exhibitors of sixteen suburban theatres of Kansas City and motion picture operators is still unsettled. Jack H. Roth, business manager of the suburban theatres, said last Monday that the exhibitors had released the operators because the latter had failed to live up to their present contract.

"According to a contract made last year by the exhibitors with the operators, the union was to submit to the theatre owners a new contract by July 1," said Mr. Roth. "The union failed to do this. The present wage scale was turned down by the exhibitors because they refused to pay for seven hours' work and get a maximum of six hours. The present contract calls for $1.15 an hour. The exhibitors are willing to pay $1 an hour straight time. The union men have at no time offered to arbitrate."

Eight motion picture houses of Wichita, Kan., began last Monday operating under open-shop conditions for operators.

Only recently a motor-car containing eight men drove up in front of the Apollo theatre, the men attacking the non-union operator as he was leaving the theatre, it is alleged. The next day in police court it was discovered that one of the men who had been arrested was H. Daeighton, head of Local No. 170. He was fined $50 by Judge Edward J. Fleming.

The union established pickets about the suburban houses, but received no sympathy from patrons. Lawrence Goldman, counsel for the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Missouri, made a tour of the sixteen houses, explaining the situation to the patrons, and received the hearty approval of each audience.

The union motion picture operators in eight theatres of New Bedford, Mass., are out as a result of the failure of union and the managers to reach an agreement on the new contracts. Their places have been filled with non-union operators. Six of the houses that are affected are the Allen group, while the other two belong to Edward D. Davenport. At present there are ten motion picture operators out and eleven musicians and two stage hands.

The proposed cut of 25 per cent means $12 to each operator, it is stated. They now receive $42 for six days and $10 for Sundays. It is impossible to take such a cut, declare the union officials.

According to C. Douglas Danford of Dallas, Tex., special representative for the Southern Enterprises, Inc., men employed as movie operators in the three houses controlled by his company at Waco, Tex., have declined to accept a reduction of 10 per cent in the scale. Mr. Danford declared other men will be engaged to fill the places of the operators if they persist in their stand.

The Detroit Managers' Association, after several weeks of negotiations, has settled its difference with the operators, musicians and stage hands and new agreements were signed, effective Sept. 1st. All the theatres in the city combined to treat with the union representatives, but some of them failed to remain because of unusual situations affecting their own houses, with the result that the wages remain the same as last year in all departments. Several small exhibitors, however are operating "open shop."

The strike of the operators, musicians and stage hands in Ottawa, Ontario, was settled when the employes of various local theatres decided to accept a reduction of 10 per cent from the former scale, it has been announced. Theatre managers also secured the right to decide how many musicians should constitute an orchestra of a theatre, it is stated.

Wages of motion picture operators and musicians in Lansing and Grand Rapids, Mich., has been cut, the operators from $56 to $40 and musicians from $50 and $45 to $40 and $35. The operators' pay is based on eight hours and the musicians six. It is understood that the operators and musicians have accepted the cut and will agree upon a new scale at the reduced prices.

Following a conference between members of the Allied Theatre Crafts and the management of the Plaza theatre in Springfield, Mass., it was decided by the theatre management to operate on the union-shop basis, none but members of the Allied Theatre Crafts to be employed in connection with the operation of the theatre. The conference came about following the receipt of a telegram that an agreement had been reached by the international organization and the American Burlesque Association. The Plaza is a combination burlesque and motion picture house.

A. J. Moeller Made General Manager of M.P.T.O.

A. J. MOELLER, until recently general manager of the Michigan Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association, has been promoted to a similar post at national headquarters of the M. P. T. O. A. in New York, but with the entire organization of forty-eight states under his supervision.

Mr. Moeller's nomination as director of the organization and development work of the exhibitor body is not surprising for several reasons. The details of steadily increasing responsibility had practically swamped President Cohen, and long before the Minneapolis convention he cast about for some one capable to relieve him of many of them. Mr. Cohen found the man in Mr. Moeller entirely because of his record in organization matters made him the ideal selection.

In Michigan Mr. Moeller succeeded in enlisting under the banner of the M. P. T. O. A. five hundred and eighty-one of the six hundred and twelve exhibitors in the State. And his study of innumerable problems and their solution played a dominant part in the building of this astounding majority.

NEWSY BRIEFS FROM CENTRAL FILM BELT

Chicago and the Mid-West

L. H. MASON, REPRESENTATIVE, 910 S. MICHIGAN AVE

Ascher Brothers have announced a revision in the admission prices of their magnificent Roosevelt theatre in the Chicago loop. They state that the reduction will in no way effect the high standard of the Roosevelt entertainment.

The new schedule, which became effective on September 19th, is forty cents, including war tax, mornings, and fifty cents, plus war tax, afternoons and evenings.

The change was made, not only to give the patrons the benefit of a slight reduction in keeping with the policy of giving the best entertainment at the lowest possible figure, but to simplify the schedule which was causing some confusion among regular attendants, and which was forty cents mornings, fifty cents afternoons, sixty cents evenings, and seventy-five cents Saturday nights, Sundays and holidays.

George N. Gollos and Harold M. Gollos, of Gollos & Gollos, Chicago, are greatly pleased over the splendid business done by "The Wandering Jew" during its two weeks' engagement at Barbee's Loop theatre.

A special presentation was given the picture at this loop house, including singing of Jewish folk songs by Della Brunswick, lyric soprano, accompanied by Alexander Kaminsky, the celebrated Russian violinist, and it proved one of the best attractions ever booked at the Barbee.

The Gollos brothers control the picture for almost the entire western territory starting at the Ohio line, and now are ready to book "The Wandering Jew" in the outlying theatres of Chicago, after which they will personally travel with the picture putting it on as a road show in the larger cities of the territory controlled by them.

It is also understood that following the showing of the picture in the principal key centers, it will be released throughout the entire territory.

Marshall Neilan made a brief stop in Chicago last week on his way back to the coast where he will resume production. While in Chicago he visited the Rothacker plant for a conference with Watterson R. Rothacker.

Douglas Fairbanks' version of Dumas' great novel, "The Three Musketeers," has finished the first month of its record-breaking engagement at the Randolph Theatre, and Jones, Linick & Schafer report that there is no sign of falling off in the crowds as the picture goes into its fifth week.

Richard Kipling, of Kipling Enterprises, spent last week in Chicago, stopping off en route from Los Angeles to New York. Mr. Kipling, on his way east, stopped in Seattle and other of the large west Coast cities and reports business reviving in that part of the country, and that the outlook for the Winter is very favorable along the coast. While in Chicago he conferred with Sales Manager H. E. Belford, who already has disposed of more than sixty per cent of the United States territory of the two series of westerns Mr. Kipling is putting on the market.

Plans are being perfected for motion picture interests to take an active part in the Mattoon election next month, at which the question of Sunday opening will be an issue. Mattoon theatres have been dark on Sunday for some time, but it is hoped that this will be changed by the voters.

W. J. Newman, of the Newman Manufacturing Company's Chicago office, reports that business is picking up in splendid shape in their line, and that his company has recently made many installations of brass rails in Chicago theatres. According to Mr. Newman, theatre men are now fully awake to the fact that brass in the lobby brightens up the front of the house and adds greatly to its attractiveness. Among the recent installations of brass rails in this district by the Newman Co. are those put into the Tivoli, Ascher's Roosevelt, Schubert's Hippodrome, the Biltmore, Barbee's Loop Theatre, the Brighton, Crown, State-Lake, Stratford, West Englewood and Portage Park.

Watterson R. Rothacker was in New York for the week of September 26th and then planned to run over to Atlantic City for a two days' conference. The middle of October, according to present plans, will find him on his way to the coast. Next back to Chicago, on to New York and over to London for a two weeks' stay in connection with the laboratory he will build there.

In appreciation of the steady support given him by his patrons during the last year, H. A. Arnold, manager and owner of the Colonial theatre, Colfax, Ill., arranged a treat for them last week in the shape of a band concert by the Bloomington Band of twenty-two pieces. Mr. Arnold had a band stand especially erected directly in front of his theatre for the occasion and as he had done some special advertising for Fox Week and the free concert, he did a splendid business.

The first Fall meeting of the directors of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Illinois was held at the headquarters of the organization, 910 S. Michigan Avenue, last week. President L. M. Rubens presided and practically every director was present. Business transacted included the election of William H. Cadoret, of Kankakee, as director to fill a vacancy on the board, and the passage of a resolution condemning the showing of pictures showing Roscoe Arbuckle or Virginia Rappe.

Denman Cruttenden, former Chicago newspaper man and recently publicity writer for the Paramount and Fox theatres in Detroit, is now handling publicity for Barbee's Loop Theatre. He recently was on the job for the Adams Theatre when that house opened.

Ben Beadell has made arrangements to distribute the Dempsey-Carpentier fight picture in Illinois and will make his Chicago headquarters at 738 S. Wabash Avenue.

D. M. Vandawalker, who recently has been handling the big special features for Fox Film Company in the central west, has resigned his position with Fox, and is for the present making his headquarters in Chicago.

Al Bernstein, Milwaukee branch manager for Famous Players-Lasky, is recovering from the recent operations on his tonsils, according to reports reaching Chicago's Paramount headquarters.

Country Sales Manager Eichenlaub, of First National, has added A. C. Fox to his staff of salesmen. Mr. Fox is well known around Chicago where he has been associated with the Fox Film Company for the past two years, and has many friends in Texas and Oklahoma, parts of which states he formerly covered for First National.

The two latest salesmen to become associated with Educationals' Chicago Exchange are Richard Salkin, who will travel the south side for Manager I. Maynard Schwartz, and R. S. Simon who will cover country territory.

Frank W. Fisher, of the Majestic Theatre, Madison, whose success since opening the house in April has created wide spread comment, attributes much of good business to the presentations, which have cost more than five thousand dollars since the house was opened. He will spend eight hundred dollars next week in putting on "The Affairs of Anatol," and is extremely liberal in his treatment of important pictures. The results obtained by the Majestic under his management are considered remarkable as the house only seats seven or eight hundred persons and the admission is but twenty-five cents.

Phil Dunas has resigned as manager of Hodkinson's Chicago Exchange. Mr. Dunas was exceptionally popular, both with exhibitor and exchange men during his long service with the Hodkinson organization. He at present is in New York and is expected to announce his new connections upon his return from the east in a few days.

The first of a series of bi-weekly luncheons was given by Ascher Brothers last week at the La Salle Hotel, the guests, who numbered twenty-five, being the department heads and managers of Ascher Brothers various Chicago theatres. It is planned to hold a similar get together meeting every two weeks hereafter, at which the managers of out-of-town theatres also will be present. Among the speakers at the meeting were General Manager Newhafer, Gus Greenebaum, manager of the real estate department E. L. Keller, auditor; Harry Beaumont, head of the booking department, and Publicity Director Bernstein. The meeting was very optimistic as the various managers reported an increase in business in the last few weeks of from forty to fifty percent and statements sent in by out of town theatres showed the same gratifying growth in attendance.

Superior Screen Service, Inc., has purchased the Doll-Van Film Exchange and will do all the distribution and handling of pictures heretofore distributed by Doll-Van. Negotiations are now on whereby the Superior Screen Service will take over two and possible three other independent exchanges at an early date, according to Manager Harry Weiss. Superior has moved its headquarters from Seventh Street to 738 S. Wabash Avenue where it occupies the entire first floor.

S. D. Chapman, formerly connected as a salesman with Famous Players-Lasky Pittsburgh exchange has arrived to take a similar position with that company's local exchange and will cover country territory. Mr. Chapman has made a fine record as a Paramount salesman and will be welcomed to the Chicago field.

Tom Mitchell has been added to the sales force of Superior Screen Service, Inc.

Carl Lesserman, son of Manager Lesserman, of Universal, has returned from a sales trip through northern Illinois with a big batch of contracts and it is the general comment in film row that the young man is a "chip of the old block."

Ralph Kettering has returned from French Lick where he has been enjoying a vacation for the past ten days. He reports that "The Three Musketeers" is going so strong at the Randolph that it probably will be held for at least two more months.

According to officials of Paramount's Chicago exchange, twenty theatres in the territory are playing "The Affairs of Anatol" for a full week, this being National Anatol Week. Following this special week, twenty prints will be working solid for three weeks in the territory.

Charles C. Burr, of Burr's Affiliated Distributors, Inc., of New York, was a Chicago visitor last week and while here screened "Burn 'em up Barnes," which is one of the best, if not the best, thing that Johnny Hines has done.

Edwin J. Mocsary is putting on some splendid presentations at the Stratford which are drawing good business to that house. Mr. Mocsary is living up to the high reputation he gained at the Rivoli in New York, and as manager of the Butterfly in Milwaukee, and is making a splendid record with the Chicago house.

Henry McRae, veteran director, has been making some pictures in Canada, stopped off for a visit to Universal's Chicago Exchange, on his way to California. Mr. McRae never neglects the opportunity of keeping up the friendships with Chicago Universal officials made when he was a director general for Universal at Universal City.

"No Woman Knows," the Universal Jewel production, which has been commented upon as a picture having remarkable heart interest, will open at Barbee's Theatre on October 2nd and from there be put into the Castle where it is expected to run for several weeks.

Richard Fox, Universal salesman, is back on the job after six weeks spent in the hospital as a result of injury sustained in an automobile accident. Mr. Fox was riding in a motor bus near La Salle, Illinois, when the vehicle stalled on a hill and started to run backwards. He succeeded in throwing two women passengers clear of the vehicle but was struck and internally injured when he attempted to jump himself.

Manager Brimmer has arranged for a pre view of Vitagraph's special feature, "The Son of Wallingford," at the Aryan Grotto on Wednesday, October 5th, at 11 A.M. A special musical setting will be rendered by an orchestra and invitations have been sent to Chicago exhibitors to attend.

Permanent officers were elected at the meeting held last week by the recently formed Chicago Film Board of Trade. Those elected are Cecil Maberry, president; Sid Goldman, F. B. Warren Corporation, vice-president; Edward Silverman, Select, treasurer, and I. R. Lesserman, Universal, temporary secretary. The directors include Clyde Eckhart, of Fox; Fred Aiken, of Superior Screen Service; Carl Harthill, of Reelcraft; Harry Willard, Realart, and Joe Friedman, of Celebrated. It was decided to hold a meeting every Friday.

Manager Lesserman, of Universal, has added two salesmen to his staff within the last few days. They are F. O. Neilson and Ben Edelman, both of whom have previously worked for Universal and are widely known to the trade in this territory.

Charles Goetz will continue to represent Associated Producers, whose pictures have been taken over by First National for distribution, and has removed his headquarters to the First National offices at 837 S. Wabash avenue.

The Commodore, a twelve hundred seat theatre, is under construction on the southwest corner of Irving Park Boulevard and Albany avenue, and it is the hope of Architects Henry L. Newhouse and F. N. Bernham to have the house ready for opening soon after the first of the year. It is reported that the Commodore Construction Company, its owners, of which V. C. Seaver is president, will start the erection of another theatre at an early date, plans already having been drawn.

According to Maurice L. Bein, architect, construction will begin on a new one-thousand-seat house at 1731-9 West Roosevelt Road, to be known as the Roosevelt Road Theatre, November 1st. The exterior will be granite and terra cotta and the estimated cost of the house is $175,000. Attorney Samuel Blair is representing the owners, whose names, as yet, have not been made public. It is understood that the men behind this project are forming a company and the Roosevelt Road Theatre will be the first of several which they contemplate erecting.

The International News Weekly was one of the features on the program at the opening of the Apollo theatre, the new Shubert Vaudeville house in the loop this week, and will be run as part of the program each week hereafter. Maurice Hellman, of Universal, is very much pleased over booking the news reel into this important down-town house.

Harry Reichenbach arrived in Chicago Monday to work with Walter Hill, Universal's local publicity expert, in exploiting "No Woman Knows," Universal's super special which is booked to open at Barbee's Loop theatre, Sunday, October 2nd. Watch for the fireworks.

Fred Weisenbach, formerly with Associated Producers, is now covering the south side territory for Superior Screen Service.

A. Teitel, expert film renovator, whose work has made him favorably known to the Chicago film trade for years, is about to open an office in Indianapolis and is in that city this week making final arrangements. Harry Teitel, who has been associated with A. Teitel in business for the past five years, will be in charge of the new office.

George Hopkinson, manager of the Hammond theatre, has the distinction of being the first exhibitor in the United States to book Pioneer's new series of two-reelers, "Peeps Into the Future," according to Manager Clyde Elliott, who states that these pictures are a distinct addition to any program.

Tom Mitchell has joined the sales staff of Progress and will cover Chicago territory for President Frank Zambrino. Mr. Mitchell, until recently, was associated with the Doll-Van Film Corporation, which was recently taken over by the Superior Screen Service.

Sales Manager Peters, of Pioneer, has recovered from his long siege of illness and is back at his desk. He expects to have the old pep and ginger back within a very short time.

A motion picture of Lyric theatre electric sign and its crown, the illuminated head of "Momus," with its six faces, was made last week, at the same time crowds in front of the theatre were photographed. The picture will be screened in each of the 65 Pantages vaudeville theatres in as many cities in the United States and Canada.

Los Angeles Threatened with Censorship; Producers Suggest Abandoning City

ACCORDING to a late wire from Los Angeles, the censorship agitation in that city has stirred up a veritable hornets' nest in the film capital. Suggestions have already been made by three prominent producing executives that the industry abandon Los Angeles as a producing center if a censorship ordinance is eventually adopted by the City Council. Curtailment of production is already in force in certain quarters as result of the agitation for censorship.

The report of the Welfare Committee recommending a censorship board of seven members has been adopted by the City Council. The vote stood two against and four in favor with three members absent. The Council has instructed its attorney to prepare an ordinance. A public hearing will be granted on the ordinance before it is finally introduced to the City Council for adoption.

The final hearing on the matter of a censorship ordinance for Los Angeles before the Welfare Committee's report was adopted was held on Tuesday of this week. The debate waged by both sides took up three hours, during which the business men of the city lined up against the reforming church workers. The Welfare Committee recommended a board of seven people consisting of three members from the film industry, three from the church circles, and one to be chosen by the mayor and the council to receive a salary of $2,100 annually. The other six members would "donate their time." Every possible effort is being made by the film interests to prevent the passage of the ordinance.

Metro has announced the discontinuance of production on the Coast. The Viola Dana company was about to start work on "Seein's Believing," but production has now been indefinitely postponed. George D. Baker, who was scheduled to make three additional pictures on the Coast, is being held in New York pending the outcome of the censorship controversy. On instructions received early this week from New York, plans for the erection of a one hundred thousand dollar enclosed studio and Buster Keaton plant have been delayed indefinitely.

Abraham Lehr of the Goldwyn organization states that the production activities of his company on the Coast will be curtailed if the ordinance is passed. Charles Eyton, general manager of Famous Players-Lasky, Irving Thalberg of Universal, Ben Hampton of Federal Productions, and Frank Garbutt of Realart issued statements during the past week pointing out the advisability of the industry leaving Los Angeles. Officers of the Producers' Association express their confidence that the proposed ordinance will not become a law.

EXHIBITORS' REPORTS ON NEW RELEASE

What the Big Houses Say

EARLY RETURNS FROM WEEK RUN THEATER

GOLDWYN

The Old Nest—

Excellent picture and so stated by all who saw it. But has not been a good box office attraction, due perhaps in a measure, of same following "Over the Hill." Personally believe it is the best picture Goldwyn has ever offered. (West.)

On its second week and still going good. The best drawing card in several months. (Middle West.)

Came direct to my house from week run at the biggest house in town—and cleaned up another week. The biggest and finest audience picture in two years—conservatively. (East.)

Good business on second week of run. (East.)

Good picaure. Good business (Middle West.)

Business still going good on third week of run. Great picture. (West.)

Wonderful, appealing, and a big business picture. Went over big. (West.)

Beating the Game—

Splendid light entertainment. Good cast and good direction. Audiences well pleased. (West.)

Interesting new twist to old story, well acted and well directed. Opened to nice business which held up consistently. (Middle West.)

Fine picture which pleased my patrons and drew well. (West.)

FAMOUS PLAYERS

Affairs of Anatol—

Picture did big business to the end of its two weeks' run. Wallace Reid gives excellent portrayal of hero. (East.)

Played to capacity houses daily thruout first week, and despite fact that an extra show was run each day, hundreds were turned away. Broke all house records. Probably the biggest attraction ever played in this city. Held for second week. (Middle West.)

Great—a real hit. Had to stop selling tickets for almost every performance. (Middle West.)

A wonderful production, one of the best offered this year. Was sure fire attraction at my house. Capacity houses. (West.)

Experience—

A disappointment. Beautifully produced but a good many people thought it was a hokum. Fair business. (Middle West.)

Wonderful production, but not so good as far as box office value is concerned, as we had only average business the first few days and poor box office receipts for the rest of the week. (Middle West.)

Good business on second week of run. (East.)

Passing Thru—

Great. Not much plot or story, but Doug MacLean won 'em all over. Star is supremely popular with my folks. (East.)

Excellent. Well rounded out. Pleased mightily. (East.)

Excellent feature which played to good business. (Middle West.)

The Hell Diggers—

Fairly good picture, with plenty of action. Attracted the usual Wallace Reid fans. (Middle West.)

Typically Wally Reid picture with lots of action and sustained interest. Went over big. (Middle West.)

Cappy Ricks—

Very well liked. Uncommon turns went well. Receipts pleasing. (East.)

Fine business on this picture. Very good entertainment. (West.)

The Mystery Road—

About the poorest Paramount, in point of interest and to the audience, that I have played in a long time. It was a mystery all right—had everybody mystified. (East.)

The Whistle—

Old fashioned, but sincere and humanly interesting. Fair business. (Middle West.)

Beyond—

Did fair business. Fine picture. (East.)

The Great Moment—

Great picture. Did fine business. (West.)

At the End of the World—

Fine picture; did good business. Betty Compson the drawing card. (West.)

Footlights—

Elsie Ferguson's best; did fine business. (West.)

FIRST NATIONAL

The Child Thou Gavest Me—

Very well liked, but not much of a drawing card at the first of the week. Business grew every day, however, as word was passed by those who saw the picture. Women especially were pleased with it. (Middle West.)

Good picture featured by the acting of child player which made a hit with crowd. Good box office attraction. (Middle West.)

Patrons liked this one and it did a good week's business. (Middle West.)

Great feature and little Richard Headrick with his fine acting helped make it a hit. Business was fine during run. (West.)

The Kid—

Wonderful business at two houses simultaneously. Best Chaplin ever made. (Middle West.)

Mama's Affair—

While picture is only fair, the star has plenty of chance to show her ability and charm her audience. Business good. (East.)

Scrap Iron—

Fair amount of business. Shows star in something of a new role. (East.)

The Idle Class—

Not up to some of Chaplin's previous efforts, but the picture contains plenty of laughs, and drew record business. (Middle West.)

Playthings of Destiny—

A splendid picture. Both the plot and the acting far beyond the average, held the attention grippingly, comment favorable and business good. (South.)

Scrambled Wives—

Not as good as star's better work, yet went over nicely. (East.)

Nobody—

Not so good. Audience a little bored. Picture about fair. (East.)

Serenade—

Head and shoulders over other Walsh productions, and pleased. (East.)

Sowing the Wind—

Very good picture which brought more than usual business. (West.)

Stranger Than Fiction—

METRO

Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse—

Weakened perceptibly in the sixth week of its run. Acclaimed a wonderful picture but much criticism of its gloomy nature is heard. (Middle West.)

Third week to big business and unusually pleased audiences. (West.)

Extra big business with a vanced prices, great picture, one the best offerings of the yea (West.)

Camille—

Much better than Nazimova's la two productions and proved a go box office attraction at this hous (Middle West.)

The Little Fool—

Trip to Paradise—

Fine picture with more th usual business. (West.)

Hearts Are Trumps—

Fair picture which brought t usual business. (West.)

Fine Feathers—

Ordinary picture; added attra tion put it across. (West.)

REALART

The Land of Hope—

This picture made a fairly go showing with us. Alice Brady h a right good following among lo motion picture fans. Business w fair. (South.)

Don't Call Me Little Girl—

As a play and business propo tion—only mediocre. (East.)

The March Hare—

Very good picture. Miss Dani grows increasingly popular in t city. (Middle West.)

Good entertainment; good au ence picture. Miss Daniels very promising future. (West.)

Little Italy—

Only a poor fair, with similar ceipts. (East.)

SELZNICK

Handcuffs or Kisses—

Splendid business. A good p ture. (Middle West.)

Divorce of Convenience—

Fairly good picture, but nothi above the average; at least, s was the trend of our fans' comme (South.)

Greater Than Love—

Too improbable. Fair busine (Middle West.)

AND HIS WONDER HORSE "TONY" IN

"THE NIGHT HORSEMEN"

As the wild geese flew, so went Whistling Dan, his horse and his dog, into the wilderness. But his wild nature was tamed in the crucible of love.

Here is the "Big Punch," the thrills, the humor and the virile red-bloodedness of the big outdoors you always expect and always see, in Mix pictures.

Ballyhoo Used to Put Over "Married Life"

Publicity Director, R. A. Boone, of the Bijou and Victory theatres, Greensboro, N. C., is strong for ballyhoos, particularly in featuring comedies. The accompanying picture shows the one he used on "Married Life." He exploited the latter as a "war picture," and having been on the stage himself, made a big hit on the streets as Ben Turpin, crossed eyes and all, while his girl usher and the banner-covered baby-buggy filled out the idea. Two buggies were used in the lobby also.

Illustrating the ballyhoo which P. A. Boone, manager of the Bijou and Victory theatres, Greensboro, N. C., recently used to exploit, "Married Life"

Schade Theatre Stunt Startles Sandusky Residents

The red imprint of a hand on a ragged piece of badly soiled white paper excited a lot of talk in Sandusky, O., not long since.

The "Sign"—for that's what the authorities, the newspapers and the public generally termed it—was discovered one morning bright and early, by a watchman in making his rounds, on the main door of the entrance to the Schade Theatre, almost opposite the Sandusky city hall.

The women's organizations of Sandusky just about that time, were "demanding" pictures that were "more elevating."

George J. Schade, owner and manager of the Schade Theatre, had just been put forth as a candidate for the Sandusky City Commission—governing under a recently enacted charter—by a following that for some time had been demanding a "clean-up."

Certain motion picture interests which, he charged, "tried to hold me up," had been exposed by Schade in a statement over his signature.

There was any number of possible—if not probable—reasons why the "sign" had been placed and press and public made much of them. Then, one day, there appeared in front of The Schade, the announcement.

"Coming: 'The Sign on the Door'—A First National Attraction."

The newspapers had to explain and their explanations kept the public busy explaining.

"Old Nest" Plays Omaha Theatres, Day and Date

Presenting the same photoplay simultaneously in two theatres in a city is rare, even in theatrical circles in Omaha.

The Sun and Moon theatres played similar programs last week in that city. "The Old Nest" is being featured. The musical program at both theatres is the same, as also are the lobbies of both theatre decorated along similar lines. Four truck loads of oak leaves and branches were used in the display. Entering either the Sun or the Moon theatres, one virtually left the downtown district and stepped into "the woods." The ceiling and walls of both theatres were a mass of foliage. The lights were a dark blue, giving one the impression of moonlight in a forest. In front of the entrance to the theatres were miniature sets of an old home. Above the doors was inscribed the words: "East, West, Home's Best." The atmosphere of the lobbies of the Sun and Moon theatres corresponded in every detail with the scenes that a person sees in "The Old Nest."

R. S. Ballantyne, manager of the Moon theatre, had charge of the musical settings and presentations. N. N. Frudenfeld, publicity director of the Sun, Moon and Muse theatres, had charge of the lobby decorations in both theatres.

Animated Cut-out Used for "Foolish Matrons"

When "The Foolish Matrons" played the Olympic theatre, Wichita Falls, Tex., Robert Sparks, publicity director, devised an exploitation stunt in the form of three beaverboard cut-outs of ladies with chiffon wings, that got the attention of the public and brought excellent results.

The chiffon wings danced merrily in a breeze furnished by the theatre's typhoon fan system.

Mackenzie Holds "Tin Can" Show

J. Greene Mackenzie managing the Picture House at Atlanta, Mo., is one of the latest additions to the number who have tried out the "tin can" show with satisfactory results.

In a town so small that only one picture house is needed to corral all the picture business, a dozen or so youngsters collected 4,792 tin cans of various sizes and shapes and the total made a lobby display that got the attention of everybody in the village.

Mr. Mackenzie advises that cans that had been on the back yard scrap heap were dug up and carted to the theatre for the event.

Mr. Mackenzie made a contest out of the can collecting stunt and the boys had the time of their lives winning the prizes.

Kane Sells "Highest Law Through Schools

When Manager Robert Kane of the F Art theatre, Lockport, N. Y., put on "T Highest Law," in which Ralph Ince a pears as Lincoln, he aroused much inter in his town through an excellent exploit tion campaign, in which he was assist by "Andy" Sharick of the Buffalo Sel office staff.

Bulletins and announcements were se to the second grade schools and two hi schools. Four hundred letters were se to the Boy Scouts of the town, informi them that the picture was based on t Scout laws and the sayings of the Gr Emancipator. In order to heighten t interest among the scouts Mr. Kane al booked a Bob and Bill picture. The were several window displays in book a drug stores. A tie-up with the Kodak w put over in one window, cards telling th the black and white photos in the wind from "The Highest Law," were taken w a Kodak. A hundred feet of film was a placed in the window, informing the pu lic that the celluloid was cut from the p ture and explaining the use of the sprocl holes and other technicalities of proj tion. Mr. Kane put the picture on duri an unusually hot spell, but announced th record business resulted from his ca paign.

Amateur Poets Compe at Niagara Falls

D. H. Finke aroused a lot of interest Niagara Falls, N. Y., recently when conducted a Limerick test among school children there. Mr. Finke, wh manager of the new Bellevue theatre the Cataract City, offered money pri of ten, five and ten one dollar bills tickets of admission to the winners. Al Watson, a high school student, won $10. The stunt also brought a lot of f publicity in the Niagara Falls newspap

Rosenthal Admits Half Century Mothers Free

Manager Rosenthal of Allen's Capitol theatre, Cleveland, enlisted the interest of every woman in the vicinity of his theatre last week by a box inserted in the Cleveland Plain Dealer which explained that a coupon attached to the notice would entitle any mother over forty-seven years of age, to see his current attraction "Mother O' Mine" free.

The notice in the newspaper cost Rosenthal very little, in comparison to the word of mouth advertising it created. He had over a hundred mothers acknowledge their forty-seven years and take advantage of the offer of free admission. Also the daughters and granddaughters, all of whom hope to be in the mother-class some day, were interested in seeing what it was all about, and the result was a most satisfactory engagement of the feature during one of the hot spells.

Horse in Lobby Advertises Mix Pictures

Manager George Schmidt, of the Strand theatre, Atlanta, went the "life-sized cut-out" stunt one better last week, when he stabled a real live horse in his lobby, for certain hours of the day, as exploitation "After Your Own Heart."

The lobby of the Strand is small for this purpose, but a sort of stall was built of railings, and covered with hay, to a depth of about six or seven inches. The horse stood in this enclosure, saddled and bridled—and a great deal of space was given, both in the advertising and in the free "reader" to the fact that this was really and truly one of Tom Mix's own saddles and that it cost more than six hundred dollars—also that it had been used in several of Mix's pictures.

The horse came in for a large amount of attention from admirers of the star, but the saddle received even more. A "cowboy," in plain leather chaps, a khaki shirt and Stetson hat, who could roll a cigarette with one hand, and strike a match with his thumbnail, was also in the lobby, answering the questions of the swarm of small boys who filled the lobby all day. Though it was an excellent stunt, it was a relatively inexpensive one, and brought in good business.

Garbs Ushers as Ghosts for "Midnight Bell"

When Herb Johnson, of the Luna Theatre, Lafayette, Ind., summoned the throngs to his playhouse with the sonorous and unheralded tolling of a bell, only half of a very weird exploitation innovation is detailed. The solemn ding-dong, ding-dong was sufficient in itself to sound a hint of what might be expected to follow but the real surprise awaited the crowds after their entrance in the theatre, where they were met by a ghostlike figure serving as usher.

The stunts were used with the run of Charles Ray in "A Midnight Bell."

Irish Castle Front Attracts Atlanta Fans

Manager Chrysline, of the Rialto Theatre, Augusta, recently built up the front of a moth-eaten Irish castle, for a showing of "Room and Board" that was most effective.

Only the back door and back walls of the castle were shown, as the star plays a "maid" in the picture and the back door was in keeping with this character.

The walls were somewhat moldy looking, as if stained with time; ivy grew over one side of it, and the wide low windows sported thriving window-boxes full of growing plants. One entered the theatre through the narrow little back-door. No attempt was made on the inside to carry out the spirit of the front.

Across the top of the back door was a plainly lettered sign, black letters on a narrow white background which read "Room and Board." Inside the window on the left could be seen a cut-out of the star defending herself from the heavy; on the right, through the window she could be seen, in her maid's uniform flirting with the hero. Other than these, there were no posters out front. But through the doorway there were ones, and threes and the usual lobby-frames of stills.

Cut-outs Basis of Novel Exploitation Stunt

For the showing of "A Divorce of Convenience," at the Forsyth Theatre, recently, Manager Irwin had a large cut-out made and mounted, from a twenty-four sheet. The cut-out showed Owen Moore being laced into an excessively tight feminine corset.

The pictured corset was cut away from the cut-out, and a real corset was inserted in the space. Real strings were placed in the hands of the girl who was "lacing" the star, and the little oddity attracted considerable attention and amusement throughout the three days' run.

Dixon Uses "Cinderella Slipper" Idea on "Gypsy Blood"

Harry Dixon of the Star theatre, Buffalo, put over some good stunts recently when he presented "Gypsy Blood." Mr. Dixon arranged with a neighborhood shoe store to place a pair of slippers in the window, with a card in front of them conveying the information that to every young lady finding the slippers fitting her exactly ten tickets would be given free. Four young women won ten tickets each.

Harry also gave out small bottles of red perfume, labeled "Gypsy Blood. At Star Theatre."

Telegrams Sent from Lo by During "Old Nest" Showing

A unique and effective lobby stunt the showing of the "Old Nest" at Palace theatre, Fort Worth, Texas, w the installation in the lobby of a desk w a telegraph instrument by one of the te graph companies.

An operator was assigned to duty at new office while the showing of the pict was in progress.

The stunt proved one of the most eff tive lobby displays ever pulled in F Worth. Hundreds of messages to mot were telegraphed by men and women i mediately after seeing the picture screen in the theatre. And crowds of pers were attracted into the lobby by the usual sight of a telegraph instrum clicking in a theatre. Not only was "T Old Nest" exploited in a novel and m effective way by the stunt but the te graph company which assigned an ope tor and instrument to the theatre profi greatly through its co-operation.

Illinois State Register Aids "Reputation"

Engel and Roper Sell Springfield, Ill., Newspaper Cooperative Exploitation Idea

MANAGER LOPER of the Lyric theatre, Springfield, Ill., with the assistance of Exploitation Director Maurice Engel, working out of the St. Louis office of Universal, executed a publicity campaign which netted several pages of newspaper advertising on consecutive days and resulted in recording breaking popular attendance. The stunt was in connection with "Reputation" and the success was remarkable not only in view of the strengthened box office receipts but also in view of the fact that the Lyric ordinarily runs a change of program three times a week and was compelled to hold "Reputation" for an entire week.

With the assistance of Engel, Loper induced the Illinois State Register, the leading evening daily, to carry an advertising solicitation among the merchants of Springfield offering to sell small space ads with full-page space advantage. It was done in this way. The Lyric guaranteed to take an eighth-page display in the center of the page for "Reputation"; the other merchants were to buy the remaining space but as the ads were to be tied together with the trend of the word "Reputation," it afforded better display. When the newspaper finally agreed to this procedure, they found it necessary to first popularize the word "reputation" which also is the name of the film feature.

Then Engel stepped in and offered to concoct a fan test for the readers of the newspaper.

The test offered the Register was as follows. A story written concerning Priscilla Dean (by Engel, incidentally) was to feature her rapid rise in filmdom. Every now and then in the newspaper story a letter was omitted from a word in such a sequence as to make the words "Priscilla Dean in Reputation at the Lyric Theatre." The Register offered two tickets to the first fifty persons who sent into the offices of the Register the correct answer; to the next 150 one ticket was offered. More than 5000 answers were the result. This was good advertising talk to the prospective advertiser and the whole thing was actually benefiting the Lyric most of all.

The success of the newspaper's end of the agreement was so great and the merchants were so satisfied that the page of Reputation advertisements were repeated for seven days prior to the picture's showing.

After the first two days of the campaign on the part of the Register, the Illinois State Journal, the morning newspaper, followed suit that it might cash in on the success of the scheme. The test which Engel constructed for the Journal upon request was just a trifle different from the other. Three dollars in merchandise was offered by the advertising merchants to readers who wrote the best essay on what reputation meant to the selling of commodities.

The heading over the advertisement pages read in both newspapers: "What is your Reputation worth?"

"You can get all the newspaper publicity free if you go about it in the manner which will benefit the newspaper as much as yourself," declared Loper. "It's not so hard."

Audiences Invited to Review Picture

Inviting its audience to provide criticisms to be published in a local newspaper proved a great drawing attraction for the Rialto theatre in El Paso, Texas, during the week's engagement of "Mother o' Mine."

James E. Quinn, manager of the theatre took a scrap book of the very favorable reviews which the picture has received in various parts of the country and went to the office of the El Paso Herald and there sold the paper a proposition based upon written reviews, with prizes to be awarded by the theatre.

The first prize decided upon was a round trip ticket to Los Angeles with a letter of introduction to Thomas H. Ince, assuring the winner of a trip to the studio. The second prize was a thirty days' pass to the theatre. Nine other prizes or passes, good for two weeks each were also given.

The two weeks prior to the opening of the picture, the Herald ran a two column box on the front page giving the details of the contest and in other ways boosting its popularity.

Local Fur Dealer Aids in Advertising "Blue Fox" Serial

For the opening of the new serial, "The Blue Fox," at the Vaudette theatre, Atlanta, Manager Walsh arranged a tie-up with a local fur dealer, whereby the lobby was decorated with some really magnificent furs.

The center of the lobby was held by a startlingly lifelike stuffed group of animals—a "blue fox" beset by two or three other wild beasts, and making a most spectacular fight for their lives.

"Action" Exploitation Effective at Atlanta

Manager James F. Jackson, of the Tudor Theatre, Atlanta, recently used a simple but excellent bit of exploitation on "Action," which carried out the title of the picture, as well as called attention to the star.

On a huge circle of pale blue cardboard, the star's face, cut from a three-sheet, was mounted. All around this circle was a large circle on which the galloping figures of horsemen could be seen. This second circle which surrounded the smaller circle, revolved swiftly, giving the impression of great speed—"Action."

Since managers figure that a display which moves attracts twice as much attention as one that stands still, and remains inert, such simple things as Manager Jackson has tried out, have proven quite effective and this was no exception.

Circle Theatre Celebrates Anniversary

Exploitation Campaign for "The Sign on the Door" Sets New Indianapolis Standard

"THE Sign on the Door" played the Circle theatre, Indianapolis for the week in which the fifth anniversary of the theatre was celebrated, and for which one of the most extensive exploitation campaigns ever carried out in Indianapolis, was planned and executed.

The campaign was started a week in advance with a series of small notices in the Indianapolis newspapers. Then hundred special window cards were distributed through the downtown dis-

Following this a huge sign was made which measured more than six feet in length and six feet in height, which was placed along the top of a main street building. The building above the sign was decorated with toy balloons and other things which attracted considerable attention. One of the largest electric signs in the city is just opposite this sign across the street, and it could be read at night as well as in the daytime.

The lobby and the inside of the theatre was dressed in gala fashion.

The Indianapolis News, which always has refused to run a co-operative advertisement, agreed on this particular occasion to co-operate in every possible way. A full page was reserved, with the Circle's advertisement running entirely across the page and dropping down in the center page, thereby really giving them the benefit of the entire page.

Other concerns, which had helped in the building of the theatre, placed advertisements to fill out the page.

In addition to this the Circle distributed more than three hundred special one-sheets, which were done in beautiful colors, in windows along all the street car lines leading into the downtown district. This has proved to be one of the best mediums of advertising the Circle has ever adopted.

The Circle News Extra, an enlarged edition of the regular Circle house organ, was made up for the Anniversary week. It was made in the form of a miniature newspaper, five columns in width and proportionately deep. It carried all the details of the Anniversary week program as well as full page advertisements for coming attractions. These were placed in the stores and other places where people congregate, and in a container in front of the theatre.

Although 20,000 of these were made up 6,000 of them were gone before Monday for the opening. Of course the regular Circle News was gotten out also.

The Circle has found a convenient way of distributing their regular house organs, which should prove profitable to other exhibitors. Twenty-five small mahogany containers were placed in neighborhood stores throughout the city, with about two hundred copies of the house organ in each

The new house organs are distributed among the stores each week, and very few ever are left from the week before. The Circle distributes 10,000 of these for each change of program and they are proving exceedingly valuable as an exploitation medium.

A souvenir of Anniversary week also was distributed to all the patrons of the theatre.

The Anniversary week pageant was a colorful presentation, with Oriental dancing featuring the entertainment. A three-year-old dancer, "broke up the show," when she appeared as a dancing girl of the Moroccan harems. The dancing arrangements were made by Miss Gertrude Hacker, the pageant was staged and directed by W. Hurley Ashby, art director of the Circle and Rudolf Kafka, director of the Circle orchestra, arranged the musical setting.

Donn McElwaine, exploiteer for Associated First National Pictures of Indiana, and advertising manager of the Circle, handled the advertising and exploitation.

Meyer's "Old Nest" Advertising Is Unique

Among the exhibitors who are giving "The Old Nest" extra efforts in the way of exploitation is Fred S. Meyer, manager of the Palace theatre, Hamilton, O.

Mr. Meyer's campaign was novel and unique. It was a "personal message" stunt conducted in the newspapers in which boxed ads directed to various well known Hamiltonians were printed. To a prominent preacher this was the "message" used: "By means of preaching the message of Kingdom Come via Wireless you've done wonders. But even your most powerful sermon must take a back seat when compared to 'The Old Nest.'" Another "message" directed to a Hamilton resident evidently well known but not a theatre goer, read as follows: "If truth were known, we doubt if you have seen a dozen motion pictures in your whole life. This is all the more reason why you simply must see 'The Old Nest.'"

Other ads equally unique; ten in all were used. The mayor of the city, the head of the public school system, the president of the Chamber of Commerce, the county judge, and other important people of Hamilton were addressed. The campaign was extended over a ten day period, a different ad appearing each day. The displays were all one column wide, varied in depth from five to six inches and were uniform in style of set up.

A double column ad in type extolling the merits of the picture was carried for three days.

The result of the campaign was fine business and especially from a class of people that is not often attracted to the theatre by the ordinary picture advertised in an ordinary way.

Elaborate Lobby Front Built at Ottawa

For the presentation of "Without Benefit of Clergy" at the Regent Theatre, Ottawa, Manager J. T. Moxley presented an unusual decorative stunt that attracted much attention. The whole of the entrance marquee was used for the construction of a Hindu city in miniature, mosques, domes, towers and dwellings being shown in cutout form. These were painted in bright and varied colors, the whole layout proving to be very attractive.

Koplar Gets Out Elaborate Exploitation Booklet

Harry Koplar executed a bit of unique exploitation in connection with "Fine Feathers" at the Pershing Theatre, the largest of his string of twelve St. Louis houses.

Koplar printed 5000 eight-page pamphlets on the cover of which appeared the title, "What I Know About Women." The next six pages were blank and on the back cover appeared "A Secret??" The booklets were distributed among the residents in the Pershing district and attracted an unusually large attendance.

Large canvas banners were placed in conspicuous places on the lobby front and about the streets for several blocks leading to the theatre. The result of this very inexpensive advertising campaign brought many paid admissions which otherwise would not have been spent due to the exceedingly warm weather.

Nesbitt Puts Over Big Campaign for "The Kid"

Earle S. Nesbitt, manager of the Linwood theatre, Tarkio, Mo., whose exploitation deeds have been frequently recorded in the NEWS, has recently successfully completed a campaign for "The Kid."

Mr. Nesbitt selected the first three days of September for his engagement, and started his exploitation campaign with a teaser 24-sheet ad, reading "Kid Days Are Coming."

To this was added from time to time the date lines, information about the picture and local merchants ads as shown by the accompanying cut.

Mr. Nesbitt's next step was to sell a co-operative double-page spread in the local paper to Tarkio merchants in such a manner that the picture advertising dominated the display, but the merchants paid the bill. In addition to the space in the double-truck the merchants were also given a place on "The Kid" 24-sheet stand. A co-operative window display was arranged and the Linwood advertised the merchants' wares by slides. "It was a complete tie-up all around," writes Mr. Nesbitt, "and created talk that brought business in spite of competition in the shape of heat and a carnival playing that week.

"Horseshoe Show" Pulled with Usual Results

The "horse shoe" show described so many times in these columns that the stunt is familiar was used by Joseph M. Shverha, manager of the Rialto theatre, Lewistown, Pa., as exploitation for his showing of "Seven Years Bad Luck."

Mr. Shverha inserted an advertisement in the local newspapers offering free admission to any person who presented a horse shoe at the door. No sooner had the offer been published than the hunt for horse shoes began.

On one evening 214 men, women and children presented horse shoes and were admitted free. This number was considered remarkable in view of the fact that the total population of Lewistown is 9,849.

Jackie Coogan Imitators Help Browne

Harry E. Browne, the manager of the T. & D. theatre, San Jose, California, i utilizing the Jackie Coogan Kid doll i exploitation work for "Peck's Bad Boy." He explains here how he tied the picture to the doll:

"I had a large window display v these dolls prominently displayed with pictures taken from the 11 x 14 photos 'Peck's Bad Boy' the window display being in a store on a prominent corner i San Jose. I persuaded this store to donate one of the dolls to me, giving it as a prize for the best impersonation of Jackie Coogan as he appears in this picture, the children to appear at the theatre Saturday morning and from these children, the winner would be picked.

"This aroused a great deal of interes among the children and also among the parents. We got the benefit of all the children on the street in costume and also the mouth-to-mouth advertising concerning the dolls.

"I also persuaded a shoe store to put in a window display of 'Kid' shoes, called the Jackie Coogan play shoe. This window display also signed up with photographs of 'Peck's Bad Boy' and this shoeman also donated a pair of shoes as an additional prize for the best child i personator of Jackie Coogan."

Raleigh Tries the Series Idea

A. C. Raleigh, manager of the Columbia theatre, Portland, Ore., has grabbed a page from the producers' experiences in selling pictures in series and especially from First National's campaign on the "Big Five," in an exploitation scheme to sell, "The Great Moment," "The Old Nest," "The Affairs of Annatol" and "The Child Thou Gavest Me."

Raleigh's plan was to label the pictures "Big Four" and to sell them to his patrons as a series. The city was plastered with three sheets on which was a huge figure 4 as shown by the accompanying cut.

On the cross piece of the figure was the word "big." No inkling of what the "Big Four" pertained to, or its reason for being was given. During a week the unexplained "Big Four" remained posted in 750 places about the city.

Towards the end of that time, an energetic automobile man decided to capitalize the teaser ad and presented to the four Portland newspapers display advertising in which a comparitively new four cylinder car was exploited. The newspapers were in on the secret and refused to accept the copy.

A series of slides were prepared. Each Jensen and Von Herberg theatre in Portland, cooperated with the Columbia campaign during the preliminary week by running a slide of the "Big Four." Then during the second week when direct newspaper advertising connected the name of the four productions stressing "The Great Moment" as the first and as the current picture, the Columbia ran other slides. During the time taken for exhibition of the four photoplays these slides will be kept on the Columbia screen so that the public will continue to think of the pictures as a group or series.

Cuts of every size, one, two and three columns, were made of the "Big Four" sign.

Isis Theatre, Milwaukee, Does Things for "Scrap Iron"

Ads in the Grand Rapids, Mich. papers announcing that "Scrap Iron Johnny Steele" and "Battling Burke" would stage a fight bout at a local gymnasium got the Grand Rapids public, fight fans and anti's alike, all excited recently and as teaser ads for the forthcoming engagement of "Scrap Iron" booked for J. W. Goodspeed's Isis theatre, worked wonders in exciting curiosity to see the picture.

For a nominal sum, publicity director of the Isis, Harold Heffernan and Manager Goodspeed obtained the services of a welter weight boxer of state repute, put a mask over his eyes and paraded him about the city as "Scrap Iron Johnny Steele."

Large banners called attention to the coming fight with "Battling Burke," while the local fighter was driven about the main streets in a closed car, bearing similar banners.

"Scrap Iron" Johnny kept up his workouts all week, meeting various local boxers and keeping his secret well under cover. The fact that few were bound to get under the secret only caused more word of mouth advertising.

One of the features of the newspaper campaign was a series of personal ads, challenging Ed. Dickerson, sporting editor of The Herald to pick the winner of the "Scrap Iron" Steele vs. Battling Burke bout and offering him a prize of $100 if he succeeded. This was made all the more impressive because the sporting editor addressed has a reputation for picking the winners and the winning round of big fights. Grand Rapids sport fans swear by him, so the direct communications in the form of challenges to him were all the more effective.

The "Scrap Iron" Johnny Steele impostor was obtained for a matter of $55.00, while the car that drove him around the city cost only $15.00.

WHAT THE MAKERS SAY ABOUT PICTURE

Randolph Lewis Is Back with Kipling Script

RUDYARD KIPLING has prepared another script for the screen. It is titled, "The Gate of the Hundred Sorrows." Randolph Lewis of the Pathe organization arrived in New York with the new Kipling script on Sunday, September 18th. As in the case of the first Kipling story for the screen, "Without Benefit of Clergy," Mr. Lewis went to England some time ago to assist Mr. Kipling in preparing the new script.

Mr. Lewis declares that Rudyard Kipling's entry into the field of screen writers has created quite a stir in the highest literary circles of Great Britain and has broken down the last vestige of prejudice against the screen among the foremost writers of the day and their followers.

Marvelous Dog Feature of "The Silent Call"

"The Silent Call," which is an H. O. Davis production, has been completed and prints will shortly be in the hands of Associated First National Pictures for distribution. A feature of this picture is said to be the wonderful work of "Strongheart," the prize German police dog. The picture is based on the Saturday Evening Post story, "The Cross Pull," by Hal G. Evarts. The story also has had a wide circulation in novel form.

The picture was directed by Laurence Trimble and Jane Murfin. Miss Murfin adapted the story for the screen. The cast includes such well-known players as John Bowers, Katherine McGuire, William Dyer, Robert Bolder, Nelson McDowell, and James Mason.

Goldwyn Sport Film Is Named Sport Review

Goldwyn announces that its short sport film, to be released every other week alternately with Goldwyn Graphic, will be called The Sport Review instead of The Sportlight.

The Sport Review is edited by Grantland Rice and produced by Town & Country Films, Inc. There will be twenty-six of them a year. The first one released is devoted to "Speed" and shows the development of speed in sport circles from the trotting horse to the speedboat, the racing automobile and the airplane.

New Hodkinson Sales Plan

Offers 21 Features in Interchangeable Groups of 6 Each

WHAT is claimed to be an innovation in selling pictures has just gone out to the Exhibitors of the country from the Hodkinson offices.

It consists of a broadside labeled "Five Sure Cures for the Box-Office Blues!" and offers twenty-one Hodkinson-Tested pictures arranged in five interchangeable groups of six pictures each. According to the statement made in the folder, these pictures are offered in groups at a special introductory price as a preliminary to the opening of the Hodkinson Branch Exchanges on November 1st.

Hodkinson calls this group offer his "Club-Breakfast Plan," in that selection is made easy and service immediate. In explaining the plan to the Exhibitors, he says:

"As a result of the Independence Month message which we sent to the exhibitors of America a few weeks ago, hundreds of requests have reached our offices for selected groups of Hodkinson Merit-Tested Pictures, which could be offered exhibitors at a group price.

"It is obvious that we can make the Exhibitor a better price on six pictures than we can quote on one picture. It is the best and most economical way for the Exhibitor to buy his product, especially where the groups are so arranged as to be interchangeable.

"To meet this demand, we have assembled twenty-one of the best pictures we have ever distributed, and these features are offered in five groups of six pictures each, at the lowest price ever quoted on films of equal quality.

"These groups are interchangeable. So long as your order calls for six pictures, you can make substitutions from other groups, to eliminate pictures you have played. We have grouped them only for your convenience, and because of the exhibition value represented in the individual groups."

Revivals in Big Houses

Selznick Reports Talmadge Pictures Booked by Large Circuits

THAT good pictures do not lose their vitality or cease to draw as box-office magnets when revived has been conclusively proven, according to Sam E. Morris, General Manager of Select Exchanges, who has compiled definite data from the records of the various branches. It will be recalled that four Talmadge revivals were released by Select this Spring and Summer and it was upon the record established by these four productions that Lewis J. Selznick based his decision to release six Norma and six Constance Talmadge subjects during the ensuing year as units in the "Forty From Selznick" that have been announced.

Sam Morris has caused to be compiled the record of first-run houses in the cities throughout the country where "Panthea," "Ghosts of Yesterday," "Up the Road with Sallie" and "The Moth" have been played since "Panthea," the first of the Talmadge revivals, was released about six months ago. Select's contract department has gone over the lists and rendered a report that names hundreds of the best theatres in the largest communities where revivals have been played full-time and handled exactly similar to the advertising and promotion procedure with new offerings.

Some of the larger circuits that have played Talmadge revivals include Loews, Pantages and Polis where Norma and Constance have appeared in the pictures they made two or three years ago and have been an adjunct to vaudeville in the same measure that the newer releases are programmed. The presence of revivals among offerings in the largest of straight motion picture theatres is declared by Mr. Morris to justify the claim that really good pictures never grow old but always have appeal to the ever-growing clientele the screen is attracting.

Picture showmen in smaller communities, who are in a measure guided by the booking in first-run houses of the larger centers, will be interested, it is believed, in this announcement.

Need Scenario Team-Work

Elmer Harris Says Co-operation of Scenarists Makes for Sure Success

"SCENARIO co-operation!" That's what Elmer Harris, Realart's supervising director, holds to be responsible for the success of the West Coast Realart pictures in the last six months. Mr. Harris is now in the East on a belated vacation. Mr. Harris explained his scheme of scenario co-operation as follows:

"Twice each day every writer on the staff is called into consultation. And one by one the various stories are taken up.

"There was a time when writers were timid about discussing their plots with other writers. But we have developed beyond that here; grown to a place where each one welcomes intelligent, constructive criticism, and is prepared to give it in kind.

"The finished scenario bears the name of the writer who did the actual, complete labor. But it bears in it something of at least eight or ten different people—all of whom have done something to polish it off.

"Here was my idea in establishing the idea of Co-operative Photoplays. Every one you may add to a writing staff has some distinctive ability. It may be, in one, a 'flair' for comedy; in others pathos, drama, charm, color, etc.

"While one man may top the whole staff for drama, for tense, gripping situations, he may be only average in his conception of comedy or the other elements of a photoplay.

"In our conference his 'average' spots are levelled by the suggestions of those who excel in things that are perhaps not so marked in his case.

"And our conferences are not 'Star Chamber' sessions. You don't have to be a scenario writer to gain admission to them. Directors, cameramen, professional singers, stars, character players, stenographers beginners in scenario writing, even commercial salesmen visiting the studios for other purposes, all are subject to invitation and invariably, all have something to offer in the way of that fresh viewpoint that is our goal in pictures."

Goldwyn Studio Active

Four Productions Now Under Way With Fifth Unit to Start Shortly

FOUR productions are now under way at the Goldwyn studios here with a fifth soon to sart.

Gouverneur Morris' Chinese fantasy, "What Ho—the Cook!" was started on Wednesday last under the direction of Rowland V. Lee. The complete cast is: Jack Abbe, Winter Blossom, Joe Murphy, Fred Becker, Snitz Edwards, Jackson Reade, J. Junnus Davis and James Marcus. The Chinese bandits who appear in the picture give a colorful and picturesque appearance to the studios.

The cast has been completed for "The Octave of Claudius," adapted from Barry Pain's story of the same title. It is headed by Lon Chaney, Jacqueline Logan, Raymond McKee, Virginia True Boardman, Virginia Madison, Fontaine Larue and Aggie Herring. Wallace Worsley is directing the picture.

The ship scenes for Gouverneur Morris' melodrama, "Yellow Men and Gold" are being filmed at San Pedro and Balboa. Richard Dix, Rosemary Theby, William Carroll, Joe King and Goro Kino are in the cast. Irvin V. Willat is directing.

Cullen Landis, playing the lead in Julien Josephson's story, "The City Feller," wrecked his high power racing car when returning from location. The machine plunged over a six-foot embankment and was completely demolished. Neither Landis nor William Orlamond, a fellow player in "The City Feller," who was in the auto with him were injured. Director William Beaudine is making good progress on this production.

Anzia Yeziera's "Hungry Hearts" is about ready to go into production and Rupert Hughes' new play, "The Wall Flower," is receiving the finishing touches in the laboratory.

Final "Twin Six" Picture Is Completed

According to an announcement by the American Film Company of Chicago, the final production in the Twin Six series will be "The Loggers of Hell-Roarin' Mountain." It is scheduled for release in October.

"The Loggers of Hell-Roarin' Mountain" is adapted from "Lass of the Lumberlands," by E. Alexander Powell. It is a western drama and is said to be full of action and thrills.

J. P. MacGowan directed the production and he and Helen Holmes are cast in feature roles. An exceptionally capable supporting cast, includes Thomas Lingham, Paul Hurst, Leo Maloney, Florence Holmes, William Brunton and C. U. Wells.

Schoedsack Represents Selznick News

E. D. Schoedsack has been appointed London representative of Selznick News, replacing Harold Jones, who has served in that capacity for some time. Mr. Schoedsack was connected with George Loane Tucker up to the death of that distinguished director.

Producers Security Plan Poster Campaign

A fleet of expert billposters will shortly be turned loose with a varied assortment of lithographs specially designed to herald the coming to Broadway of two big productions, "The Right Way," Thomas Mott Osborne's prison film, and "The Soul of Man," Lee Francis Lybarger's big story of modern day phases, both released through the Producers' Security Corporation.

Especially attractive are the designs for the 24-sheets, drawn from original conceptions for both films, while the 6-sheets and the "threes" and "ones" are of unusual pattern and in a striking layout of colors.

"Moonlight Follies" Has Broadway Premiere

"Moonlight Follies," starring Marie Prevost, opened at the Central theatre, Broadway, New York City, last week and played to big business, according to word from the Universal home-office. This production is a Universal Special Attraction directed by King Baggot. The picture is based on a romantic fantasy written by Percival Wilde.

"Our Mutual Friend" to Be Issued by Warren

The F. B. Warren offices announce the film version of Charles Dickens's "Our Mutual Friend," which the Warren organization will release, is attracting a great deal of interest in trade circles. The reproductions of Dickens's famous characterizations in this novel are said to be unusually well-done, and the distributors expect that the picture when shown to the trade and the public will prove a sensation.

Wm. Fox Buys Western Stories for Jones

Fox Film Corporation has acquired the picture rights to three novels by William Patterson White, popular writer of western stories. Buck Jones, it is expected, will be starred in the productions. The stories are, "Buster," "Lynch Lawyers" and "Heart of the Range."

Lois Weber to Produce Abroad

To Cast Each Picture With Best Available Material

LOIS WEBER, who sailed for Europe last week, will produce some big pictures abroad, according to word received from the headquarters of the F. B. Warren Corporation. In describing the purpose of Lois Weber's trip abroad, the F. B. Warren statement has the following to say:

"It is Miss Weber's intention in going abroad to investigate conditions with the thought of producing abroad in the same manner that she has always worked here, which means that she would cast each production with the best people available, selecting, however, those who fit the part rather than choosing some one because of a supposed prestige. She feels that it will be possible to work abroad in homes just as she has in this country, and if she is able to carry this out we will have some truly remarkable productions from America's wonder woman within the next few months.

"For some years Miss Weber has been trying to arrange a trip abroad, but never at any time was it possible for her to satisfy her mind that she was entitled to a trip, because she had never been able to get far enough ahead with production to take a trip which might, if conditions are entirely wrong on the other side, become only a six weeks' vacation.

"When Miss Weber departed for the other side there was considerable comment regarding the fact that, while she made it very plain that her intention was to produce in Europe and possibly continue producing on a trip around the world if conditions justified it, she was not taking with her a staff of players or technical people.

"Miss Weber has been a star maker for years, and has always been willing to start over with new material at very frequent intervals, feeling that the so-called stars soon lose their value in real film productions for the reason that they try to register personal mannerisms rather than enter whole-heartedly into a character to be portrayed. Miss Weber has stated that she will have no difficulty in finding plenty of capable players for anything she may decide to do while abroad.

"There was only one question in Miss Weber's mind when she departed. She stated that if she found conditions on the other side indicated a desire to antagonize or hold up, financially, American producers desirous of working abroad she would return immediately to her studios in Hollywood and proceed with her work there.

"During the past year Miss Weber managed to conclude the production of two exceptionally powerful special films, which are to be distributed by the F. B. Warren Corporation, the first of these being "The Blot," which has created such a stir throughout the country. Having these two completed productions on hand, Miss Weber decided that finally she would be able to venture into foreign lands and attempt to fulfill her long cherished ambition to make stories from an American viewpoint with American ideas in an atmosphere that would be distinctive and new to the American eye.

"Miss Weber's activities abroad will certainly be watched with exceptional interest in this country, because if she should decide to produce on the other side she would certainly, by her methods, be able to give the screen some of the most remarkable films that have ever been shown."

Internat'l News in Shubert Chain

ONE of the largest news reel contracts ever recorded has just been closed by International News, distributed through Universal, it is announced by R. V. Anderson, News Sales Manager of the International News reel, is placed exclusively in all of the Shubert vaudeville theatres. About a dozen of the theatres which will comprise this new vaudeville circuit have recently been opened, and within a short space of time it is expected there will be a chain of fifty Shubert vaudeville houses, each running the International News reel, exclusively.

"This contract," says Mr. Anderson, "closed with Mr. Lee Shubert by George D. Uffner of the Universal's New York exchange, is the sincerest tribute ever paid to the excellnce of the International News reel. It is of special note, when taking into account Mr. Shubert's announced policy—the cleanest, the most enterprising and the best will be the Shubert motto.

"International has built up a reputation for covering the news field thoroughly for its news reel. It has done much more than that. It constantly offers its exhibitor patrons 'news beats' not to be found in other news reels.

"The following Shubert vaudeville theatres now are using the International News reel exclusively:

"The Forty-fourth street theatre and the Winter Garden, New York City; the Majestic Theatre, Boston; the Academy of Music, Baltimore; the Euclid Opera House, Cleveland; the Crescent, Brooklyn; the Chestnut Street Opera House, Philadelphia; the Sam S. Shubert Theatre, Pittsburgh; the Shubert-Belasco, Washington; the Detroit Opera House, Detroit; Wood's Apollo, Chicago; the Rialto, Newark; and the Liberty, Dayton. The Capitol Theatre, Springfield, Mass., and the Strand, Louisville, Ky., soon will be added to this list, and rapidly followed by a Shubert Theatre in every leading city in the United States.

Christie Closes Releasing Deal for Britain

Christie Film Sales, Ltd., of London, England, announces the renewal of Christie contracts with the Gaumont Film Company for the release of Christie two-reel comedies in Great Britain. Gaumont is already using the first series of 24 Christie two-reel comedies distributed by Educational in America, and this current series is now booking, with first runs at six leading downtown theatres in London.

C. H. Christie, on his return to America, stated that the Christie company has released more comedies in England and the United Kingdom than any other company, no matter from what source including America and the foreign countries.

"Foolish Age" to Open in Boston Oct. 10th

May McAvoy in "A Virginia Courtship"

"A Virginia Courtship," the famous old play by Eugene Presbrey, has been chosen by Realart as the third starring vehicle for May McAvoy.

Another exceptional cast has been chosen for this picture. Playing the leading male role is Casson Ferguson. Alex B. Francis, one of the best-known character men in the profession, has the role of lovable old Colonel Fairfax. Kathlyn Williams needs no introduction to those who have seen her in "A Private Scandal" and "Everything For Sale." Other players include Richard Tucker, L. M. Wells, Guy Oliver and Jane Keckley. Seen in a clever "kiddie" role is Vern Winters.

"A Virginia Courtship" was directed by Frank O'Connor with the supervision of the Thompson Buchanan. Edfrid A. Bingham wrote the scenario while Hal Rosson presided at the camera.

Educational Pictures Shown to Premier

Two pictures released by Educational Film Exchanges were screened at a private showing with two Charlie Chaplin pictures for the benefit of Premier Lloyd George at his summer vacation home at Gairlochs, in Scotland, last Saturday night. According to cable advices, the premier laughed heartily all through the programme, and afterward showed great improvement in his condition.

The programme included Chaplin's "Shoulder Arms," for which the premier had made a special request, another Chaplin picture and two recent Educational releases, "The Crater of Mt. Katmai" and "Lyman H. Howe's Famous Ride on a Runaway Train."

Bryant Washburn Signed for Goldwyn Role

Goldwyn has signed Bryant Washburn, one of the foremost male stars of the screen world, to play the leading man's role in its photoplay made from Anzia Yezierska's stories of New York East Side life, "Hungry Hearts," which has just gone into production at its Culver City studios. The role is said to fit Mr. Washburn's individuality and talents perfectly.

The leading woman in this production is Ethel Kay, a Russian-American actress of pronounced ability. Sonia Marcelle has been engaged to play the mother role in "Hungry Hearts." E. Mason Hopper is directing it.

Charles Ray's Next Is Titled "Smudge"

Charles Ray's next picture for First National release will be "Smudge," a story by Rob Wagner who wrote R. S. V. P." for Mr. Ray. The casting of "Smudge" already has been begun while work on the continuity of the picture is also progressing. Ora Carewe will play the principal role opposite Mr. Ray in "Smudge."

Changes in Century Plans

Baby Peggy to Be Featured; Alf Goulding Chosen as a Director

Baby Peggy, Universal's youngest star, who appears in the Century comedy, "The Muddy Bride"

JULIUS STERN, President of Century Comedies, is changing some of his production plans.

The success of Baby Peggy and Brownine, the Wonder Dog, as co-stars is shown by their recent contracts through the Paramount circuit among others, and the repeated demands of exhibitors for the pair. While it is planned to make pictures of them both together, the baby has proved herself such a success as a star in her own right supported by grown-ups, that she will be featured in a series of comedies of home life.

Mr. Stern has chosen Alf Goulding, former director for Harold Lloyd, to direct Harry Sweet. Sweet's next release will be "Mamma's Cow Puncher," the adventures of a mother's boy who is thrown on his own resources and goes to the wild and woolly West to make his fortune. Bartine Burkett plays the part of the girl.

Louise Lorraine, leading woman of "The Adventures of Tarzan," is another Century beauty who will be featured with Dorety and Sweet.

Charles Dorety will be directed alternately by Alf Goulding and Tom Buckingham, who is back on the lot after being very ill with an attack of influenza. His first release is "A Nervy Dentist," which will be shown at the Central Theatre the week of September 25th. His next picture will be a sea comedy with Miss Lorraine.

Buckingham is planning a series of burlesques on well known films and plays which will start production early in October.

Booking Entire R-C Output

Big Circuits Among Those Signing Up for R-C's 26 Special Features

THE R-C PICTURES CORPORATION contract for its entire output of twenty-six special productions is considered by the R-C executives to be proving a proposition of great attractiveness to exhibitors in all parts of the country, judging from the unusual volume of contracts reported to have been received at the home office of that company.

Among the most important of the big circuits which have contracted for the full program of twenty-six pictures are the Southern Enterprises, the Wells Circuit of the South, the Stanley Company of Philadelphia, Ruben and Finklestein of Minneapolis, and the Harry Gramp circuit.

Included in the group of twenty-six pictures will be the Pauline Frederick series, the first of which is "The Sting of the Lash," written by Harvey Gates and directed by Henry King. Her second starring production will be "The Lure of Jade," which has just been completed under the direction of Colin Campbell. The story is by Marion Orth. "Judith of Blue Lake Ranch," by Jackson Gregory will be the third.

The first of the series of Doris May pictures is scheduled for release October 16, on which day the National Doris May Joy Week will be observed throughout the country. Miss May's initial starring vehicle will be "The Foolish Age," written for her by Hunt Stromberg. Other May productions will follow.

The first of the Sessue Hayakawa productions is "Where Lights Are Low," already being played on the big circuits throughout the country. It was written by Lloyd Osborne and directed by Colin Campbell. It will be followed by "The Swamp" and "The Street of the Flying Dragon."

L. J. Gasnier's first, which has just been completed, will be "Mam'selle Jo," from the novel of the same title by Harriet Comstock. Another production by Gasnier will be "Drifting Souls" from the novel "Home," by George Agnew Chamberlain.

Mr. Cabanne's first production is "The Barricade," which has just been completed. It is based upon an original story by Dr. Daniel Carson Goodman.

New Representative for Universal in Mexico

Following the announcement last week of the appointment of Monroe Isen to manage the Universal releasing system in the Argentine, Geo. E. Kann, manager of the Foreign Department of the Universal, makes public the appointment of Jay W. MacFarland to manage the Mexico branch. Since the war, and the gradual tranquilizing of the outlying districts of the Mexican republic, the Mexico office has become of greater and greater importance. It is the intention to open four or five branch offices in addition to those already operative so that the territory may be more economically covered.

"Quo Vadis" Cleaning Up on Coast, is Report

Word from the offices of the F. B. Warren Corporation advises that "Quo Vadis" recently did "a clean-up business" in San Francisco during a two-week engagement at the Savoy theatre. Following the Savoy run, the picture was shown at the Garrick for a week. Six other large neighborhood houses in San Francisco have booked "Quo Vadis" for week runs. The Turner and Dankin circuit on the Coast have also booked the picture "for week stands and extra days," says the report from the Warren headquarters, and in Sacramento, the Turner and Dankin interests have leased a theatre to put "Quo Vadis" in that town for a run.

Christie Finishes Three for Educational

Three more Christie comedies have been completed for Educational release. They are "Pure and Simple," "Saving Sister Susie" and "Fresh from the Farm."

"Pure and Simple" explained by the phrase "she was pure and he was simple" presented Bobby Vernon in the role of the "simpleton." Josephine Hill plays opposite Vernon.

In "Saving Sister Susie" Dorothy Devore, Katherine Lewis and Earl Rodney appear in principal roles.

"Fresh from the Farm" features Bobby Vernon in a rustic role of many laughs. Josephine Hill is again the leading lady. William Beaudine directed "Pure and Simple" and "Fresh from the Farm," while "Saving Sister Susie" was made under the direction of Scott Sidney.

"Rip Van Winkle" is Liked by Philadelphians

"Rip Van Winkle," the Warren Lascelle production released by Hodkinson, which is playing an indefinite engagement at the Academy of Music is winning for itself an infinitely desirable place in the hearts of the good people of Philadelphia, states the distributor.

According to the house management "Rip," if it continues to show a proportionate increase in attendance will far outstrip any other attraction which ever played the Academy of Music before and will set up new attendance records that will long endure.

Prominent Writers Set Sail for England

On the Olympic, when she sailed Saturday for England, were Elinor Glyn and Sir Gilbert Parker, the noted novelists, who are returning to England after spending a year in the Paramount studio at Hollywood.

Buck Jones to Star in "The Fast Mail"

Picture rights for "The Fast Mail" have been purchased by Fox Film Corporation as a starring vehicle for Buck Jones. As a stage play "The Fast Mail" laid the foundation of a fortune for Lincoln J. Carter, its producer.

Elaborate Campaign for "The Sheik" Planned

PARAMOUNT announces that a publicity campaign of unusual proportions is to be launched for George H. Melford's production, "The Sheik," presenting Agnes Ayres and Rudolph Valentino in the leading roles. This campaign will include both national and local newspaper advertising and an exploitation tie-up with the publishers of the book, Small, Maynard & Co., Boston. A special jacket for present and future editions of the book will make special mention of the film version of the story.

The week of November 27 has been designated as "The Sheik" Week by the Paramount sales organization. During that week "The Sheik" will be shown simultaneously in as many leading theatres throughout the United States as it is found feasible to provide prints for. In its issue of Saturday, November 26, the Saturday Evening Post will carry a double-page announcement of the picture and its country-wide showing during the following week.

Stanley Expedition to Be Historical Serial

Universal is bringing history to the screen with another elaborately produced serial. This time the famous expedition of Henry M. Stanley into Africa to find Dr. David Livingstone is to be told in eighteen episodes.

Irving G. Thalberg, general manager at Universal City, has just approved the screen adaptation of the famous event, written by George Plympton. William Lord Wright, chief of the Universal serial and short reel feature departments, now is completing production plans. The serial will feature Eileen Sedgwick under the direction of Edward Kull.

The event is familiar to millions. In 1871 James Gordon Bennett, owner of the New York Herald, assigned Henry M. Stanley, his Paris correspondent, to find Dr. David Livingstone, who had then been lost in the depths of the Black Continent for ten years.

Baker, S-L Director, Confers with Lubin

George D. Baker, who recently completed direction of three comedy-dramas starring Gareth Hughes, for S-L Pictures (Arthur Sawyer and Herbert Lubin), is in New York this week for the purpose of conference with Mr. Lubin.

The director expects to return to the Metro studios in Hollywood, where the first series of Hughes photoplays was made, within a few days and to begin, immediately upon his arrival, the production of the initial of a second trio of screen plays. This will be "Stay Home," in All Story Magazine story by Edgar Franklin.

Exploitation for "Man's Home"

Selznick Feature Will Appeal to Public in Many Ways

THE showman who plays Selznick's "A Man's Home" is promised more than the average chance to attract patronage to the box-office through the many advertising angles that the photoplay possesses. An uncommon number of "slants" are cited as productive "pegs" on which to hang appeals to the theatre going public in behalf of a picture Selznick declares is the best product they ever have screened.

The story and its authorship, the presenting cast and director, the elaborateness of its settings and the basic appeal of the plot to the American's proverbial love of home are general headings under which direct advertising may be classified. The home of the average American means so much to him that, after all, it is the direct play upon the domestic side of "A Man's Home" that is depended upon to reap the greatest reward.

That Ralph Ince directed the production of this Selznick special is an incident of first importance. Mr. Ince has a record of more than 300 photoplays to his credit during the years he has been supervising pictures, his comparatively recent stellar appearances in "The Highest Law" and "The Land of Opportunity" being a well defined part of his contribution to the Selznick product with which exhibitors and public are familiar.

When Anna Steese Richardson and Edmund Breese's story was entrusted to Mr. Ince for preparation, Myron Selznick, Vice President in charge of production, gave instructions that in the matter of cast, sets and production detail Ince was to be unhampered by expense and was to exercise his best instincts in creating a special that should be measured as this season's standard of Selznick production. Mr. Ince went ahead with his commission on this understanding—the screened product to render the verdict.

Thus does "A Man's Home" come to the exhibitor and his public as a Ralph Ince production containing all that is best in Myron Selznick's methods of creating pictures ,plus Mr. Ince's vision, skill and experience in directing players. The work of building sets, assembling "props" and lighting equipment proceeded for weeks at Selznick's studios in Fort Lee without interfering with the work of other directors who were creating attractions for this season's program of Selznick releases.

The cast of "A Man's Home" fairly bristles with "names" that are familiar to theatregoers in every locality—names that have been "up in lights" that told of attractions on both stage and screen. The advertising value of a cast of favorites means money to the box office and when each one of these favorites is provided with a part that keeps the individual prominent throughout the action of the photodrama there is an attendant satisfaction to the playgoer that means, in the instance of "A Man's Home," additional satisfaction and advertising.

Harry Morey, Kathlyn Williams, Faire Binney, Matt Moore, Grace Valentine, Rowland Bottomley and Margaret Sedden are names that have been associated with scores of screen offerings and stage attractions. So often has "all star cast" been used when there was little or no cast of importance to advertise that the expression has become trite—but in the case of "A Man's Home" a glance at the names of its players proves that they are all really stars within the knowledge of everybody.

Thus the foundation has been prepared for "A Man's Home" advertising campaign, both by the producer and for the picture showman who plays this Selznick special. In getting behind the exhibitor the Selznick publicity department has been as sincere and helpful as the production department. Every conceivable aid to exhibitor helpfulness has been developed by men of experience and inventiveness.

Pioneer Seeks New Productions

Issues Call to Independents for Worth-While Features

A CALL to independent producers of worth-while features to submit their product to the Pioneer Film Corporation, which enterprise is in the market for meritorious product, was sounded yesterday in a statement issued from the home office of Pioneer, at 130 West 46th Street, New York. Pioneer invites those who have quality photoplays completed or in the making and who are desirous of national distribution of their product to communicate with Donald I. Buchanan at the home office.

Mr. Buchanan recently joined the executive staff of Pioneer's home office and is one of the best known men in the technical and business end of the industry. He has to his credit quite a few successful scenarios and the production of features and enjoys the confidence of producers who have come in contact with him through his successful work in the past ten years. Mr. Buchanan will be pleased to interview personally those who are seeking to market product of the calibre which will stand the acid test and which can be released with the Pioneer seal of quality, guaranteeing to the exhibitor satisfaction from every viewpoint.

Pioneer Film Corporation, ever since it became a factor of the motion picture field, states that it has done everything in its power to improve conditions and further the interests of the independent producers. It is not a producing company; it purchases pictures when they are completed.

President A. E. Lefcourt of Pioneer said yesterday that his enterprise stands ready to purchase several big feature film productions provided that they have inherent quality. He points out in his statement that the distributing facilities of Pioneer are tremendous, not in theory but in reality.

"Our growth has been rapid, perhaps amazing—not on paper but in physical tangibility," said Mr. Lefcourt. "The film productions we are in the market for must have genuine merit and be of real quality. We have no use for photoplays that are relics of the just past era, when anything with 5,000 feet of film would suffice. Pioneer and quality—think of them as one. You, the independent producer, can count upon Pioneer to co-operate with you to the fullest extent. If this message is not an incentive to you it must at least be an invitation—an invitation to success. The gateway is swung open; there is room for all of you to enter. You will find Mr. Buchanan pleased to discuss with you any and all propositions for the acquisition of features on any basis suitable to you."

If it's advertised at all, you'll find it in The News

Canadian Critics Praise Rudyard Kipling Film

The Pathe home-office reports that "Wtihout Benefit of Clergy" is being received in Canada with marked approval by the photoplay critics of the Dominion. The verdict of the Montreal Star is quoted as typical of the other press opinions:

"Now this story (speaking of 'Without Benefit of Clergy') has been translated into a motion picture. And such a motion picture! You cannot believe it until you see it, but this is an achievement in which the genius of the author, interpreted by the intelligence of skilled artists, has transcended all screen limitations. The result is that you have visualized, in a manner at once unforgettable and impressive, an idyl of rare loveliness.

"Nobody can watch this film unmoved. It stirs the elemental emotions in the human heart . . . for Kipling's supreme touch is here."

Will Rogers Is Engaged for Paramount Role

Will Rogers, Lila Lee and Walter Hiers have been engaged for the leading roles in a special picture which is being produced at the Paramount studio in Hollywood by James Cruze. The title of the production has not yet been selected, but, according to advices from Hollywood, the picture is to be one of the most unusual made this season.

Will Rogers in this picture will be seen in the role of a professor.

Others in the cast will be Emily Rait, Clarence Burton and John Fox.

Fourth Selig-Rork Drama

"The White Mouse," Unusual Curwood Story, Has All-Star Cast

"THE White Mouse," the fourth of the Selig-Rork photoplays made for Educational release, has been adapted by the director, Bertram Bracken, from the story by James Oliver Curwood. Although the picture opens with exquisite scenes in the heart of the "big snow country," there is very little of the usual Northwest story in this short feature. Instead, there is an odd and intensely dramatic plot of Chinese smuggling, mystery and revenge, interwoven with the clean life of the great otudoors.

Only occasionally can a feature production of "standard" length boast an all-star cast such as that which played "The White Mouse," Under the direction of Mr. Bracken, the man who has made all of the Educational-Selig-Rork potoplays, such actors as Lewis Stone, Wallace Beery, Ethel Grey Eerry, Willard Louis, Bessie Wong and Margaret McWade have made a picture that is on the very highest plane of photodramas.

Lewis Stone, who heads the cast, is seen in one of his famous Royal Northwest Mounted Policeman roles. Wallace Beery's part is perhaps the most vivid character portrayal of his career as a screen villain. Willard Louis, gifted comedian and character actor, has the part of the Chinese avenger who, in the guise of an humble cook, follows relentlessly on the trail of the half-caste murderer.

A terrific battle between a man and a wolf forms the climax of the picture, when Stone is forced to fight a giant mad wolf for his own life and that of the girl (Miss Terry) whom he has come to love while recovering from the wound inflicted by a smuggler's bullet.

To Present "His Nibs" Oct. 6

Elaborate Premiere is Planned for Chic Sale Film; Star Plays 7 Parts

EXCEPTIONAL PICTURES CORPORATION announces that the premiere presentation of its second production, "His Nibs," starring Charles (Chic) Sale, will be given in the Grand Ballroom of the Hotel Astor, New York, on Thursday evening, October 6th. According to word from the offices of Exceptional Pictures, invitations for this showing have already been accepted by many of the prominent motion picture executives, practically the entire body of the Theatre Owner's Chamber of Commerce, representative exhibitors from many of the country's key cities, state right executives and exchangemen from all parts of the United States and numerous friends of Mr. Sale and of the Exceptional Pictures Corporation.

Chic Sale, conceded to be the foremost delineator of rural characters, on the American stage today, portrays seven distinct roles in "His Nibs." These seven characters are: Theo Bender, proprietor, manager and operator of "The Slippery Elm Picture Palace," better known as "His Nibs," this being the principal role of the story; Elmer Bender, his son, crack marble player and general assistant to his father; Mr. Percifer, editor of "The Weekly Bee" who has appointed himself censor of all motion pictures, much to the annoyance of "His Nibs"; Wally Craw, local weather prophet; Miss Dessie Teed, village organist, a young lad of several Summers, who furnishe the music at "The Slippery El Picture Palace"; Peelee Gear, Jr boy tenor, the wit of community The Boy, who plays the hero i "He Fooled 'em All," a thrillin drama of the fight for fortune an a girl which is interpolated wit "His Nibs."

RARE OPPORTUNITY FOR BUYERS AND SELLERS

Stage Must Take Second Place, Says Critic

Heywood Broun, the noted dramatic critic, after viewing Douglas Fairbanks' "The Three Musketeers," declared that the motion picture as represented in this supreme product of the film studio has clearly proved its supremacy over the stage at least in one particular. Speaking of the stage producer, he declares in the New York World of September 21st:

"No producer can hope any longer to interest playgoers in tornadoes, free fights, forest fires, or galloping guns. The best which a theatrical producer can do along these lines is child's play compared to the achievements of the motion pictures. The scene in which Fairbanks meets the Cardinal's best swordsman and chases him first out of the shop and then through the streets of Paris until, with a triumphant twist of the wrist, he sends his blade flying high in the air, is the most stirring piece of sheer action we have seen in a show.

"Again, there is an undreamed-of gusto and scope in the mixed brawl between the rival groups of musketeers back of the Luxembourg. In all such things the theatre must resign itself to second place. It may well adopt the technique which Shakespeare enjoyed in 'Henry V' and frankly admit that battles are beyond it."

"The Cup of Life" Winning Heavy Bookings

The combination of Thomas H. Ince as producer and Hobart Bosworth as the leading player in a story of the sea and the Orient has struck a popular chord, and "The Cup of Life," the current Ince release through First National Exchanges is winning high praise from critics. Madge Bellamy and Tully Marshall also appear in the cast.

It went over so big in a recent test conducted by an exhibitor in Cleveland before a selected audience against one of the season's biggest specials that it won bookings at the Circle and the Strand where it won the unanimous approval of the local press.

Big bookings reported to date on "The Cup of Life" include the Scolly Square of Boston, the Fenway, the Empire, Quebec, the Isis Houston, Colonial Reading, Criterion, Oklahoma City; Crown Mobile, and the entire Loew circuit of New York. It was the first picture to get 100 days booking on Loew's Metropolitan time.

The story is from the pen of Carey Wilson. It was directed by Rowland V. Lee.

"Lucky Carson" Complete

Earle Williams Star of New Vitagraph Production; Has Fine Support

EARLE WILLIAMS has completed "Lucky Carson," a new Vitagraph production based on the novel by Aquila Kempster. Mr. Williams has had some strenuous roles in his most recent pictures, and "Lucky Carson" is no exception. It is a happy blend of underworld and society life with the latter predominating, with the action laid in both London and New York and their environs.

Mr. Williams has a capable supporting company for "Lucky Carson." Betty Ross Clarke plays opposite the star and Gertrude Astor has a role of almost equal importance. Others of the principals include Earl Schenck, James Butler, Loyal Underwood and Colette Forbes. Wilfrid North directed the production.

Mr. Williams appears to have gotten away from the strictly society roles in his recent Vitagraph productions, and while the role of Niel (Lucky) Carson does not present him in any such rugged role as he portrayed in Eugene Walter's "The Wolf," or in his most recent picture, "Bring Him In," a story of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, it is described to be red-blooded and full of action. Mr. Williams is first seen in London as a down-and-outer, on the verge of becoming a member of the underworld, or worse, and then, through a questionable act, a wealthy New Yorker, but pursued by the spectre of his one evil act.

The plays offers a wealth of opportunity for beautiful costumes for the women and splendid scenic backgrounds. Wilfrid North, one of the ablest directors in the country, is said to have done a splendid piece of work in "Lucky Carson."

"Never Weaken" Due Soon

Harold Lloyd's Latest for Ass'd Exhibitors Called Riot of Fun

"NEVER WEAKEN" is the title of Harold Lloyd's next comedy, scheduled for release on October 16th. It marks the beginning of the second series of Associated Harold Lloyd Comedies, which will consist of three releases, presented by Hal Roach through Associated Exhibitors and distributed by Pathe. "Never Weaken" is described to be a riot of fun.

In a statement issued from the office of Associated, it is declared that the tremendous popularity of Harold Lloyd and the marked success of the first series of Associated Lloyds has established Harold Lloyd as unquestionably one of the best box office comedians appearing in short reel productions. Therefore, it is the intention to make the second series surpass in quality and entertainment value anything which Lloyd has yet accomplished, even more profitable to exhibitors than "Now or Never," "Among Those Present," and "I Do."

Mildred Davis continues as Harold Lloyd's leading lady, the popu-

The story of "Never Weaken" depicts Harold Lloyd as madly in love with a girl in the office next to his own. She works for a doctor and business is rotten—so much so that she is about to lose her job. So it is up to Harold Lloyd to stir up some patients for her boss. With a comedy acrobat he starts out. The fun is uproarous. The stunts are unique—and business immediately picks up.

"Jungle Adventures" Scores

Trade and Daily Press Welcome Pictures During Capitol Run

FOLLOWING closely upon the most enthusiastic praise that was probably ever given to a motion picture by the daily press of New York City, when they lauded Exceptional Pictures Corporation's first production, Martin Johnson's "Jungle Adventures," at its pre-release showing at the Capitol theatre, New York City, comes the statement from Alexander Beyfuss, vice-president and general manager for Exceptional Pictures, that the trade press, New York weekly papers and all independent reviewers, as well as the National Board of Review, have issued glowing criticisms on this unusual tale of romance and fascination.

In all, twenty-three critics, that is every one in the metropolitan center, unanimously agreed that "Jungle Adventures" is one of the most unusual offerings presented in some time, from an artistic, entertainment and educational viewpoint.

This remarkable reception indicates most clearly the success which is destined to attend Martin Johnson's "Jungle Adventures" when it is released to the public, which is scheduled for the latter part of October.

Although no definite statement has as yet been made by Alexander Beyfuss, regarding the distribution arrangements for Martin Johnson's "Jungle Adventures," according to a report an announcement will be forthcoming within a very short time, inasmuch as it is known that several of the big national distributors are negotiating for this exceptional release.

Despite the fact that this film will not be booked into any other theatre, except as already shown at the Capitol theatre, the offices of the Exceptional Pictures Corporation report an unusual number of inquiries from motion picture exhibitors, and from the public for information as to the theatres it may be expected to play.

Fox's Releases for October

The Super-Specials, "Thunderclap," "Shame," and "Perjury" Included

OCTOBER releases scheduled by Fox Film Corporation include three of the twelve super-feature specials promised by William Fox for initial runs on Broadway, New York City, before going to exhibitors throughout the country; five feature productions starring Tom Mix, Buck Jones, Dustin Farnum, William Russell and Shirley Mason; two pictures starring Barbara Bedford and Maurice Flynn; and one Al St. John comedy.

The super-specials scheduled for October are "Thunderclap," a sensational race-track melodrama; "Shame," a surprise thriller, and "Perjury," an intense human interest photodrama dealing with miscarriage of justice.

"Trailin'" is the Tom Mix release for October. In the earlier sequences Mix appears as a gentleman hunter. Later, however, he appears in Western environment and stages some spectacular riding. Story is by Max Brand. Lynn Reynolds directed.

"Bar Nothin'" is the title of Buck Jones's vehicle. Jones is represented in the role of a daredevil cattle ranch manager. Edward Sedgwick directed from a story by Jack Strumwasser and Clyde C. Westover.

Dustin Farnum appears in the role of a rough ship captain. The picture bears the working title "Cursed," and is based on a story by George Allen England. Bernard Durning directed.

William Russell in "The Lady From Longacre" appears in the role of a young English nobleman who becomes involved in the political intrigues of a small European kingdom. Victor Bridges is the author. George E. Marshall directed.

Shirley Mason is presented in the titular role of "Queenie." Wilbur Finley Fauley supplied the story. Howard M. Mitchell directed.

Barbara Bedford, recently promoted to stardom, will be presented in her first star picture, "Cinderella of the Hills," a romantic mystery story by John Breckenridge Ellis. Howard M. Mitchell directed.

The other new Fox star, Maurice Flynn, world famous as a football player at Yale, has his first stellar role in a picturization of a story by Francis Lynde, "The Real Man," which may be renamed for the screen.

Al St. John is to be seen in "The Happy Pest," and is said to be funnier than ever.

B'way House Features Selig-Rork Subject

Again an Educational-Selig-Rork Photoplay has been selected as the dramatic subject in a short subject programme at a big first run Broadway picture house. A short time ago "The Northern Trail," the first of the Educational-Selig-Rork series, was shown at the Capitol Theatre. Beginning last Sunday, "The Ne'er to Return Road," the third of the series, was on the programme of the Strand Theatre, run as the serious feature with Charlie Chaplin's "The Idle Class."

As in the case of the showing of "The Northern Trail" the newspaper critics have spoken very highly of this short feature.

Hodkinson Announces New Affiliations

AN announcement which emanated from the home office of the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation this week, bears the news that a recently signed contract disposes of the Canadian rights for all Hodkinson releases to the Famous Players Film Service, Ltd., of Canada which is controlled by the Allen Bros. The fact that Famous Players Film Service, Ltd., has a very great number of branches scattered through the Dominion insures a very wide distribution for all Hodkinson subjects. Famous Players Film Service, Ltd. maintain exchanges in Toronto, Montreal, St. Johns, Winnipeg, Calgary and Vancouver,—in fact in every important center.

The contract made by Hodkinson with Famous Players Film Service, Ltd., disposes of the Canadian rights of all releases including the productions of Hugo Ballin, Irene Castle Productions, Irvin V. Willat, Zane Grey, Winnipeg Productions, T. Hayes Hunter, Ward Lascelle and the various other independent producers whose output reaches the screen via Hodkinson.

Author Lauds Pickford's Film Version of Story

Here is what Frances Hodgson Burnett, author of "Little Lord Fauntleroy," wrote Mary Pickford after viewing Miss Pickford's film version of her story:

"In the role of 'Dearest' you are never for a moment anything but a little mother, and as 'Fauntleroy' you are never for a moment anything but a beautiful, sturdy, lovable boy, like Kipling's 'Kim,' is the little friend of all the world. The original model of 'Fauntleroy' was my own child, and that was merely what he was, 'the friend of all the world,' and that is why this tired world is never tired of him. Unless I have recently written a new book, 'Little Lord Fauntleroy' stands at the head of my publishers' lists. I foresee for your American 'Fauntleroy' outstretched, greeting hands everywhere, a long life and a great success."

"Penrod" Hailed by Trade

Exhibitors Endorse Plan of Neilan to Film Story With Wesley Barry

MARSHALL NEILAN'S announcement concerning the production of "Penrod" with Wesley Barry in the title role has met with an enthusiastic reception from exhibitors in all parts of the country who predict that this film will be the greatest box-office attraction yet offered to the trade by Neilan.

Telegrams and letters welcoming the producer's newest undertaking have been pouring in on Mr. Neilan during the past few weeks from exhibitors both in the big and the smaller cities.

Booth Tarkington, author of "Penrod," considered one of the best pieces of theatrical properties today recently sent Mr. Neilan the following telegram: "I am sure that your production of 'Penrod' will have the success your long and careful preparation for it deserves. Please accept for yourself and the fine actor, Wesley Barry, my heartiest good wishes."

From Frank Costello, general manager of the Turner and Dahnken theatres in the Northwest, the producer received the following wire: "Congratulations your decision to make 'Penrod' with Wesley Barry. The trade in this territory agree with me in believing it will be the biggest achievement of your brilliant career. What names to conjure with Booth Tarkington, 'Penrod,' Wesley Barry and Marshall Neilan. It is an entertainment that every showman will want to offer. Regards."

Saul S. Harris, President of the Kempner chain of theatres, in the South, following Mr. Neilan's recent announcement concerning the production of "Penrod," telegraphed the producer that this attraction could not help but prove a big clean-up for exhibitors. "Your announcement that you are going to produce 'Penrod' with Wesley Barry is welcome news," said Mr. Harris in his telegram.

The enthusiastic welcome accorded Neilan's announcement in the above messages is voiced in hundreds of letters and telegrams received by the producer to date concerning the picturization of Tarkington's famous story and play.

Pathe Releases for Oct. 9

Well Balanced List Includes New Episode of "Hurricane Hutch"

IT is difficult to select the outstanding feature of the Pathe short subject releases for the week of October 9th. Included in the list for the week named are:

The third episode of the thrilling and extraordinarily successful Charles Hutchison serial, "Hurricane Hutch." This episode is entitled, "The Millionth Chance," in which the celebrated "stunt" star indeed encounters hair-raising perils.

"Wings of the Border" is a Holman Day two-reel drama dealing with a conspiracy to defraud the young heroine of her rights of valuable timber interests in the Maine woods. In the one-reel comedy entitled "Sweet By and By," Eddie Boland is featured in a comically extravagant action aboard a dirigible in the year 1943.

Gaylord Lloyd is featured in a one-reel comedy called "A Zero Hero," in which he robs his employer's bank to get a reward for beating up a mysterious burglar and returning the money. "Venus and the Cat" is the title of the Aesop Film Fable released on the date named.

Two New R-C Subjects Finished on Coast

LOUIS J. GASNIER has completed the filming of "Mam'selle Jo" at the Holly wood studios of R-C Pictures Corporation. It is based upon the popular novel of the same title from the pen of Miss Harriet Comstock. Among those who appear in "Mam'selle Jo" are Pauline Starke, Rose Dione, Tully Marshall, George M'Daniel, George Seigman, Will Jim Hatton, Jack Mower, James O'Barrows, Jack Livingston, Ruth King, Kate Toncray, Lillian Rambeau, John O'Rourke and Barbara La Marr.

L. J. Gasnier will start work September 26 on "Home," George Agnew Chamberlain's novel that attracted wide attention as an anonymous serial in The Century Magazine.

Pauline Frederick and her company, of which Colin Campbell will be in charge, will start work September 26 on "Judith of Blue Lake Ranch," a strongly dramatic story of romance and adventure in a Western setting. Prior to appearing in "Judith of Blue Lake Ranch," Miss Frederick will be seen in "The Lure of Jade," based upon a story by Marion Orth. This has just been finished under the direction of Colin Campbell.

Select Title for New Lytell Picture

"Keep Off the Grass" is the screen title selected by the Metro director Bayard Veiller for Bert Lytell's forthcoming photoplay of the prize ring, based upon a short story in the Saturday Evening Post, by J. P. Marquand. The original title was "The Right That Failed."

Virginia Valli, leading woman for Mr. Lytell in his previous productions of "The Man Who," "A Trip to Paradise" and "The Idle Rich"—this soon to be released—plays opposite the star in the cast of "Keep Off the Grass."

Big Circuits Book Nell Shipman Picture

The F. B. Warren Corporation reports heavy bookings for "The Girl from God's Country," starring Nell Shipman. The picture has already played four weeks at Clune's Broadway Theatre, Los Angeles, according to word from the Warren offices. Some of the circuits which have booked this picture are: the S. A. Lynch Southern Enterprise; Swanson's American in Salt Lake City; the Nolan Colorado circuit; Entire Poli Circuit in New England; Jensen and Von Herberg, Seattle; Lubliner and Trinz Circuit, Chicago; Gore Brothers, Ramish and Lesser, Los Angeles; Rialto Theatre, San Francisco; Turner and Dahnken Circuit, San Francisco; Bernard Depkin, Baltimore; and Bingham and Cohen, Indianapolis.

Pathe Gets Series Featuring Colored Casts

IN an announcement this week, Pathe tells of the acquisition of the first two comedies produced by the Harris Dickson Film Corporation, in which all colored players are featured.

These decidedly novel mirth-producers were made from stories written by Mr. Dickson, a Vicksburg police magistrate and one of America's foremost humorists, and which appeared in the Saturday Evening Post.

The first of the duo is "The Custard Nine," and the other will be released under the title of "The Beauty Contest." It was produced from "The Dark Horse," original title of the Saturday Evening Post story. Release dates and other distributing arrangements will be announced later.

Sees "Hurricane Hutch" and Lifts Serial Ban

Some time ago the Mayor of Eau Claire, Wis., pronounced a ban on all serial productions for screen showing in the city. He was recently invited to attend a showing of Pathe's latest chapter picture, starring Charles Hutchison, "Hurricane Hutch." Here's the letter just received at the Pathe home office:

"The Mayor of Eau Claire, after viewing 'Hurricane Hutch,' lifted his ban on serials. We have secured an excellent booking on this serial with the Eau Claire Amusement Company, which controls all theatres in this city."

Stahl's Next Will Be "The Fur Bringers"

Work on the scenario of Hulbert Footner's, "The Fur Bringers," is being pushed forward rapidly at the Mayer Studio in order that John M. Stahl may begin the actual work of shooting the picture as soon as he finishes the cutting of his latest film, "The Song of Life." The first of Louis B. Mayer's series of John M. Stahl Productions, "The Child Thou Gavest Me," is being released by First National.

"The Fox" Set for Oct. 15th

Stars Harry Carey in Second Jewel Release of Year; Thornby Directed

UNIVERSAL announces that the second of the twelve Jewel productions to be made during the current year will be released on October 15th. The title is "The Fox," and the star is Harry Carey. The first Jewel release was "No Woman Knows." "The Fox" is described as a thrilling piece of work, "absolutely complete and superb in every particular." Harry Carey plays the role of a government agent gathering evidence against a gang of holdup men and counterfeiters. Carey wrote the story. Robert Thornby directed. The supporting cast includes Betty Ross (opposite the star), Breezy Eason (in a child role), George Nichols, Gertrude Olmstead, Johnny Harron, Gertrude Claire, Alan Hale, George Cooper, Charles Lemoyne, C. E. Anderson, and Harley Chambers. Two troops of U. S. Cavalry also took part in some of the scenes.

Universal has been preparing for months for Harry Carey's debut as a Jewel star and feels that in "The Fox" it has something entirely out of the ordinary and quite of the quality and drawing power of the big money-making Jewels like "Outside The Law," "No Woman Knows" and "The Devil's Passkey." For two years, Carey was the big drawing card on the Special Attraction schedule and his pictures were uniformly popular East and West. So widespread had the demand for Carey pictures become that Mr. Laemmle determined to make him a Jewel star and give his productions all the latitude and opportunity for elaboration and completeness of detail, as well as massiveness, which characterize Jewel productions.

Following this decision, Carey was taken out of Special Attractions, Hoot Gibson was elevated to his place on the program and Carey, himself, set to work to insure his first Jewel being a knockout. After several productions had been discussed and discarded, Carey set to work on a picture which had been shaping itself in his mind for the last four or five years. In its original form, he called it "Partners," but, after it had been elaborated and put into scenario form by Lucien Hubbard, Scenario Editor of Universal City, it was thought that "The Fox" was the most appropriate name for the story.

2 New Rex Beach Subjects

Bennett to Film "Rainbow's End" and "The Net" for United Artists

WORD from the headquarters of United Artists advises that Rex Beach has selected two more of his popular stories to follow "The Iron Trail" into production for the screen. These stories will be produced by the recently organized Bennett Pictures Corporation for release by United Artists. The statement from United Artists further advises that Mr. Beach had some time ago set aside a number of his best works of fiction to await a time when he would be assured that these subjects would be handled in a big way for the screen and when he would locate a man possessing the triple qualifications of a producer, a showman, and distributor.

All of these conditions being met, the producing rights were assigned to the Bennett Picture Corporation, and during the coming season the greatest of the Rex Beach subjects will be issued through the United Artists.

The first of these will be "The Iron Trail," a sensational railroad drama set in Alaska. This production, scenarioized by Dorothy Farnum, has already been completed at the Bennett Studios in Yonkers, N. Y., and is now in the process of cutting and titling. It will be released as a seven-reel subject and will give to the screen the most advanced ideas in modern melodrama, it is declared.

Among the other stories on the special list, are "The Net," a powerful work dealing with social problems of the moment. This story though written by Mr. Beach before the "Red" situation reached its present stage, is described as timely in its theme and as powerful an exposé of the criminal working of secret organizations as could be written today.

Another story on the list is "The Rainbow's End," a novel that has attained popularity because of its delightfully fascinating account of buried treasures, of romantic adventure and its element of mystery.

Fox Completes "In Calvert's Valley"

"In Calvert's Valley," from the novel by Margaret Prescott Montague and picturized under the direction of Jack Dillon, starring John Gilbert, was finished last week at the William Fox studios in Hollywood.

400 Houses Booked for "Goldwyn Week"

THEATRES signing up to exhibit Goldwyn pictures for an entire week designated "Goldwyn Week," beginning Sunday, October 23, are rapidly increasing in number as the opening day approaches. Eleven of Goldwyn's twenty-two branch exchanges which had reported on Saturday, September 17 on the number of theatres signed up for the week gave a total in excess of 400

The Boston exchange led the ten in the number of theatres signed up, with St. Louis and Cleveland exchanges high up in the list and the others making good showings.

Exhibitor Runs Week of Selznick Pictures

Manager W. G. Atkinson, of the Star Theatre, Rockingham, N. C., tried an unusual experiment for a showman in a town under 5,000 population when he gave a full week of one-brand pictures, dividing the time among four attractions. He chose Selznick pictures and devoted week ending September 17 to their showings.

Conway Tearle, in "The Road of Ambition"; Zena Keefe, in "Red Foam," Vera Gordon, in "The Greatest Love"; and Norma Talmadge in "Ghosts of Yesterday" were the pictures shown. The local papers benefitted through half-page advertisements of the experiment, and Manager Atkinson otherwise "went after" the business like a big-town showman.

STATE RIGHT AND EXPORT NEWS AND VIEWS

Lillian Lashman and Charles E. Delaney starring "Fools Rush Out," the initial Sport comedy produced by H. C. Witmer Productions, Inc., for release by Fidelity

C. C. Burr Optimistic on Middle West Trip

Indicative of the rapid and general improvement in the industry, recently manifest throughout the Middle-west, is reflected in the correspondence Affiliated Distributors Home Office staff has had with President Charles C. Burr. Mr. Burr who is now on a combination sales and survey tour, strikes an optimistic note and in addition presages an early and complete return to normalcy.

His grip, originally made in the interests of Johnny Hines whirlwind romantic comedy, "Burn 'em up Barnes," which is now being independently distributed, has demonstrated the eagerness of the State Right buyers everywhere for really worthy product. In accordance with Mr. Burr's telegraphic instructions, all possible haste is being made by Affiliated Distributors Home Office staff in the preparation of the Edward Hemmer Production, "Sunshine Harbor," featuring Margaret Beecher, which attraction will constitute the next Affiliated release.

Record Bookings on the "Tarzan" Serial

Sam Zierler, president of Commonwealth Film Corporation, of New York which organization is distributing "Adventures of Tarzan" in Greater New York and Northern New Jersey, reports all booking records for his exchange shattered in connection with this serial.

Zierler has ten salesmen in the field mentioned selling "Adventures of Tarzan" and up-to-date contracts with one hundred and eighty houses which will present the latest Elmo Lincoln starring vehicle starting October first. In several instances circuits of six or more houses have contracted to play "Adventures of Tarzan" in each house.

Sarg's Many Activities

Book Illustrations and Toys Add to Fame of "Almanac" Creator

TONY SARG, creator of Tony Sarg's Almanac, the series of short subjects which has caused such a sensation in the picture industry, is a busy man these days. In addition to his weekly illustrations in the Saturday Evening Post of the famous Irvin Cobb stories, he has also completed the drawings for Mr. Cobb's latest book, "One-Third Off." The famous columnist, Don Marquis, has also selected Mr. Sarg to illustrate his new book.

The Tony Sarg Marionette book, which is announced for early publication by B. W. Huebsch, Inc., publishers, has also taken up a share of his time.

Now comes the announcement from Houghton Mifflin Company, famous publishers of Boston, that they have contracted with over 400 newspapers for the Tony Sarg's Almanac in syndicate form. They also announce the publication of Tony Sarg's Almanac book, both of which are to follow closely the screen version of Mr. Sarg's famous stories. This would seem sufficent unto the day for most people, but not so for Tony, who in addition to the above mentioned activities, is directing the final rehearsals of his wonderful marionettes, which open for the fall season at the Academy of Music in Brooklyn on September 29, preparatory to a two years' transcontinental tour.

And there is still more to the story, for only this week Messrs. George Borgfeldt & Co., the largest toy house in the world, have announced the acquisition of a collection of Tony Sarg toys for kids from 6 to 60.

And in addition the Famous Players announce the engagement of Mr. Sarg to create their comedy posters.

Jane Novak in New Series

Chester Bennett to Direct Star for Associated Photo-Plays, Inc.

WITH the signing of Jane Novak by the Associated Photo-Plays, Inc., for a series of five productions, it has just become known that Chester Bennett, the well-known Vitagraph director, has entered the ranks of producers.

The Jane Novak series will be released under the label of the Chester Bennett productions, distributed by the Associated Photo-Plays, Inc., through their franchise holders.

The news of the signing of the series has been enthusiastically received by all franchise holders and an increased interest in the product of the Associated Photo-Plays, Inc., has been reported at the New York office, states that company.

"Chester Bennett's long association with Vitagraph," said Victor B. Fisher, General Manager of the Associated Photo-Plays, Inc., "where he directed most of their best known productions, and such stars as Earle Williams and Antonio Moreno, fully justifies the confidence placed in him to produce a series that will stand out as the best of his career.

"As for Jane Novak, the very mention of her name brings visions of productions of the great outdoors that are immensely popular with motion picture fans all over the country. It is the intention of Mr. Bennett to produce for the Associated only stories of merit, breathing the spirit of the great outdoors, peopled with types of real men and women, taking part in tales that will afford the kind of censor-proof amusement that the public clamors for."

Mr. Fisher reports the following contracts signed almost immediately on announcing the series: Geo. M. A. Fecke, Motion Picture Corporation, for the New England States; Gene Marcus, 20th Century Film Co., Inc., for Eastern Pennsylvania and Southern New Jersey; H. Charnas, Standard Film Service Co., Inc., for Ohio, Michigan and Kentucky; W. G. Underwood, Specialty Film Co., for Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas; Al Kahn, Federated Film Exchange, Inc., for Iowa and Nebraska; Al Kahn, Federated Film Exchange, Inc., for Kansas and West Missouri; L. Hyman, All-Star Feature, distributing for California, Arizona, Nevada and Hawaiian Islands.

Graphic Film Offers New Feature

After months of hard work and careful preparation Ivan Abramson is about to launch for the screen an allegorical production entitled, "The Fountain of Youth."

"The Fountain of Youth" will be ready for the state right market in November.

Louis Weis on Tour to Sell "Tarzan" Serial

Louis Weiss, secretary of Adventures of Tarzan Serial Sales Corporation, left New York this week for a tour of the exchanges in Cleveland, Detroit, Chicago, Minneapolis, Milwaukee, Kansas City, Boston, Washington, Omaha, Seattle, and Toronto. He carries with him a set of prints of the "Adventures of Tarzan," starring Elmo Iincoln, and it is his plan to screen this production for those buyers who have not already purchased the serial. He will also carry photographic reproductions of the exploitation aids prepared for buyers and exhibitors and copies of the elaborate press-book.

The home-office reports that the serial has already been closed in more than fifty per cent of the territories.

"Sleepy Hollow" Finds Way to Screen

The Rare Entertainment Company has now completed arrangements for filming Washington Irving's famous "Legend of Sleepy Hollow" in its original settings near Tarrytown, New York, and will begin to cast for the production next week.

Negotiations are now under way to secure the services of one of the best male stars for the portrayal of Ichabod Crane, the Yankee schoolmaster.

Box Office Reports Appear in This Week's Issue

Arrow Film to Have Four Specials

W. E. SHALLENBERGER, president of the Arrow Film Corporation, announces the release of a new series of four special motion pictures. Ben Wilson, who has sponsored so many successes in recent years, will make this series of pictures from the works of the author, Peter B. Kyne, and he has secured as co-stars for this series Marjorie Daw and Roy Stewart, both of whom are stars in their own right with a large following among motion picture fans. Arrow feels that in offering this product to the state right buyers they are offering a sure fire combination which should prove one of the big money-makers of the year.

The first picture, "A Motion to Adjourn," is completed and ready for screening. This picture is from a story which appeared in the Saturday Evening Post which Dr. Shallenberger points out offers an additional exploitation and advertising angle that is of great value to exhibitors.

Leading Exchanges Close for Guinan Series

Among the prominent exchanges which have recently closed contracts on the first Guinan series of two-reel Westerns are the Quality Film Corporation of Pittsburgh, covering Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia, and the Lande Film Distributing Company, of Cleveland and Cincinnati, covering Ohio and Kentucky, both of these territories being closed for by H. V. Lande, President of these companies. Robert Lynch, acting on behalf of the Metro Film Exchange of Philadelphia, has acquired Southern New Jersey and Eastern Pennsylvania, while the state of Michigan has been sold to Merit Films, Inc., of Detroit. Northern Illinois, Indiana and Southern Wisconsin have gone to the Favorite Players Film Corporation of Chicago, and Northern Wisconsin, Minnesota, North Dakota and South Dakota have been taken by the Merit Film Corporation of Minneapolis.

Aywon Acquires "Fidelity" for Release

Among the productions which Hirsh, president of Aywon Film Corporation, has acquired for the state right market is a super-feature entitled "Fidelity," which is now being given the finishing touches in preparation for its forthcoming release.

"Fidelity" is an adaptation of the widely read novel, "Donna Maria," being a romance of political intrigue. The story is forceful and unique and is developed along very unusual lines. The principal roles are enacted by players of international repute.

New Selig Animal-Jungle Serial

Export and Import to Handle Picture; Production Starts

L. AUERBACH, vice-president and general manager of the Export and Import Film Company, Inc., has announced the closing of a contract between his company and Colonel W. H. Selig, whereby this pioneer in wild animal picture production will make pictures exclusively for the Export & Import Film Company for a period of three years.

Col. Selig's recent features include the two animal serial successes, "The Lost City" and "Miracles of the Jungle." The Selig Zoo in Los Angeles covers over thirty-five acres of ground and is one of the two greatest zoos in the world, its only rival being the Hagenbach Zoo in Germany.

Colonel Selig will immediately start production of a new animal-jungle serial which, he claims, will far outshine anything ever done in the chapter picture field. The story has already been selected and Sets are in readiness for the filming of the first episode, which will start at once. The serial will be of fifteen episode length.

The Export and Import Film Company will control the world rights to the new Selig serial. No statement has been made as to how the feature would be distributed in the United States.

Mr. Auerbach in commenting on his company's contract with Col. Selig was very enthusiastic over the new production arrangement. "The mere fact that Col. Selig will personally supervise this new serial and back it with the resources of his wonderful zoo would be enough to guarantee its immediate success.

"Col. Selig will not, however, rest on his past laurels. This serial is going to be radically different from anything heretofore produced. The wise exhibitor knows that the public is saturated with the ordinary picture and is now demanding the adventure type of films.

"The wise exhibitor also is aware of the fact that the serial picture, as a rule, was chock-full of unrealities. The concensus of opinion amongst the better class of exhibitors is that the serial picture would be more widely welcomed everywhere were the producers to recognize this fact.

"The new Selig serial will offer a surprise to the whole industry. There will, as I mentioned, be many radical departures from the usual, in its making. We will use no 'skins' in the picture. Every animal in the picture will be the real thing and not a man dressed up in a make-shift costume. This, aside from the unusual plot of the story, will give us more reality.

"Most important of all, the villain will not be the same throughout the serial. As each of the series of adventures which lead the hero and heroine across China, India and Africa is terminated, the particular villain of that episode will pass out of the story. This is one of the big facts which will make the new Selig animal-jungle film a pleasing attraction for the best photoplay houses."

Ince-Bosworth Combine a Hit

"The Cup of Life" is Getting High Praise from Critics

THE combination of Thomas H. Ince as producer, and Hobart Bosworth as the leading player in a story of the sea and the Orient has struck a popular chord, and "The Cup of Life," the current release through First National exchanges is winning high praise from critics.

"The Cup of Life" is a colorful tense drama laid in Singapore with enough thrills to satisfy the lovers of melodrama and enough beauty to please the most fastidious audiences.

It went over so big in a recent test conducted by an exhibitor in Cleveland before a selected audience against one of the season's biggest specials, that it won bookings at the Circle and the Strand where it won the unanimous approval of the local press.

Big bookings reported to date on "The Cup of Life" include the Scollay Square of Boston, the Fenway, Boston; the Empire, Quebec; the Isis, Houston; Colonial, Reading; Criterion, Oklahoma City; Crown, Mobile, and the entire Loew circuit of New York. It was the first picture to get 100 days' booking on Loew's Metropolitan time.

Critics have been extravagant in their praise not only of Hobart Bosworth's work but of the clever performance of Madge Bellamy, the Ince "find," and the character portrayal of Tully Marshall who has been given the biggest role of the season in the production.

The story is from the pen of Carey Wilson, well-known short-story writer, who has a wide acquaintance in the distribution branch of the motion picture industry. It was directed by Rowland V. Lee.

George Larkin and Helen Holmes, co-starring in Russell Productions

Title Hallroom Comedy "Two Musketeers"

"Two Musketeers" is the title around which a brand new Hallroom Boys Comedy is being built, is the latest news from the production centre of these two-reel gloom-chasers featuring Sid Smith. Harry Cohn, the producer of these comedies has wired from the Coast that a new production under that title is already well under way and that Two Musketeers are all that are needed to make a comedy that is hilariously funny.

The comedy will be shipped East shortly for release through Federated Film Exchanges of America, Inc.

"Burn 'em Up Barnes" Sales Reported

Confirmation was obtained this week from Charles C. Burr, President of the Affiliated Distributors, Inc., and the producer of "Burn 'em up Barnes," featuring Johnny Hines, of the sale of the territorial rights of that production for the states of Colorado, New Mexico, Wyoming, Utah and Southern Idaho to the Mountain States Film Co., of Denver, Colo.

Affiliated Distributors, Inc., also announce the sale of the territorial rights, State of Texas, for "Lonely Heart," Edgar Selwyn's stirring drama of the oil fields, starring Kay Laurell, to the First National Exchange, Dallas, Texts.

Several Featured Players in "Dry Water"

The latest release in the Aladdin single reel comedy series being produced for the Reelcraft Pictures Corporation by the Shiller Productions is to be titled "Dry Water," and will have the combined services of several of the stars from the Shiller Production ranks.

Bobby Burns, lately featured in the Sun-Lite series, appears in one of the principal roles, as does Billy Gilbert who has also been featured in the series; Billy Moran is also featured as usual, supported by a large cast.

County Fair races and numerous shots from an aeroplane are among the features of the production.

Beier Is N. Y. Manager for Reelcraft

Murry Beier has been selected by President R. C. Cropper of the Reelcraft Pictures Corporation as manager of the New York exchange.

The installation of Beier as manager means the entire and complete reorganization of the New York Exchange, it is stated. The sales force under Beier will consist of Charles Stammerman, Arthur Gerschin and Raymond M. Flacks, all of whom are well known throughout the Greater New York Territory. The first effort of the new Sales force will be a special Independent Month drive in the interests of the Reelcraft Mirth, Aladdin and Sun Lite comedies.

Dixon on Auto Tour to Find "Scenic Poems"

Final preparations for a transcontinental motor trip, approximating 11,000 miles, were made this week by Rollin Lester Dixon, internationally known as a painter and photographer of landscapes and the former Chief Cinematographer of the Wanamaker Indian Commission expedition which recorded in film, the tribal customs and usages of the American Indian and who is now engaged in contributing his "Scenic Poems" to "Burr's Novel Review," a reel of widely diversified novelties, sponsored and independently distributed by Charles C. Burr.

On October 8th, Mr. Dixon will leave Portsmouth, N. H. and will proceed to Tucson, Arizona, where he will make his headquarters for at least six months.

"Heart of North" Sold for Michigan

A new sale was added to the already lengthy list of territory sold on "The Heart of the North," the George H. Davis-Joe Brandt special feature, with the disposal this week of the entire Michigan territory.

The rights to this territory were secured by Strand Features of Detroit, in record time, following a personal arrangement made by Mr. Brandt with Strand Features, during a single day's stay in Detroit made by Mr. Brandt this week.

Champions Small Producer

M. H. Hoffman, of Tiffany Productions, Sees Their Bright Future

M. H. HOFFMAN, general manager of the Tiffany Productions, under whose banner Mae Murray is appearing in a series of big pictures beginning with "Peacock Alley," stands amongst the champions of independent activity in the field of motion pictures.

Recently at the Mae Murray studios in New York, Mr. Hoffman gave a luncheon to a small gathering of men prominent in the mercantile fields. In the course of his remarks Mr. Hoffman stressed several points which are of vital interest to every man and woman engaged in motion picture work.

"There are," said Mr. Hoffman, "two extremes in the motion picture industry. We have the impractical dreamer whose ideals and unwarranted extravagance are his chief weaknesses. Then we have the too practical business man. His strength is also his weakness, for he is under the delusion that motion picture dramas can be turned out by the mile and sold by the foot like office partitions.

"It is true that program productions must be made upon a standardized cost basis, but this practice, however necessary, leaves its mark upon every picture produced under this system.

"And then again, the expenditure of a vast sum of money in itself does not make a great picture. Big productions which aspire to higher standards, pictures based upon authentic dramatic principles must have life breathed into them like any other creations of art. To produce such, inspiration must have sway.

"The artist, whether actor, author or director, must put part of himself, his life, his spiritual being into the fabric of his picture.

"This is the principle which Robert Z. Leonard is working upon, in his task of directing the Mae Murray series of super productions."

H. C. Witwer to Produce

Author and W. G. Smith to Release Series of 12 Two-Reel Comedies

OUT of the new fall activity comes the announcement of the formation of the H. C. Witwer Productions, Inc., launched by the well known author of the same name together with W. G. Smith of Fidelity Pictures Corp. the latter to act as distributor. The company is to have a series of twelve two-reel situation comedies starring Charles E. Delaney.

"Fools Rush Out," a Witwer story known to the readers of the American magazine, has been selected as the first of the series to be transferred to the screen and is ready for release this week. The production has been personally supervised by the author and starts in the title role Delaney who is the original character that has inspired the Witwer stories in Popular, Cosmopolitan, the American, Collier's and other national magazines. Opposite to Delaney is Lillian Tashman, former Ziegfeld Follies beauty.

"Work on the second of the series has been started this week, it is announced by Mr. Smith. Referring to the new productions he said, "H. C. Witwer is known to the many thousands of Americans throughout the length and breadth of the Continent who have read and are reading his short story masterpieces of breezy American life and incident. Without a doubt Witwer has no rival in his special field and in the characterization he has woven around the person of Charles Delaney whom he has put in his stories and in his pictures. Delaney is the breeziest of breezy Americans and the sort of character already known to over a million current readers of the American magazine."

Russell Signs Two Stars

George Larkin and Helen Holmes to Make Series of Two Reelers

GEORGE LARKIN and Helen Holmes have just been engaged by W. D. Russell to make a series of two-reel Westerns for Russell Productions. Both stars are particularly well known for their skill as stunt-artists. Helen Holmes, whose achievements under the American banner, such as "Lass of the Lumberlands" and "Railroad Raiders," are well known has been accepted as one of the most fearless screen actresses of today and has been selected with a view toward exploiting this very quality of hers in the Westerns. Her talents are not limited to mere acrobatic skill, her most recent picture, "Ghost City," a five-reel feature, being a fine example of her dramatic ability, as well.

George Larkin is similarly versatile. His popularity has been established by his connections with a number of the foremost producers.

This is the first time these two stars played together, and fine results can be expected from their combined strength. Work on the new series has already commenced at the Russell studio under the direction of Nobert Myles. The Larkin-Holmes series will be released on the state rights market and most of the territory already has been signed up.

M. H. Hoffman

Texas Guinan in California Sierras

The exterior scenes of the first release of the new series of Texas Guinan two-reel Western and Northwestern productions are being photographed at Camp Keene, high up in the San Jacinto Mountains of California. The story, which is entitled "Texas of the Mounted," deals with the Northwest Mounted Police and is from the pen of Charles A. Short. General Manager Jesse J. Goldburg, who is in charge of the Guinan organization, transported a company of twenty-one people, twelve horses and all requisite paraphernalia to this remote spot, among the tall pines and snow-capped peaks of the higher California Sierras, to obtain the correct setting for this production. The locations chosen were never before photographed for any other motion picture. A number of the local tribe of Indians on the ground were utilized in some of the scenes and there was also employed in the picture a dog named "Caesar," which has the reputation of being the most intelligent Malamute dog ever used in motion picture work. This dog has an important part in two of the thrilling scenes of the production.

Among the stunts effected in the picture, the most hazardous was that of Miss Guinan lassoing a stump across a chasm seventy-five feet wide, tying the loose end to the horn of her saddle and climbing hand-over-hand across the chasm, which is more than 1500 feet deep.

Borzage Film for Release by American

It is announced by the American Film Company, of Chicago, that "Silent Shelby," a five-reel Western feature, is now ready for release. It is further stated that the picture is available to exhibitors in many sections of the country.

Frank Borzage personally directed this feature. He is co-starred with Ann Little. They are supported by an unusually strong cast, including Jack Richardson Harvey Clark, Laura Sears and Perry Banks. Frank B. Clark is author of the story.

Welcome "Four Seasons"

First Kineto Feature Wins Press Praise After New York Showing

UNUSUAL enthusiasm was apparent on the part of the Rialto theatre audiences all during this week when "The Four Seasons," the first Urban Popular Classic to be published in feature length, was shown.

The newspaper critics were as enthusiastic as were the audiences. Quinn L. Martin writing in the New York World, said: "While 'The Great Impersonation,' a pictured mystery story of very real holding power, is the featured photodrama at the Rialto for the week, a Charles Urban Special Kineto production entitled, 'The Four Seasons,' a four-reel nature film made by Raymond Ditmars, curator of the Bronx Zoo, gets our vote as being one of the most interesting and fascinating pictures we have ever seen."

The New York Herald in its superlative review said: "An enthralling film calendar, 'The Four Seasons,' collected by Raymond Ditmars and presented by Charles Urban, that makes life twice as grand as ever and geography and biology easy to learn in four reels."

Harriette Underhill of the New York Tribune, wrote: "A very beautiful and interesting picture is called 'The Four Seasons:' a reel being devoted to each season. Besides being especially designed to delight the eye, 'The Four Seasons' contains as much information about the more or less dumb animals as a series of 'Bedtime Stories.'"

Alison Smith, writing in the Globe, said: "Raymond Ditmars, who has seen so many seasons rise and wane at the Botanical Gardens, has decided to make a movie of them. The result is one of the most captivating and absorbing scenic pictures of the year, with far more plot and action than most movie 'dramas.' He has dramatized the four seasons at the Zoo with something of the charm of Fabre's 'Social Life in the Insect World,' though this picture includes the animals as well and their fugitive backgrounds that shift with the changing seasons."

Sale on "Heedless Moths"

All-Star Feature of California, Buys Rights on Equity Feature

LOUIS HYMAN of the All Star Feature Film Co., with offices in San Francisco, has purchased the rights for California, Arizona and Nevada on Equity's picture, "Heedless Moths," presenting Audrey Munson, world's most famous artist's model.

"I want an audience picture," says Hyman, "that will stay put and make good for our customers, and it must possess genuine possibilities for exploitation of unusual character. 'Heedless Moths' has actually more to talk about than many of the biggest advertised State Rights pictures that I have ever seen.

"More than one and one-quarter millions of dollars in absolutely unpurchasable newspaper space was used to tell Audrey Munson's intimate story of studio secrets to the American people. The Los Angeles Examiner carried these special Sunday feature stories and thousands more than the Examiner's regular subscribers bought the papers because of this unusual series of feature specials. I know this to be true because I was among those who watched for every Sunday's issue regularly in order to read these stories. I sent out post card questionnaires to people all over our territory asking in just one sentence if they had ever heard of Audrey Munson. I got 84 per cent replies in the affirmative. That convinced me that 'Heedless Moths' would go across with a smash backed by the tremendous personal advertising Miss Munson has had and is still getting constantly throughout the country. Robert Leonard, who directed the picture, put his usual costly touch to it and I haven't the slightest doubt that the picture cost all and more than Equity told me."

Kashin Now a Distributor

Exhibitor Enters Independent Field; "I Defy" First Release

TO signalize his re-entrance into the field of motion picture distribution after an absence of more than a year, Morris A. Kashin this week announces the formation of his own distributing company and simultaneously the name of his initial release. The announcement serves to definitely set at rest rumors which have gained currency in film circles recently as to the future plans of Mr. Kashin whose presence in New York during the past month has been engulfed in mystery.

The name of Mr. Kashin's new distributing unit will be disclosed just as soon as corporate papers filed in Albany this week are approved by the Secretary of State and re-forwarded to the company's executive offices. The name of Mr. Kashin's first release has been copyrighted under the title of "I Defy!".

Mr. Kashin announces that the production will have its world's premiere on Broadway. Negotiations are at present in progress for the acquisition of one of New York's biggest theatres, and announcement will be made of the name of the theatre and the date of the scheduled showing just as soon as the necessary arrangements are closed.

Big Sale on "Judgment"

World Film Sells New England Rights to Cosmopolitan Film

THAT the New England rights for the big spectacle-drama, "Judgment," have been sold to the Cosmopolitan Film Co., is the announcement made during the past week by Milton C. Work, President of World Film Corporation. As indicating the character of the production, it is said that a five-figure check was delivered when the contracts were signed.

"Judgment" is one of the headliners on World Film's list of new pictures for Fall and Winter release, and has been extensively advertised as an unusual opportunity for independent buyers. It is a dramatization of the famous drama, "Mary Tudor," by Victor Hugo, and is said to be one of the biggest productions ever offered independently.

"'Judgment' has everything that goes to make a big box-office attraction," said Mr. Work recently. "Its sets are stupendous; its ensembles number thousands; the acting of its distinguished cast headed by Ellen Richter, is perfect—but above all, it has a story—one which will appeal to any audience. If anyone knew the secret of writing tense drama, it was Victor Hugo, and Hugo's famous story of England's famous queen has been perfectly screened in our super-picture, 'Judgment.' Hugo was not a believer in the 'unhappy ending.' 'Judgment' has a finish which, while it is unexpected and thrilling, will satisfy any audience."

Arrow Reports Many Sales

Activity of Independent Market Proved; Foreign Sales Reported

ONE of the best indications of the activity of the exchanges in the independent market comes from the Arrow Film Corporation who announces this week the consummation of several very important sales.

The statement lists the closing of the territory in Iowa and Nebraska for the Arrow Comedy Franchise, consisting of 52 two-reel pictures, the series of four Grace Davison special productions, "Headin' North," starring Pete Morrison; "The Stranger in Canyon Valley," starring Edyth Sterling; "The Star Reporter," starring Billie Rhodes; the new series of Ben Wilson productions, starring Jack Hoxie, consisting of six specials and also series of four Peter B. Kyne productions. starring Marjorie Daw and Roy Stewart, likewise Ben Wilson productions. This contract was closed with Mr. C. C. Bridwell, of the Reelcraft Film Co., Davenport, Iowa. Arrow Sport Pictorials: Four James Oliver Curwood productions, produced by Pine Tree Pictures, Inc., were sold to Stephenson Attractions, Toronto, Canada, for Canada.

A wire from Baltimore, Md., announces the closing of contracts for the series of four James Oliver Curwood productions, and Arrow's new serial, "Man of the North," produced by Ben Wilson, and starring Ann Little, as well as the closing of a contract with Palmore and Hommond for Arrow Comedy Franchise.

Arrow also announces the closing of some important contracts for foreign distribution.

D. J. Mountain announces the closing of a contract for the Philippine Islands for practically the entire 1921 output of the Arrow Film Corporation. This includes a minimum of 36 features, two series of comedies and three serials. This contract was closed with Mr. M. Donald Reyes of Manila, P. I.

Van Dyke Brooke Passes Away

VAN DYKE BROOKE, one of the best known directors and popular actors of the screen and legitimate stage, passed away Saturday, September 17, at 1:30, following a hurried trip to Saratoga Springs, N. Y., where he was advised by physicians to go, with a hope of regaining his failing health. After three days the struggle ended, and the news of his death came as a shock to his many friends and admirers.

Mr. Brooke was among the first of motion picture directors, serving at the Vitagraph for eight and a half years, in the early days, during which time he directed well known stars of today, Maurice Costello, Norma Talmadge, John Bunny, Mary Fuller and Alice Lake.

Following a successful career as a director, but finding the work exacting, he became an actor again, and was cast in some of the most important releases of 1920-21.

Burial services were held in Detroit, Mich., and interment at Elwood Cemetery, near his old home. Mrs. Brooke and Tom Brooke, also well known as an actor, were with him to the last, the latter having finished his work in "Smilin' Through" just previous to being called to his brother's bedside.

The entire motion picture industry will mourn the loss of Van Dyke Brooke, member of the Green Room Club, Elks' Club, Masonic Lodge and Motion Picture Directors' Association.

Up to the Exhibitors to Spread Gospel of Fire Prevention

Let Each One Do His Share on Fire Prevention Day

Probably everyone will accept the statement that the movies have come to stay—that they are recognized as a permanent feature of American amusements. The old time theatres, of course, where the spectator gets more clearly the personality of the players, and where the play, however intricate, may be made to stand out through spoken words, will always attract those who are lovers of the art of expression.

That the people of the United States are not only willing to accept the amusement features of the movie theatres, but appreciates their educational value as well, is evidenced by the fact that twenty new movie theatres are constructed every week and that the cost of movie theatre buildings in one year approximates $100,000,000.

Probably ten times more people are gathered together in crowds in the theatres of the United States each week than in all other public gatherings put together. The theatre-goers, therefore, whether they patronize the movies or the "legitimates" are vitally interested in any concerted movement which has for its object reduction of fire hazards in buildings in general, and theatres in particular.

Considering the appliances used in movie theatres, it is an undeniable compliment to the managers of these theatres that they have so clean a record in the number of fires and accidents resulting therefrom. However, with all the precautions taken, such as enclosing the operating room in fireproof vaults, protection of electrical fixtures, provision of exits, fire-escapes, etc., the theatre building itself should in the final analysis afford a protection which cannot be had in anything less than the highest type of fire-resistive construction.

Fire Prevention Week will end with Fire Prevention Day, October 9. This period will be observed throughout the United States with educational propaganda to get the people in general to see the necessity of doing everything possible to eliminate our criminal fire loss of over $500,000,000 yearly, plus 15,000 or more lives. The movies have an opportunity to reach more people in a more decisive and permanent way than any other agency. Fire prevention film may not be available but slides can be run such as "LET'S STOP BEING FIRE WORSHIPERS," "AN ANNUAL BONFIRE OF OVER $500,000,000 IS A LUXURY WHICH NO NATION CAN AFFORD," "FIGHT FIRE WHEN YOU BUILD—NOT AFTER."

Architects and engineers know how to build buildings that won't burn. In Europe a man who has a fire has to pay the cost of putting it out, and may have to pay the damage done to his neighbors resulting from the fire. Carelessness may be excused because not intentional, but the result of careless acts are just as vital as though they were premeditated. Carelessness that results in fires, either after the building is constructed or because a tinder pile was built, cannot be condoned by our citizenship.

Recently, a fire occurred in a church while the minister was delivering his sermon. A panic was averted when the minister admonished the people to keep their seats and that there was no danger because the building was concrete and could not burn. When a film catches on fire, how many managers of movie theatres can come to the front and tell their audiences to keep their seats because the theater is of concrete and cannot burn?

People won't change their habits about using matches, keeping their houses warm, and other practices which are a recognized part of human life. Any attempt to develop sentiment to change these habits would be a failure, but greater carefulness can be instilled into the minds of the people through appropriate illustration of what fire loss and fire waste mean, and in addition showing them that they can be housed in fire-safe homes, or when in churches, schools, and most of all in movie theatres, they can have through buildings that will not burn the protection of life to which they are entitled. We shall then no longer be justly accused of being a nation of fire worshipers.

The movies can help. They can help more than any other agency. Theatre-goers do not require a continuous laughing fit, nor is it necessary that they be carried alternately into the depths of grief and hilarity. Real truths about the obligations of citizenship and how to compass a national good would constitute a refreshing change from the sort of pictures which millions of people see every day at the movies.

Opportunity means responsibility. The Fire Prevention Week

OCTOBER 1 to October 9 is known as Fire Prevention Week.

October 9 is known as Fire Prevention Day.

Every exhibitor in the United States can help cut down fire losses by spreading the Gospel of fire prevention, especially in construction of fireproof buildings.

Let each and every one of us start the week right by cleaning up the basements and other places where dirt collects in a theatre. Then look over the fire extinguishers. Make sure someone hasn't emptied them to use the liquid for cleaning clothes.

Take down the fire hose. It may be completely rotted. Test it out if you have a chance.

Leave no stone unturned to prevent loss of property or life through fire. Then after you have done that, popularize the movement by telling your patrons all about it with messages on the screen. Help to impress upon the public that the motion picture theatres of the country are built for safety and comfort of the patron. Do something to help the cause. Remember the date, October 9, Fire Prevention Day.

Baton Rouge, La., Has Wonder Playhouse in Columbia

Beautiful Theatre Was Designed with Doric Temple as Motif

During the celebration of the 1920 yuletide, workmen began demolishing the old home of the Columbia Theatre, Baton Rouge, La., preparing ground for the present beautiful structure which has arisen in its place in the space of the few intervening months.

The new Columbia was constructed along original lines by W. E. Stephens, of the firm of Prather and Stephens, who has supervised every step of the construction work, as well as prepared the plans and specifications for that which has proven to be the most thoroughly equipped and scientifically built motion picture playhouse in the South.

In preparing the plans for the new Columbia, Manager Higginbotham always held first in mind the essential feature of Safety, made it a point to safeguard the patrons of the theatre in every way possible. The plans and specifications for this structure were submitted for critical comment to one of the most eminent structural engineers in the United States, Ole K. Olsen, of New Orleans, who, after careful study and analysis, pronounced the safety of the structure far in excess of the standard engineering practices adopted by the Engineers of this country.

The Columbia Theatre is a thoroughly fireproof building and is rated as such by the Bureau of Fire Underwriters. In addition, it is equipped with twelve fire or panic exits. It is also an important fact that all the main exits are in axial alignment with the aisles.

One has heard only too frequently the complaint as to the uncomfortableness of the seats in the majority of the playhouses, here as elsewhere, and in working out the "comfort" part of the plan particular attention was paid to the spacing of the seats, which exceeds the standard seating spaces of American theatres by three inches. The chairs are the most comfortable obtainable, and were manufactured by one of the largest chair manufactories in the country, and are of pompeiian finish.

Many unusual features are embodied in this beautiful house. The Columbia is the first theatre in the country to have floor lights for use in the aisles. These lights were especially made for the Columbia theatre and are an innovation in the movie world.

The Columbia is equipped with three six foot Typhoon twin-fans which can be operated as blowers or exhaust, which enables the management to change every cubic inch of air in the entire house every 72 seconds, equal to changing 238,000 cubic feet of air at the rate of 3,306 cubic feet per minute.

In addition to the fans, additional exhaust registers are placed in the rear of the balcony. The vent shafts are equipped with aspirating coils for use during the winter. The building is equipped with overhead "Honeywell" hot-water system, affording automatic temperature control, maintaining an even temperature at all times.

The lighting equipment is one of the mos flexible known, enabling the brilliant illumina tion of the house at a flash, or showing the mos subdued of lights as necessity may dictat There is a special arrangement of automati dimmer-bank controls, the second of its kind i the United States, the California theatre of Lo Angeles, California being the first, installin their automatic controls about thirty days ahea of the Columbia.

A Robert-Morton organ, equipped wit Chimes, Xylophone and Harp Celeste has bee installed and will be heard at every perform ance.

TIMES HAVE CHANGED

DO YOU remember your first moving picture? Do you remember the place you saw it? In those days motion picture houses were crude. Their exterior was uninviting. Their interior stuffy, congested and ill ventilated.

But times have changed. Motion pictures have become an art. And with their advance have come vast improvements in motion picture houses. The public demanded better theatres in which to witness the plays. And the producers knew the wisdom of heeding this demand.

Today thousands of motion picture houses all over the country typify the best in Theatre Architecture. Everywhere successful managers and producers are recognizing the advertising value of an attractive theatre front. It is a business puller. And it gets the profits.

The fact that the large majority of modern picture houses are faced with Terra Cotta is ample evidence of the satisfactory quality of this popular material. Reasons are not hard to find. Economical in initial cost Terra Cotta is almost negligible in cost of maintenance. Made in any form or color its unlimited plasticity makes it adaptable to any type of architecture. In addition, Terra Cotta is fireproof, weather proof and dirt proof. A simple washing with soap and water will restore the original bright surface.

Let us help you with your building problem. Whether you are planning an entire new theatre or merely an alteration of your present one, we can be of service. Address: National Terra Cotta Society, 1 Madison Avenue, New York City.

A New and Better Method of Laying Linoleum and Cork Carpet

HARDLY less important than the quality of the materials themselves is the manner in which Battleship Linoleum and Cork Carpet are laid. If this work is not done properly, maximum service from the floor is impossible.

When we placed an unequivocal money-back guarantee on all Gold-Seal Linoleums and Gold-Seal Cork Carpets, we took the first great step toward complete user satisfaction.

Now we have taken the second and final step. We have worked out a method of laying these Gold-Seal products which insures maximum service on the floor.

This new method was developed by our experts after consultation with experienced architects and floor-covering contractors — after many months spent in thorough investigation of the results obtained by various methods of laying. From the mass of accurate information thus secured, the new Gold-Seal Specification for Laying was evolved. It is clear and exact in every detail, and covers every ordinary condition. In the event of unusual conditions, not covered by our specifications, call upon our flooring experts for free assistance and co-operation.

When you incorporate this new specification in your flooring contract you are assured of two things—(1) the highest grade materials —Gold-Seal products backed by an out-and-out money-back guarantee—(2) that these materials will be laid by a method that makes perfect results a certainty.

Why not be sure? Let us send you copies of the Gold-Seal Specification for laying Battleship Linoleum or Cork Carpet.

Calydon, as told by Plato in his stories of Atlantis. The decorating is in a variety of creams, which are most restful and pleasing to the eye, giving one a sense of complete comfort. The drapings are in electric blue with tango trimmings, presenting a harmonious scheme for the various tints of cream which predominate in the decoration.

The sounding board over the proscenium arch is equipped with ornamental lattice construction opening to the expression chambers of the Robert-Morton Organ.

While the house is principally a motion picture house, it has a full stage equipment with foot and border lights of the latest design, permitting of the staging of vaudeville. The stage floor is fire-proof, as is the balance of the house and the dressing rooms behind the stage.

The entire orchestra floor is without a post, doing away with the old time methods of obstructing vision. The proscenium part of the orchestra floor has been shaped so as to permit a full view of the screen from the most extreme seats in the house. The seating capacity of this floor is over 600.

The mezzanine floor is taken up with box seats for the entire width of the house in front of the foyer. This mezzanine floor is extended on both sides of the wall with spacious wall boxes, providing approximately 200 box seats. The mezzanine floor can be approached by four distinct sets of fire-proof stairways. The boxes are furnished with large individual upholstered wicker chairs.

The projection room is located immediately back of the mezzanine floor directly over the foyer. The room is equipped with the Type "S" motor driven Simplex machines. The throw to the Gold Fibre Screen is 106 ft. 4 inches. The Columbia is novel in that the projection machines are on a horizontal with the center of the screen, claimed by the Columbia people to be the only method by which undistorted picture can be thrown on the screen.

The balcony can be approached by two distinct fire-proof stairways. It is built thoroughly fireproof and is equipped with the same comfortable chairs as the orchestra floor. The maximum seating capacity of the balcony is 300, bringing the total seating capacity of the house to the 1,100 mark.

Hallway between the foyer and the balcony there is located on one side a ladies' parlor, equipped with attractive furniture and fixtures. The opposite side of the corresponding space is taken up by the manager's office and ushers' locker-room.

One of the most sanitary and novel conveniences in the building are the drinking fountains which are located to each side of the foye These fountains have a water-spurt extended t the end of a lion's mouth. To cause a flow o water, it is necessary to press a pedal valv This does away with the old-fashioned faucet manipulated by hand, and are absolutely san tary for that reason.

A special sidewalk is being manufactured t run the entire width of the building. This side walk will be of caustic tile of a special desig in harmony with the theme of the building.

The executive officers and staff of the Colum bia are composed of the following: L. F. Har president; A. Higginbotham, vice-president an general manager; Mrs. A. Higginbotham, Secr tary-treasurer; Thos. Downey, director of pub licity; E. H. Charlton, musical director; Tho Fennell, Oranist; Wm. A. Donahoo, projectio engineer: Geo. H. Ohio Exhibitors Transfer Their Motion Picture Activities to Athens, Greece

Gus Russellis, Their Projectionist, Visits U. S. to Study Mechanism of Simplex in Factory

Fourteen years ago, John Pekras and Melto Phelos, who owned and controlled the extensive chain of "Paradise" confectionery stores in the Buckeye State, opened their first motion picture theatre in Elyria, Ohio. Less than a year ago, the Strand American, Dreamland and Colonial theatres in that same city, were sold to Owen Bannon by these two energetic men who not only stood out in confectionery circles, but in the Ohio group of exhibitors as well.

One of the reasons for the selling out of their theatre interests lay in the fact that Mr. Phelos had made a pilgrimage to his home in Athens, and while there had sensed the tremendous possibilities through the application of American methods of film distribution and exhibiting. The result of this survey is found in the formation of the Pekras & Phelos Film Company with offices at No. 1 Platia Kolokotronie, Athens, with a First National exhibitors franchise, together with a Simplex Projector franchise for Greece. This company has already spent some $900,000 in acquiring theatre properties in Athens which represent three houses with seating capacity of several thousand each.

In order that the very best possible service may be rendered to Simplex users in Greece, the Messrs. Pekras and Phelos arranged that their projection chief, Gustavius Russellis, should spend some time in the mechanical department of the Simplex factory. Mr. Russellis was for many years in charge of projection in the theatre circuit in Elyria, and is rather proud of the fact that he operated the very first Simplex to be installed in the State of Ohio many years ago.

Gustavius Russellis, projectionist of Athens, Greece, who has been studying the Simplex machine at the Precision Company's factory

Mr. Russellis spent nine days in all at the Simplex plant, and when he sailed last Wednesday on the Greek Liner "Acropolis," he carried with him, not only four complete Simplex machines and a most extensive collection of tools, jigs, and parts, but the wealth of knowledge gained first hand through his intensive course with the Simplex experts in the many departments which help in producing the well-known Simplex products.

Stegemeier Brothers of Indianapolis, Ind., are ready to start their $175,000 Terrace theatre, which will be located at 17-19 North Illinois street, Indianapolis. The house will be completed early in the spring. The theatre will have a frontage of forty-four feet and will be 120 feet deep. It will have a seating capacity of 1,200. The auditorium will hold 500 persons. The projection booth will be suspended from the roof to avoid taking up room that can be used for seating space. The front will be made of glazed terra cotta and will be well illuminated with flood lights. A restaurant will be in the basement of the building. The house will be leased to the Central Amusement Co. Vonnegut, Bohn and Mueller are the architects.

A New Booklet on a New Subject

"The Motion Picture Theatre, Its Interior Illumination and the Selection of the Screen"

Prepared by the Kodak Research Laboratory
Published by the Eastman Kodak Company

This booklet, the result of a long series of practical experiments conducted by experts at the Kodak Research Laboratory offers to the trade for the first time accurate information on a subject of first importance to all owners and managers of motion picture houses.

It points the way in specific terms to theatre lighting so ideal that printed matter –a program for example—can be read without eye-strain even while the picture is on the screen.

The booklet is free on request.

Sioux City Proud of the New Garden Theatre; a Model for a Small House

The citizens of Sioux City may well be proud of the new Garden theatre devoted to motion picture features, recently opened by Sam. Lippman of that city.

For a theatre of its size, it is one of the most up-to-date in the city in all of its appointments especially with respect to the comfort of its patrons.

Mr. Lippman has installed a heating and cooling system entirely new in that part of the country, which consists of a large ventilating duct six feet square leading from the operating room level to the roof, where there is installed a five foot fan, operated from a 7½ H. P. motor.

In the summer this fan is used to draw in cool air and circulate it through the auditorium and in the winter, this same fan, by having a single radiator arranged below it, circulates fresh warm air. In this way the theatre is kept uniformly cool in summer and uniformly warm in winter.

The auditorium is approximately 35 feet wide x 110 feet long with a distance from the projector to the screen of 95 feet. The Minusa Gold fibre screen is 9 ft. x 12 ft. in size. The seating capacity is 235.

The projection room, unlike those found in many other theatres, is roomy, there being ample space for three projectors and one spot light and for the generator.

At the present time two projectors are installed and a Hallberg motor generat

The complete equipment of this theat was furnished by the United Theat Equipment Corporation.

Sioux City is proud of its model Garden Theatre. Although seating but 235 persons, it is thoroughly modern in its seating, ventilating and projection room equipment.

New Method of Handlin Waiting Patrons

A change in the method of handling t patrons of the Palace Theatre is und consideration by I. Libson, who stated th he is awaiting the arrival of plans befo making a definite announcement of the i novation.

The scheme provides for utilizing vacant store room east of the present lobl as a part of the entrance to the pl house. The existing ticket arrangeme would be maintained and the extra spa to the east would form a waiting room f patrons while waiting to enter the theat Under existing conditions waiting patro are exposed to the weather.

Unless your theatre is really fire-safe you can see how you are gambling with human life.

That so few lives are lost through theatre fires is a real tribute to the foresight of theatre owners who have built the fire menace out of their theatres with true fire-safe construction, such as concrete.

Fire Prevention Week starts October 1. If your theatre is built of fire-safe concrete, show a slide daily, giving your patrons that message

Let every day be Fire Prevention Day in your theatre.

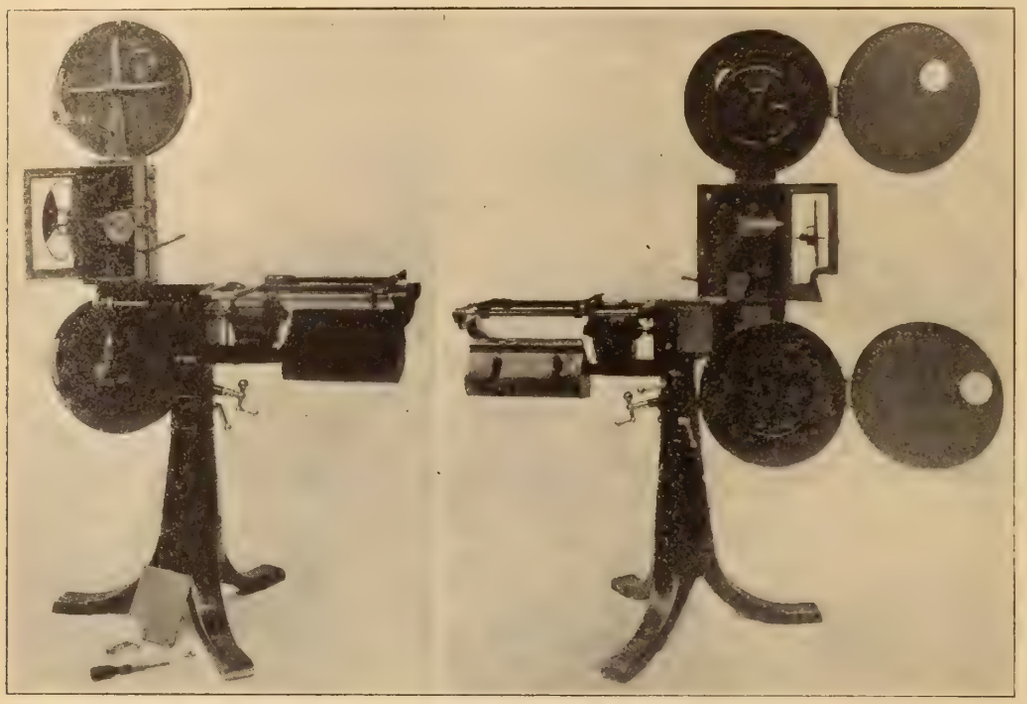
Projectionists Attend Demonstration of New Machine

John Doherty, Inventor of "Peerless Projector," Tells of Its Features

Demonstration of a new motion picture machine "The Peerless"—was given by the inventor, John Doherty, an expert machinist, before an audience composed mostly of members of the International Projection Association at midnight, September 23, at the projectionists club rooms at 437 East One Hundred and Forty-Fifth street, New York City.



The new Peerless projector, a demonstration of which was given by developers

A number of features are embodied in the Peerless, the developers claiming that it will make a big appeal to projectionists. John Doherty is patentee of the new machine, and with him is associated as developers Arnold Tyroler, Joseph La Via, Dominick De Caro, and George Mayer, all men who have been affiliated for many years with the motion picture industry.

In speaking of his Peerless Projector, Mr. Doherty said:

"The ever increasing popularity of the silent drama has brought to the fore, innumerable contrivances designed for the express purpose of bettering projection. The market will be blessed with the latest exploit in this direction, 'The Peerless Projector,' which marks the culmination of years of experimenting. Here at last is a machine designed for the projectio ist. Simplicity in its entirety, it boa of the unique feature of unit constr tion. It has elevated operating from asperation to pleasure, and gives audience a picture as near perfection possible.

McMahan and Jackson Reopen Pantage

Resplendent in its new scheme of decorations, the Lyric theatre, Cincinnati, under the auspices of McMahan and Jackson, opened its doors Monday for a season of Pantage's vaudeville attractions and photoplay features. Everything that can conduce to the comfort, convenience and enjoyment of the patrons apparently has been provided in the renovated playhouse. Bright, cheery combinations of color have been achieved, and the rest rooms for women and smoking room for men are fitted in artistic, yet utilitarian, style, that makes them most inviting. The changes in the lighting effects also add to the effectiveness of the attractive atmosphere.

Floral offerings from many friends and well-wishers of the new management filled the lobby and the foyer. A simple, but impressive dedication ceremony was conducted by Miss Paisley Noon, one of the headliners on the vaudeville bill, who, with a group of handsomely costumed girls from her musical revue, paraded through the lobby just preceding the hour of opening, scattering flowers left and right. Many persons prominent in the civic, business and professional life of the city were invited to be guests at the premier performance.

The rise of I. W. McMahan and Jerome M. Jackson in the theatrical world of Cincinnati to ownership of the new Lyric theatre reads like fiction. In 1904 Jackson was an itinerant moving picture showman, giving performances at Chautauquas and elsewhere. About the same time McMahan was running a little theatre in Covington, Kentucky, where he sold and took tickets and also sang a song during the intermission. McMahan and Jackson met accidentally, and their talk resulted in a partnership and a determination to invest their combined cash, $700, in a theatre on Fifth street, between Race and Elm streets. In this venture McMahan was ticket taker and Jackson the operator. "On our investment of $700 we made nearly $1,000 a week between us and later were able to sell out at a good price," said Jackson. Eventually they took up the film exchange business and prospered. Time went on and they bought the Gifts theatre, as well as a number of smaller houses scattered about the city. Their venture into combined vaudeville and features is their latest undertaking.

Jackson, although but 35 years old, ranks as the pioneer motion picture man of Cincinnati. He and McMahan were the first to buy a big feature picture in this city. It was "Neptune's Daughter." And in less than six months they cleared $40,000 on the picture. McMahan is well known among local exhibitors, having for some time served as President of the Greater Cincinnati Exhibitors' League.—Adams.

Tivoli, New York, Opens

The handsome Tivoli theatre, Eighth avenue and 50th street, New York City, opened recently, with Charles Ray in the First National attraction, "Scrap Iron," as the initial film feature.

The Tivoli, owned and operated by the Consolidated Amusement Enterprises, of which Lawrence S. Bolognino is general manager, has a seating capacity of 2,000 in the theatre proper with an unusually attractive roof garden that seats a thousand more. The entrance and beautiful and spacious lobby are on the Eighth avenue side and built around the theatre on both Eighth avenue and 50th street are apartments and stores.

The Tivoli is without doubt one of the most attractive theatres in the city. It has made a most pleasing change in the section where it is located. Every known modern convenience and comfort for patrons has been installed. A heating and cooling system operates from the roof, insuring fresh air, hot or cold, as the season requires.

The policy of the Tivoli will be feature photoplays, orchestral music and Grand Opera soloists. In addition a large organ has been installed.

At the opening performance many public officials, people well known in New York's theatrical life and motion picture stars were in attendance. Among them were Betty Blythe, Louise Huff, Mabel Normand and Sigrid Holmquist, known as the Swedish Mary Pickford.

Isis Changes Hands

The Isis theatre, which has been used at intervals as a motion picture house, has been leased, together with the entire building in which it is located, by George W. Wood, a realty dealer and resident of Coronado. It is announced that the theatre will be completely renovated and equipped with the latest modern features. It is planned to open it about the first of the year under a new name, not yet selected.—Wright.

"The take-up device is nested in ball bearings, and can take up 2,000 ft. of film without any strain and with equal tension.

"The lamp house, the doors of which are lined with asbestos board, and boasting of the latest ventilating system and cleaning facilities heretofore unknown, is large and roomy, permitting free accessibility about the burner. The condensers are easily removed and are protected by an inside dowser controlled by a double lever from the outside. The burner is constructed rigidly permitting a large amperage and all its movements are located in the lower carbon holder.

"The entire mechanism is mounted on an artistic pedestal, built on the principles of a gun carriage which may be depressed or elevated at a 45-degree angle with the horizontal. By means of a ball lever the machine may be turned in a complete circle.

"In outward appearance, the Peerless projector ceases to be a commercial product—it becomes a work of art. Japanned in steel gray and black, trimmed with polished nickel parts and displaying lines of grace which at the same time accentuate its rigid construction, it impresses even the skeptical observer that it has come to stay."

Feature Subjects of Short Length

" Judgment "

ix Reel Drama Based on Victor Hugo's " Mary Tudor "—Released by World Film Corp.)

JUDGMENT " might well be called a sequel to " Deception," since it is a celluloid depic-n, with certain dramatic license, of that por-n of the life of Mary Tudor, daughter of ıry VIII, relating to her historical romance n an Italian adventurer and the intrigues of English Court of the period of Queen Mary's n as the English sovereign.

he picture is of foreign manufacture as " Deception," but it lacks the spectacular lities and the comedy incident that char-rized the Lubitch production, and in conse-ıce suffers in comparison. The feature, ever, is more than an average costume pro-ion, containing excellent suspense and be-well acted in all of the principal roles.

ne offering is presented as an adaptation of drama by Victor Hugo staged under the of " Mary Tudor," something not to be de-d, however, from the film title " Judgment." ıe role of Mary Tudor is played by Ellen ter. She gives a finished performance in rt calling for emotional acting and versa-li but the character is not a sympathetic one American audiences are apt to consider an ntified blonde haired girl who plays e " as the star. In fact this actress made a deal of a small part and demonstrates that as screen personality.

e film as it is presented to American audi-has been cut and titled by Harry Chandlee d William B. Laub. They have done rather d job especially in the titles. The words have put into the mouths of the historical cters read well and are in keeping with the of language of the day. How close they original is only a matter of conjecture f no importance.

a box office attraction " Judgment " can asured by " Deception." It is not so un-a picture from many angles but as a fol-p for this feature and to those who like cal plays it should prove interesting.

" A Week Off "

Century Comedy—Two Reels)

author or director of this comedy has ken a leaf from Rube Goldberg as a of making an audience receptive to the ctory footage. The husband and father little domestic tale is seen getting up in rning a la one of Goldberg's crazy in-s. As the pendulum is nearing the hour a rope attached to the minute hand pulls n on a couple of eggs which are broken contents spilled into a spider. It is a ontraption, for a portable shower-bath as other novel ideas are exploited.

comedy shows patience upon the part ector who will take the pains to rig up ıg new in the shape of properties simply n audience in the right humor. When band and father is fully dressed he takes his family for a vacation at the seaside. Here is occasion to exploit the flying fish. As the character is taking a nap, some jam on the tip of his nose attracts the flies. And since flies are associated with fish regarding bait, the latter jump right out of the water and bite the hook. A bee upset father's calculations. And he rushes home. A fairly amusing comedy, though too carefully studied out to suggest any real spontaneity.—LAURENCE REID.

" High Life "

(Century Comedy—Two Reels)

THIS two-reeler is not so much of a laugh-producer as it is a thriller, since it features high jinks atop the steel girders of a building under construction. If it is trick stuff, the cameraman has kept the fact hidden. Enough to state that the participants, seemingly, take their lives in their hands as they cut up capers. Harry Sweet is featured. While playing around with a flivver and employing some new tricks and incidentally some of which are ripe with age, he takes his sweetheart out for a ride. His hat blows off and while he is chasing it one of the beams on which he is standing rises into the air and he accompanies it.

The rest of the comedy exploits a group of workmen who provide the comedy background for Sweet's antics. Some dexterous footwook is noticeable which coupled with some balancing stunts are sufficient to keep one in a state of suspense although the spectator has very few opportunities to find humor out of the offerin · A comedy minister is hauled into the air and a wedding ceremony brings the conclusion. An acceptable filler.—LAURENCE REID.

" Should Husbands Do Housework? "

(Star Comedy-Universal—One Reel)

AFTER Harry Gribbon, as a young benedict, gets through messing up his wife's house, and revealing that he will never be a fit subject for housemaid's knee, it is safe to say that the question asked in the title may be answered with a positive "No!" Harry bets the pretty Laura La Plante, acting as the wife, that he can do her housework in thirty minutes or forfeit $100. He has a tough time with the eggs since the fruit from the chicken coop are unduly elusive. He spoils the breakfast and attempts to cheat by employing the janitor to hasten forth and purchase meals for three. The clock ticks off its thirty minutes and Harry loses. Miss La Plante has a good time showing a wonderful dental smile over his foolish wager. Gribbon is comedian enough to put this one-reeler over.—LAURENCE REID.

" The Beggar Maid "

(Short Subject Based on Tennyson Poem, Produced by Triart Pictures, With Fan Magazine Beauty Contest Winner in Leading Role)

"THE BEGGAR MAID," suggested by the Tennyson poem of the same name with Mary Astor, a Shadowland, the fan magazine, beauty contest winner, is presented at the New York Rivoli theatre, this week.

The picture is an artistic combination of a romantic drama and scenic notable for its photography, wonderful scenic locations and in the personality and classic beauty of its leading character, Miss Astor.

Unlike most beauty contest winners Miss Astor possesses much besides her good looks. She has a grace of movement, a faultless stage presence and that indefinite something that makes her image on the screen seem more than just a contrast in black and white against the silver sheet.

The requirements of the part of the English maiden who is loved by the young lord of the manor, are few, especially as to the matter of real acting but as far as the role goes Miss Astor could not have been excelled by the most talented star the films have ever revealed.

" The Beggar Maid " as a feature lacks punch, probably will never prove a universally popular film but this will not be the star's fault. She bears all the evidences of being a " find."—J. S. DICKERSON.

" The Ne'er to Return Road "

(Two-Reel Dramatic Feature, Produced by Selig-Rork and Released by Educational Film, Inc.)

SELIG-RORK present as their third dramatic feature in short length space " The Ne'er to Return Road " adapted from a Lambs Gambol prize winning play by Mrs. Otis Skinner with Wallace Beery in the principal role, that of an escaped convict, who tells the story of how he came to be sent to prison to the mother of the man he had killed, without knowing her identity.

The picture hardly measures up to the previously released two reelers but it is still far ahead of the average dramatic short subject, not only in the story told but in the way it has been produced.

Mr. Beery is an excellent type for the role of the convict and as for his ability to put over such a role, that goes without saying. The supporting cast is made up of well known players. The roster includes Jack Mulhall, Walt Whitman and Margaret McWade.

The feature is melodramatic in its make-up and is told by a series of fadeouts, illustrating what the convict is relating to his benefactor, the mother of his victim.—J. S. DICKERSON.

(Christie Comedy—Two Reels—Released Through Educational Exchanges, Inc.)

BOBBY VERNON and Vera Steadman furnish the youthful aspirants to married bliss, about whom the fun is centered. Starts right out with the arrival of a hat the prospective bride has sent to the home of her fiance, that he may pass upon it. Just at that moment, another girl, trying to elope, but pursued by the police appeals to the young man for assistance. Evidently he had already learned not to tempt his prospective bride to temper, through jealousy. He does his best to side track, but the girl borrows the new hat, just as the owner is approaching, and she, misunderstanding, runs home to father, declares her fiance is already married and father would be revenged. When the youngster endeavors to explain, he is thrown out, bodily; he tries often and upon all occasions, but in the end a confession of the trouble maker, who is at last a " Mrs." clarifies the situation and all ends happily. Locations furnish opportunity for attractive exteriors. A costume ball, also calls for unusual interior.—LILLIAN GALE

Index to Complete Plan Book and EXHIBITORS' BOX OFFICE REPORTS

EDITOR'S NOTE—Exhibitors will find here a complete list of all feature pictures for the last sixteen weeks arranged alphabetically as an index to The Complete Plan Book for this period, naming the picture, the producer, the star, the release date, and designating the issue of MOTION PICTURE NEWS which contained the original review.

The following also contains our reviewer's opinion encompassed in a brief single line and gives the comments of exhibitors who have shown the picture and forwarded their opinions. And we also publish a final line fairly summarizing a consensus of all opinions received on each picture. As many of the exhibitors do not comment on every picture (merely checking it Big, Average or Poor), we arrive at the consensus not only by the actual comments made and published, but are also guided by the report from exhibitors who have made no actual comments, but have merely checked the box office value of the picture.

All the pictures mentioned are five-reel features, unless marked otherwise. Serials are reviewed also. At the conclusion of this department will be found the "Flash-Backs," being comments on films released prior to May 21, 1921.

"THE GREAT IMPERSONATION"

(Paramount)

Highly Involved Story Based Upon German Spy Formula

THIS feature looks like an echo from the past with its plot based upon the German spy formula. All the familiar trimmings and trappings are woven together in a highly intricate pattern which carries its characters over two continents and half a dozen cities. Perhaps the sponsors feel justified in renewing our acquaintance with the machinations of Wilhelmstrasse in view of the fact that the war is over and that the song of hate is more or less silenced against our erstwhile enemy. In all likelihood, the author wrote the story during the height of the struggle since he has taken pains to emphasize all the dread characteristics of the Teutonic people.

Dismissing the ethics of his indictment and judging the picture on its merits we cannot say that it offers anything extraordinary in the shape of entertainment. The story is cluttered up with a mass of detail and extraneous sequences and peopled with a host of characters many of which are so wholly out of place that they retard the action and confuse the spectator. It seems to have been the director's idea to keep the onlookers so mystified that he would be unable to penetrate the plot. But he defeats his own purpose because many of his figures are robbed of all intelligence as the action progresses.

It is a story of two men, one an Englishman, the other a German, both of whom, as the first scene is flashed, are living under the same roof as Oxford undergraduates. These men bear a marked resemblance to one another. The German goes to Africa and goose-steps about waiting for "der tag." So far, so good. It is when the Englishman migrates to the same country and is rescued by the other that the picture starts on its strange cycle—a cycle that involves the Britisher's insane wife, her crazy governess, the latter's demented son, knockout drops, the German war lord, secret codes, Viennese love intrigues, stolen papers and what not before the jumbled ideas are pieced together and the spectator discovers (if he has any intelligence at all) that the hero must be the Englishman and that he is the great impersonator.

The flash-back is resorted to so that one may learn how the Britisher double-crossed his enemy and returned to rid the country of its nest of foreign spies. The picture sags in the middle because so much attention is paid to a series of counterplots—most of which concern the demented characters. There is very little suggestion in the development of the action and the figures become aggravating after a while because of being involved with so much mystery. The sets are elaborate, though not a few are over-dressed. The picture is likely to please fairly well up to the point where the spy fails to live up to his profession. The mere fact that he sort of loses interest gives away his identity before the proper time.—Length, 6 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

A picture of startling intrigue—a picture which weaves a skein of mystery due to its international atmosphere—a picture of stirring adventure and tragedy and exciting moments—that is "The Great Impersonation," adapted by Monte M. Katterjohn from a novel by E. Phillips Oppenheim, and directed by George Melford. "The Great Impersonation" is a story which proceeds with an adventurous line of action from the introductory scene and fascinates the spectator because of its rich play of dramatic events. Intrigue, jealousy, hate, vengeance, adventure, romance, sentiment, pathos—these elements are all associated in making this a picture certain to kindle the imagination. "The Great Impersonation" permits James Kirkwood to enact a dual role with finesse and poise. The picture appears next ———— at the ————.

SUGGESTIONS

If you are a trifle afraid of the German spy picture at this time it would be well not to analyze the plot or go into detail regarding it. Simply state that it is a picture which carries international intrigue which takes the spectator over two continents and furnishes him with plenty of intrigue, adventure, surprises and appealing moments of romance. Describe it as a highly interesting adventure story which is calculated to make the pulse beat faster. Play up the cast. It is composed of many celebrated and talented players. Also play up the author and director who are responsible for many fine attractions.

"A MAN'S HOME"

(Selznick)

Will Enter the Class of Exceptional Pictures

A NEW type of home picture is presented in Selznick's "A Man's Home," which carries such powerful, human strokes and realistic touches, and which builds with ever increasing suspense because of its rich array of dramatic clashes, that it is entitled to a place among the exceptional features of the year. It appears to be not only Selznick's triumph, but an individual triumph for the director, the adaptor and the several members of a perfectly balanced cast. Not a few will say that "A Man's Home" is entirely original in conception and treatment. Certainly what is offered in theme and characterization seems like something new when one takes into consideration that the screen has become surfeited with stories of white-haired mothers and their brood of children, whose purpose it is to bring pathos into their lives.

The walls of an average wealthy man's home are leveled and one discovers that the search for the illusion called happiness is just as keen as in the home of the work-a-day neighbor. Also that his family is equally as human. The husband and father is engrossed with business affairs. He has climbed to his station through sheer pluck and determination. His wife, however, suffers from neglect and in her eagerness to find pleasure encourages the friendship of "fast company." There is no planting of characters; no stressing of sentiment is emphasized. The figures are genuine and human and their conversation is natural. No single character dominates the action. Each figure has its definite place and the clash of events gives each a commanding position in the drama.

The keynote of the husband's speech is "Leave everything to me. I'll arrange it in my own way at the proper time." It is the keynote of the story as well, because the financier feels competent enough to straighten out the complications when in reality he is making a mess of things by assuming too much for granted. The sequences are perfectly dovetailed. The romance is deftly introduced through a conflict introduced by means of the youth asking the father for his consent to his daughter's hand. But when the wife comes home and brings her parasites with her the picture takes on a force which is undeniably dramatic. Will the false friend conquer? That is the idea conveyed and which stimulates a curiosity measured in terms of the keenest suspense. That they fail is due to the trusting attitude of the wistful-eyed daughter who disarms the adventuress. There are no convenient situations or any recourse to arbitrary development.

"A Man's Home" is a picture of invention and suggestion. Ralph Ince is to be commended for what he has wisely left out as much as for what he incorporated. He has appealed to one's intelligence. However, Edward J. Montagne has given him a wonderfully compact scenario which carries all the sure-fire ingredients—all of which are given their proper emphasis. Harry T. Morey plays the financier in his rugged, sincere fashion and at all times keeps to the rock-bed of humanity. Kathlyn Williams as his wife, Faire Binney as the daughter, Matt Moore as the youth, Roland Bottomley and Grace Valentine as the parasites—these players are not only perfect as to types, but also in the interpretation of their respective roles. The picture is technically correct.—Length, 6 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

One of the most striking pictures of the season is coming to the ———— theatre next ———— when "A Man's Home" is presented. This picture is so charged with powerful, dramatic strokes, carries such an abundance of humanities, and intrigues the imagination through its clash of dramatic events that the spectator forgets time and environment and becomes associated with the characters of the story. It is a cross section of the ordinary man's home—reveals the husband and father who has succeeded in the world of affairs. He is not exactly neglectful in his attitude, though he is engrossed with business. But his wife feels the social urge. She must find pleasure no matter where it might be located. This conflict precipitates a line of dramatic action which holds the spectator in a tight embrace. The characters, the dialogue—the atmosphere—all are human. The walls are penetrated. The door is opened and the spectator becomes an attentive observer and listener.

PROGRAM READER

Manager ———— takes great pleasure in announcing that one of the exceptional pictures of the season is coming in the Selznick attraction entitled "A Man's Home" which appears at the ———— theatre for a limited engagement. This is a vital, heart-throbbing, human, palpitating, cross section of life as it is lived today in the average wealthy man's home. You enter this house and see stark drama which moves vigorously, dramatically and always appealingly. An all-star cast interprets the picture—a cast including Harry Morey, Kathlyn Williams, Matt Moore and others. Don't miss this exceptional picture.

"Attractive European star in pictorially gorgeous subject."—M. P. News.

GREAT MOMENT, THE (PARAMOUNT) GLORIA SWANSON..... AUG. 6
"First rate entertainment in Gloria Swanson's stellar vehicle."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Very good picture. Pleased the patrons and comment quite favorable. Business better than the average, a portion of the credit for which should go to the merits of the picture itself and to the popularity of the star with local fans, who played well in 'The Great Moment,' as she usually does in other productions." "An ordinary picture which attracted fair business. Women liked it." "Went over fine. Receipts pleasing." "Broke house record for week. Holding over." "Above the average picture, and a good box office attraction." "High class picture which appealed to admirers of Gloria Swanson and Milton D. Sills. Did big business for week." "Fine picture which had very good business during run." "Knockout of a picture. Gloria Swanson drew well with aid of novel exploitation."

HOME STUFF (METRO) VIOLA DANA ..... JUNE 18
"Even hokum cannot make this a good one."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Played with Buster Keaton in "The Haunted House" and went over well for a week's run. Favorable comment was expressed by many patrons." "Only fair picture—with business the same." "The only drawing card in this picture is the personality of the star. It is a very poor plot at best. Even the interesting details of country life did not help to put any interest into the story." "Viola Dana as a box-office attraction will soon lose out if she is starred in any more like this."

HOME TALENT (SENNETT-ASSOCIATED PRODUCERS) SPECIAL CAST ..... JUNE 25
"Good slapstick on both ends; sags in the middle."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Fair picture with average business."

IDOLS OF THE NORTH, THE (PARAMOUNT) DOROTHY DALTON ..... MAY 28
"Elemental and rugged picture packs a healthy punch."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A mediocre production which recorded fair business, because of star's popularity." "Fair picture that did pretty well considering the picture business slump." "Good average picture. It drew fairly good business, considering very warm season when so many of this section find it convenient to be out of the city on the Gulf beaches." "Theatre decorated to resemble log cabin in mid-winter, which had a psychological effect on crowds in hot weather. A good business all week."

IF WOMEN ONLY KNEW (ROBERTSON-COLE) SPECIAL CAST..JUNE 4
"A picture well worth witnessing—let them see it."—M. P. News.

INFAMOUS MISS REVELL, THE (METRO) ALICE LAKE..... SEPT. 10

JACK RIDER, THE (AYWON-STATE RIGHTS) BIG BOY WILLIAMS ..... AUG. 27
"Good incident in this lively western."—M. P. News.

JOURNEY'S END, THE (BALLIN-HODKINSON) MABEL BALLIN..JULY 9
"Remarkable picture, especially since it is titleless."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Very well balanced picture. Absence of subcaptions well received, consensus being audiences appreciated trend not being broken. Receipts dandy." "No sub-titles are used, and they are not missed. Plot rather trite, but artistically developed. Drew well." "Too sombre and religious. Average business." "Originally booked for week, but was pulled off because management did not believe it would hold up for seven days. The picture is an entertaining one, however."

JUNGLE ADVENTURES (MARTIN JOHNSON-EXCEPTIONAL PICTURES CORP.) ..... OCT. 1
"Certainly a novel and picturesque film entertainment."—M. P. News.

KING-QUEEN-JOKER (SYDNEY CHAPLIN-PARAMOUNT) SYDNEY CHAPLIN ..... JUNE 11
"Fails to come up to expectation."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Full week, but not to a full house. Material for a great comedy, but not with Sidney, who did nothing but overact and kill any possibility he might have had of being accepted." "Picture and business both bad." "Nothing to get excited about—but cleared expenses."

KISS, THE (UNIVERSAL) CARMEL MYERS..... JULY 9
"A well balanced story of old California."—M. P. News.

KISS IN TIME, A (REALART) WANDA HAWLEY..... JUNE 25
"Is diverting enough for hot weather business."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Went over good and brought fine business." "A fair attraction with ordinary business." "Of medium grade only. Receipts fair."

LAND OF HOPE, THE (REALART) ALICE BRADY..... JULY 9
"Entertaining comedy drama built around new and appealing theme."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Pleasing performance. Played to dandy afternoons, but poor nights."

LAST CARD, THE (METRO) MAY ALLISON..... JUNE 4
"Interesting murder mystery carries clever touches."—M. P. News.

Snappy Titles and Madge Kennedy's Demure Personality Are Sufficient

THERE is not going to be any dispute about this picture being an ideal vehicle for the expression of Madge Kennedy's personality and style of acting. Judging from the manner in which she adapts herself to the demands of the story one may be excused for thinking it has been written with her in mind. The average spectator will catalogue it as a fluffy, but thoroughly wholesome slice of romance which despite its light character manages to entertain through five reels because of its comedy appeal and the exceptionally good titles furnished by Rupert Hughes.

The very fact that this author is responsible for the captions is evidence that it was made some time ago. Why? Because he is doing bigger things for the screen than contributing sparkling dialogue. If another reason is needed it may be found in the comparatively long skirts worn by the feminine members of the cast. Still there is no cause to be cryptic over the display of antiquated fashion. It has already been mentioned that Paris has decreed a length of skirt this season. This has nothing to do with the fluffy romance which places the star in the role of a vivacious and thoroughly captivating flirt—a role which she can express just a little better than her contemporaries of the screen. If the spectator wants to be analytical he will dismiss the story as being frail and lacking in sufficient depth to carry through five reels. On the other hand that same spectator is going to be entertained if he forgets the shortcomings of the plot and pays strict attention to Miss Kennedy.

The star is undeniably clever in the role of the flirtatious flapper who responds to every man who comes into her line of vision. She makes the part that of a delightfully appealing baby vamp—what with her wistful expression, her saucy stare and her abundance of feminine graces and poses. "Oh, Mary, Be Careful!" is Madge Kennedy's picture any way you look at it. The story, the other players, the sets—these provide just as much background for her to assert her magnetic personality. No man seems to be safe once she makes up her mind to conquer him. Skinflint lawyers, college boys, men-about-town and a host of others capitulate to her charms. She finally capitulates herself to the fellow who has a trifle more force and personality than the others. Which is about all there is to the picture. Rupert Hughes' titles are gems and most of them are rich with humor. Between reading them and watching the star frolicking with vivacious impulses, the picture manages to keep one interested. The photography carries some beautiful exteriors.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

A vivacious story filled with romance and youth and adventure is "Oh, Mary Be Careful," which comes to the ———— theatre next ———— starring the piquant Madge Kennedy. Not since this delightful actress first became identified with the screen has she had a more ideal vehicle for the expression of her talent and personality. So well does it fit her style of acting that it seems as if it might have been written with her in mind.

As Mary Meacham, Miss Kennedy plays the part of a vivacious flirt who intrigues the imagination of every male with whom she comes in contact. She shows no partiality until she finally capitulates herself to the vigorous personality of Morgan Smith. The picture fairly sparkles with adventure and is at all times thoroughly captivating. Not a little of the picture's success may be attributed to the titles which are in Rupert Hughes' best vein. The star is competently supported and directed. George Weston wrote the story.

PROGRAM READER

She was saucy and she possessed a baby stare. And she knew how to use it. No wonder all the boys who came within her vision capitulated to her charms. There was a merry race among them as to which one she favored. Yet she kept herself whole and fancy free until—. See Madge Kennedy, the piquant, dainty star in a picture guaranteed to chase dull care away. See this captivating star who possesses one of the most delightful personalities of the screen in an ideal subject. Answer in "Oh, Mary Be Careful" which comes to the ———— theatre next ————. The star is a vivacious flirt. And she knows all the feminine tricks to capture the masculine heart.

SUGGESTIONS

Here is a picture calculated to make any audience enraptured because of its romance of adventure, its play of romance and the fact that it represents youth in its glory and charm. You might state that never has Miss Kennedy had a more vivacious role, nor one that allowed her such abundant opportunities to flash individual talent and expression. Play up its adventure and its delightful romance. Get out a snappy teaser campaign. And make a bid for the patronage of the flapper set. Describe it as a tantalizing, captivating, delightful adventure romance when youth sets out to conquer. Play up the star and mention that Rupert Hughes is responsible for the titles.

Good Type of Western Featuring the Picturesque Hoot Gibson

THEY don't make you wait very long for something to start in this Western. Before one has time to become acquainted with the arms of his chair, there is the picturesque Hoot Gibson riding his pinto pony like a mad horseman and lassoing a highwayman in the bargain. The heroine happens to be an occupant of the stage-coach and when she informs him (after a rough and tumble fight in which he is bested by his opponent) that her uncle is the mayor of an adjoining town and that she has just returned from an Eastern finishing school, Hoot moves over and buys the town newspaper. Not knowing the identity of the uncle the cowboy taunts him at every opportunity. But he has the courage of his convictions and his idea is to clean up the town by exposing its open sores through the press.

Some of the Gibson followers will be disappointed to find him living an indoor existence instead of representing the out-door man of the saddle. But the star has his work cut out for him because there is a good sample of villainy displayed by vicious characters. These figures seem to be vicious through a congential weakness—as if they were born with hard hearts. Naturally they appear quite convincing. Since Hoot realizes that he might be weak with the editorial he lifts a man of letters from the gutter and this figure accepts the responsibility of putting virtue in the town. There is a picturesque array of characters, the drunk standing out conspicuously as being a member of the old school. And there are some healthy fights offered—one of which shows Gibson tossing his opponent right through the window of the saloon.

The keen observer may notice that Hoot and his pal are elected sheriff and mayor in pretty quick order. But this is excusable in view of subsequent events. The cowboy wears his badge as if he meant business. And before the picture ends one discovers him having a great time making the "ornery critters" live up to the law. The romance does not intrude to any extent, but the girl is convinced in the final scene that the sheriff is honorable. The story is mostly episodic and there are places where the continuity is a trifle hazy. For the most part the star holds the interest, and his players keep pace with him through being good types. Joel Day as his pal, Chuckwalla Bill, looks as if he might have stepped off the driver's seat of an old stage-coach. Molly Malone and Mary Philbin provide the feminine interest.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Hoot Gibson, Universal's picturesque cowboy-star, is coming to the ———— theatre next ———— and ———— in his latest western feature entitled "Red Courage," written by Peter B. Kyne, a recognized author of short stories. This photoplay permits the star to do the things that have established his popularity—such as hard riding, quick shooting and an ability to take care of himself in the pinches, and to come up smiling if the opposition is a trifle too keen. As Pinto Peters he rescues a girl in distress and in discovering that she lives in a neighboring town he moves over and buys the local newspaper for the purpose of cleaning up the place.

Pinto has a time on his hands before he succeeds, because villainy is rife and his enemies are many. However, he succeeds by the persuasion of a healthy fist. And if this is not sufficient he uses a trigger finger. The picture carries a plentiful supply of crackling action and is capably acted by the star and his able assistants among whom are Molly Malone and Mary Philbin.

PROGRAM READER

Whoopee! Here comes Hoot Gibson, that dare-devil, jovial, hard-riding, courageous cowboy. Whoopee! He rises to remark that he aims to give you all a picture which will send you away thoroughly satisfied. Hoot has a pinto pony, a lasso and two guns. Also a checkered shirt and a quick trigger finger. Also a magnetic smile. You cannot withstand such personality. Not in this picture. Why? Because the popular Universal star is up and doing. He cleans up a town for the pure fun of excitement. You will follow his adventures with plenty of interest. So come next ———— and see the picturesque Hoot Gibson. Come and see "Red Courage" written by Peter B. Kyne.

SUGGESTIONS

Hoot Gibson is getting over. If you don't believe it all you have to do is to consult your box office reports. So you can advise your patrons that this likeable star who possesses oodles of personality and pep is coming in one of his most interesting pictures. Make mention that Peter B. Kyne is the author. You might mention that he has contributed a score of stories to the screen. Also mention the director's name and tell that Molly Malone and Mary Philbin are in the cast. The usual presentation for this type of picture might be exploited. A cowboy quartette or an expert with the lariat could be employed for a prologue. And you could put over an effective lobby display. A prologue might feature a sheriff's office or a stage coach episode.

"HOMEKEEPING HEARTS"
(Cameo Classics-Playgoers-Pathe)

Fairly Interesting Homespun Melodrama

HERE is a homespun melodrama which takes you right back to the farm after a melodramatic issue with crime in the city. Charles Barrell, the author, has fashioned a likely tale which carries a deal of homely qualities and which shows virtue triumphant after the manner of an old-time thriller. This is not to say that this picture is cluttered up with a supply of hokum, nor does it depend upon "give and take" action that characterized the favorite recipes of the gallery gods. Rather is it a sincere story of a misspent life, a victim of circumstances, who was railroaded to prison on circumstantial evidence and who found ultimate freedom and happiness through bringing the real culprits to justice and finding faith in himself.

The action becomes highly involved at the start and the continuity is a trifle uneven when the plot switches to the country. There is flashed a good sample of melodrama as the hero puts on his diving suit and fails to rescue a companion. His weakness for liquor spells his downfall, for he happens to be on the spot when officers discover his employer a victim of assault and theft. Here it is that the plot travels over three states and takes the spectator to a rustic spot where a vicious skinflint is endeavoring to embarrass every one with whom he comes in contact. The criminal's baby has grown into a slip of a girl. Which indicates that ten years elapsed since the introductory scene.

It seems that this hard-headed yokel is an uncle of the child and knowing that her father is a criminal he establishes him in a ramshackle hut. Meanwhile the old reprobate unloads his villainy in many quarters. Owning the only creamery in the district, he attempts to embarrass the farmers from establishing one of their own by bribing a milk inspector to pronounce the cattle unfit. That isn't all. He appropriates funds voted to the school board and closes the school. Which compels the heroine to lose her position as teacher. However, he fails to be elected as chairman. As a last resort he becomes desperate to continue his intrigue against the farmers. But the ex-convict rises to the situation regardless of the fact his daughter will learn of his former life and saves the farmers from losing their cattle. Meanwhile he rescues the skinflint from a vat of milk in which he had been tossed by the crooked inspector when they had quarreled.

The picture reveals too much detail which is so unduly stressed that action and suspense are quite eliminated. And the characters move too slowly. However, it is a fairly interesting exposition of rustic life and is well acted by Edward Grace as the skinflint (he makes the figure truly unique) and Mildred Ryan as the child. The rural scenes are realistic and rich in atmosphere.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

The homespun story has won an abiding place in the affections of screen patrons. Somehow the humanities of the rustic places register more sincere. The spectator finds himself nearer a tranquil mood and contentment. In "Homekeeping Hearts" written by Charles W. Barrell the screen patron will discover a photoplay which is certain to conquer him because of its simplicity, its rich humanity, its triumph of virtue over villainy, and its capital characterization—as well as the abundance of human strokes represented in the rustic atmosphere and the quaintly rural settings.

It is a picture which unfolds a series of dramatic clashes—all of which keep the spectator in a suspensive frame of mind. That villainy can be rife in the country will be appreciated by those who have lived in the city. The offering is appealing because of its pathos, juvenile interest, heart interest and sentiment. One follows the trials and tribulations of the leading character with heart-felt sympathy. "Homekeeping Hearts" will appear at the ———— next ————.

PROGRAM READER

He was sent to prison on circumstantial evidence. And during his long confinement his little baby had grown into gentle childhood. A pardon reached him one day and he traversed three states to be near his kin. And yet he wondered if she knew the plight which he had experienced. He wondered if she guessed at his heart anguish. His trial was not complete. For at every step misfortune followed him until—. But in telling more you would have no oppoprtunity to guess the denouement for yourself. So come next ———— and see the fascinating and appealing heart drama. See the rural, homespun drama entitled "Homekeeping Hearts," written by Charles W. Barrell. It will stimulate and interest you from beginning to end.

SUGGESTIONS

As this is a rural drama it would be well to put over a fitting prologue. This can be done by employing an ensemble attired in overalls and gingham dresses singing some homespun songs. You can decorate your lobby to appear rustic. Then feature it as a highly interesting rural drama which is strongly emphasized with homespun touches. Play up that the picture is unduly realistic and that it offers some new vistas of the big outdoors. Play up that it is a triumph—a dramatic triumph of virtue over villainy. Play it up as a deeply sympathetic study of broken faith and an ever abiding love. Play up its humanity.

"INDISCRETION"
(Pioneer)

Florence Reed Has Fine Acting Opportunities in This Woman's Picture

IF there is one thing in favor of this Pioneer attraction it is the fact that it should highly interest feminine patrons. Since it is based upon the engrossing theme of disillusionment after a heroine had surrendered to the blandishments of a gifted romancer, it is certain to carry appeal by the simple reason that every spectator belonging to the gentler sex will automatically place herself in the identical situation that confronts the trusting heroine. Which is certain to be a compliment to Florence Reed's emotional capabilities. So sure is her grasp upon the fundamental note of true expression—an ability to make one feel her own reactions to a situation—that the spectator is drawn into the canvas and becomes an actual participant.

The story is simplicity itself and has been used a score of times upon the screen. However, it contains those qualities that fascinate the onlooker and takes on an appeal that quite eliminates the obviousness. It is the old tale of hero worship and the verisimilitude is emphasized because it is an inherent weakness of women to give their undivided attention to a resourceful figure who has become steeped in the gewgaws of Oriental philosophy and hokum. The man in this case has lately arrived from India with a cult which has to do with worshipping the goddess of nature. He weaves his net of intrigue and the susceptible woman mistakes his real purpose through an exceptional gift of speech which on the surface is sincere, but which is based upon subtlety and flattery. He has her almost in his power and plays upon her love of mystery by showing his lavish and bizarre temple of worship, when some urge within her advises her to go slowly. She discourages him and accepts a faithful suitor. But she is unhappy until, in a dream, a revelation comes to her of the awful consequences that might have resulted had she made a false step. Which, of course, brings contentment.

The dream situation seems a trifle convenient—as if the story had spent itself and the director had employed this arbitrary touch to provide the footage. And a harrowing scene in the introductory reel could be dispensed with which reveals a brutal father punishing his wife and son with vicious blows. But this is only momentary and has nothing to do with the theme and its excellent handling by Miss Reed, Lionel Atwill as the adventurer, and Jere Austin as the faithful admirer. The picture develops its scenes in a progressive manner and is adequately staged.—Length, 6 reels.—Laurence Reid.

THE CAST

Laura West, a society girl.....Florence Reed
Stephen Rhodes, the adventurer.....Lionel Atwill
William Marsden.....Gareth Hughes
Howard Hollister.....Jere Austin
Mrs. Marsden.....Margaret Seddon

By A. J. Bimberg.
Directed by Harry Davis.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

A picture calculated to engross the attention of patrons everywhere because of its dramatic flavor and its rich characterization is "Indiscretion" which comes to the ———— theatre next ———— with Florence Reed as the star. The emotional actress who has won recognition upon stage and screen because of her exceptional talent, has in the role of Laura West, a part which demands a great deal of expression. Yet so gifted is the star in her emotional capabilities that she makes the interpretation easy. In fact she lives the part and draws the spectator right into the canvas so sure is her grasp upon the demands of the study.

It is a picture of woman's abiding faith, of a love proffered and denied—of a woman's disillusionment and final awakening to the fact that real love cannot be measured in terms of subtleties and flattery. Laura West nearly walked into danger. Yet her feminine intuition rescued her in time and brought her safely through the experience. It is a picture which permits the star to scale the heights of emotional expression.

PROGRAM READER

Laura West was love starved. No wonder that she proffered her love to an adventurer who had but lately returned from India with one of its strange cults. The fascination of the Orient was vividly brought home to her through his play of words. The adventurer seemed sincere. At least he was unique and totally unlike the men in her own station of life. Yet there was a moment of intuition when she realized the insincerity of the man. Did she hesitate or did she succumb to his blandishments? You must find out for yourself when Florence Reed appears at the ———— theatre next ———— in "Indiscretion," a picture of dramatic clashes—a picture which stimulates and intrigues the imagination.

SUGGESTIONS

You better go after the feminine patronage with this feature. It is a woman's picture from every angle. The emotional star is a favorite with feminine audiences. So play up that it shows the heart-aches—the heart-throbs of a woman who trusted mankind. Bring forth a good line of argument around the theme and state that it is bound to interest every spectator. Play up the title. It carries an appeal. For the sake of adding another angle mention the assisting players. Lionel Atwill plays opposite the star and Gareth Hughes is also in the cast. Bring out their names. Describe it as a dramatic picture which reaches the heights of emotion and which teaches a lesson in the artifices of romance.

CATCH LINES

A picture of emotion—a picture of impulses and moods—of hidden dangers—of abiding faith and shattered hopes—that is "Indiscretion" which comes next ———— starring Florence Reed.

"Pleasing little picture with star in suitable role."—M. P. News.

ROWDY, THE (UNIVERSAL) GLADYS WALTON..... SEPT. 17
"Gladys Walton has interesting little number here."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"An exciting drama, well acted. Business better than it has been at any time during the heat."

SALVAGE (ROBERTSON-COLE) PAULINE FREDERICK..... MAY 28
"Pauline Frederick scores in heavy and morbid picture."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"The finest piece of work Pauline Frederick ever has done." "A poor melodrama which is saved by Pauline Frederick's acting. The old double role shows up once more. Picture holds interest, but is not much for the summer months."

"SALVATION NELL" (WHITMAN BENNETT-FIRST NATIONAL) SPECIAL CAST ..... JULY 9
"Good incident and fine acting gives this exceptional audience appeal."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Excellent photo, but appeals mainly to religious gatherings. Receipts fairly good."

SCARAB RING, THE (VITAGRAPH) ALICE JOYCE..... JUNE 4
"Alice Joyce has fair mystery melodrama here."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Ordinary mystery story. Played to fair houses."

SCRAMBLED WIVES (MARGUERITE CLARK PRODS.-FIRST NATIONAL) MARGUERITE CLARK..... JUNE 4
"Slender story makes just average starring vehicle."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Very 'cute' picture and right entertaining. Business rather good. Marguerite Clark lives in our city and this is somewhat of a drawing card for her screen efforts."

SCRAP IRON (FIRST NATIONAL) CHARLES RAY..... JUNE 11
"Greatest prize fight picture ever made."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Probably the best picture Charles Ray has made, and played to such good business we are holding it over for second week." "Good picture, well received. In spite of Shrine Convention, no unusual business." "The best thing Ray has ever made. Picture intensely interesting and shows realistic fight, although knockout in fight is not shown, which was disappointing to many. Attendance good." "Charles Ray is a favorite here and he gained several new supporters in this production, which did a good week's business." "The picture drags too much. The prize-fight scene is realistic." "This is one of Charles Ray's best pictures and we did very good business with it for a week." "Dandy film with a cash-in on the Carpentier-Dempsey rage. Receipts fine."

SERENADE (R. A. WALSH-FIRST NATIONAL) SPECIAL CAST.. SEPT. 17
"Lots of atmosphere and acting, but not so much action."—M. P. News.

SHADOW OF LIGHTNING RIDGE, THE (SELIG-RORK-AYWON-STATE RIGHTS) SNOWY BAKER..... SEPT. 24
"Rapid-fire action here and plenty of thrills."—M. P. News.

SHAME (FOX) SPECIAL CAST..... AUG. 13
"Oriental story filmed in fine atmosphere."—M. P. News.

SHAM (FAMOUS PLAYERS) ETHEL CLAYTON..... MAY 28
"Good clean entertainment with star in likeable role."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"One of the best things Ethel Clayton has done, and she played to capacity business throughout. A thoroughly satisfying picture." "Nice little picture, but not strong enough to compete with the heat." "Not quite up to Ethel Clayton's other pictures, but did an average week's business." "Good picture, but business not so good due to torrid weather." "Just a fair picture that drew average business." "Interesting light stuff, but no pull at box office."

SHAMS OF SOCIETY (ROBERTSON-COLE) SPECIAL CAST..... AUG. 13
"Neglected wife formula burdened with irrelevant detail."—M. P. News.

SHARK MASTER, THE (UNIVERSAL) FRANK MAYO..... SEPT. 10
"A rather weak story of the South Sea Islands."—M. P. News.

SHELTERED DAUGHTERS (REALART) JUSTINE JOHNSTONE... MAY 28
"The best little bet in many a month."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment.—"The best thing Justine Johnson has yet done, and it shows promise. Her other pictures were so bad that business on this was just 'fair to middlin'' but believe that her next will draw and so on. This one was a fairly entertaining picture on a moss-grown theme." "Fair business at box office with this average production." "Good little picture. Did pretty good business, too."

SHERIFF OF ETERNAL HOPE, THE (FEDERATED EXCHANGES) JACK HOXIE ..... JULY 9
"Conventional western, but will get over in right houses."—M. P. News.

SHOCKING NIGHT, A (UNIVERSAL) LYONS-MORAN..... JAN
"Not substantial enough for five reels."—M. P. News.

SHORT SKIRTS (UNIVERSAL) GLADYS WALTON..... JULY 16
"Gladys Walton does good work in mildly interesting story."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Average picture to fair returns."

"Famous stage melodrama retains dramatic strength on screen."—M. P.
Exhibitor Comment—"Exceptionally well received by everybody. Absolutely A 1, splendid." "Fine picture and one which had good business during run." "Fine picture. Played to big houses." "Nothing above the average. Business showed some increase, though. But this doubtless due to recent change in weather." "Norma Talmadge given a big reception on her reappearance locally after absence of more than a year. Has lost nothing in popularity during this time. Picture was moderately well liked."

SILVER CAR, THE (VITAGRAPH) EARLE WILLIAMS..... JUNE 4
"This picture falters after a couple of reels."—M. P. News.

SINGING RIVER (FOX) WILLIAM RUSSELL..... AUG. 6
"Ordinary western makes real offering for Russell."—M. P. News.

SNOWBLIND (GOLDWYN) SPECIAL CAST..... JUNE 4
"Snow picture that impresses because of splendid acting and scenic values."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"One of the best of the snow pictures. Has interesting plot and beautiful scenic backgrounds. Good box office attraction." "Special exploitation helped this to do excellent business. A fine hot-weather picture, but it ought to make money in any kind of weather."

SOWING OF THE WIND (LOUIS B. MAYER-FIRST NATIONAL).. JULY 2
"Moments of interest in theatric story."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Excellent drama with good business all week despite unprecedented hot weather." "Picture had to be cut a great deal. Interesting story and acting good."

STEELHEART (VITAGRAPH) WILLIAM DUNCAN..... SEPT. 24
"Combination of good melodramatic action and handsome hero stuff."—M. P. News.

STING OF THE LASHS, THE (ROBERTSON-COLE) PAULINE FREDERICK ..... AUG. 27
"One big punch; balance average Western movie stuff."—M. P. News.

STRAIGHT FROM PARIS (EQUITY PICTURES-STATE RIGHTS) CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG..... JULY 23
"Well mounted production makes satisfactory entertainment."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Excellent Clara Kimball Young picture which pleased our audiences and proved a good box office attraction."

STRAIGHT FROM THE SHOULDER (FOX) BUCK JONES..... JULY 2
"Average Western with Jones in a character study."—M. P. News.

SUCH A LITTLE QUEEN (REALART) CONSTANCE BINNEY.... JULY 9
"Hardly substantial enough for the grown-ups."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"My patrons were well pleased with the production. A good business for the week." "Terrible. Sugary, impossible stuff, done to death. Business was very bad." "The start the best part of the production."

THERE ARE NO VILLAINS (METRO) VIOLA DANA..... SEPT. 3
"Perfectly satisfactory romantic-crook play with Viola Dana."—M. P. News.

THREE MUSKETEERS, THE (UNITED ARTISTS) DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS ..... SEPT. 10
"Doug's masterpiece one of the screen's most likeable productions."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Fairbanks does his greatest work in this splendid picture. One of the big offerings of the year and a sure-fire box-office attraction. Played to tremendous business the first week of its run." "Sure-fire attraction. Great money-getter. Greatly pleased audiences."

THROUGH THE BACK DOOR (UNITED ARTISTS) MARY PICKFORD ..... MAY 28
"Mary Pickford's talent and personality will put this over."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Very entertaining story." "A typical Pickford production. Tied up with old time Pickford show and the two together went over fairly well, although Pickford seems to be losing her hold on the public." "Fine box office attraction. Miss Pickford gets over in her customary style." "Large crowds at each performance." "Wonderful attraction and one which went over very big indeed."

THUNDERCLAP (FOX) SPECIAL CAST..... AUG. 13
"Great for the gallery gods."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Unusually good melodrama. One of the best weeks since the opening of theatre in August."

THUNDER ISLAND (UNIVERSAL) EDITH ROBERTS..... JUNE 25
"Dull artificial story very badly titled."—M. P. News.

TO A FINISH (FOX) BUCK JONES..... AUG. 27
"Buck Jones Western entirely satisfactory in every respect."—M. P. News.

TOO MUCH SPEED (PARAMOUNT) WALLACE REID..... JUNE 18
"Wallace Reid has another entertaining auto story here."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"The picture was selected as the feature in conjunction with the second anniversary musical revue at my house and went over big." "Best Wallace Reid picture. Held over for second week." "Went big with Wally Reid fans and we are holding it over for second week's run." "Weather considered, this went over very well. It is only average, however, and is, basically, a repetition of one of his previous racing pictures." "A very good picture; pleased immensely, and played to very good business despite the extreme heat." "Very good; receipts fair." "Delightful story with star at his best. Boosted attendance figures despite minimum." "Fine production. Pleased my patrons and brought good business." "Had great business on this one in spite of the hot weather. Sure is a knockout."

TRIP TO PARADISE, A (METRO) BERT LYTELL..... AUG. 27
"Lytell splendid in a fascinating, human picture."—M. P. News.

TWO WEEKS WITH PAY (REALART) BEBE DANIELS..... JUNE 4
"Light in substance, but thoroughly pleasing."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Drew nicely. Bebe is building up a big following." "Very clever picture, immensely pleasing but not a big drawing card." "Bebe draws like a house afire, and Walter Hiers made a personal appearance, so it was great stuff. Business fine."

TWO WISE WIVES (LOIS WEBER-PARAMOUNT) SPECIAL CAST ..... JUNE 4
"Interesting especially to women because of character contrasts."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A rather tiresome thing which was only a fair box-office attraction."

"QUEENIE"
(Fox)

Shirley Mason Provides Atmosphere in This Character Study of a Redeemed Skinflint

SHIRLEY MASON may be the star of this picture and her name will be featured in all the exploitation matter, but a character actor by the name of Wilson Hummell really carries the burden of the plot and succeeds in giving an effective impersonation of a Dickensesque figure, a sort of skinflint whose nature undergoes a transformation due to the tenderness and sympathy extended by the heroine. It is a one part story, this "Queenie" and the dainty star does nothing but provide atmosphere.

From the early scenes one would believe that the element of mystery was dominant due to the dual role enacted so forcefully by Hummell. As the miserly skinflint he is represented as possessing a warped disposition, a conditon brought about by losing his wife years before. His secretary is an exact double in appearance and temperament. In fact he possesses the same mannerisms as well as the same mental processes. And on the face of it, this touch is quite illogical. Presiding over the household is an Irish servant, the aunt of the heroine. And when the latter arrives she is cautioned to keep below stairs. It is when her curiosity gets the best of her that she meets the skinflint. And straightway his redemption is assured. To make it "in-tri-kut" the figure is shanghaied so that he may put over a surprise finish. This he accomplishes by appearing impromptu at a wedding ceremony of the heroine and disrupting the plans of his secretary who had arranged a mercenary marriage.

The dual figure is developed in a hazy manner and the spectator is apt to wonder why the mystery is introduced with such emphasis. Meanwhile the romance comes into expression in a very sentimental sort of way. A rich man's son is living incognito as a poet and he hops in and out of the action scattering sweet phrases and cutting up mild didoes. The shanghaied skinflint returns and vouches for the youth. And all ends happily. The story is utterly conventional, but Hummell plays the dual role with such a sure grasp that the picture is given some substance as a result. There is no real character development because the transition is too abrupt. Had this figure been planted to better effect, the story would ring more genuine. As it is the picture reveals a wandering sort of plot which doesn't seem to get anywhere in particular. The conclusion is arrived at too hastily. The star manages to appear her piquant self. Which perhaps is enough to please her admirers.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

A romance of a "little slavey" in a miser's home is "Queenie," the Fox picture which comes to the ———— theatre next ———— starring the little star, Shirley Mason. The feature is said to contain an interest-holding quality and the refreshing acting of Miss Mason and the fine sense of characterization displayed by Wilson Hummell in the dual role of a crochety old miser and his finicky old secretary are enough to make an audience appreciative. In the early moments of the story the heroine is doing odd jobs around a young ladies' seminary. Her great longing is that a supposedly rich aunt will take her away. The rich aunt comes and takes her not to a luxurious abode but to the servants' quarters of an old miser's home—where the aunt is housekeeper. The girl is instrumental in transforming the character of the old man. But he strangely disappears. Queenie, however, believes the secretary to be the master. And she is compelled to enter a mercenary marriage agreement before the old man returns unexpectedly and straightens out the complications.

PROGRAM READER

She indulged in day dreams and longed to have her rich aunt take her away from a life of drudgery and provide her with a luxurious home. One day the supposedly rich aunt took her away from the seminary and the girl was happy until she found she had entered the home of an old miser where she was to continue her "little slavey" existence. But the girl was not blessed with a sunny disposition for the mere sake of attracting youth. No indeed! The warped nature of the old man underwent a transformation due to her gentleness and kindness. What happened in her life that almost brought a new chain of distressing circumstances? See Shirley Mason, the petite star in "Queenie," a picture of charm and homespun quality. Next ————.

SUGGESTIONS

This is a picture of a "little slavey" and it could be exploited for its heart interest and the fact that it serves as an ideal vehicle for the star. A teaser campaign would be a good angle for advertising. Throwaways, briefs, program stuffers and similar ideas could be exploited. Play it up as a heart interest drama which also offers an unique character study. Also play up Shirley Mason who has a distinct following. Feature her bobbed hair. Since there has been much agitation concerning the business of employing girls with bobbed hair, state that Shirley Mason furnishes proof that a girl can succeed despite the loss of her tresses.

"THREE WORD BRAND"
(Famous Players-Lasky)

Bill Hart in Triple Role Western Melodrama

BILL HART has evidently noted the flood of dual role productions other stars have been turning out and decided to go his competitors one better.

The veteran portrayer of he-man roles plays three parts in "Three Word Brand" and for audiences that like his pictures, gets away with it.

In a prologue, Mr. Hart is a pioneer of the 70's who is journeying to a new home in the West with his twin sons, meets his death at the hands of Indians after conniving to save the boys by sending them on the back trail before the redskins arrive. The story then jumps to a time when the twins are grown to manhood, with Bill playing both roles, one a rancher of the two-fisted, hard riding type and the other the governor of a Western territory.

The prologue is a well constructed bit of old time Western melodrama in which Indians ride around their victim, biting the dust occasionally as is right and proper, until the pioneer, his ammunition running low, blows up his prairie schooner and himself rather than be killed by the Indians.

The second part of the picture is highly improbable as to plot constructions, overworks coincidence, takes a long time in getting started and suffers from the alleged picture necessity of having a romance, but a whirlwind finish of the sort of stuff the Hart fans like, some good comedy, beautiful scenic locations, and the personality of the star himself, dominating his scenes and making them seem real, does much to make the spectator forget the production's faults and the fans will probably call the offering the best Hart picture in some time.

The feature is a costume bill throughout. Fans might construe the gowns feminine members of the cast wear in the last episode as an indication that the production is a re-issue. It might be well to emphasize the costume angle.—Length, 6 reels.—J. S. Dickerson.

THE CAST

Ethel Barton	Jane Novak
George Barton	S. J. Bingham
Bull Yeates	Gordon Russell
Solly	Ivor McFadden

The Twins	By Themselves

Story by Will Reynolds.
Adapted and directed by Lambert Hillyer.
Photography by Joe August.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

A Western photoplay that is as full of action as the conventional egg is of meat, is William S. Hart's new Paramount picture, "Three Word Brand," that will be featured at the ———— theatre for ———— days beginning ———— next. From the opening scenes when Ben Trego, after placing his twin sons in safety, blows himself into fragments by igniting a keg of gunpowder to escape a band of savages that had him caught in a trap, to the final fade out when he holds the girl of his heart in his arms, there isn't a wearisome moment. Mr. Hart plays three roles and he portrays them all with consummate artistry. Jane Novak is his leading woman and heads a strong supporting cast of screen players. Lambert Hillyer directed and Joe August, A. S. C., photographed.

PROGRAM READER

When William S. Hart's latest Paramount production, "Three Word Brand," is shown at the ———— theatre next ————, its beauty from the standpoint of photography alone, will attract general attention and stamp it in public estimation as one of the best pictures thus far produced by Mr. Hart. The cameraman was Joe August, A. S. C., a camera expert whose photography of outdoor scenes can scarcely be excelled. Silhouettes, dawns, views of sweeping valleys and craggy cliffs, intimate pictures that depict expressions graphically—indeed, a series of wonderful photographs, almost any of which, framed would be a work of art—make up the cinematographic record of a photoplay that is powerful and compelling and breathlessly interesting.

SUGGESTIONS

Bill this as an old time melodrama of the kind Hart has made famous. Mention the roles the star plays. Use stills showing the action of the picture and the beautiful backgrounds. Give no synopsis of the story. For a prologue use a Western stage setting with cowboy songsters in appropriate numbers. For a lobby display follow out the general idea suggested for a prologue, that of making your billing suggesive of the atmosphere of the picture.

CATCH LINES

A picturesque and historically correct story of the old time West when thousands of staunch-hearted men and women faced death and hardships in conquering a land where Indians and buffalo alone had ruled.

Bill Hart in a most unusual picture in which he plays three roles, a pioneer of the 70's, a two fisted, quick shooting rancher of the 90's and the governor of Utah when it was a territory.

WHITE AND UNMARRIED (PARAMOUNT) THOMAS MEIGHAN..JUNE 11
"Fair entertainment in Meighan's latest."—M. P. News.

Exhibitor Comment—"An excellent picture, which, coupled with the popularity of Thomas Meighan, brought good houses during its run." "Well received, receipts pleasing." "Do not consider picture up to standard set by 'City of Silent Men' nor was business as good. But nothing to complain of. This picture did a satisfactory business for a week's run and pleased patrons." "Pleased patrons although not type of picture usually shown at this theatre. Meighan admirably suited to part." "A good box office attraction." "Fairly entertaining feature with average business." "Fine picture. Business was very good considering the extreme heat." "The first three reels are very good; the rest is cheap melodrama. They seem to be making a mistake in putting this star in too many crook pictures. Business fell off because of the heat." "Not as good as other Meighan pictures. Business was fair."

"Good direction makes this picture very human."—M. P. News.

Exhibitor Comment—"A very good picture. Not much business because of hot weather." "Business so poor on this that it had to be taken off after three days, though booked for a week. Think it failed to appeal because the locations and costuming did not appeal to my clientele of 'flappers,' and young matrons." "Good business followed extensive exploitation." "A good picture, but only a fair business."

WITHOUT BENEFIT OF CLERGY (ASSOCIATED EXHIBITORS-PATHE) .....JULY 2
"Famous Kipling story presented in fine atmosphere."—M. P. News.

Exhibitor Comment—"Wonderful picture which everybody liked, but due to hot weather attendance was cut down somewhat." "Fine feature which took well. Good box office value."

WOMAN GOD CHANGED, THE (COSMOPOLITAN-PARAMOUNT) SPECIAL CAST .....JUNE 4
"Regeneration picture certainly holds the interest."—M. P. News.

Exhibitor Comment—"Quite a good picture which brought good business." "Pleased very much. Really a good picture. But unequalled hot weather ruined business." "Only pleasing, receipts fair." "Very good show and business was quite up to the average, at least, despite inclement weather, and the fact that so many people are out of the city on the Gulf beaches." "Ran with Harold Lloyd's 'Among Those Present' and held 'em out every night and every matinee. Result big week and satisfied crowds. Holding second week." "Title has box office value. Audience liked it." "Did very well at box office and satisfied." "We are having too many productions on this same subject—why not a change? An average week's attendance." "Good drawing card and satisfied." "Well directed picture. Patrons were pleased and spoke of beautiful scenes." "This is a big production and no time, trouble or expense have been spared to get realism." "Good box-office picture. Patrons were pleased and spoke of the beautiful scenes."

"THE FOUR SEASONS"
(Urban Popular Classic-Kineto)

A FANFARE of trumpets is not needed to invite spectators to see the nature spectacle which Charles Urban has conceived and executed with the assistance of Raymond L. Ditmars, curator of the New York Zoological Society. The patron fortunate enough to witness the sequences of the four seasons which have continued ceaselessly through infinite time and which will continue through eternity will leave the theatre utterly transported. He will pass the good word along advising his family and neighbors that a work extraordinary in conception and execution is his for the price of admission. It is a work he is not likely to forget.

This remarkable subject is entitled "The Four Seasons" and is as dramatic as the most tense photoplay. It offers instruction and varied entertainment of the highest order. Surely Messrs. Urban and Ditmars deserve encomiums for their painstaking achievement in acquainting us with the divine handiwork of Nature. Spring is ushered in with a variety of expression. Nature's background is ever changing. A new year has sounded. Dread winter has departed, and the plants and animals undergo a tremendous chemical transformation. Indeed it is the formative period. The spectator becomes acquainted with crawling things; the flowers bloom, the trees bud with future foliage, the burrowing animals come out of their winter homes sniffing and snuffing and eager for life, and the strange scheme of Nature which compels a constant procreation.

And these birds, insects, reptiles and beasts provide the cast. The woodlands, the tinted sky (also in an ever-changing mood of expression), the marshes. the brooks, the hills and vales—these form the settings. Embellishing these are storm effects and rainbows which might be a symbol of dramatic climaxes. We become little children witnessing this divine pattern. We wonder and marvel over our own strange destiny. We marvel over the scheme which presents us with insect poachers who are seemingly created to be destroyed by sterner insects or animals. The desire to kill; the will to live; the powerful instinct for self-preservation—these are brought forth with overwhelming impressions.

Each season has a reel devoted to it. Spring ripens into summer. The animals are in their happiest moods. Then autumn arrives bringing with it forebodings of the death of the year. The brown world is covered with a rustling carpet. And the animals make haste to prepare their homes for the long rest or sleep. And none work harder than the beaver. The caterpillar weaves a silk nest around the leaf and will emerge in the spring—a moth. The woodchuck digs his hole, the buck-deer's antlers have grown to full length. And winter has come. The plant world is dead. Nature is sleeping. "The Four Seasons" is a wonder picture filled with undeniable charm. It is beautifully photographed and tinted. A credit to the screen because it brings science and instruction.—Length, 4 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

A picture calculated to appeal to the imagination is "The Four Seasons," conceived and executed by Charles Urban and Raymond L. Ditmars. It may be called the oddest feature ever produced, since the drama is enacted by all the animals and birds and insects of Nature's kingdom, while the skies, woodlands, forests, streams, mountains, plains, brooks and nests provide the background. That the drama overwhelms one with its awe-inspiring scenes cannot be denied. That it at times soars with an intensity of purpose as the scheme of life is changed is forcefully emphasized a score of times. Each animal has its peculiar gift of expression. And this orchestra of strange sounds goes on unceasingly through Eternity. Nature's children give vent to their dialogue. Some are powerful enough to be unmindful of the echo.

The frail or tender species may be singing a swan song. For a wolf can hear the shrill call of a doe. And birds trap themselves sometimes. Nature is cruel also. But the animals have an instinct which lessens the cruelty. The will to live causes them to work unceasingly in providing shelter. Spring ushers them in to the world. The polly-wog grows into a frog before summer has passed. The chicken leaves its shell. The hatching season has arrived. The warmth of soil and sun brings the woodchuck from his hole. And they thrive and multiply. And autumn discovers the weaker forces preparing to leave the earth life. Thus the scheme goes on about us. Meanwhile the backgrounds are being changed by unseen forces.

SUGGESTIONS

The exhibitor who plays this remarkable feature should exploit it and herald it in every conceivable way. It is a novelty. It is also the oddest feature ever conceived. Certainly it is big enough to be featured alone. And spectators once having witnessed it will marvel over the strange ways of Nature and the animal kingdom. Get in touch with schools and colleges and societies. Emphasize that it is artistic, scientific, instructive and entertaining. Make mention that it is a marvelous treat. Invite your patrons to see a wonder picture in every sense of the word.

"EVERYTHING FOR SALE"
(Realart)

Charming Star in Entertaining Society Picture

MAY McAVOY, than whom there is no star more charming, and few as beautiful, may not have been seen in "Sentimental Tommy" in a flapper part such as would win her a legion of admirers, but in "Everything for Sale" they will come away with a very vivid memory of her wistful face and her distinct personality.

The picture is of the society brand, built upon the theme of ambitious aunts who scheme a wealthy marriage for orphaned neices in order to replenish the family fortunes. Such a story, unless it may lay claim upon some radical treatment of the idea, cannot be expected to startle moviedom with its strength of drama. The modern marriage mart story, where pretty daughters are offered to the highest bidder, has been knocked about in satire, drama and comedy. This particular version of society's (we mean the white-shirt front brand of society) besetting sin has been developed here in a pretty and interesting way, nicely spiced with original incident, and given the careful and elaborate production which one now expects of Realart product. There is a capable cast and an effort to give varied instead of stereotyped characterizations.

And then there is May McAvoy. Her Scottish severity of appearance as "Grizel" gives way to all the glory that modern dress can bestow upon her. It is not hard to make her look and act appealingly, and she would have pleased in even more close-ups than the director was kind enough to bestow. The story deals with a young girl who is taken from a boarding school in order that a wealthy marriage may be arranged for her. Her girlhood sweetheart is taken out of the way by the schemers, and the girl, flattered by the attentions of an immensely wealthy bachelor, consents to be sold. Young-and-handsome hero returns with success in his inside pocket on her marriage day, and she breaks the news to him on their island rendevous. Their rowboat floats away with the tide and the wedding guests wait in vain for her return. Then, after this interesting climax, the picture slows its pace slightly, but ends in a mildly thrilling episode. Miss McAvoy as the girl, is an extremely unsophisticated thing and it is rather unconvincing when her proposals of marriage come as a surprise.

All the cast, which includes such established players are Eddie Sutherland, Kathlyn Williams, Edwin Stevens, Richard Tucker and Betty Schade, are entirely capable. The scenes laid in the interior of a wealthy home are lavish and artistic. As a picture "Everything for Sale" will prove thoroughly entertaining and as a vehicle for the star, a ladder to boost her to the heights of popularity.—Length, 5 reels.—Matthew A. Taylor.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

May McAvoy, one of the newest of the screen's stars, who won such commendation for her work in "Sentimental Tommy," will be seen in her latest production, "Everything for Sale," at the ———— theatre on ————. This story, from the pen of Hector Turnbull, was written especially to fit the unique personality of this charming actress, who is afforded a role which allows her every opportunity to charm her audiences.

The story deals with the scheming mother of today, who looks upon her duty to her daughter to end when a wealthy marriage is consummated. But pretty Helen, although she may be a spoiled debutante, has a will and a mind of her own.. It is a hard struggle before she is able to find her way into the arms of the man she loves, but love, as always, finds a way, and after a thrilling and exciting series of scenes, the story ends happily.

Miss McAvoy, before she created the memorable character of "Grizel" in "Sentimental Tomy," a screen character which will live forever as a monument to her art and beauty, had a varied experience before the camera. She is supported in this picture by such a cast as Eddie Sutherland, Edwin Stevens, Richard Tucker, Betty Schade and Kathlyn Williams. The production was directed by Frank O'Connor. It will remain at the ———— theatre for ———— days, beginning ————.

"THE INVISIBLE POWER"
(Goldwyn)

Well Constructed Crook Drama. Should Please

SOME years ago, Charles Kenyon, the author of "The Invisible Power," wrote a play called "Kindling" and about the same time Jack Barrymore was starring in a melodrama titled "Kick In." With the theme of "Kindling," the desire of a mother to see her unborn child escape from the environment in which the parents were living, and the general idea of "Kick In," the efforts of an ex-convict to stay straight while being hounded by the police, Mr. Kenyon has written a picture that considered from an audience standpoint should be pronounced entirely satisfactory. It is an exceedingly skillful piece of work, even if it does make most of the gangster members of the cast out as "little tin gods," crucify the police and allow the logic of the story to falter in places, especially on the tag when the police court records of hero and heroine are torn up on the sayso of an ordinary detective.

House Peters is the hero and Irene Rich is the heroine. Both are satisfactory but acting honors go to Sydney Ainsworth. Mr. Ainsworth makes much of a role that might have been just a part in the show.

The story of "The Invisible Power," a title which is rather a misnomer, concerns the regeneration of a New York crook through love for a country school teacher whom he meets while on a "vacation" in the country, his fight to stay straight after his marriage to the girl, with the police trying to frame both husband and wife, in order to force them to give evidence that will lead to the recovery of a valuable necklace that has been stolen by the gang to which the husband formerly belonged. The wife attempts to break away from her husband and his friends that her unborn child might not be compelled to grow up in an atmosphere that she believes will make its becoming a crook, certain.—Length, 6 reels.—J. S. Dickerson.

Story by Charles Kenyon.
Directed by Frank Lloyd.
Released as a Frank Lloyd production.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

"The Invisible Power," a crook melodrama in which House Peters and Iren Rich have the principal roles, is the feature attraction at the ———— theatr for a ———— days' showing beginning ————.

The feature is a Frank Lloyd Production from the Goldwyn studios and ha been pronounced by the critics as one of the most interesting pictures of it class ever presented to the public. The role of the New York gangster wh decided to go straight when he fell in love and married the country school teache met during a summer's "vacation," gives the versatile House Peters one of hi most likeable roles and the story developed around the plot idea is one of th most consistent ever used for picture purposes.

The author of "The Invisible Power" is Charles Kenyon, who wrote Margare Anglin's most famous play, "Kindling." In support of the star is Irene Rich Sydney Ainsworth and a strong cast of fine types. The feature is clean an wholesome and has back of it a fine theme. The production is in six reels Frank Lloyd directed.

SUGGESTIONS

Outside of House Peters this picture is rather hard to sell unless it be from th angle of the theme and the fact that it is a crook story. We would offer it a starring vehicle for Mr. Peters in an average house and promise a well develope crook story by well chosen selling talk. Sydney Ainsworth gives a splendid per formance but it will not be worth while billing him to any extent owing to the fac that he is considered a heavy by the fans. Work the "regenerated" line strong.

CATCH LINES

"I was born to it," was the excuse that a New York gangster gave to his country raised sweetheart when she asked for the reason he was a crook. And that he child might not be "born to it," she did many strange deeds that go to mak up this strong dramatic story of a thief's redemption.

"Lorraine of the Timberlands"
(Tom Santschi Series—Western—Pathe—Two Reels)

THERE certainly is a quality of vividness about this Tom Santschi two-reel western which tells a tale of faith destroyed, hate and vengeance. Laid in a mountainous forest region and peopled with primitive figures it takes on a force which may be measured in terms of crisp action and good suspense. Santschi enacts the part of a wanderer who has lost faith in God because his family were victims of a cruel bandit. He has come back to his cabin after years of adventure and defies the "sky pilot" to restore his faith. Then the flash-back is resorted to and the wanderer reveals the reason for his downcast spirit. He never discloses his identity to his daughter, now grown to maturity, until she is safe from the bandit who has relentlessly pursued her through the years. Her sole guardian is a youth whose love for her causes him to protect her with grim courage.

The action is crisp throughout because the bandit, still defiant, eludes his pursuers. He has employed Indian cunning in evading the law. A melodramatic twist brings the youth under suspicion for killing a deputy, but the wanderer assumes the guilt. It is when the bandit taunts him in prison that melodramatic license is employed. A shaft of lightning rips open a hole in the wall of the prison and the wanderer escapes to execute his pent-up vengeance. It is a straightforward story told with plenty of punch. Santschi plays his part with rugged sincerity, but Ruth Stonehouse is hardly girlish enough for the daughter.—LAURENCE REID.

"A Zero Hero"
(Hal Roach-Gaylord Lloyd Comedy—Pathe—One Reel)

GAYLORD of the Lloyds certainly indicates in his mannerisms and style of comedy interpretation that he is a blood relative of Harold. Resembling his more famous brother in certain features he emphasizes this likeness by employing the same style of expression. And since Harold puts it over, there is no doubt that Gaylord will succeed. "A Zero Hero" finds him making capital of his vacation. He is a bank employee when the comedy starts and is given the usual two weeks for putting over mock heroics which have to do with a fake robbery and rescue.

This bit of incident is familiar even when the fight with himself is exploited. The high spots arrive when he picks up his golf sticks and displays his novel system of knocking the royal and ancient game for a goal. The small bit where he makes a deep excavation all around the tee-ball, which he never succeeds in hitting is certainly good for a laugh. And there is sufficient spontaneity of comedy action to make it an acceptable offering. Once in a while it lapses, but a title is brought to the rescue. And Gaylord Lloyd displays enough ability to establish a following, even though customers will think of Harold Lloyd and his clever offerings when they see him.—LAURENCE REID.

"Gone to the Country"
(Hal Roach-Snub Pollard Comedy—Pathe—One Reel)

THIS comedy introduces Snub Pollard (of walrus moustachio fame, as a sleep-walker, and a good deal of fun is derived from the idea of burlesquing the sport of somnambulists. Snub tosses about on his bed in such nervous fashion that his wife sends for the doctors. But before they can prescribe any treatment he is out on the street cutting up didoes. These incidents are good for mild laughter. When the medicos place his hands in cold water Snub becomes conscious and he is advised to seek the country—out where the cornfields yield sixty gallons to the acre.

Here is occasion to put over some tomfoolery concerning camp life—with the flivver, the trailer, the rainstorms, the windstorms and what not. Much of the incident here is quite novel but most of it has been employed before. The director almost makes himself evident by causing reams of papers to blow about in all directions. And this is contrary to country atmosphere. Snub has a time on his hands finding true rest. A stray goat eats up the clothing and a farmer chases them from his favorite pastures. He yells "blow your horn" when Snub's flivver is swallowed up in quicksand. A snappy enough filler for the average program.—LAURENCE REID.

"Venus and the Cat"
(An Aesop Film Fable—Fable Pictures—Pathe)

THAT old-time wheeze "And the cat came back" is cleverly brought up to date in the latest animated cartoon based upon Aesop's Fables entitled "Venus and the Cat." It may be remembered that when the cat was kicked about enough he cried to Venus to be changed into a woman so that the hard-hearted bachelor might show some kindness. Well the cat is transformed and the woman is married to the crutsy old man. Venus, watching from above, wonders if the wife is acting enough like a cat. So a mouse is dropped from the skies. Immediately the woman gets down on all fours and the husband is disillusioned. Naturally Venus changes her into a cat again. The moral is flashed, revealing the husband as Mr. Bolshevik and the wife as the Starving People. And thus to the ancient wheeze brought forth in a timely manner—"What Is Bred in the Bone Will Out in the Flesh." Or, "It is Quite Useless to Try and Change Your Nature."—2/3 reel.—LAURENCE REID.

ITEMS OF THE EXCHANGES AND THEATRES

WESTERN NEW YORK

Bill Allen, for many years manager of the Buffalo Vitagraph office, and who last year left town for Toronto as Vitagraph manager there, is now back in the Queen City of the Lakes as a member of the R-C Pictures Corporation sales staff. Bill will cover the Rochester territory.

Harry Devere, formerly with Pathe in Buffalo, is now a member of the Pioneer sales staff. Leo Murphy, brother of Bob Murphy, manager, has also been added to the staff. These two, with Bob, are now combing the territory.

Harry E. Lotz, manager of the Buffalo Realart Exchange, reports business picking up in excellent shape after the summer slump. Mr. Lotz has closed a number of big houses on the 1921-22 franchise.

"The Affairs of Anatol" opened in Buffalo Sunday, September 25, in four houses simultaneously. This was the first record of any such proceeding in the city. Shea's Hippodrome, Criterion, North Park and Court Street, showed the production to capacity business.

Ben Levine, sales supervisor for New York State, had a conference in the Lafayette Hotel, Buffalo, with local manager E. J. Hayes and salesmen H. L. Levy and George Blackmon, on Saturday, September 24. Walter Price, Associated Producers, manager, now has his desk at the F. N. office. The new comedy department will be started Monday, October 3 and Mr. Hayes expects to add two men to his staff at that time.

The Western New York unit of the M. P. T. O. A. and the F. I. L. M. Club of Buffalo, will soon hold a get-together dinner where matters pertaining to the industry will be talked over. The unit will appoint three members to act with the F. I. L. M. Club Grievance Committee.

The F. I. L. M. Club of Buffalo has elected the following new officers: Allan Moritz, Paramount, president; Richard Fox, Select, vice-president; W. A. V. Mack, Pathe, secretary, and Henry W. Hahn, Metro, treasurer. The retiring officers are M. A. Chase, Universal; A. J. Moses, R-C Pictures Corporation, and R. T. Murphy, Pioneer. The law firm of Desbecker, Fisk & Newcomb has been engaged to look after secretarial and legal matters for the club.

INDIANAPOLIS

Ministers, club women, business men, labor leaders, judges, city and county officials attended a special invitational showing of "Over the Hill" at the Lyric's State Saturday morning, Sept. 24. Approval of the film was expressed.

The Grand, one of the three Rembusch theatres at Marion, Ind., has been switched to a stock from pictures policy. This leaves the town with the Lyric, another Rembusch theatre, running pictures and vaudeville; the Orpheum, Rembusch's other place, on pictures with legitimate shows every few days and the Luna-Lite and Marion, operated by C. L. Brannigan and Billy Conners, running pictures. The Luna-Lite has been remodeled to increase the seating capacity to 1,150, and was reopened Sunday, Sept. 25 with "The Affairs of Anatol." It is said in Marion that Brannigan and Conners are negotiating for the lease of a large downtown room wherein they would establish another picture place.

Lyric's State ran "Way Down East" two weeks at fifty cents top price, following it this week with "Over the Hill." Special exploitation on window cards, street car boards, bill boards and newspapers was used for both attractions. The "Way Down East" business was reported to have been the best the theatre has had.

Practically all movie orchestras are reorganized and running smoothly again following settlement of the musicians' strike.

SAN DIEGO

Unaware that there was a blaze in the building, the audience at the Superba theatre sat through the program one afternoon recently while members of the fire department extinguished with chemicals a fire in the workshop of the theatre, resulting from a burning film. The damage was slight.

"The Three Musketeers" was shown at the Plaza for a week, with an unprecedented attendance. Every showing for the week was given to packed houses, with a queue of waiting patrons in some instances extending a half block. Manager Russell Rogers used full-page displays for several days prior to the opening, playing up the fact that San Diego was the third city to secure the big Fairbanks feature. He used a special orchestra under the direction of Arthur Faeder. It was shown here at 50 cents, 75 cents and $1.00, with $1.50 for box seats.

CANADA

Considerable surprise in moving picture theatre circles of Winnipeg, Manitoba, was caused by the announcement on September 15 of the resignation of Charles C. Perry as manager of the new Capitol theatre, Winnipeg.

Jack Robinson, manager of the Dominion theatre, Victoria, B. C., has been appointed resident manager of the new Capitol theatre which was opened recently in Victoria by the Famous Players Canadian Corporation. The opening attraction was "The Conquest of Canaan," starring Thomas Meighan.

Paramount Maple Leaf Week proved to be an unqualified success in Ottawa, Ontario. In fact, it is doubtful whether any other city in Canada made a better showing for this special week than the Canadian capital or not. The Ottawa Journal tied up with the stunt with a combination news and advertisement page which bore an eight-column flare-line announcing the observance of the annual "week."

The musicians and projection-machine operators have finally settled their differences with the moving picture exhibitors of Ottawa, Ontario. The organized employes returned to work after a strike of two days, pending a final settlement. Announcement was made on September 15 that the musicians had accepted a reduction of ten per cent from the 1920-1921 scale while the operators accepted a cut of $1 per week, this reducing their wage to $36 per week. The latter constitutes practically the average minimum wage for cities in Eastern Canada, it is said.

DETROIT

The $1 scale of prices ranging down to 30 cents has proved so popular at the Fox Washington, for the engagement of "Over the Hill," now in its fourth week, that Manager Phil Gleichman inaugurated the same scale at the Broadway Strand for "The Affairs of Anatol" and this price will prevail during the run of "The Three Musketeers" when it is shown next month at the Adams theatres.

C. C. Randolph has resigned at the First National exchange to handle short subjects booking for the Standard Film service.

I. L. Garson, father of Harry Garson, is now house manager at the La Salle Garden theatre.

The Detroit Film Co., which purchased the films held by the Independent Master Film Co., has filed suit asking for the return of $2,500 in cash and $32,500 in notes.

On instructions of Mayor James Couzens the police department stopped the showing of "The Birth of a Nation" at the New Detroit opera house last Sunday. On Monday an injunction was secured preventing the city officials from interfering and the picture was shown. A hearing was held Wednesday and the court continued the injunction. Mayor Couzens has threatened to take away the license of the theatre but this proposed action, if taken, will be fought in the courts. Mayor Couzens is a candidate for re-election and acted at the request of various negro politicians.

ATLANTA, GA.

Atlanta is to establish in the local schools this fall practical use of motion pictures by the installation of "visual education" at an estimated cost of $5,000 for this year. The determination to inaugurate this system of teaching was reached by the Board of Education, at a meeting recently, and an initial sum of $5,000 was set aside, part of which will go to pay for the services of an expert instructor.

According to the plans of Superintendent of Schools W. A. Sutton, not only films of a strictly educational value—that is, travel, agriculture, industries, etc.—will be used, but certain films based on historical events will be shown, provided they pass the rigid censorship of the Board, and are deemed suitable for the children.

KANSAS CITY

Edward J. Peskay, St. Joseph, Mo., exhibitor, and secretary of the recently organized St. Joseph Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association, has taken over the management of the Nickle and Star theatres of St. Joseph. These two houses will be operated in conjunction with the Penn theatre of St. Joseph, owned by Mr. Peskay.

Kansas exhibitors have changed the name of their state organization, the "Kansas State Exhibitors' Association," to the "Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Kansas," in order to conform with the parent organization, as well as other state associations.

The Strand theatre at El Dorado, Kas., has been sold by W. L. Baldridge to C. N. Ewing.

The Grand theatre at Winfield, Kas., has been opened by Oscar Zimmerman, who will play feature pictures.

The Rex theatre, at Norcatur, Kans., has been sold by O. L. Dick to C. W. Craig.

Lawrence Gilbreath of the Queens theatre, Lucas, Kas., has sold his interests in the house to G. G. Hadlock. The theatre will be remodeled.

Tommy Taylor, formerly with the W. W. Hodkinson Kansas City branch, is now with the S. and T. Film Company.

CONNECTICUT

Bernard Satz, manager of the Bijou motion picture theatre at Ware, Mass., for the Goldstein Bros. Amusement Company of Springfield, will also act as manager of the Casino theatre at Ware, recently acquired by that corporation. It is announced that present conditions hardly warrant keeping both houses open all of the time, but the Casino will be continued with probable change of program daily.

The Bijou is likely to be open on Saturdays, holidays and at such other times as circumstances warrant, even daily, if conditions improve. Possession of the Casino was given to the Goldsteins after the final performance the 17th. It will be about four months before all of the contracts that must be taken over are out of the way, so that any changes contemplated in the policy of the house can hardly be carried into effect prior to that time.

TAMPA, FLA.

C. D. Cooley, general manager of the Consolidated Amusement Co., which controls all of the down-town theatres here, has returned from a "booking trip," and shows a list of big ones.

"Her Greatest Sacrifice" is the title of a five-reel picture made here in Tampa by the Seminole Producing Company. It is being shown all week at the Prince theatre. The photography and prints were made by the Juanita Films plant.

The Sans-Souci theatre, in Ybor City, the Latin quarter of Tampa, has reopened under the name of Teatro Julia. Spanish and Cuban players, in addition to some films, are the attraction.

The Maceo, the most successful of Tampa's colored theatres, has been closed for repairs. Chas. A. Sappal, who operates the house, has taken over the Palace, re-naming it the Maceo No. 2, and has transferred his bookings to it while the Maceo is given a good overhauling.

Miss Elizabeth Bedell, one of the best known newspaper women of Bridgeport, Conn., and widely known in motion picture circles of that section, was married September 2 at the Little Church Around the Corner, New York City, to Julian H. Sterling, for many years Bridgeport correspondent of the New York World and connected with that paper from 1882 to 1903.

Wm. Russell Release on Fox's October List

There are twelve important roles in "The Lady From Longacre," an early October Fox release starring William Russell, and many extra people appear in the picture.

The role of a titled young Englishman is a new one for William Russell, popular portrayer of sturdy Western types, but it is said to suit him to perfection, calling for all the qualities of dash and daring that have made him a favorite on the screen. The star is supported by Mary Thurman, Mathilde Brundage, Robert Klein, Jean Debriac, Francis Ford, William Brunton, Douglas Gerard, Lillian Worth, Arthur Van Sickle and Louis Dumar.

"The Lady From Longacre" is based on the popular novel by Victor Bridges. George E. Marshall directed the production.

Would Educate Public in Film Criticism

Robert G. Vignola recommends the establishment of local photoplay leagues much the same as community dramatic and literary clubs as one of the ways to educate the public to a fair and accurate appraisement of the motion-picture. Mr. Vignol declares the biggest handicap the screen faces today is the public's misunderstanding of what the motion-picture really is and what it is trying to accomplish as an art distinctive from all other arts. He says it is a common error to judge the picture by the standards of the novel, and the stage whereas the picture ought to be judged by standards established exclusively as its own. The screen's greatest need, says Vignola, is the formulating of definite canons of criticism and the education of the public in these canons.

Reginald Denny to Star in "Leather Pushers"

Reginald Denny, well known in screen leading roles, is to make his debut as a star in a series of twelve elaborate two-reel productions based on the celebrated "Leather Pusher" stories by H. C. Witwer, according to an announcement made by H. L. Messmore, president of the Knickerbocker Photoplay Corporation which has secured the world rights to the series.

The "Leather Pushers" which appeared in Collier's Weekly and will be published in book form early this month by G. P. Putnam's Sons, deals with the experiences of a young college man and football star, who, finding that his father's fortune has been swept away in Wall street, seeks to redeem the family name and finances in the pugilistic arena. Harry Pollard is the director. Work on the first of the series is now well under way.

Goldwyn Closes South American Deal

One of the largest foreign deals of the year has just been closed by Goldwyn Distributing Corporation through J. H. Hoffberg, who has charge of sales in Latin America and the Far East. The contract entered into with the New York Film Exchange of Buenos Aires provides for the distribution of Goldwyn's fourth and fifth year pictures in Argentine, Uruguay, Paraguay, Chile, Peru, Bolivia and Ecuador, South America.

Gladys Walton Story Started by Universal

Jack Perrin, well known as a Universal Western star, has been engaged as leading man to play opposite Gladys Walton in the fascinating little Universal's star's forthcoming photodrama, "The Guttersnipe." Perrin was leading man for Gladys Walton in her first big success, "Pink Tights." Production on "The Guttersnipe" will start immediately under the direction of Dallas Fitz Gerald, who has just been signed by Universal.

F.B.Warren Names Releases

Lucy Doraine in "Good and Evil" and "Our Mutual Friend" on List

TWO subjects on the releasing schedule of the F. B. Warren Corporation are "Good and Evil," starring Lucy Doraine, and a picturization of Charles Dickens' novel "Our Mutual Friend."

"Good and Evil" reveals a new era in imported motion picture productions, it is declared. This spectacular photo-drama was made by the Sascha Productions of Europe and was imported to this country by the Herz Film Corporation for release by the F. B. Warren Corporation.

Actually 10,000 people were used by Sascha in making this picture, it is stated. Many of the scenes were actually taken at the Royal Palace in Vienna. Alphone Fryland, Ralph Osterman, Antoine Tiller and others assist Lucy Dorsine in "Good and Evil."

The cinema version of Charles Dickens' last complete novel 'Our Mutual Friend" is announced for early release by the F. B. Warren Corporation.

This great attraction will run seven reels in its silversheet version and all the characters made famous by Dickens will be in evidence enacted by able character actors who give the screen their best in the roles assigned from "Our Mutual Friend."

This feature will prove one of the strongest cards of the Fall season and an appeal for millions who have read this classic of the story book world will be on hand to form long lines at the box offices of theatres booking the picture.

In producing "Our Mutual Friend," the producers have been careful in carrying out every detail in perfect and authentic detail of Dickens' work on the story. Every character has been artistically treated and presented in the most successful manner and their work has been proclaimed a masterpiece in the silversheet characterization.

"Four Horsemen" Premier

Washington and Cleveland Press Acknowledge Its Dramatic Power

WASHINGTON is latest on the list of American cities to capitulate before the dramatic power of "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," Rex Ingram's screen production for Metro of the novel of Vicente Blasco Ibanez.

Its recent presentation at Poli's theatre, in the national capital, brought forth newspaper criticisms superlative in commendation, prophesies of a record run, and tremendous outbursts of enthusiastic audiences.

Cleveland has also fallen in line with the many cities to give tribute to the dramatic power and pictorial excellence of "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," a Rex Ingram production for Metro. It was greeted as the finest work of the cinema world when it was given its premiere in New York earlier this year.

The Ohio city which had its first glimpse of the picture version of the great story of Vicente Blasco Ibanez, last week, was lavish in its praise and the tremendous demand for seats at the Stillman theatre, where the colossal production was the first big spectacle under the new policy of the house, proved that its artistic appeal was just as powerful with the public.

The Washington Times, on Sunday, September 4, gave out free copies of a jazzy fox-trot composed by Miss Alice Terry, featured player of the Rex Ingram productions of "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," "The Conquering Power" and "Turn to the Right." The composition is called "The Four Horsemen Fox Trot."

The announcement of the distribution of free copies was made in a special feature story published in the Times on Thursday, September 1, illustrated by a photograph of Miss Terry.

A tense moment from the new William Russell picture for Fox release, "The Lady from Longacre"

Realart Buys Three New Stories for Stars

An original story by Aubrey Stauffer has been purchased for Mary Miles Minter. Mr. Stauffer is a member of the title-growing staff. For Bebe Daniels has been procured a story written especially for her by Nina Wilcox Putnam, short-story writer. Douglas Doty is preparing the scenario. Rob Wagner has written an original story which will be used as a coming feature for Constance Binney. Mr. Heath is to write the scenario.

Main titles for these stories will be announced later.

Third Story Ready for New Universal Star

Miss duPont, Universal's blonde star, will appear as a sculptor in the mad whirl of Parisian night life, in "Clay," the third Universal starring vehicle which has just been selected for her. The story was originally called "The Wind Along the Waste," a magazine story by Maud Ansley. J. Grubb Alexander is to interpret for the screen. Production upon the colorful drama will start immediately upon the completion of "Ropes," the Universal picture which now engages the newest star, to find her place in the galaxy of Universal satellites.

"Ropes" was written as a one-act play by Wilbur Daniel Steele and appeared recently in Harper's Magazine.

Cabanne's Latest Meets With Great Approval

The screening at the home-office of R-C Pictures Corporation of William Christy Cabanne's new production, "The Barricade," was followed by expressions of general approval for the new release among the R-C executives.

Many skilful human touches, in which children of the slums appear, add to the attractiveness of the subject, it is declared. Not the least interesting of these is the great love of an elderly and kindly Hebrew for the son of his Irish business partner, who has died.

The titles which were written by Robert Huntington of Mr. Cabanne's staff were also accorded a full measure of approbation for their conciseness.

Among those who appear in the cast are Kenneth Harlan, Katherine Spencer, William A. Strauss, Dorothy Richards, Eugene Borden, James Harrison and others.

Skouras Bros. Acquire New St. Louis House

The Empress theatre, St. Louis, situated at Grand and Olive streets, was leased for a period of twenty years last week by the Skouras Brothers Enterprises. The Skouras Brothers now control nine local theatres and airdromes, the Empress being the tenth link in the chain.

Spiros Skouras, president of the theatre concern, stated that the program of Pantages Vaudeville and first-run feature pictures would be offered. The theatre which has heretofore shown an exclusively vaudeville program will be renovated at a cost of approximately $60,000.

THERE is never a lack of patrons for the best,—and that is just what the UNITED ARTISTS CORP. have to offer in the latest Mary Pickford production "Little Lord Fauntleroy." It is the best in every detail of its making,—the acting,—the story,—the settings and the direction. And the same superlative applies in equal measure to the posters,—every one of which is a RITCHEY poster.

The twenty-four sheet from the set is reproduced above.

The Biggest Kind of Hit!

"Miss Ferguson touches heights she never has reached before. The nearest approach to art in films. The star wears clothes the like of which my poor eye hath never beheld. Both in her comedy and her emotion the star scored immensely. The story is not only clever and original, but convincing."

ALAN DALE in N. Y. American.

The Only Picture Ever Booked for Three Weeks by The Rivoli, New York, In Advance of Showing!

"All signs point to record popularity for this picture. Rarely do we see such a wholesome and sparkling story. There are few actresses who bring into their work such fine artistry as does Miss Ferguson in this. The characterization has infinite variety and much feminine reality. The direction is unusually fine."

SUZANNE SEXTON

"Uncommonly fine acting. Colorful and elaborately mounted picture."
New York World.

"Very appealing scenes, truly effective gowns, and the star demonstrates her versatility throughout."
New York Herald.

"It's just fine. There's not a minute that we're not with the star, tooth and nail. My goodness, Miss Ferguson, why can't you have a 'Footlights' every release? It's a grand film. We were crazy about the gowns and stage sets."

"When an Arab sees a woman he wants he takes her"

—Ancient Proverb of Arabia.

THAT was the meaning of love in the desert until The Sheik met the English girl.

That is the heart of the plot of "The Sheik," which in book form is the year's sensation on both sides of the Atlantic and which as a Paramount Picture finds and thrills a multi-million audience.

Don't miss the thrill of seeing the proud mad-cap English girl snatched from the sand by the hard-riding Sheik of a hundred tribes.

You will be amazed at her life within the tented luxury of the Sahara.

You will see love making by the handsome Rudolph Valentino as The Sheik which is in the full torrent of Oriental tradition.

How shall the lovely and aristocratic Agnes Ayres, as the English girl, escape with life and honor?

That is the plot of it, the shiver of it — the odds are so great — that is the drama you see against a background of infinite desert,

—of a thousand wild Bedouin horsemen with long rifles and flowing robes,

—of the bride-market at Biskra where the slave-brides are sold,

—and of desert fighting between Sheik and Bandit, and between their troops, of a ferocity only equalled by tigers.

Does love emerge supreme and glorious at the climax? Is a pure spot found in the heart of the bronzed Sheik?

The answer to that will make you draw the deepest breath of all,

—and recognize that once more Paramount has given you the best show in town or state.

M. P. NEWS says

"Get ready to cash in—You'll have 'em flocking to your theatre in droves."

"UNIVERSAL HAS SOLVED THE CENSORSHIP question regarding serials. Holding the idea that the 'continued photoplay' is patronized largely by children, it has gone ahead and produced a serial which WILL NOT ONLY SATISFY THE CENSOR BUT DELIGHT THE CHILDREN AS WELL. Fremont, the romantic, dashing pioneer, Carson, the Indian fighter and idol of every American boy—these are figures who WILL CAUSE ANY AUDIENCE TO SIT FASCINATED AND ENRAPTURED."

"'WINNERS OF THE WEST' is red-blooded American history transferred to the screen with undeniably rich dramatic strokes. Certainly, the first three episodes indicate that HERE IS THE REAL SERIAL—TRUE ADVENTURE STORY AND ONE ALTOGETHER WHOLESOME. The backgrounds are awe-inspiring, the acting reaches a verisimilitude of life itself. And with Art Acord the popular cowboy, interpreting a romantic role, there is no reason to doubt the absence of thrills. Edward Laemmle has seemingly directed this feature with an inspiration born of enthusiasm for his work—the schools, the Boy Scouts will find it a constant source of entertainment."

Broadway House Features Selig-Rork Subject

Again an Educational-Selig - Rork photoplay has been selected as the dramatic subject in a short subject programme at a big first-run Broadway picture house. A short time ago "The Northern Trail," the first of the Educational-Selig-Rork series, was shown at the Capitol Theatre. Beginning last Sunday, "The Ne'er to Return Road," the third of the series, was on the programme of the Strand Theatre, run as the serious feature with Charlie Chaplin's "The Idle Class." As in the case of the showing of "The Northern Trail," the newspaper critics have spoken very highly of this short feature.

Released through Educational Film Corporation Exchanges—playing leading first-run theatres throughout the country.

ANOTHER BIG GOLDWYN FEATURE
Goldwyn is pushing "The Man From Lost River" as one of the prize features of a prize program.
"The Man From Lost River" is a big picture — one of those strong, two-fisted, red-blooded, out-door yarns that every picture-goer enjoys.
This sort of story has made Katharine Newlin Burt and her "The Branding Iron" famous. But "The Branding Iron" was not quite so active, not quite so tender, not quite so swift as this new, vivid box-office production.
It is the kind of picture that made motion pictures popular. House Peters is at his best as The Man.

Friend George Cobb: Bein' as I writ to Davy Griffith, Doug Fairbanks and "Wrecks" Ingram in "Collyers" about these here movies, it kinda seems to me George, that bein' as your the King Nabob of the Bord of Rewoers I would be insultin' you if I left you out. All these babies that are not believers in violence except for censors is all wrong. Now if these bozos would make these two-reel ribts — like I am now planning, the first of which is "Fools Rush Out", a rib crushin' comedy without the pies — they would never have any more worry about a censor.

The reason I am attractin' your attention like a three alarm fire with this here letter is to apprise you in advance of this batch of twelve two-reel comedies. George, they are so good and the sets so classy that Scwabe mansion on the drive looks like a ash can in comparison.

The inside dope on these comedies is this way. I am writin' the scenarios and the titles and not to be too chesty, but my stuff does get publication these comedies is goin' to panic the exhibitors. All of which proves that we is makin' clean, peppy comedies that is gonna satisfy the censors — the exhibitor and the stak-holder exchange man. "One Arabian Night" Take

Triumphant Showing Jan

Rarely have critics been so unanimous, so enthusiastic, so lavish in their praise—depicting it as a colossal production, an exceptional film—unique, novel—one that thrills and holds you in its grip—the year's biggest artistic success

GOOD FOR 1001 BROADWAY NIGHTS

"'One Arabian Night' ought to be good for 1001 Broadway nights. A picture of the first order—in the exceptional class of finer films. Spectacular in the extreme with mob scenes that rival anything before shown. Glimpses of a sheik's harem which may make onlookers long for old Bagdad. Harem scenes gorgeous. Pola Negri and Ernest Lubitsch are the outstanding features though not a weak character can be found. The photography is flawless."—New York Telegram.

SPLENDID ENTERTAINMENT

"Glorious strokes of imagination constantly animate it. Again and again the spectator is thrilled by some arresting suggestion. American actresses would do well to study the technique of Pola Negri. Splendid entertainment, colorful and beautiful."—New York World.

STAR IS AT HER BEST

"If the crowds which attempted to throng into the Strand is any criterion, Pola Negri has established a huge following. She is strikingly beautiful, and radiates a virile, unrepressed personality that is at its best in this picture. The scenes are lavish."—New York Mail.

A PICTURE NOT TO BE MISSED

"Atmosphere that is irresistible. An unusual picture and rouses your acutest enthusiasm. It has so much beauty, so much charm and such remarkable effects that you must see it. A picture not to be missed. The scenery is admirable, the acting away above the ordinary and the episodes clever and intelligent. Few pictures can boast such a cast, the acting being extraordinarily vivid and convincing. Pola Negri is a great artist. She is superb, original and inimitable. She held you in a grip."—New York American.

Rarely has there been so spontaneous an ovation given by the tremendous throngs that blocked sidewalks, defying cold and rain, to see the great continental artist, Pola Negri, in the spectacular production of Lubitsch, creator of "Passion"

AN EXCEPTIONAL PICTURE

"Ernest Lubitsch is the superior of most directors anywhere and Pola Negri is one of the few real players of the screen who can make a character live. All the characters are vivid in their parts. A fiery story of Eastern adventure and intrigue. Rich entertainment—highly colored romance. In acting, direction and setting it is exceptional—one of the year's best pictures."—New York Times.

VITAL—FULL OF FIRE

"The vital Pola Negri gives it fire. One sits at attention. It has fine intelligence in its character drawing and a great deal of humor. At times it is electrical in its fervor—a fine touch."—New York Journal.

POLA NEGRI ALLURING

"Pola Negri is the most alluring personage developed on the European screen—a winsome figure who does a dance in fascinating diaphanous draperies. The mounting is elaborate."—New York Herald.

A COLOSSAL PRODUCTION

"Tense and colorful drama with that marvelous actress, Pola Negri. Well nigh perfect—a colossal production, filled with action and suspense and the most quaintly humorous touches. Lubitsch, the director, is a wizard. There is no other artist on the screen so great as Pola Negri. The rest of the cast is perfect. So are the settings and mob scenes."—New York Tribune.

A DECIDED NOVELTY

"The acting is brilliant, the settings and atmosphere fascinating, and the technique fine and sure. The film is a decided novelty. Pola Negri is full of fire and exquisitely graceful. Lubitsch's work is splendid."—New York Telegraph.

Mr. J. D. Williams,
Associated First National, Inc.,
6 West 48th Street,
New York.

Dear Mr. Williams:

I have just finished looking at "Bits of Life" and while still under its influence I cannot help but tell you that in my opinion it has gotten hold of me in such a way that it has made me think. Here at last is something different. It is as though I was listening to a series of clever stories by an excellent story-teller, and fortunately for us all, the story-teller was our own friend "Mickey."

Of course, I need not tell you what I personally think of his directorial genius and picture making. I have always had a sneaking idea that he was perhaps our greatest director. But here, in a way that brings forth his own personality that inimitable humor, and those deft touches that have made his pictures so popular with the masses, are evidenced in a greater degree and in a clearer and more suitable way than I have yet seen in motion picture work. It cannot help but make a great impression on its audiences and the exhibitor will do well to study this and then exploit it accordingly.

Here is a new idea with an excellent chance for exploitation - something so different and so clever that he need not be afraid to step out. He need not pull his punch, and in his presentation there will be many little things that will come to him that will, I think, enhance the presentation. I am extremely proud to have the honor of presenting "Bits of Life" and I am looking forward with a great deal of interest to the week of October 16th.

Yours sincerely,

"The Movie Thing"

IN California they have achieved "The Affiliated Picture Interests, Incorporated."

It means just that: an incorporation of all the picture interests of the State.

All means producers, distributors, exhibitors, directors, writers, actors, assistant directors, art directors, cinematographers, and "the various classes of artisans employed in every branch of the industry."

Sectional jealousies, commercial wrangles, labor troubles, personal ambitions—all these obstacles have been leveled flat to lead the way to a common end, namely "a central body that would insure united action in all matters of common interest and more especially one that would provide the machinery for marshalling the numerical strength and the financial power of the industry in combating unjust and detrimental legislation or regulation."

We quote from the organization's own statement. It is to the point.

"THE numerical strength and the financial power of the industry!" And to this we may add: the publicity power of the screen.

We stand today, so far as resources are concerned the fourth manufacturing industry, in size, in the country, and so far as power is concerned we possess an engine that admittedly transcends the greatest power previously known and that was the power of the press.

We can, through the screen, tell the truth, in this one country alone, to fifteen million people overnight.

Yet——

With these unequalled resources—no other industry has them, even the press lacks them—we are as helpless as a beggar on the street.

Anyone can hurl a brickbat at us, and everyone does.

We are sneered at, yelled at, lied about, insulted, vilified almost every day of our lives.

We are pie for the politician, the fanatic, the notoriety seeker, the destructionist.

The Governor of the State of New York just before the final hearing on a bill which takes from us the right of trial by jury, which, in effect, says that we are so dangerous to society as to be beyond the pale of the courts of the land, a piece of legislation hugely ominous and infamous, arose and with a sneer and a laugh said: "Let's have lunch and then we'll take up this movie thing!"

"This movie thing!"

That's just about where we stand today in the public estimation. Not the fourth manufacturing industry of the United States, not the educator of the millions of the world. But—"a movie thing!"

And why?

Simply because we can't talk back. We can't talk back and we can't talk forward. We can't make a whisper come out of our giant's mouth. We are dumb with disintegration.

The man who makes the film, the man who distributes it, the man who exhibits it—each stands utterly apart today; and the consequence is that the screen cannot say one word today in defense of and for the sake of the one institution today that needs most the light of truth—and that's the motion picture.

California achieves an affiliation, just the affiliation of all interests we appeal for; and this affiliation today has the respect of the State of California.

We can do nationally the same thing. It means simply an affiliation of existing organizations through a joint committee, representative and authoritative.

JUST as we write this editorial an exhibitor, one, too, whose judgment we highly respect, sends a letter which says, in brief: Your editorial on getting together is all right. I agree with you. But why ask Mr. Cohen to take the first step?

And we gladly reply:

Because some one must take the first step. Because Mr. Cohen leads the strongest organization the industry has thus far produced. Because this organization of exhibitors, however, representing as it does only one branch of this industry, can never, however it continues to grow, adequately represent and adequately protect the entire industry. And finally because we believe Mr. Cohen is big enough and broad enough to take just such a step.

WM. A. JOHNSTON.

Main Fight of New York Democrats this Fall Will Center Around Censorship

IN a statement issued October 2, Herbert C. Pell, Jr., chairman of the Democratic State Committee of New York, dclares that the main fight of the Democratic party this fall throughout New York State will be against governmental interference including censorship. The statement follows in full:

"The main fight of the Democratic party this fall, throughout the State will be against the tendency toward government regulation, interference and censorship. This tendency is un-American and, in the long run, will work serious injury to the people of this country. The principle of censorship is absolutely foreign to this country. There is today ample law to prevent libelous or indecent matter being published either in newspapers or in motion pictures.

"Our traditional principle allows a man to say, or otherwise publish on his own responsibility, and at his own risk, whatever he has in mind although, of course, he must suffer the consequences if his publication has resulted in material or moral loss to any one else or to the general public. In spite of the fact a system of licensing has some conveniences to an administration in power, this principle has developed on the ground that freedom of expression, unhampered by authority, is a necessary concomitant of a free government. The censorshop of the motion picture shows, I am afraid, is only the thin edge of the wedge and may result in an attempt to control newspapers.

"I believe we should guarantee to each individual the utmost liberty in the expression of his opinion, the management of his property and the conduct of his private life that is consistent with the maintenance of justice and public order. I prefer the happiness of being free to the pleasure of being a tyrant. It is for that reason I am a Democrat.

"We should bear this situation in mind this fall and guard our liberties by voting for Democratic candidates for public office, against reactionary Republicans."

Washington Exchange Managers Organize

If enthusiasm means anything, then the Exchange Managers' Association of Washington, D. C., has achieved success at the start. One hundred per cent efficiency was the keynote of the meeting held last week in which the Association became thoroughly reorganized.

New officers were elected for the ensuing year. They are: J. H. Beaver, of the Electric and Educational Film Exchange, president; Paul E. Kreiger, Fox Film Corp., vice-president; Jules Levey, Washington Film Exchange, treasurer; and Messrs. S. Galanty, of Hodkinson Film Corp., and Rudolph Berger of the F. B. Warren Corp., as members of the executive committee.

One of the first moves made by the newly reorganized association was to put the business matters of the association into the hands of a manager. Charles E. Wagner was selected to fill this position.

This meeting, comprising a membership of ninety-five percent of the exchanges of this territory adopted many new plans, and, according to President Beaver, it is the firm intention of those in authority to make this Association one of the strongest and most efficient in the country.

Westerly, R. I., Houses Not Controlled by Black

Daniel Novogrod, of Westerly, R. I., in requesting the correction of a statement published in the October 1st issue to the effect that the Central and Lyric theatres of Westerly are controlled by the Black Circuit, explains:

"The situation is that David Novogrod, owner, lessee, and manager of the Lyric and Central theatres, in Westerly, has taken over the management of the Bliven Opera House in this town, and all three theatres are now under his control."

To Deal Direct with Non-Theatrical Interests

The following letter, addressed by the F. I. L. M. Club of New York City to non-theatrical institutions, announces the adoption of a new policy by the member exchanges of the F. I. L. M. Club whereby business with these non-theatrical institutions will be done directly and not through middlemen:

"Heretofore some middleman has arranged bookings between the exchanges and the non-theatrical exhibitor of films. This practice has been thoroughly unsatisfactory to motion picture exchanges and led to the general practice now prevalent for all motion picture exchanges to refrain from doing business with non-theatrical users of motion pictures through the medium of a middleman, but to transact business direct.

"This is to advise you that the leading motion picture companies, all of which you find listed hereon, are prepared to transact all their business with you direct. That if it is inconvenient for you to call at the offices of the exchanges, arrangements will be made whereby representatives of all motion picture companies will be pleased to call upon you at a time and place suitable and convenient to you.

"We beg to express to you our assurances that the service which will be rendered to you under this system will be of greater value to you; that your needs and requirements will receive much more study and that through such direct contact, more suitable films will be made available for you than were heretofore."

Taboo Politics on Screens of Western New York

Western New York theatre screens have been closed to political advertisements. Howard J. Smith, president of the western N. Y. unit of the M. P. T. O. A., has sent the following letter to members of the organization:

"Some parties are approaching political candidates offering to sell our screens. The screens should not be used for politics as it would injure our business. This also applies to programs and circulars. Don't run any slides for candidates or allow any programs with political advertisements to be furnished you."

The order is of especial significance on account of the now raging political campaign. A new program company in Buffalo is hard hit by the move. The unit is aiding the national body in refusing to show any productions of an objectionable nature.

Censorship Situation in Lo Angeles Unsettled

The censorship situation is at a star still, pending the preparation of an or nance by the city attorney. The drafti of the ordinance will be completed with the next few days, it is expected. Fi leading ministers spoke on censorsh Sunday night, attempting to answer W liam De Mille's statement. Florida cit have wired the producers offering to bu municipal studios and assuring every n essary cooperation for production. T banks have shown interest indirectly kill the censorship movement. The Cha ber of Commerce has gathered statist showing that the average weekly pay-r is half a million dollars and that the vestment by the film producing indus in Los Angeles amounts to twenty milli dollars.

The Pasadena City Council has pass a censorship ordinance establishing "Better Films" Committee of five, serve without pay. A rider has been a ed to the ordinance providing for an a nual tax of forty cents per seat on moti picture theatres, payable quarterly. T money goes to the General City Fund.

Indiana Exhibitors Tak European Tour

Important Promotions Announced in Executive Personnel of Pathe

Elmer Pearson Made Gen'l Manager; Promotions from Within the Ranks

IMPORTANT promotions in the guiding personnel of Pathe Exchange, Inc. are announced this week by Paul Brunet, president of the Pathe distributing organization, and all are in accordance with the Pathe policy of advancing from within its own ranks those whose fitness commend them for bigger accomplishments.

Elmer Pearson, for more than eighteen months Director of Exchanges, has become general manager of the concern through choice of Mr. Brunet. Mr. Pearson's further advancement has met with unanimous approbation from the entire Pathe organization because of his record of foresightedness in business matters and his "square deal" policy for all, which conforms markedly with the precepts of President Brunet.

At a meeting of the Pathe Board of Directors last week, a management Committee was authorized, which will be comprised of the President, Vice President, Secretary, General Manager and Assistant General Manager.

Bernard Benson, of the well known banking house of Merrill, Lynch & Co., who for about two years has been a member of the Pathe Executive Committee, was elected Vice President. Mr. Benson brings to Pathe a wide and unusual knowledge of business and finance.

John Humm, for the last seven years identified with the Pathe organization, and for several years past its auditor and member of the executive committee becomes Assistant General Manager, under the new order of management as directed by Mr. Brunet. Into his larger field of activities Mr. Humm brings a knowledge of the affairs of Pathe that could be possible only to one who has been both Auditor and member of the Executive Committee.

Three very important units in the smoothly functioning Pathe machine, who will continue to administer their offices, as well as their posts on the Executive Committee, in their usual efficient manner, are:

Lewis Innerarity, Secretary, who since September, 1918, has carefully and successfully handled the reins of the secretaryship, and guided the legal department through many important law engagements. Mr. Innerarity is an expert on all questions pertaining to censorship.

Arthur E. Rousseau, Export Manager, who has been a member of the Pathe executive family for several years, and whose knowledge of the Export trade has held Pathe foremost in this department of the motion picture industry.

G. L. Chanier, General Superintendent of Factories, who has developed this post into a highly specialized position, the importance of which cannot be overestimated.

Mr. Pearson's record with Pathe is one that pays tribute not only to his own ability, but to the faithfulness with which Pathe adheres to its policy of promoting from within its own ranks. He began with Pathe as a salesman. He rapidly climbed the ladder of success, stepping first into a branch managership. In June of 1919, he came to the home office as Feature Sales Manager. In less than six months the business in this department

Issuance of Permit Without Fee Up to the Board

While Attorney-General Charles D. Newton, of New York State, has just made a ruling on a certain class of pictures as to whether or not they should be forced to pay for a permit issued by the New York State Motion Picture Commission, it appears that the Commission itself will have practically the entire say in the matter. The opinion has just been given George H. Cobb, chairman of the censorship commission, in response to an inquiry on his part.

The Attorney-General, in his opinion, says:

"It appears from the language of the last paragraph of section 6, that the picture produced on the film need not be one of an educational, charitable or religious nature, but must be used and intended in the exhibition thereof, solely for educational, charitable or religious purposes. It cannot be used for commercial purposes. If the picture is exhibited under the auspices of a society, or body in its nature educational, charitable or religious, wihout an admission fee, or if with admission fee, the proceeds thereof to be devoted to some educational, charitable or religious work, then, and in such case it matters not what the nature of the picture film may be, whether drama, comedy, cartoon, history, sociology, science, etc.

"It therefore appears that any picture, no matter by whom manufactured and placed upon the market, which is rented for one of the purposes above set forth and exhibited in the manner set forth, may be, in the discretion of the Commission exhibited under a permit without the fee charged by your Commission. I assume that it was the intent of the Legislature, in permitting your Commission to grant such permit, without fee, to make it possible for educational, charitable and religious bodies or societies to rent such picture films at a lesser cost than would otherwise be the case if a license fee were charged.

"The application for the granting of this permit, however, should be accompanied by proper affidavit fully setting forth the facts that such picture films are only leased and exhibited under the auspices of educational, charitable and religious institutions or societies.

"Notwithstanding the conclusions above set forth, the question as to whether or not you will issue such a permit rests in the discretion of your Commission. The law having vested you with such power of discretion, it therefore follows that you may make any rules and regulations deemed necessary to carry out such provisions of the statute."

To Film Big Game in Wild Sections of Arizona

A motion picture hunting expedition into Gila County, Arizona, arranged by Jack Callicotte, former manager of the Kinema theatre in Los Angeles, left the city during the past week for a stay of six weeks. The purpose of the expedition is to secure wild animal films.

Reports from the game inspector of Gila County are to the effect that bear, mountain lions and other big game is in abundance in that section which is miles from a railroad and civilization.

The motion picture will be made under the supervision of Callicotte, Harry Leonhardt, Fred Miller of the California theatre, Los Angeles; Henry Charles, vice-president American Photoplay Company, and the camera man, A. J. Stout.

Zukor to Entertain Paramount Club Members

The members of the Paramount Club, which comprises a large proportion of the Paramount home office employes, have been invited by Adolph Zukor to an outing at his country estate at New York City, Rockland County, on Saturday, October 15.

Lawrence E. Goldman, counsel and secretary of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Missouri

THROUGH the constant and untiring efforts of Lawrence E. Goldman, counsel and secretary of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Missouri, exhibitors in the territory west of the Mississippi River are about to attain the goal which has long been sought for—music free from tax, unhampering methods in the collection of internal revenue taxes and unrestricted co-operation among exhibitors.

Having obtained the passage of the Missouri Deposit Bill, of which he was the author, Mr. Goldman is now working on a plan whereby non-members of the American Society of Authors and Composers will become banded with the exhibitors, thus dealing a telling blow to music tax. Internal revenue problems, dealing with the technical details concerning the issuance of tickets from the box-office, the methods involved in keeping a check on exhibitors by revenue agents, are only a small portion of the tasks which are confronting Mr. Goldman.

Recently, letters were sent to members of the American Society of Authors and Composers, stating that exhibitors refused to be "brow beaten" into paying tax on music, and that in the future only non-taxable music would be used. Following this, Mr. Goldman's office wat literally "swamped" with offers from non-members of the music tax organization, and many letters were received from members of the American Society of Authors and Composers, asking that some arrangements be made whereby their productions could be used by exhibitors; also asking that they be allowed to send a representative to Kansas City where the matter might be considered. The latter request was granted by Mr. Goldman.

As secretary and counsel for the exhibitors, Mr. Goldman faces a busy winter this year. Having declined a proposal to run for State Senator, not desiring to participate in partisan politics, he has buckled down to the many tasks which confront him. So highly was his opinion valued, that he was called into consultation at the Iowa-Nebraska convention, and his opinions on many vital problems sought.

Reels Worth $7,000 A[re] Stolen in Buffalo

Forty reels of valuable film were st[ol]r. from the United Artists, Nu-Art and [E]ducational companies in Buffalo last w[ee]k. It was the biggest film robbery ever [re]corded in the city and is perhaps the l[ar]gest in the country in a long time. [The] value of the stolen films will reach $7,[000]. Among the features stolen were print[s] of Fairbanks' new film "The Three Mu[s]keteers," "Dream Street," a Griffith pro[duc]tion, "Carnival" a foreign feature; "[Di]sraeli," George Arliss' new vehicle [and] several Pickford releases. Nu-Art [lost] some five reel features and short subj[ects] and Educational a number of short [sub]jects. It is believed that an employe, [who] has since disappeared, worked with sc[me] one on the outside. The films are p[rob]ably now out of the country. The Bu[ffa]lo police are investigating. All the f[ilms] were stolen from the shipping departm[ent] of the three exchanges, all of which [are] housed in the Nu-Art building, 221 Fr[an]klin street.

Bankers in Los Angeles [Are] Entertained by Studio

The film industry is playing a big [part] in the entertainment of the delegate[s] to the American Association of Bank[ers'] convention being held in Los Ange[les]. Over four thousand persons are in att[en]dance. Sunday was spent at the Bru[ce] studio, where a Spanish barbecue [was] served. Buster Keaton, J. L. Frothi[ng]ham Productions, and the Jackie Co[ogan] Company demonstrated the work of m[ak]ing films. Wednesday evening, the b[an]kers were entertained by Universal [H]ill at the Monte Carlo set where a trick [rain] storm was staged, and the delegates [were] "held up" by members of the Wi[ld] of the West serial company headed by [Art] Acord.

Many Promotions in Pa[the] Ranks

had more than doubled. The follo[wing] February, Mr. Brunet named him D[irec]tor of Exchanges, and now, a few [days] more than eighteen months from his [in]vation to that position, he has been [ap]pointed General Manager.

In announcing the promotions, [Mr.] Brunet stated:

"It is gratifying to head an organization whos[e per]is composed of men who can so readily adapt [them]selves to positions that demand greater abilit[y and] more pronounced initiative, than had ever befor[e been] demanded of them. Pathe has always felt prou[d that] within its own ranks were those who could fulfi[ll the] demands that might be made upon them. Neve[r has] we been obliged to go outside our own organi[zation] for men of calibre to fill important posts.

"In announcing the appointment of Mr. Pear[son] General Manager and Mr. Humm as Assistant G[enera]l Manager, I naturally feel some pride for I have w[atched] keenly their progress, their earnest efforts that [have] brought them forward. I know they will ably [fill] the positions with which they are now entrusted. The opportunity that is theirs awaits every emplo[ye] of Pathe, because it is the Pathe policy to promo[te on] proof of fitness, and that policy has been o[f vital] importance in building up the great and succ[essful] organization of which we all are a part."

Carl Laemmle Back from Europe Has No Fear of Foreign Ascendancy

Leaves for the Coast at Once; Finds Little Change in Industry Abroad

THOUGH Carl Laemmle had been away from his office at the Universal for more than four months, he stopped in New York just long enough to settle necessary business which awaited him there and started for California. He and his party arrived on board the Aquitania on Friday of last week, and he started for Universal City on Thursday of this week. One reason for going to California so soon is to confer with Erich von Stroheim on the final cutting and shaping of "Foolish Wives."

The early departure prevented several functions which had been planned with Mr. Laemmle as the central figure. One of them which he was exceedingly sorry to miss was a dinner tendered to him at which the representatives of Censor Boards in the East were to present to him formally an engrossed set of resolutions thanking him for the vision and generosity which prompted the meeting of the Censors with the producers at Universal City. This dinner had to be abandoned, but the resolutions have been hung in Mr. Laemmles office.

Mr. Laemmle's trip was a combination of business and pleasure. He visited the various Universal branches in England and on the Continent and made a general survey of film conditions there.

After his four month's study of moving picture productions in Germany and other European countries, Mr. Laemmle is still a firm believer in the continued ascendancy of American films. It is his opinion that it will be a number of years before the master film minds of the Continent will be in a position to challenge American supremacy on the screen.

"The Virgin of Stamboul," he says, was the first big American film to be shown to the German public under the import film admittance regulations. It was received with unusual acclaim. German reviewers were especially struck by the superior photography, the unusual lighting effects, and the ability by the American producers to make a suspenseful film story out of a plot and theme not of the grand order.

"European film conditions show very little change," said Mr. Laemmle, "since I was abroad a year ago. Attendance particularly on the continent, has improved with the return of stabler industrial conditions and producing abroad has been greatly stimulated by the success of the several German films that have been exploited in America. The main impressions that I received were the intense desire on the part of producers and actors to do things in the American way and the very general resentment against the tariff agitation in this country. These two impressions taken together may seem to strengthen the feeling which has been manufactured in America that foreign films are in any sense a menace to America. Quite the contrary; I came back still more convinced that American films have nothing to fear and everything to gain by foreign competition. It is only in costume spectacles that foreign producers ever have scored in this country and I have no hesitancy in predicting that foreign producers never will be able to produce ordinary features for this country. The customs, mannerisms, ideals, clothes and style of acting as I see them in the ordinary run of foreign features are entirely too 'national' to be accepted in America.

"The only chance I see for foreign made films is to have them made by an American director and American technical expert. Even then he would have great difficulty but I have not by any means given up the idea I have entertained for some time of making productions in Germany, France, England, Czecho-slovakia and possibly some of the northern countries. This country has no scenery or buildings like the old world and I have an idea that the company which can combine these old world settings with American methods of production and acting will be well repaid.

"The interest that European film centers take in the prospect of success of their pictures in America is well shown by the indignation which foreign producers feel at the danger of a tariff wall being erected against their productions. I cannot think of any more ill advised move than a duty on foreign films. The revenue would be very slight; the hostile feeling aroused is already alarming and is certain to result in retaliatory measures. A duty on films coming into America will hurt American producers a thousand times more than European producers. Take the exports of America and compare them with the imports from any foreign country. The damage such a tariff will do to us will be in precisely the same proportion as you find in these figures."

Pittsburgh Paramount Pep Club Hold Big Dance

Another page was written in the history of the Pittsburgh Paramount Pep Club, which is composed of the members of the Pittsburgh Exchange of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation on Saturday evening, October 1st, when they held their first dance at the Elks Club, Pittsburgh. Everybody had a "great" time. Everybody was enthusiastic and all that could be said for any successful social event would be also true about the dance of the Paramount Pep Club. The dance was held in the big ball room of the Club. Everybody wore bright silk ribbon badges with the word Paramount emblazoned thereon.

Northern California Has Business Revival

Larger Theatres Back to Old Level; Business in Smaller Houses Also Improved

IN reporting the results of its survey of the Northern California territory, Associated First National Pictures declares that conditions in that section of the country have greatly improved and that the present finds business in all of the larger theatres "back to the old level." The smaller houses are also doing a good business, and their managements are effecting renovations and planning better programs in anticipation of a greater increase in patronage in the immediate future, according to the First National statement, which follows in part:

"Though the San Francisco territory was not hit as hard by the general business depression as the rest of the country as a whole, conditions there two months ago were not the best in the world by any means. The city was in the throes of an industrial strike that practically tied up all business in the city; small stores were forced to the wall and made money very tight over the entire city. The larger down-town theatres and the large suburban houses felt it the most, and their attendence was cut down from one-third to one-half of what it was normally. Every cloud though has a silver lining, and a silver lining it was, small silver, nickels and dimes, to the small neighborhood houses who got the people who used to go to the larger theatres but who from force of circumstances were obliged to seek their amusement elsewhere. The smaller theatres showed in practically every instance that their attendance had increased over twenty-five per cent.

"Conditions have greatly improved. The strike is over; men are going back to work; new building is going on—the survey of Associated First National Pictures disclose. In fact the city records of building permits granted show that at no other time than just after the fire in 1906 has there been such an epidemic of building. This means an era of prosperity and good times coming, and from present indications they are here all ready.

"Business is back to the old level in all of the larger theatres, while people have found that the small theatre offers them good amusements and are going more the smaller houses. The small hou managers realize the necessity of holdir the public and are doing more to bright up and freshen up their houses, putting new seats, new equipment, better musi and in fact there is a general air amor all the theatres both large and small th better times are coming and all are mal ing an effort to book better programs the better pictures rather than judgin pictures by the price as they were doin some few weeks before.

"In the San Joaquin valley in th spring of this year they had a heavy fro that practically destroyed their fruit cro and killed prospects of a good summe business. This depression is over, an everybody is brightening up their ol house and getting plans ready for a ne house next year.

"In the Sacramento valley they hav practically all started in business anev with theatres changing hands, new thea tres under way, and a general feeling o prosperity ahead."

Affiliated Picture Interests Issues Report

Coast Organization by Co-operative Action Has Won Important Victories During Past Year

AS though in answer to the editorial of William A. Johnston, entitled "Get Together," which appeared in the Motion Picture News issue of September 17th, comes a report of activities and general purpose of Affiliated Picture Interests, Incorporated, which organization represents every department and phase of the film industry on the West Coast.

The officers of the organization are Frank E. Garbutt, chairman; W. J. Reynolds, treasurer; Ted Taylor, secretary; Edward Roberts, manager and chairman of committee representing producers, directors, writers, players, cameramen, technical employers and union labor.

The report to members of the first six months' work of the organization is given in part as follows:

"The Affiliated Picture Interests was organized last March at a meeting of representatives from all branches of the motion picture industry.

"The organization plan was based on the theory that all those engaged in the industry should have a voice in its affairs. Accordingly the constitution as finally adopted extended membership to all those interested in the industry either as investors or workers deriving their livelihood from the manufacture, distribution or exhibition of motion pictures.

"In organizing the Affiliated Picture Interests cognizance was taken of the fact that the various elements in the motion picture industry properly organized contained a potential electoral power which would be strong enough to secure the recognition and consideration due the industry at the hands of those charged with the enactment of legislation or the enforcement of laws. It was also recognized that most of the evils from which the industry suffer and many of the difficulties that beset the various branches thereof could be more readily overcome thru the co-operation of the entire industry as a whole.

"The organization was still in its formative stage when the Pomona censorship campaign began. In addition to contributing toward defraying the expenses of this campaign, a committee was appointed and co-operation was extended to the theatre owners directly affected.

"Immediately thereafter the Los Angeles municipal campaign began and the Affiliated through its Board of Directors took an important and beneficial part in that campaign. For the first time in the history of the picture industry we were able to boast of a working political organization. Heretofore the great bulk of the motion picture vote had been permitted to lie dormant, a great number of motion picture people having neglected to register and the potential political power within the industry never having been whipped into such shape as to make its strength felt.

"Of the nine members elected to the City Council six were endorsed or supported by the Affiliated. This, our first campaign, won for the industry immediate recognition as a civic and political power to be reckoned with in the affairs of the city.

"In the Clara Smith Hamon matter, the Affiliated, before production had been begun on the so-called Hamon picture, called on members of the industry to refrain from participating in either the production or exhibition of any picture exploiting any notorious person. A copy of this resolution was sent to the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry and the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, with the result that the circulation of the Hamon production has been effectively checked and consequent injury to the entire industry avoided.

"In the local censorship fight which has recently been precipitated upon the industry, representatives of the Affiliated appeared before the welfare committee of the City Council and urged the repeal of the present city censorship ordinance. Other measures have also been taken to combat local censorship and there is every expectation that these measures will prove successful in securing fair consideration for the rights of the industry."

Cincinnati Picture Patrons to Act as Film Censors

AN experiment in censorship—that of leaving the censorship of a film to theatregoers themselves—is being tried out at the Walnut theatre in Cincinnati this week in connection with the showing of "One Arabian Night."

Mrs. Evalyn Frances Snow, Columbus, Ohio, Chief of the Division of Film Censorship of the State Department of Education, has placed the film on probation for one week. Whether it will be shown elsewhere in the state will depend on the response that is made by the persons who see it, Mrs. Snow said. If theatregoers like the film, all well and good; but if they object to it, the censorship ban will be invoked, it was declared.

"The production has presented an unusual problem to me as a censor," said Mrs. Snow. "It is, undoubtedly, a beautiful spectacle and a work of splendid artistry. And yet the story deals with conditions of life that may be regarded as inimical to the moral welfare of our public. It has been difficult for me to satisfy myself that I had assumed the viewpoint of the picturegoing public. For this reason I have decided that it will be only fair to make a test of public opinion."

'Bits of Life" Booked for Capitol Week of Oct. 16

"Bits of Life," Marshall Neilan's four-in-one dramatic innovation, an Associated First National attraction, will have its metropolitan premiere at the Capitol theatre, New York City, where it will be presented under the personal supervision of S. L. Rothapfel.

This will be the first time since the showing of "Passion" at the Capitol during December, 1920, when that production played a two weeks' engagement at the big theatre, that a First National attraction has been seen there. Ever since Mr. Rothapfel saw "Bits of Life" a few weeks ago and realized its unusual qualities as a novelty entertainment, he was determined to obtain the picture for the Capitol if such a thing was possible. Negotiations were begun with the Strand, the first run First National franchise house for the metropolis, with the result that a basis of agreement was finally reached, and Mr. Rothapfel acquired the right to run the Neilan attraction.

Two Elmira, N. Y., Houses Change Hands

William Berinstein, owner of the Colonial theatre, a motion picture house in Albany and a holder of a First National franchise has bought the Mozart and the Majestic theatres at Elmira. He took possession September 26. The deal by which Mr. Berinstein takes over the two theatres involves over a quarter of a million dollars, according to reports.

Walter H. Powers, manager of the Colonial theatre at Albany, has been designated as general manager of both these Elmira theatres by Mr. Berinstein and entered upon his duties at once.

Changes Made in National Association Committees

Several important changes were made this week in the committee appointments of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry.

Ralph A. Kohn of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation has been appointed Chairman of the Finance Committee in place of Adolph Zukor who requested that Mr. Kohn be designated to represent Famous Players on this important committee as well as on the Americanism Committee of which Colonel Arthur Woods is Chairman.

Charles C. Pettijohn has been designated to represent The Selznick Corporation on the Executive Committee instead of Lewis J. Selznick as originally announced and has been appointed Chairman of the Sunday Opening Committee in addition to his membership on the Censorship and Law Committees. Earl J. Hudson of Associated First National Pictures will serve as Vice Chairman of the Sunday Opening Committee.

H. P. Carver of the International Film Service has been appointed a member of the Censorship Committee, other new appointees to which are Captain G. McL. Baynes of Kinograms, E. V. Durling of Selznick News and J. W. Alicoate of Wid's Daily. Mr. Durling and Captain Baynes have also been appointed members of the News Weeklies Committee. Mr. Alicoate has been named as a member of the Trade Press Editorial Committee, Vigilance Committee and Sunday Opening Committee.

J. Robert Rubin will represent Metro Pictures Corporation on the Sunday Opening Committee and F. M. Brockell of Associated First National has been appointed as a member of the Distribution Managers Committee. Another newly appointed committeeman is R. A. Foster of the Inter-Ocean Film Corporation who will represent that organization on the Transportation Committee.

Take Step Against Alleged Dishonest Advertising

The Advertisers' Club of Cincinnati, Ohio, has taken a very definite step against alleged dishonest advertising on the part of a theatre-owner of that city, according to word from the headquarters of the United Artists Corporation. United Artists quotes a clipping from the Cincinnati Times-Star of September 27th which relates that Frank E. Barnett, representing the Advertisers' Club, obtained a warrant for the arrest of Isaac Frankel, proprietor of the Lubin motion-picture theatre. According to the press account, the warrant alleges that Frankel in his advertising in the local daily papers as well as in his announcements in front of the theatre led the public to believe that the program offered in the Lubin was the Douglas Fairbanks-United Artists release, "The Three Musketeers."

Triangle Shows Improved Financial Condition

TO the stockholders of Triangle Film Corporation has been issued a report and a balance sheet, showing the financial condition of the company as of June 30th, 1921. This audit shows that the total assets are $5,375,-164.06, of which the good-will, trademarks, and so forth, subject to appraisal, are valued at $3,845,573.49.

The statement issued by P. L. Waters, president of the corporation, states that as the result of operations since January, 1918, all of the indebtedness of both the Triangle Film Corporation and the Triangle Distributing Corporation, which at that time amounted to $1,980,000 and $700,000, respectively, has been satisfied, and all of the securities released from pledge and mortgage, and returned to Triangle, which it now owns free and clear.

In November, 1920, Triangle entered into an agreement with the Film Distributors' Feature, Inc., whereby the latter agreed to pay the sum of $877,000 during a period of 130 weeks. To June 30, 1921, $149,000 had been paid. "As Triangle is practically out of debt," states the report, "the time is approaching when consideration is to be given to the production of a listed number of high-class motion picture from the stories and scenarios already on hand."

Kent Names Three New Branch Managers

S. R. Kent, general manager of distribution, Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, has announced the following appointments in the Paramount sales organization:

A. E. Bernstein, former manager of the Minneapolis exchange, has been transferred to the new Milwaukee exchange as manager. Maurice Schweitzer, formerly sales manager at the Minneapolis exchange, has been appointed manager at Minneapolis, succeeding Mr. Bernstein. Harry Hunter, formerly assistant manager of the Portland, Ore., exchange, has been appointed manager at Des Moines, succeeding J. A. Muchmore, resigned.

The above appointments take effect immediately.

New Corporation to Produce International News

International News, which for several years has been made by the International Film Service Co., Inc., and released through Universal, will be produced after October 1st by a new organization. The name of the new corporation is International News Reel Corporation. William R. Hearst maintains the same interest in the new company that he did in the former, while Edgar B. Hatrick, who has had charge of the Hearst News Film interests since their inception in 1912, will be the general manager of the new corporation. The change in the producing corporation will not, however, affect the releasing arrangements, which will be through Universal as heretofore.

"Name a Date and Play Your Pictures"

By J. S. Woody, General Manager of Realart

HOW soon after contracting for a picture should an exhibitor be obligated to play it?

Let me answer that question by asking another, in typical American style: When should a distributor furnish a print to an exhibitor? The exhibitor's answer is readily given: 'Just when he wants it!'

But I want to point out that the exhibitors themselves are very often the cause of other exhibitors not being able to get pictures just when they want them, and in addition to this inconvenience are very often responsible for the prices they have to pay for service.

The distribution of motion pictures in a great many respects parallels that of many other commodities; in order for the retailer to clear his shelves for fresh goods he must look to his customers to pay for and take their purchases as soon as they possibly can lest his working capital be tied up in idle stock. Profits in most businesses depend upon quick turnover and this applies with particular emphasis to the marketing of motion pictures.

Due to the enormous expenses involved in the production and distribution of a picture, it is usually a year before an even break can be looked for. Therefore the problem naturally resolves itself into facilitating distribution in order that the ball can be kept rolling.

But, it may be advanced, Mr. Exhibitor is not concerned whether the distributor makes a profit or not. Nevertheless he is affected, whether he realizes it or not.

Suppose for instance, a production costs a hundred thousand dollars. Now, if on account of the uncertainty of bookings, a year elapses before a profit can begin to be realized on that picture, an interest item of several thousand dollars must be charged against it in addition to its production cost. Naturally this amount must be taken into consideration when the rental for the picture is determined. And that is only one item.

While Realart does not distribute its pictures on an individual basis, the above conditions apply to the marketing of its service. Actually, it costs close to thirty-five per cent of the gross eventually earned to distribute a production. Doesn't it stand to reason that if this can be brought down to twenty-five, twenty or even a less percentage the cost to the exhibitors should be correspondingly less?

When a first-run exhibitor, for instance, refuses to play pictures for which he has contracted, at the time when they are ready, he delays the realization of revenue, not only from his own theatre, but of that from numerous subsequent runs. Interest must be paid on the distributor's money while prints are inactive and this charge of course must in some way be met. Naturally, it is added to rentals.

Part of this delayed exhibition difficulty is due to a tendency to contract for more pictures than there are days to play them, which, as any one can see, is conducive of anything but good business. The result is a hopeless congestion for which both exhibitors and distributors must suffer. Naturally, the longer exhibitions are delayed the more serious the situation grows, which cannot fail to have a negative economic effect all along the line. It's waste of the most wanton sort.

Of course, in the case where an exhibitor contracts for pictures with no intention of ever using them, simply to keep them out of his competitor's theatre—and this is by no means as infrequent as one might think — the advantage is obtained not only at expense to himself but at a considerable aggregate cost to the entire industry.

And then again, there is the case of the exhibitor in a town boasting several other theatres, all potential customers, who has contracted for service but cannot be persuaded to give definite play dates, the consequences of which is that the other theatres, although eager to run the pictures, cannot do so. By the time the first-run reaches the point where he consents to give play dates, the others, wearying of his procrastination, have signed up for other service, depriving the distributor of the chance to secure the revenue to which he is justly entitled. Does anyone kid himself into the belief that he does not pay a heavy economic penalty in the long run for such a business policy?

A case somewhat similar to that described in the preceding paragraph occurred in an open town where Realart signed up for its season's output. The exhibitor delayed supplying us with play dates until after his competitors had closed for all the product they needed. Even to the end of the season he persistently refused to give us dates with the result that we received absolutely no revenue from that town. Can it be argued that this attitude does not operate to increase costs and so to increase rentals?

There is another angle of this 'delayed playing' which I think escapes the attention of many exhibitors. Few, these days, will deny the existence of that very potential influence, star personality and popularity.

When an exhibitor presents a certain star at frequent intervals in his house he builds up a return patronage based on her popularity and drawing power. If, however, he defers dates so as to allow too long a period to elapse between her pictures he helps to erase her from his patrons' minds thereby losing the prestige he has gained for her, and this loss cannot but be reflected in his box-office, eventually.

The public is undeniably fickle and it must see its idols frequently or they cease to be idols.

Quite often we receive letters from exhibitors wherein they describe the difficulties and annoyances which they experience and which are due to nothing more or less than neglect on the part of other exhibitors to give consideration to their contemporaries. Our answer to one of these should prove of interest, applying as it does to the matter of play dates:

Your comment on conditions which confront the exhibitor appeals strongly to us. You say:

I do not know whether you or your concern really understand the great difficulty that we have from time to time to get our pictures at the time we need them.

It was exactly that which we had in mind, Mr. ————, in offering our plan. You know definitely under the Realart plan just when the Realart part of your entertainment will be available. There is no delay or guess-work; it's definite and fixed. You probably have a pretty fair idea of the amount of calculating, planning and hard work which is involved in arranging a year's production so that prints may be assured to the exhibitor on designated dates. A task of this magnitude, we believe, has not been undertaken by any other company under present producing conditions. It was undertaken by Realart only because there was insistent demand from our customers for dependable information regarding regularity of releases.

Realart, of course, cannot be of more service to you than to do its own share, and it is this that we are trying to do. Your Realart dates are thirty-six out of the year. That obviously is not many. But it's a beginning—it furnishes something tangible around which you can build—assures you that at least part of your bookings for the coming year are dependable — relieves you of that much bother and trouble.

Elaborate Fire Protection for Universal City

FIRE protection equal to any found in the big cities of the country is the object of a construction project just started at Universal City. The cause of the new precautionary measures was a fire which broke out last week in the film city and for a time threatened to be disastrous in its effects upon the sets and permanent stages which aggregate millions of dollars in cost. While some damage was done the fire was checked in time to prevent any great losses. It required the combined efforts of the entire Universal City forces to subdue the flames.

The new enterprise is in charge of Harry D. Brown, electrical chief. An expenditure of between $30,000 and $50,000 will be required to finish the work, according to the plans laid down. It is estimated that it will take six months to complete the installation of the new equipment and perfect all the details.

Michigan Exhibitors Hold Lively Convention This Week

President Cohen Flays Distributors; James Ritter Resigns Presidency

THE convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Michigan, which was held in Jackson, Mich., on Tuesday and Wednesday of this week, marked another step forward in the history of that state body and the parent organization, the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America. The principal speaker of the convention was Sydney S. Cohen, president of the national body, who took the United Artists Corporation and Associated First National Pictures to task for alleged unfair treatment of exhibitors. Famous Players-Lasky, on the other hand, was praised by the national president who declared that every detail of the arrangements made by the representatives of the M. P. T. O. of A. and the Famous Players-Lasky organization some weeks ago had been faithfully carried out by the latter.

Another high light of the convention was the retirement of James C. Ritter from the presidency of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Michigan and the election of Claude C. Cady of Lansing, Mich., to the executive vacancy. Harlan T. Hall of Detroit was reelected to the office of secretary, and Fred R. Rumler of Detroit was again chosen for treasurer. In compliance with the policy of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America the name of the state organization was changed to the manner of designation adopted by the other exhibitor state organizations affiliated with the M. P. T. O. of A. Accordingly, the Michigan body will hereafter be known as the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Michigan instead of the Michigan Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association.

Another important speaker of the convention was Dr. Francis Holly, the director of the Bureau of Commercial Economies at Washington, D. C., who addressed the members of the organization at the banquet at the Jackson City Club on Tuesday evening. Dr. Holly described the purposes of the department of which he has been made the head and emphasized the relation of the motion-picture screen to the work that he has in hand. The object of the enterprise is an educational one and aims to utilize the motion-picture screens of the country in a cooperative effort with the schools for the exhibition of educational films. Aside from the tremendous influence that the screen will thus exert in the educating of the younger generations of the nation, Dr. Holly spoke of the prestige that the exhibitor will assume as an important educational factor in the life of his community. Dr. Holly addressed his remarks to the Michigan exhibitor with special emphasis as the plan of cooperation is to be given its first genuine test in the state of Michigan. The scheme has already attracted wide attention throughout the country, and undoubtedly the results of the trial test in Michigan will be followed with greatest interest.

The convention was officially opened at Castle Hall on Tuesday at 10 A. M., the full attendance approaching the 200 mark. Executive headquarters of the convention was established at the Otsego Hotel, but all business sessions were conducted at Castle Hall. President James C. Ritter presided. An elaborate entertainment program had also been prepared for the exhibitors and the members of their parties, including the showing of the "Affairs of Anatol" and "Molly O" at the Majestic theatre.

It was at the Wednesday session that President Sydney S. Cohen scored the two distributor organizations. He declared that his New York headquarters had received hundreds of complaints from exhibitors in connection with alleged excessively high rentals for First National pictures and that an investigation was to be started immediately. Alleged high prices for advertising accessories also received attention, Mr. Cohen contending that an enormous profit was realized. The United Artists was taken to task by President Cohen in connection with distribution methods which he said were employed on "Way Down East." Alleged exorbitant rentals were also scored, Mr. Cohen striking particularly at D. W. Griffith.

"The Rosary" is Classed as "Remarkable Picture"

WE were privileged this week to preview the Selig-Rork production, "The Rosary," a print of which has just arrived from the Coast. There had been rumors that this was a notable production; but this does not express the enthusiasm which a small audience of practical film men accorded practically every foot of this fine effort.

"The Rosary" will be reviewed at length in a future issue. We will not attempt here to give credit, so well deserved, to all those whose skill in many ways evolved this well-rounded success. The story, the continuity, the casting, the acting, the atmosphere—all are of high order. Some members of the notable cast, such as Lewis Stone, Jane Novak, Robert Gordon, Wallace Beery, have done their very best work on the screen. And we cannot pass over the fine character delineations by Bert Woodruff, Dore Davidson, Harold Goodwin, Eugenie Besserer, Pomeroy Cannon, and Mildred June. And, of course, to Bernard McConville and Jerome Storm will go the plaudits of successful creative and directorial effort.

In a season quite remarkable for big pictures of a very broad box-office appeal, pictures marked by genuine sincerity and skill, "The Rosary" will take its place and hold its own. We are particularly pleased to give it here something of what the picture deserves because it is an independent production, and because we have always believed that the health of this industry will always be quite largely dependent upon the adequate encouragement of this source of production. WM. A. JOHNSTON.

Against Censorship, Asserts Candidate for Mayor

Henry H. Curran, Borough President of Brooklyn, and Republican-Coalition candidate for New York's mayoralty, went on record as absolutely opposed to censorship of motion pictures, when interviewed by a committee representing motion-picture producers and distributors at the Murray Hill Hotel, New York, on Wednesday of this week. Mr. Curran further declared that his present stand was not one animated by political expediency but that his past record and remarks would prove that from the first he has been unalterably opposed to censorship of the screen.

Plans to Foster American Trade in Spain

As a part of its plan to foster American trade in Spain, the American Chamber of Commerce in Spain intends to edit in the early part of December a special number of its Monthly Bulletin. Full particulars may be had from the American Chamber of Commerce in Spain, Rambla de los Estudios 8, Barcelona, or from Mr. Eugene L. Perea, care of Messrs. Boera Brothers, Staten Island Ferry Terminal Building, New York City.

Hyland Voices Opposition to Screen Censorship

Opposition to screen censorship was voiced by the New York City Administration at the A. M. P. A. luncheon held last Thursday at the Cafe Boulevard, New York. The Administration was represented by Mayor Hylan, Comptroller Craig, and Murray Hulbert dock commissioner, all of whom spoke in opposition to censorship.

The speakers were introduced by Major J. O'Mahoney, and C. O. Yearsley, of First National, presided. Other speakers were Peter Brady, Harry Reichenbach, P. A. Parsons, and Paul Lazarus. Mayor Hylan was the guest of honor.

EXHIBITORS' REPORTS ON NEW RELEASES

What the Big Houses Say

EARLY RETURNS FROM WEEK RUN THEATERS

FAMOUS PLAYERS

The Affairs of Anatol—

A knock-out. The biggest thing I've played in ages—but business was a little disappointing, doubtless due to bad weather. (East.)

The picture did such a good business that it was held over for a second week's run. (Middle West.)

Capacity business all week, 20,000 people at four houses on opening day. Patrons liked production. (East.)

The cast of famous stars and amusement value of story make this picture a sure fire box office success. Did big business for week. (Middle West.)

Scores in splendid manner. (East.)

Two weeks' run to good business and pleased audiences. (West.)

Wonderful picture. Did a record business. Worth extended engagement. (Middle West.)

Great picture. Did fine business. (West.)

This one went over the top in great shape. Had the largest box office receipts in months. (West.)

Cappy Ricks—

A very fine picture on which we had good business. (West.)

Passing Thru—

Found this to be a good feature, with much entertainment, and good box office value. (West.)

The Great Impersonation—

Went across dandy. (East.)

At the End of the World—

This picture was the recipient of more commendation than any picture we have shown for the last two months. (East.)

The Princess of New York—

Very mediocre picture and business bad. (East.)

The Whistle—

The picture appealed especially to laboring classes and drew a good attendance. (Middle West.)

The Faith Healer—

Had very poor business with this picture. (West.)

Footlights—

We had good business on this picture. I consider it a very fine production and it pleased my patrons. (West.)

Sentimental Tommy—

Poor business with this feature as it is not the kind of picture that our patrons want. (Middle West.)

FIRST NATIONAL

A Midnight Bell—

Charles Ray's popularity here always assures a good house. Good crowds for a week's run. (Middle West.)

Bits of Life—

Very good. Business only fair, however. (East.)

Serenade—

Big success. Receipts O. K. Received as "old-time" stuff with pull. (East.)

The Child Thou Gavest Me—

One of the most improbable plots ever seen in a picture. The long arm of coincidence is overworked. Nevertheless, this is a first class melodrama which keeps up the suspense to the last minute. Drew well. (Middle West.)

The Heart of a Fool—

Old time melodramatic picture, with good cast, fairly good drawing card. (East.)

The Sign on the Door—

A good picture, Norma Talmadge at her best, and business exceptionally good. (East.)

The Sky Pilot—

As a film play and business proposition—only fair. (East.)

Mamma's Affair—

Second week. Business mediocre. (East.)

REALART

Everything for Sale—

Good little picture, with a star who is a comer. She'll deliver the goods all right. Business fair. (East.)

Little Italy—

Miss Brady helps to put over a picture which has a rather trite plot. Fairly good attraction. (Middle West.)

One Wild Week—

No better picture for Bebe Daniels. Did good business. (Middle West.)

Moonlight and Honeysuckle—

A good week's business and satisfied patrons on this picture. (Middle West.)

METRO

The Man Who—

Likeable picture, star takes very good, good drawing card and pleased audience. (East.)

Picture only fairly popular, and business mediocre. (East.)

Life's Darn Funny—

Fairly good picture with pleasant little star. Not extra drawing attraction. (East.)

The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse—

Three week run to good business and satisfied audiences. (West.)

FOX

The Night Horsemen—

One of Mix's best. Drew big houses. (Middle West.)

Tom Mix's greatest, and drew well. (East.)

Fairly good entertainment. Had average business. (West.)

When a Man Sees Red—

One of the best of Farnum's pictures and a mighty good drawing card. (East.)

After Your Own Heart—

A fair production which brought the usual attendance at my house. (West.)

The Primal Law—

Picture pleases, and business fair. (East.)

GOLDWYN

The Old Nest—

Positively a wonderful picture, and we stood them out for a block. (East.)

Fine feature with tremendous heart appeal. Went over big at this house. (Middle West.)

The picture ran for three weeks, doing a record business for this time of the year. (Middle West.)

Well worth seeing. Receipts fair (East.)

Ace of Hearts—

Fine. Featured Lon Chaney, and because of his great part in "The Penalty," "The Miracle Man" and "Outside the Law," all of which I featured in my ads, the picture drew exceptionally well. (East.)

The Invisible Power—

Excellent picture which did good business for week. (Middle West.)

Very good production. Had fine business on it during run. (West.)

UNIVERSAL

Moonlight Follies—

Marie Prevost's first picture was well liked by our audience, but not much as a drawing card. (East.)

Outside the Law—

Positively a big drawing card, Priscilla always drew big, but she outdid herself in this picture (East.)

No Woman Knows—

Picture went over pretty well and attracted more than usual business. (West.)

PATHE

What Women Will Do—

Nice little picture, but Anna Nilsson's fans didn't like her role. Picture drew fairly well, nothing to get excited about. (East.)

I Do—

Harold Lloyd was funnier than ever. Patrons were delighted. (East.)

SELZNICK

Is Life Worth Living?—

Pleased mightily, both as regards receipts and attendances. (East.)

Poppy—

Good—both entertainment value and box office value. (West.)

STATE RIGHTS

Burn 'Em Up Barnes—

Wonderful box office attraction. Really a great picture. (East.)

Kingfishers Roost—

One of Neal Hart's best pictures. Good drawing card. (East.)

ROBERTSON-COLE

Good Women—

Good picture and good receipts. (East.)

VITAGRAPH

Moral Fibre—

Average picture which failed to pull heavily at box office. Business slightly off. (Middle West.)

WARREN

Girl From God's Country—

Fair picture. Business about average. (West.)

UNITED ARTISTS

Carnival—

Pulled off in middle of run on account of poor pulling qualities (East.)

HODKINSON

The Journey's End—

Did only fair business during run. Fair picture. (East.)

Russell Film to Have N. Y. Showing

The New York trade will be given an opportunity to see Russell Productions' seven-reel classic, "Shadows of Conscience," which W. D. Russell will bring to the city, Monday. October 10th, for private exhibition. This feature, which has had two previous auspicious trade showings, in Los Angeles and in Chicago, has won the approval of hundreds of experienced showmen. It is in all respects the most pretentious offering ever made by this company.

On Thursday night, September 22, "Shadows of Conscience" was shown at the difficult hour of midnight, at Graumont's Million Dollar Theatre, Los Angeles, to about two thousand persons—the trade, the profession, the press and the public were all represented and the enthusiasm with which it was received was a revelation even to those most vitally interested in its success. Bernie Russell, who is production manager at the studio, lost no time in bringing the print to Chicago, which is distribution headquarters for the company, and arranging for an immediate pre-view for exhibitors of the Middle West.

Accordingly, the picture was presented at Barbee's Loop Theatre, Thursday morning at 11 A. M., where about two hundred gathered to see it. The occasion was a double reassurance as to the merits of the production, as representatives of the industry and the trade and daily press pronounced it a feature of decided artistic as well as box-office value.

Prologue number for "The Old Nest" staged by the Howard theatre, Atlanta, and described on the following page

Atlanta "Old Nest" Campaign Goes Bi

Exploitation and Presentation of Picture in Southern City Achieves Great Results

ENRICO LEIDE, managing director of the Howard theatre, Atlanta, and conductor of the Howard orchestra, has contributed materially to the picture history of the city by his exploitation and presentation of "The Old Nest."

Manager Leide began his campaign two weeks before his opening play date, by a tie-up with the Western Union, by which cards about 16 by 22, dark blue backgrounds, were hung in every branch office in the city, as well as in the suburbs, and in the big downtown main office. Pasted on these cards were especially effective stills from the picture, those predominating being of the Mother, alone, looking out of her window. On these cards, lettered in a lighter blue, and white, were the words, "Don't Break Your Mother's Heart! See 'The Old Nest' and send her a telegram, telling her that you remember!"

Practically the same line was followed with a tie-up with the florists, except that on these cards was lettered "Don't forget Your Mother! See 'The Old Nest' and tell mother you love her. Say it with flowers." These hung in every florist's establishment in the city, and many of them arranged special windows, giving these cards unusual prominence.

At the busiest corner of the city Manager Leide erected on a tall pole which brought it almost to the top of the municipal flagpole, a two-story "bird house," copied exactly from the house shown in the picture. Across this, and on the pole beneath it, were banners and signs reading, "Don't break your mother's heart by neglect. See 'The Old Nest' and remember!"

The prologue was entitled, "Dear Little Boy of Mine," and was divided into four parts as follows:

Part I.—The playing of "The Lost Nest," by the orchestra, leading up to the second part.

Part II.—"Dear Little Boy of Min sung by Mrs. Edwin Sawtelle, made as the mother in "The Old Nest."

Part III.—The representation on t stage of an actual train wreck, during t singing of the song. The mother is se standing looking out at a great windo which occupied nearly half the prosceniu opening. Bars several feet apart rep sented the sashes between the panes glass. Close to this window was a cut-o of a mother bird sitting on a branch abo a nest in which were four fledglings w opened mouths. In the distance appear clouds and distant mountains with a ra road bridge across a chasm in the fo ground. As the song was being sung t little trains, run by electricity, appeared the bridge and crashed head-on with a noise and flame of light.

Part IV.—"Dear Little Boy of Min The trains having crashed, the moth sinks to the floor singing the last three four strains of the song.

ed Lined Extra Used at Indianapolis

The red lined extra was used recently r "An Unwilling Hero," by Edwin For- t Young, director of exploitation at the lhambra theatre, Indianapolis.

Copies of the Indiana Times were over- ied in two-inch red letters with a banner iat read, " Movie Actor Declared Hero," id note saying " See page 3."

On page 3, under a New Orleans date ne, was a story with the same head, Movie Actor Declared a Hero," which etailed the plot of "An Unwilling Hero," iaking Will Rogers, the star, the central iaracter in the recital. At the end of ie half column story the incident was nnected up with the photoplay and the ord "advertisement" appeared at the id of the story.

Twenty-five extra newsboys were put n to take care of the downtown rush for apers and fifty others were sent out very three minutes to cover the town. he people grabbed the papers and topped on the streets to read the story on age 3.

A man made up as Will Rogers was put n the Alhambra theatre to give an ex- ibition of whistling, a la Will Rogers in he picture, and this exploitation feature ttracted a great deal of favorable com- ient.

"Blind Wives" Lobby Front Pulls 'Em In

An accompanying cut illustrates fully he lobby display which R. D. France, ad- ertising director of the Holton theatres, Port Arthur, Texas, originated for a re- ent showing of "Blind Wives," at the Strand, one of the Holton string.

The display was not expensive and brought excellent results during the run of the picture.

Frost Takes Pains with "Old Nest" Lobby

A special lobby was one of the methods which Manager Frost of the Victory theatre, Tampa, Fla., utilized to exploit his recent showing of "The Old Nest." At the back he placed a set piece of scenery representing a bay window. Back of the window was a "cut-out" of the mother in The Old Nest. Trailing vines and Spanish moss was everywhere, while a large tree held the center, and in this tree is an "old nest," a real old last year's bird's nest, reposed in the limbs as naturally as tho placed there by the birds themselves.

San Antonio Newspaper Co-operates with Bird

Givens Bird, Manager of the Empire Theatre, San Antonio, Texas, pulled off a big exploitation stunt by putting over a double-page hook-up with the San Antonio Evening News on "The Sign on the Door."

The double page was cut up into 30 small spaces, which were sold to merchants, and the remainder of the space was taken by the Empire and an explanation of the contest.

This big hook-up appeared twice. In the first issue were only the trade-marks or slogans of the different firms and prizes were offered for those who could guess the greatest number of them.

The second appearance of the ad gave the winners, and also the firms to whom the trade-marks or slogans belonged.

Schmidt Strong for Desert Island Lobbies

• Manager George Schmidt, who combines "house-managing" the Strand Theatre, Atlanta, with exploitation direction of the Forsyth and Rialto, Atlanta, is long on "desert-island" lobbies, which fact he proved once more, when he played a return engagement on "The Woman God Changed," at the Strand.

The lobby of the Strand is circular in shape, and the whole wall was covered by a big circular painting, depicting the meeting of sea and sky. The lobby-floor itself was a desert island—covered with white beach-sand. There were several tiny palm trees on the island, and about half a dozen big shells such as "nigger-toe nuts" grow in, were half buried in the sand, with a cocoa-nut here and there. There were some beer bottles, only two or three buried head down, in the sand, and in the center of the island was a "brush-wood fire," made of drift-wood, supposedly (red electric light shining through bona-fide drift-wood, making an effective and realistic fire). Perched precariously on this fire was a battered and blackened coffee pot without a top.

On the left, as one entered the theatre, was a big tableau-light, green in color, which threw a weird, greenish light something suggestive of moonlight on the scene.

The box-office was hidden by cane brush, only a tiny space being left for tickets to be purchased, and the entrances were concealed by the painting, so that there was no jarring note to spoil the illusion of a desert island.

While the whole thing was tremendously effective, and Mr. Schmidt asserts that it was not at all expensive.

Manager Clark Finds "Merchants Week" Success

Manager Jess Clark of Strand theatre, Salisbury, N. C., stimulated dull business by putting over a "Merchants Week" for a fat total. He ordered a hundred thousand special tickets and about fifty thousand hand-bills explaining the idea. The tickets were sold to merchants in blocks for five to twenty dollars and were given away free with even small purchases. They were good at the Strand anytime during the week for half the prevailing admission, thus getting a big total for the week but giving the public something too. A double-page tie-up in the daily paper had ads for all the merchants who were giving the tickets, completing one of the broadest publicity campaigns ever attempted in a small town.

Welch Has Clever Lobby Display Idea

One of the most novel lobbies ever ranged for a picture recently was used T. Welch, manager of the Empress th tre, Calgary, Canada, for his showing "Once a Plumber."

The name of the feature was made fr jointed pipe and hung across the front the lobby. Various plumbers tools, pip joints, valves, etc., were displayed in lobby, the front of which represente plumbers work-bench.

Comedy caption cards were put up n the box-office, among them, several re ing as follows: "If your pipe bur open your windows, move everything o the lawn—then phone the plumbers,"

Cut-outs of Eddie and Lee were sea on the plumbers bench. Caption ca also were used to tie-up the showing w a local convention of the B. P. O. E.

The central effect of the lobby, howe was a "Laugh-o-meter." It consisted a dial, cut from the compo-board, ab five feet in diameter. Around its which was divided into four sections, w the four words "Laughing—Roarin Screaming—Hysterical." A pointer pivoted in the center of the dial so tha could be moved by the girl in the b office. As she heard the audience lau ing, roaring or screaming inside, would move the pointer to indicate passers-by, how much those inside w enjoying the comedy.

This Laugh-o-meter was a sure patr puller.

Cowboy Rides Buckin Auto as Exploitation

Clayton Tunstill, manager of the Tiv theatre, Beaumont, Texas, advertised showing of "A Big Town Round-Up" a street ballyhoo consisting of a racing on the rear end of which was a cowb seated in a saddle.

The stunt attracted a great deal of tention and was the means of increasi the Tivoli's business on the picture n terially.

New Gotham Theatre Stages Extensive Exploitation Campaign

One of the most extensive exploitation campaigns ever conducted in New York's White Light district for a motion picture was launched last week when "Over the Hill," entered the new Tivoli theatre for an indefinite run. It was planned and conducted by Fox exploitation representatives attached to the New York exchange.

An effective street display consisted of an old lady made up to represent "Ma Benton," the central figure in "Over the Hill," seated in an ancient victoria drawn by a horse in keeping. Banners on horse and carriage completed the tie-up with the picture.

Colonel Green, "the man on stilts," attracted attention and transferred it to "Over the Hill" signs. A float festooned with "Over the Hill" banners added color to the Tivoli's publicity circus.

A neat advertising novelty was provided by 1,550 dainty handkerchiefs upon which was printed, "You'll need this when you see 'Over the Hill,' Tivoli, Next Week." These were inserted in programs of the theatre and distributed to women patrons the week before the beginning of the showing.

Another device was an imitation theatre ticket which aparently was a pass, inclosed in an envelope marked "Free Admission." The pasteboard within read: "You'll ADMIT that 'Over the Hill' is the greatest human interest story ot all times."

Vacant store buildings in the neighborhood of the theatre were utilized effectively. The windows were whitewashed, all but a small space, and behind the transparent section were placed signs such as "You can't see anything here, but you can see 'Over the Hill' the greatest human interest story of all times, at the Tivoli theatre." White arrows painted on the sidewalk pointed the way to the peep holes.

The attention-compelling lobby display included life-size lithograph cut-outs of the leading characters, highly varnished, mounted on easels.

Manager Jess Clark Has "Clover Week"

Manager Jess Clark, of Strand theatre, Salisbury, N. C., recently aroused interest and increased attendance by designating "Clover Week" at his theatre, admitting free every child under fifteen who would bring a four-leaf clover. He advertised it for a week in advance and had the kids of Salisbury, scouring the fields and yards for the lucky four-leaf. They were not hard to find, however, and the youngsters came in droves and naturally dragged along others of the family to swell the receipts. The novelty attracted much newspaper space, too, and a good week's business resulted at no expense.

Burke Advertises "Big Prize Fight"

Barry Burke, manager of the Palace theatre, Ft. Worth, Texas, had some big cards printed announcing a prize fight at the Palace for exploiting Charles Ray in "Scrap Iron." Some hundred of these were put up around the different places where the "sports" of Fort Worth hang out. The wording was particularly clever and not until the very last could anyone reading it tell it was to advertise "Scrap Iron."

He also had a hook-up window with a local sporting goods store, which included a large cut-out of it was an exploitation stunt for Ray in fighting pose.

"Old Nest" Lobby Pleasing

Modjeska of Augusta, Ga., Decorated Attractively by Manager Crysline

TO see "The Old Nest," when it played a three day run at the Modjeska theatre, Augusta, recently, one opened a white gate, set in a high red brick walk, and went up a narrow little "flagged" path between rows of blossoming flowers, to a box-office practically hidden by a summer-house arrangement of white laths, covered with artificial wistaria.

The fence was quite high, and the only posters that could be seen were the three-sheets at either side of the lobby. The fence or brick-wall began at the very edge of the lobby, and was so arranged, that one side seemed to lap over the other, leaving the little white gate. Artificial Dorothy Perkins roses nodded over the top of the brick wall, luring one into an old-fashioned garden, which was distinctly pleasing, even if artificial.

The big electric sign outside the theatre gave the name of the picture, and an arrangement of dull grey paper strips formed a sort of nest. Inside the brick wall, there was a small sapling at one side of the lobby, and in this was a genuine abandoned bird-nest.

In addition to the lobby, a tie-up was made with a local photographer, whereby special rates were made to people who brought little slips given them with their tickets to see "The Old Nest" and the photographer carried an ad in the paper for three days preceding the run, as well as for the three days of the run, advertising this.

Another thing which caught the interest was the theatre's announcement, contained in all of their ads and "readers" in both of the daily papers for a week preceding the run, that, because the picture was such a wonderful one and because they wished every man, woman and child in Augusta to see it, they would be glad to admit free, as their guests, anybody unable to pay the admission price.

It is not on record that advantage was taken of this generous offer, but it played its part in assuring Augusta and surrounding towns that the picture was worth-while, judging by the tremendous crowds which, even at double the usual admission, and in the midst of the baseball team's last games of the season, coupled with the unusually hot weather, greeted the picture at each showing.

Philadelphia Schools Ai "Rip Van Winkle" Premiere

An exploitation campaign that w directed especially to the public scho students, has been the feature of a pr release showing of "Rip Van Winkle" the Academy of Music, Philadelphia.

A tie-up with the schools, with a tendent newspaper publicity was brougl about as follows: Ten gold watches we offered as prizes for the ten best fift word essays on "Rip." "Rip" in perso accompanied by four little gnomes, visit the schools and gave away heralds c which were printed all the necessary in formation. So enthusiastic was the c operation accorded that in many instanc the principals of the different schools se teachers from room to room to give short talk on Washington Irving's in mortal classic and the place it occupies i American literature. Special tickets we issued for school children which admitte them for half price. The whole campaig was comparatively inexpensive an brought the showing of the picture to th attention to practically every resident c the Quaker City.

Durham Theatre Builds Inexpensive Lobby Display

An effective lobby display on "Whi New York Sleeps" was designed by Mar ager Nichols of the Paris theatr Durham, N. C., as shown by the a companying cut.

The central display of the "peacoc woman" was lavishly sprinkled wit "jewels," rhinestones and glass jewelry i different colors being glued on the figur The effect at night when various colore lights scattered about the lobby i luminated the display, was excellent.

This is the way Managing Director E. R. Rogers of the Tivoli theatre, Chattanooga, Tenn., decorated his lobby for the showing of "Carnival"

This lobby for "The Sky Pilot" was used by W. E. Drumbar, manager of the Strand theatre, Knoxville, Ky.

Mayer Puts "Reputation" Over at Columbus

Columbus, O., was ripe for a motion picture taking stunt when Joe Mayer, Universal exploiteer, went there recently to exploit the showing of "Reputation" at the James theatre.

By advertising, heralds and cooperative publicity with the local newspapers, Mr. Mayer soon had the pretty and near-pretty girls of Columbus all looking forward to screen tests. Permission was obtained to make the tests in Franklin Park, one of the City's beauty spots, on the Sunday preceding the showing of "Reputation."

Cooperating with J. Real Neth, manager of the James theatre, Mayer arranged a short continuity built around a progressive fashion show. Models were supplied by a local department store. After pictures of the fashion parade had been taken, intimate close-ups of volunteer screen subjects were taken.

More than 5000 spectators crowded around the camera-man. The screen tests taken were shown at the James theatre during the run of "Reputation" and then sent to Universal City to be viewed by the casting director.

Considerable advertising also was obtained through a "character" test, run in the various newspapers in connection with various poses of Priscilla Dean, taken from her several characterizations in "Reputation."

A double page truck tie-up advertisement also was used in two Columbus newspapers, built around the word REPUTATION. The tie-up was very effective and the double page spread made a smashing ad for the picture, the title of which was plastered across the two-pages in two-inch letters.

Teaser ads and a large amount of special story publicity completed Mayer's Columbus campaign.

Drumbar Transforms Lobby Into Wilderness

Transforming his lobby into a wilderness through the use of a profusion of greenery, ferns, leaves, evergreens, and branches of trees, W. E. Drumbar, manager of the Strand Theatre, Knoxville, Tenn., made an ideal setting for the little log church in the woods which was to exploit "The Sky Pilot."

Over the entrance, exit and the front of the box office log cabin fronts had been built with window and doors. Worked in between, in panels of green, were the posters announcing this feature.

Up above the center panel of the front Mr. Drumbar placed a small church bell and from time to time, as the crowds passed along the streets, the cashier would give the bell card a pull and set the bell to ringing.

Another clever stunt was the procuring of a lot of locusts which were released in the lobby. They kept up a merry lay, attracting a great deal of attention.

Forsyth Theatre Builds Fine Lobby Display

Manager Irwin, of the Forsyth theatre, Atlanta, recently played "The Old Nest" for three days immediately following the picture's run at the Howard theatre. Yet the Forsyth played to capacity business, as well as the Howard.

The lobby was transformed into a room, furnished as much like the Mother's room, in the picture, as possible. Seated at the window where the curtains were half drawn, was a life sized cut-out of the Mother's figure. Away in the distance seemingly miles away, so tiny it looked, was a railroad trestle. A big yellow harvest moon shone down on the seated figure at the window, and just outside the window within reach of the mother's hand, seemingly, was a tiny bird's nest.

There was practically no expense to this lobby, due to the fact that almost if not quite all of the props were borrowed from the Howard where they had been used for a prologue, to the same picture, the week before.

Goldman Gets Local Prize Beauty for Personal Appearance

A beauty contest recently conducted by the St. Louis Globe-Democrat has had the attention of residents of St. Louis for weeks and resulted in thousands of people becoming directly interested.

This fact was known to Managing Director William Goldman of the Missouri theatre, St. Louis, and when the winner of the event was finally announced plans were already made to capitalize thereon.

Mr. Goldman immediately got in communication with the winner, a resident of Moberly, Mo., and made arrangements for her personal appearance at the Missouri.

Goldman ran advertisements a bit larger than usual in all the daily newspapers carrying the pictures of the Venus of the Middle-west. On Monday 2,500 printed post-cards were dispatched through the mails to the names on the Missouri's mailing list, Stage-director Charles Dahl had already constructed a special setting for the young lady's appearance, and canvass signs were thrown over the entire neighborhood of Grand and Olive, the city's center of motion picture activity and night life.

The results were big. Every one in St. Louis wanted to see the girl who was adjudged the "best looker" in many states, and the crowds that jammed the doors contained many unsuccessful persons whose efforts to get past the crowded lobby were futile.

Another success due to keen wittedness.

Picnic for Kids, "Phantom Foe" Exploitation

To give "The Phantom Foe," a big send-off, Manager Ford of the Marple theatre, Wichita, Kansas, gave the boys of the city a picnic. There were 500 watermelons, other eats, races for which prizes to the winners were provided and other entertainment features.

The stunt was engineered in conjunction with the Wichita Eagle which gave the plan publicity.

In the afternoon the whole crowd was marched to the theatre where the first episode of the serial was shown. The boys and their picnic with the attendant publicity the stunt received was instrumental in giving "The Phantom Foe" record houses for the opening number.

Manager Ford is immensely pleased with his plan and figures that the cost of his picnic was little when the results were viewed.

Weinberg Builds Attra tive "Dream Street" Lobby Display

One of the most attractive lobby d plays seen in Buffalo in many months w that which E. O. Weinberg installed front of the Mark-Strand last week, d ing the presentation of Dream Street.

The feature of the display was a la boxed scenic billboard which was pla in the center of the lobby in front of t box office. The whole thing was tak from a six sheet. The characters w cut out, mounted on beaver board a placed in relief in front of a large Dre Street. The Strand artist went over t letters spelling Dream Street. A lan post cut from the cut and put on bea board was surmounted by a lamp ma in the Strand art shop. An electric li was placed in the center of it. Soft b colored bulbs were connected along t inside of the top and bottom of the fra their light throwing a dreamy hut o the scene. The frame attracted a lot attention. The Buffalo office of Uni Artists thought so much of it that th purchased it to rent to other theatres the city and territory. It will next go the Victoria, a Buffalo neighborh house. The frames at the side and t of the lobby was also unusually attracti These were a combination of views fr the sheets with the background and lett ing painted in by Strand artists.

Landau's Style Show Essentially One Act Musical Show

Alhambra Theatre, Milwaukee, Presents Highly Original Number

A STYLE show that was virtually a musical comedy was recently presented at the Alhambra theatre, Milwaukee, by Managing Director Leo A. Landau.

The show opened with the Alhambra's 9-piece symphony orchestra playing "Sometime" as an overture under the direction of Jerry Mastri. Immediately following this, a man and woman singer introduced the show by coming from behind a beautiful, big, peacock blue drop, which closed off view of the entire stage, and onto the runway, singing a fitting parody on "Make Believe," written by Leo Landau, as follows:

Now's the time the Alhambra'll show to you
Everything in fashion that is new,
So pay close attention for a little while
To this great review of style.

Make believe you're parading 5th Avenue,
Where all the fads make their bow;
All types of clothes,
Hats, shoes and hose,
You are to see them now.
Just the things you should wear
From your feet to your hair,
So when these curtains part—
We are ready to start
Our show of Make Believe."

On the last words of the song this main drop opened, behind which was revealed a stage setting representing the stage and grand stairway of the Paris Opera House. At the foot of this stairway—on either side—was a cluster of white lights in a transparent globe, about seven feet high. These unusual lights gave an exceptional unique appearance to the entire setting.

In the center of the main stage was suspended a chandelier with six drop lights. The main background was of yellow color with two panel lights. The over drapes for this drop were of rose color with a smaller one of dark blue underneath, with gold fringe. The side drapes were the same as the center drapes and the long drops were of pale blue color, with gold design. The pillars were of blue.

After the man and woman announced the show with "Make Believe," a girl dressed in a suit entered from the right side stage, introducing suits with the following lyrics, written by Mr. Landau, to the tune of "Cherie":

You see, on me,
A suit, just as cute as can be—
And some to come,
You'll like even better, maybe.
Skirts are same length as in the Spring,
Coats short or long are just the thing—
Watch close and see
Each style is worth while, Ma Cherie."

While this is being sung, two models dressed in the latest suits, appeared from either side of the upper stage and met at the top of the grand stairway, which they descended together, parting at the foot of the stairway, one going to each end of the stage where the runway commenced. After finishing modeling on the runway to all the latest Fox-trots by the Alhambra's orchestra, these two models left the stage by the side stages, one model leaving at either side. At the same time two other models, displaying more suits, appeared from either side of the upper stage and the procedure was the same—two models showing suits at one time, until all were shown.

After this display of suits, another girl introduced "street dresses" by singing lyrics by Mr. Landau, to the tune of "Caresses," as follows:

"Street dresses now you'll view,
They're all that's chic and new,
The shades are right—
Both dark and light,
There's surely one for you.
In tan and black and blue,
And green and orchid, too—
There's happiness one can't express
In Fields dresses for you."

As before, while this was being sung, the models displayed the latest things in "street dresses," following the same procedure as explained above.

The next number on the program was "Tailored Dresses," introduced with lyrics (by Mr. Landau) to the tune of "Mimi," as follows, and sung by a young lady:

"Nobby are these fall fashions
All in strict accord with proper style decree
Varied designs and colors
Just the modes you want for your society.
There is great satisfaction
To know you have the best the market yields—
It gives one a sense of bliss,
Be they matrons or young miss.
Why shop long, can't go wrong at Fields."

The procedure of display was the same as heretofore mentioned.

Next in order were "Afternoon Dresses," displayed to lyrics (by Mr. Landau), sung to the tune of "I Never Knew," by a young lady appearing from the side stage dressed accordingly.

"You'll never know how much you need a dress
Like those you are about to see;
Until you go among both old and young
And see how proper they will be.
Black and blue, olive too,
No matter what you're taste be, there is one for you.
You'll never know how you need a pretty street dress—
You'll want more than one, maybe."

After these dresses were shown, little Mary Clauder, a talented dancer, dressed in a specially designed dancing frock, sang "I Like It," after which she danced.

Next, "Dinner Dresses" were shown.

After these, "Coats" were introduced by lyrics (by Mr. Landau), sung to the tune of "All by Myself."

"A comfy cloth coat in the morning,
A lovely fur coat in the night—
You'll stay at home if you haven't one to wear,
So unhappy there, can't stand the cool air.
A warm coat and you'll not get lonely—
Watching the clock on the shelf—
A nice Fields coat is great on anyone's shoulder—
Then you'll never get colder
All by yourself."

Next, "Evening Gowns" were introduced by a man singing the chorus of "Beautiful Faces," which words couldn't be improved upon.

"Beautiful faces need beautiful clothes—
Satins and laces, nice ribbons and bows,
An ankle may be joy, but any boy who gazes
Won't warble its praises
Unless it is covered with attractive hose.
Many a shop girl, whom nobody knows
Would be the top girl, in musical shows
If she were dressed in the best
From her head right down to her toes—
For beautiful faces need beautiful clothes."

As each model finished modeling the runboard she did not leave the stage, but instead, took her place on the stage or steps as designated for the grand finale. When all the girls had modeled and taken their places, the singers, dressed in evening clothes also, stepped out from the two side stages and all sang lyrics, by Mr. Landau, to the tune of "All for You."

"All for you, all for you,
We have done our best for you—
And we hope you liked the show,
And will tell all those you know.
All for you, all for you,
You have seen all that is new—
To please you we've tried,
Hope you're satisfied
With Alhambra's Revue."

Buffalo Theatre and Newspaper Work Together

The local Universal exchange and the Palace theatre are getting a lot of free publicity through an excellent tie-up with the Buffalo Times. A Beauty Contest is being held in which girls equally as beautiful as Priscilla Dean, Miss Dupont, Miss Prevost and Mabel Julienne Scott. The Times is offering $700 in prizes, the Universal company is offering the winner a chance to enter pictures and the Palace will show a motion picture of the winner. In the meantime the Times is running big ads boosting the stunt.

Boone Builds Unique Lobby Front

A simple but effective lobby display was constructed for "Through the Back Door" by Publicity Director Boone of the Bijou theatre, Greensboro, N. C., recently.

The whole front of the theatre was boarded up to resemble the back door of a house. The usual washtub, wringer, mop, broom, etc., was in evidence near the door. A clothes line hung with baby clothes was strung over the lobby and a cut of Miss Pickford holding a garment was placed in the ticket window. The only entrance was through the "back door."

Harrison Advertising "Three Musketeers" in Advance

As advance exploitation for "The T Musketeers" Manager Harrison of Victory theatre, Waco, Texas, has util small sized telegrams from Douglas F banks reading: "'The Three Muskete is the crowning achievement of my reer."

"Snow" Lobby Display Used by Manager Walsh

When Manager Walsh, of the Vaudette Theatre, Atlanta, played "The Call of the North," for about a fourth, or fifth run recently, he counted on the exceedingly hot weather, and adapted his campaign of exploitation to off-set it.

All the lobby-frames were covered with white cotton sprinkled with artificial "snow," which, under the lights gave the frames the look of being encased in ice. Icicles were painted, and hung across the front of the theatre. The banner proclaiming the picture and the name of the star was lettered on pale green background, liberally sprinkled, while the paint was wet, with artificial "snow" which clung and sparkled.

Wherever it was possible to hang a bit of white cotton, "snow"-encrusted, the opportunity was made the most of, until the lobby fairly sparkled with snow and ice.

It was most effective, and convinced people that the Vaudette must be indeed "the coolest spot in town."

This "Mother O'Mine" Stunt Went Big

Every mother ill, in a hospital in Indianapolis, received a bouquet of flowers last week as a result of the presentation of "Mother o' Mine," at the Alhambra theatre.

Edwan Forrest Young, exploitation director of the Alhambra, arranged that during certain hours of the days on which "Mother o' Mine" was shown, admission to the theatre would be granted to all who had a bouquet of flowers at the door. The bouquets were sent to local hospitals for distribution among mothers.

Uses Blotters in Place of OrdinaryHeralds

Blotters with one side glazed on which is printed advertising for a number of coming special attractions is an exploitation stunt which J. A. Morrison, manager of the Star theatre, Meaford, Ont., is using most successfully.

The advertising headlines the theatre and announces that "One of these stars will be featured every Friday and Saturday." Below this line is a series of small cuts of stars and pictures in which they appear, that are dated for the Star.

The whole is a tasty bit of exploitation that finds its way to office desks, banks, etc., and gets a place where heralds would not be tolerated.

Novelty Cards Advertise "Her Winning Way"

Manager Harold Kistler, of the Rialto Theatre, Atlanta, believes in getting the maximum of results from the minimum of expense. For a showing of "Her Winning Way," recently, he had five good-sized cards of a unique shape and size, a pale tan background, lettered in black and red, hung outside around the edge of the marquee of the theatre. These screamed for attention, both by reason of their colors and their position.

The cards read: "Cleopatra Made a Marc of Anthony with 'Her Winning Way.'" "Many a Man Has Lost His Heart to a Woman Thru 'Her Winning Way.'" "Catherine De Medici Grabbed Europe Thru 'Her Winning Way.'" "Delilah Made Samson Look Sick with 'Her Winning Way.'" "Anne Boleyn Stole a Crown Thru 'Her Winning Way.'"

Inside the lobby was a big wooden box, painted green, with a small, square hole in the top. On the side was a sign which read "Love Germs! Beware!" Of course, everybody peeked inside the box and saw a fine collection of artificial frogs, fish, bugs, and sundry animals of that sort—some of celluloid, and some of other substances.

Real Swimming Pool for Ray Picture

A real swimming hole was built in a corner of the lobby by Mgr. Nichols of the Paris theatre, Durham, N. C., in connection with his showing of the "Ole Swimmin' Hole." A good sized pool, shaded by a screen of bushes, looked like the real thing, specially with a cut out of Ray peeking over the top, and a bundle of clothes thrown carelessly on a bush at one side. Those looking over the screen saw a few kewpies gone "in washin" too, or resting on the lily-pads.

Newsboys Help on "Dinty" Once Again

Admitting newsboys free to "Dinty" may be an exploitation stunt that has had its day in the so-called "big town" but it is still serving its purpose in the smaller places, according to George R. Moore, manager of the Lion theatre, Bellevue, O. Bellevue is a city of approximately 6,000 inhabitants in the center of a community that gives the Lion a draw on something like ten thousand more.

Shortly after Moore booked "Dinty," he announced that every newsie in Bellevue would see "Freckles" Barry in his greatest role, free of charge.

Santa Claus never had anything on "Dinty" when it came to putting the kids of Bellevue and vicinity in suspense. Kids that had never sold papers before got busy. They talked about "Dinty" and the free trip to the theatre that had been promised upon his arrival, all the time.

The result was that when "Dinty" was offered for the first time, Moore had so many patrons excited that he couldn't get them all into the Lion, as fast as they wanted to get in.

Omaha Managers Compete in Festival Parade

Julius K. Johnson, manager-organist of the Rialto theatre, Omaha, and Harry Watts, manager of the Strand theatre, that city, snatched an opportunity by the nape of the neck during Ak-Sar-Ben festival and worked in some novel exploitation.

Thousands of visitors from middle west towns flocked to Omaha to see the grand floral parade. Accordingly, as far as exploitation goes, Messrs. Johnson and Watts had their theatres represented by a beautiful float, the largest in the parade, as shown in the accompanying photograph.

It represented Art and Music and received much comment in the newspapers.

Clever "Heart to Let" Lobby at Atlanta

A little red heart-shaped bungalow with real smoke coming from the chimney was the main attraction in the lobby of the Alamo No. 2 theatre, in Atlanta, during the run of "A Heart to Let."

A large red heart, large enough to almost fill the lobby, was constructed. There was a door, with two little steps, and a tiny path down to the sidewalk. Upstairs, there were two windows, and at the left a tiny red brick chimney, from which occasional spirals of smoke were noticed.

Across the front of the heart, in imitation of a "For Rent" card was a sign which read "A Heart to Let; All Modern improvements. Very much worth-while. See Dan Cupid, Mgr., inside."

Flanking the heart on the left was a stock one-sheet and on the right, a large cut-out of the star.

Effective, but inexpensive, and Manager Samuels is to be congratulated.

Another Real Weddi for "Wedding Bells"

Arouse the public's curiosity and have a good week's business assured. was the deductive reasoning of O. K. son, owner of the Regent Theatre in chita, Kans., last week, during a ru "Wedding Bells."

NEWSY BRIEFS FROM CENTRAL FILM BELT

Chicago and the Mid-West

L. H. MASON, REPRESENTATIVE, 910 S. MICHIGAN AVE.

W. D. Burford and John Silha, of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Illinois, were scheduled to attend the convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Michigan, at Jackson, Michigan, on October 4th and 5th. President Sidney Cohen and General Council Walker, of the national organization, were among those to address the meeting.

Work of redecorating and refurnishing the Illinois theatre at 31st and Wentworth avenue will be completed within a few days and the new owner, Louis H. Frank, expects to open the house about October 10th. H. Lutz, the former owner, is now operating the Century theatre.

Attorney Francis W. Walker headed a delegation from the People Liberty League, which appeared before the directors of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Illinois, at their last meeting, and asked for co-operating for theatre men in fighting blue laws, Sunday closing and other legislation aimed at the "freedom of conscience." The directors passed a resolution endorsing the aims of the league and promised the aid of the motion picture theatres owners in promoting the same.

M. S. Kusell, who for some time has been Famous Players-Lasky's Chicago salesmanager, has been promoted to the managership of that company's New York exchange and is leaving to take charge immediately. The many friends he has made in this territory regret to see him go but are pleased over his advancement. Ottie Bolle, formerly assistant salesmanager, will fill the vacancy made by Mr. Kusell's promotion and Neal Agnew, formerly country salesman, becomes assistant salesmanager in charge of country sales.

Barbara Tennant and Russell Simpson in "Shadows of Conscience," Russell Productions' new seven-reel feature

The Chicago branch of the M. P. T. O. has arranged to co-operate with the Chicago Association of Commerce during the No Accident, No Fire Week and at that time Chicago exhibitors will run the film prepared by the Association of Commerce showing methods of preventing fire and accidents and emphasizing the dangers of carelessness.

Ralph Bradford has severed his connection with Paramount to become general manager of the University Cinema Service, Incorporated, with headquarters at 808 S. Wabash avenue. This company was recently incorporated in Illinois with a capitalization of $40,000, and will cater to the non-theatrical field exclusively.

Aaron Jones has received a letter from Douglas Fairbanks written on the eve of the latter's departure for Europe, in which he said: "Sorry that I cannot come on to Chicago to appear personally with my picture, 'The Three Musketeers,' at your Randolph theatre but I promise to bring Mary to Chicago with me as soon as we return from the continent. I knew it will not be too late then because I count upon the Fairbanks family occupying the Randolph screen the rest of the year." Doug and Mary therefore will appear at the Randolph either during the final week of 'The Three Musketeers" or during the early engagement of "Little Lord Fauntleroy," which is to succeed the Fairbanks picture.

Dan Roche has returned from Madison, Wisconsin, where he went to assist in the exploitation of "The Affairs of Anatol," which was playing at the Majestic theatre there. He reports that the Majestic's greatest crowd saw the picture Sunday and that the waiting patrons were lined up four abreast for a block all evening waiting to get into the theatre.

"The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" closed its long Chicago engagement on October 1st, after a successful run of twenty-seven weeks, which is believed to be a record breaker in this territory. Five road shows are now working out of the Chicago office of Metro, one of them at present showing at Peoria and another at Springfield. The Peoria engagement will be for three weeks and the Springfield for two weeks.

Lee Woodyatt has been appointed sales manager of Select's Chicago exchange.

"The Foolish Age," Doris May's laughing success, has been booked into Barbee's Loop Theatre for Robertson-Cole's Joy Week, starting October 16th, and the following week. An unusually large exploitation and advertising campaign will be carried on in connection with the Barbee showing, which will be handled by Hunt Stromberg. "The Foolish Age" was screened before a regular audience at Ascher's Roosevelt Theatre last Tuesday evening, and rocked the house with laughter, so that Manager Gallas, of Robertson-Cole, is assured will be a big hit at Barbee's.

A pre-release screening of Vitagraph's widely heralded feature production, "The Son of Wallingford," was held on Wednesday at Aryan Grotto Theatre with orchestral accompaniment. A large crowd of exhibitors was present to get their first view of this picture, and it was very well liked by the crowd.

A trade showing of "Shadows of Conscience," Russell Productions' new seven-reel feature picture, was held at Barbee's Loop Theatre last Thursday morning, and drew a representative crowd of exhibitors, exchange men and press reviewers. The picture caused unusually favorable comment and W. D. Russell and Bernie Russell, the latter of whom brought the picture on from the California studio, were kept busy receiving congratulations on this feature, which all agreed was the biggest and the finest production yet put out by Russell Productions.

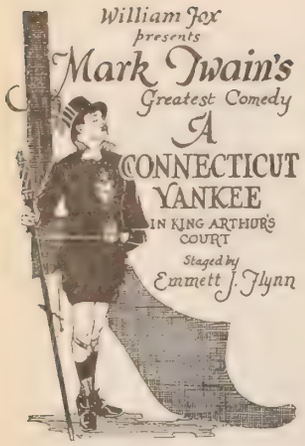
Samuel Sax, of Robertson-Cole, who is making a trip which includes visits to all the Robertson-Cole exchanges in the United States, spent several days in Chicago, and left Thursday to visit the western exchanges. He reports motion picture theatre attendance throughout the eastern portion of the country, which he already has covered, is excellent, and that outside of the steel centers he found little complaint from exhibitors of poor business, even the Akron and other rubber industrial cities having recovered from a slump they recently experienced.

Lorin J. Bennett, owner of the Liberty Theatre, at Atlanta, Illinois, has purchased the Capital Theatre at Mason City, Illinois, and renamed it the Liberty. Mr. Bennett will open his new house on Thursday and hereafter operate both theatres. The Capital was formerly owned by Peter Smallwood, of Mason City.

Celebrated Players Film Corporation has appointed W. Hirschberg, formerly of Associated Producers, and Isadore Natkin, recently associated with Robertson-Cole, as special feature representatives for the city of Chicago. The former will cover the north side territory and the latter will be in charge of the south side. President Joe Friedman now has completed the organization of his feature sales department for both city and country territory, as a preliminary step in making ready for the Fall distribution of Celebrated's long list of feature productions.

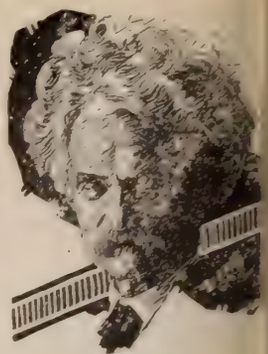
Douglas D. Rothacker, of the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company, is in Birmingham in connection with the making of an industrial picture. George Gilgore, one of the Rothacker directors, is filming a two-reel telephone practical picture. M. F. Leopold, safety engineer for the United States Bureau of Mines, is at the Rothacker Chicago plant in connection with a multiple reel steam shovel picture, which Rothacker's practical picture division is producing for the government.

A. Siegfried, of the Bijou Theatre, Decatur, has returned after a two-months' trip abroad, most of the time being spent in Germany. Mr. Siegfried was visiting the Chicago exchanges this week and reports that he was in the same hotel with Carl Laemmle in Germany, when the letters threatening the Universal chief were slipped under the door, and had other interesting occurrences of the trip to recount to his many Chicago friends.



Exploitation Survey of

MARK TWAIN'S
A Connecticut Yankee
In King Arthur's Court



William Fox
presents
Mark Twain
Greatest Comedy
A CONNECTICU
YANKEE
IN KING ARTHUR'S COUR
Staged by Emmett J Flyn.

A THREE-FOLD BIG METROPOLIS SUCCESS

"A CONNECTICUT YANKEE IN KING ARTHUR'S COURT," Mark Twain's masterpiece, released by William Fox as one of twelve super-specials, played for five solid months to crowded houses at the Selwyn theatre, New York City.

Twelve weeks was the record it established in Los Angeles, the city of picture critics, where it taxed the capacity of Miller's theatre. It is now playing a return engagement there.

A six weeks' pre-release engagement at the Alhambra theatre, London, England, only began to satisfy the demands of the people wanting to see it in that city.

Everywhere it has been pronounced by experts as flawless entertainment, in which two major "appeal" elements, that have never before been combined in a production, predominate. The outstanding note, of course, is Mark Twain's delicious humor—irresistible comedy that gets under the thickest skin, but back of this, and of almost equal importance, is the fact that it is also a great spectacle, the magnitude of the sets and the massiveness of the entire production having never been approached.

Selling the Picture to Your Public

A PICTURE, after all, is much like any other commodity and has to be sold in a similar way. "Create desires" is the cry of the salesman the world over and this, of course, is just as necessary with a picture as with anything else.

"A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court," aside from being a really great picture, offers more opportunities to create desire, more angles that will appeal to every class of entertainment seeker, than any production ever put on the screen.

Those who want to laugh will laugh as they have never laughed before; those who enjoy thrills will find their nerves tingling time and again; story interest in abundance, wonderful characterization, a touch of pathos, mystery—all are here to satisfy the most exacting demands.

Get the big men of your community behind your campaign by appealing to them through Mark Twain as an educator. Invite them to a private showing of the picture. They will appreciate its literary value—they know, of course, that Mark Twain has taught more truths to more people, through the delightful channels of comedy, than any other author—they will enjoy every second of the entertainment—and they will go out and talk. Word of mouth publicity is the greatest kind of publicity and all you have to do is to start the ball rolling.

Another factor you shouldn't overlook is that humans are much alike the world over and unconscious envy is a part of their make-up. Show them conclusively that vast throngs of other people have obtained and enjoyed a certain thing, and they will immediately want that thing and go to any lengths to get it. You can show them conclusively that thousands upon thousands of people in New York, London and Los Angeles, three cities in which the fans, to say the least are discriminating, have seen "A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court" and have received an immense amount of enjoyment from it.

The critics on the dailies, on the trade papers and on the fan magazines in these three cities were unanimous and highly laudatory in their opinions of this picture. Many excerpts from these opinions appear in the exploitation book and press sheet prepared by the Fox Corporation. Others will be furnished upon request. Use them unsparingly in your newspaper advertising, as program briefs and even in printed form to send to your mailing list. Guarantee the entertainment value of the picture under your own signature and back up your judgment with the opinion of these critics. Big city newspaper critics wield a large influence on the mind of the average fan and their opinions of this picture are so strong that they are bound to have an immense effect.

Pound home the thought that tens of thousands have already reaped their share of enjoyment from this production and that hundreds of thousands more will enjoy it. Insidiously play upon the envious strain in human nature by adroitly suggesting that if they miss "A Connecticut Yankee" they will be deprived of a measure of pleasure that all others have enjoyed or will enjoy.

There are innumerable points about the production itself that will suggest forceful selling arguments. A few of these are:

It has distinguished authorship.

It is based on a novel almost everyone has read, the fame of which has spread through two hemispheres.

From the spectacle standpoint it has never been excelled.

For novelty of theme and treatment it stands in a class by itself.

It is entertainment pure and simple; it sparkles with wit from the most brilliant minds; it is punctuated with mirth.

Work Through Educational Channels

MARK TWAIN Societies exist in many towns. Nearly every town and village has a literary club. Make use of these in publicizing "A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court."

The librarian at your public library will help you. He will give you names of influential people who are interested in Mark Twain's works and whose social connections will enable them to spread the news that your theatre has a treat in store.

Get in touch with your Board of Education—the literary value of this production will inveigle their interest.

Circularize your schools and colleges—make the children your word-of-mouth press agents. Offer prizes of tickets for the best essay, from the various classes, comparing Mark Twain's novel and the picture. Competition among the children is the surest way of interesting the parents.

Booksellers will be delighted t tie up with you on window display and newspaper advertising. I means increased revenue for both of you.

Remember this picture is goo for a run anywhere. Everybod will want to see it and it's up to yo to let the people of your com munity know, in every way possible that it's coming to your theatre.

Stunt Exploitation Suggestions

HERE is another angle to which this production is particularly adaptable. One phase of the pic ture shows a vast army of motor cycles ridden by men in armor an led by a girl in a flivver. This scen was taken advantage of in the Nev York City exploitation. A score o motorcyclists were engaged to rid through the business and residen tial districts bearing placards ad vertising the production. The nois created by the incessant and simul taneous explosions of the many ma chines excited curiosity long befor they arrived, the result bein throngs of interested spectators al along the way. It was a very ef fective ballyhoo.

Dress up a man in a knight' armor and have him walk th streets. Put a Pittsburgh stogie i his mouth, give him a cane to swin and a wrist watch to wear. H would have delighted Mark Twain He will delight your patrons. H symbolizes "A Connecticut Yanke in King Arthur's Court," a pictur which contrasts the new with the old. Make the figure ludicrous by these contrasts. The more laughs he gets the better for your business.

Dozens of similar stunts will suggest themselves in viewing the picture.

Lobby Display

DON'T overlook this important phase of your exploitation. Remember, your lobby is your show window to attract the passerby. Make it as attractive as you know how.

The vivid contrast between the up-to-the-second present and the distant past offers a wealth of material to choose from for presentation effects. And almost every scene will suggest a novel lobby display idea to the wide-awake exhibitor.

During the run of this picture in Los Angeles, the management of Miller's theatre transformed the lobby into the hall of an ancient castle. Coming from the bustle of the present-day out-of-doors into the quiet of this time-old setting put people immediately into the atmosphere of the picture and created the kind of comment that brought new patrons to the theatre.

Material to Aid Your Campaigns

A VAST amount of material, listed elsewhere, has been prepared to aid exhibitors in their exploitation of this picture, and can be had at the Fox exchanges. Whether your main campaign consists of newspaper or billboard advertising you will find ample material to assist you.

This eight sheet poster, with picturesque Mark Twain in the foreground, emphasizes the distinguished authorship

For Your Newspaper Advertising

ONE, two, three and four column pictorial ads have been prepared, graphically depicting the various elements of the picture's appeal, with the laugh provoking element predominant. They are all made from pen and ink drawings, and will print well anywhere. Two of these are illustrated at the head of this section. If you prefer to prepare your own ads, you will find in the press sheet many excellent "selling lines" for your use.

There are also one, two and three column scene cuts that can be used for either text or ad illustration purposes.

For your editorial column, the press sheet contains a large number of stories, especially prepared with the editor in mind, and containing interesting facts about the production and the author of the story which have a legitimate news value. These should be easy to place and, in addition, a large amount of publicity should be obtainable through the correspondence columns of newspapers by inciting discussions regarding the advantages of modern life versus the olden times, anecdotes of Mark Twain, etc.

Harry Meyers in his ludicrous costume makes an attractive figure on this "Connecticut Yankee" three sheet

Paper

STRIKING posters have been carefully prepared, bringing out the modern touch in the production and playing up Mark Twain, the author. The posters present the story with the comedy element to the fore. They are printed in colors that attract and fill the eye.

Don't confine yourself to posting your immediate territory. Remember this story is a classic in literature, known to everyone and read by the majority of people. It is the cleverest and most delightful satire on old-fashioned conditions, written by the most brilliant and most loved of American humorists. Everybody will want to see it and its pulling power is far in excess of anything you have ever played. Be generous and far-reaching with your paper. Billboards should be contracted for on a large scale throughout the community and well beyond the usual territory.

Surrounding towns and territories should be included in the advertising field and reached through the mail with whatever material is used for that purpose.

Special Morning Matinees

might be arranged for grammar, high school and college classes. They will learn more history from this picture than they could in many school sessions and if the teachers are approached on this premise they would probably be glad to arrange it. Mark Twain has taken history as a framework and upon it built the most delightful and funniest comedy ever conceived. History, at the best, sees truth through the veil of centuries. Mark Twain has stripped away the veil.

"A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court" is going to delight everyone, but people are not all alike and they have to be reached through different forms of appeal. Use every possible avenue of exploitation to start the attendance ball rolling swiftly and after that the picture itself will immeasurably increase the momentum daily. Bear in mind that this production should not only bring you immediate and big profits, but carries with it that kind of prestige that means new patronage for your theatre.

WHAT THE MAKERS SAY ABOUT PICTURES

Elaborate Premiere for "His Nibs" on B'way

THE much heralded production of Exceptional Pictures, Charles (Chic) Sale in "His Nibs," is having its premier presentation at the Hotel Astor, New York City, as this issue goes to press.

Alexander Beyfuss, vice-president and general manager for Exceptional Pictures Corporation, has promised one of the most unique affairs in the history of the industry, and states further that immediately following the Hotel Astor date a presentation of "His Nibs" in one of the Broadway theatres in New York City will be arranged for.

Lasky Officials Commend "The Sheik"

"One of the best pictures of the year and a sure-fire box-office sensation," is the gist of a message received this week by Jesse L. Lasky from Charles Eyton, manager of the Lasky studio, in Hollywood, reporting on a private screening given at the studio of "The Sheik," George Melford's production featuring Agnes Ayres and Rudolph Valentino.

Officials of the Lasky studio, according to the telegram, declare that Melford has put into the picture all the color and spirit which has made the book by E. M. Hull the best-selling novel of the year. Agnes Ayres does some exceptionally fine work in the role of Diana Mayo, the young English girl who is captured by the Sheik, and Rudolph Valentino as the Sheik has a part which enables him to score as great a triumph as he did in "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse."

Elaborate Premier for "Theodora" Planned

Goldwyn has leased the Astor Theatre for a special, limited, pre-release showing of the great Italian spectacle, "Theodora," which it has acquired for distribution in America.

An incidental musical setting has been arranged under the direction of S. L. Rothafel and will be interpreted by a symphony orchestra. There will also be a chorus of forty voices. It will show at the $2.00 scale of prices.

"Theodora" is declared to be the greatest film spectacle ever made. It is founded upon Victorien Sardou's romance which furnished Sarah Bernhardt with one of her most triumphant roles. It was directed by Signor Ambrosio, the famous Italian director of Turin, for the Unione Cinematografica Italiana.

Many Bookings for Western

"Across the Divide" to Be Issued October 9th by Ass'd Exhibitors

"ACROSS THE DIVIDE," the Playgoers Pictures feature release for the week of October 9, has already proved the popularity of the well-produced, actionful Western drama, judging by the advance bookings which have been received, says a report from Associated Exhibitors.

Headed by Rex Ballard and Rosemary Theby, the cast of "Across the Divide" includes such well known names as Ralph Fee McCullough, Thomas Delmar, Gilbert Clayton, Dorothy Manners and Florence Hollister. It is directed by John Calloway. The following statement has been issued in connection with "Across the Divide:"

"The central figure of the story is Buck, played by Rex Ballard; half white, half Indian. He is a wistful outcast who proves his right to his white blood by his loyalty to the only person who ever trusted him. Rosemary Theby takes the role of a fiery dance hall girl.

Three Metro Specials in October

THREE pictures, special productions starring Gareth Hughes, Alice Lake and Bert Lytell, will be released by Metro during October as part of its fall schedule.

Gareth Hughes will be seen in a comedy-drama, "Garments of Truth," a George D. Baker production, for S-L (Arthur Sawyer-Herbert Lubin) Pictures, on October 3. This picture, adapted from Freeman Tilden's story in "Pictorial Review, deals with the adventures of an imaginative lad in a small village who gives such free rein to his truth trifling propensities that he stirs up the entire village. This is the first of the series of pictures in which Hughes stars for S-L. It was photographed by Rudolph Bergquist. E. J. Shulter was art director.

"The Infamous Miss Revell," with Alice Lake as the star, will be released October 17. This drama of a girl whose twin sister reaped the benefits of the other twin's sacrifice for their small brothers and sisters, gives Miss Lake her first chance in a dual role. It is a Dallas M. Fitzgerald production adapted by Arthur J. Zellner from W. Carey Wonderly's story. Robt. Klaffki was photographer and Joseph Calder art director.

Bert Lytell makes his bow in another crook drama October 31, "Lady Fingers," a Bayard Veiller production, adapted by Lenore J. Coffee from Jackson Gregory's story. It was photographed by Arthur Martinelli. A. E. Freudeman was art director.

Vitagraph to Produce "Little Minister"

ALBERT E. SMITH, president of Vitagraph, has announced that "The Little Minister" will be put out as a special production by Vitagraph in the near future, with Alice Calhoun in the star role of little Babbie. The preliminary parts of production have already been completed. The Vitagraph Company has owned the rights of Sir James M. Barrie's far-famed play for years and believes that there is no time more propitious for making a film super-feature out of it. Alice Calhoun is regarded as a perfect type for the role created on the stage by Maude Adams.

Vitagraph has been approached at various times with tempting offers for the rights of "The Little Minister." A prominent trade authority recently placed the probable value of these rights at not less than half a million dollars in the hands of a producer equipped to give it a production in keeping with its charm.

"Ropes" Is Selected for Next DuPont Vehicle

"Ropes," the one-act play which was published recently in Harper's Magazine, is being made into a five-reel photo-play by Universal, with Miss du Pont in the starring role. It was written by Wilbur Daniel Steele, and is said to be one of the most discussed dramatic pieces of the decade.

Paul Scardon is making the picture. The playlet was put into photo-play form by Lucien Hubbard. Pat O'Malley, Lloyd Whitlock, Percy Challenger, Mrs. Hunt, Mary Philbin, and Fay Winthrop are in the cast.

"Barry Gordon" Will Be Elaborately Staged

Universal officials plan to make "Barry Gordon," Herbert Rawlinson's next film, one of the most outstanding films of the year. Majorie Daw has been engaged as the star's leading woman, and Hobart Henley has been assigned as director. An elaborate stage production is promised. The locale of the picture shifts between Paris, New York, Morocco and other international points of interest.

Extreme care is being taken in the selection of the cast. Only two have been engaged so far. They are Doris Pawn and Winter Hall.

"Penrod" Started by Neilan

Wesley Barry Stars; Frank O'Connor Will Collaborate in the Direction

MARSHALL NEILAN returned to Los Angeles last week after a brief trip to New York and started a busy producing season at the Hollywood studios, where he has taken over his former quarters.

His initial production for the coming season is "Penrod," taken from the famous Booth Tarkington book and play and in which Wesley Barry will be seen in the titular role. Work on this picture is now underway and a special distributing plan for this film, which Neilan plans to make his biggest box office attraction to date, has been perfected with Associated First National Exhibitors. As a result of this plan "Penrod" will receive a national premiere in all the big cities of the country on the order of other big specials now playing the country.

Mr. Neilan's first engagement for the picturization of "Penrod," is that of Frank O'Connor, well known Lasky director, who will collaborate with the producer on the direction. Mr. O'Connor's most recent work on the Lasky lot was the direction of the three May MacAvoy films, "The Happy Ending," "A Virginia Courtship" and "Everything for Sale." Prior to these pictures he directed various other Paramount successes. He is one of the pioneers in the producing branch of the business and has acted and directed films since the inception of the photoplay, following ten years on the stage.

It is the producer's plan to make this film a typical Neilan picture with the same players who have contributed to the success of his most popular pictures. Thus the production will mark the return to the Neilan fold of various popular stars of today whom he brought in to prominence during the past three years.

Supporting Wesley Barry will be a cast of thirty-five players, including fifteen youngsters and twenty grown-ups. A kaleidoscopic mixture of races and nationalities will be found among the younger players.

Realart Announces Release

Wanda Hawley the Star of "Her Face Value"; T. Roy Barnes in Lead

WHAT Realart described as "One of the best pictures Wanda Hawley has done" was adapted by Percy Heath from a story written by Earl Derr Biggers, which appeared in the Saturday Evening Post under the title of "The Girl Who Paid Dividends."

Wanda Hawley as "Peggy Malone" portrays a sympathetic role which adds to her already numerous laurels. Her beauty is given ample scope as an actress on the stage as well as a screen favorite in the parts enacted by her as "Peggy." She wears a number of pretty gowns, for which Mr. Hawley has become noted, and her acting meets every demand of the role in which she has been cast, that of a young girl who marries her press agent (T. Roy Barnes) to escape the wiles of a Broadway idler.

"Her Face Value" is a strongly dramatic offering with a generous vein of comedy throughout, furnished mostly by T. Roy Barnes in the role of Jimmy Parsons, press agent. Barnes is carving quite a niche for himself as a screen comedian, though he has had years of stage experience in light comedy. His jovial smile and breezy manner is going to win a lot of friends for him. In this picture Barnes displays considerable talent as a conjuror as well as a comedian.

Richard Rosson, as Peggy's grafting brother, and Lincoln Plumer, in the role of "her old man," with a perpetual fake backache, are particularly good in their respective parts, Realart says, and add much to the entertainment value of the picture. The cast also includes Donald McDonald, Winifred Bryson, Harvey Clark, Eugene Burr, George Periolat and Ah Wing.

"Her Face Value" was directed by Thomas Heffron, with the assistance of M. A. Laswell, under the supervision of Elmer Harris. William E. Collins was the cameraman.

Kirkwood Transferred to London Studio

IN line with his policy of putting leading American players in the Paramount pictures made in Europe, Jesse L. Lasky, first vice-president of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, yesterday announced that James Kirkwood would sail on the Aquitania October 4 to play the title role in the production of "The Man from Home," by George Fitzmaurice. Mr. Fitzmaurice is now nearing the completion of his big European production, "Three Live Ghosts," and expects to start work on "The Man from Home" in the near future.

Mr. Kirkwood's going to Europe adds another well known name to the imposing list of American players who are now filling the casts of Paramount's European productions. Starting with David Powell, the American colony in the Paramount studio at Islington has grown to include Ann Forrest, Elliott Dexter, Dorothy Cumming, Cyril Chadwick, Anna Q. Nilsson and Norman Kerry among the players, and George Fitzmaurice, John S. Robertson and Donald Crisp among the directors.

"Hail the Woman" Set for the Late Fall

"HAIL THE WOMAN," Thomas H. Ince's super-special—his first First National attraction—will be released late in the Fall, according to information which became public this week.

A definite release date has not been set for the big Ince drama, although it has been completed at the Ince studios in Culver City. Expectations, however, are that the date will be around December 1.

It has been finally cut under the personal direction of the producer and John Griffith Wray, the director, and it is expected that prints will be in First National exchanges some time within the next thirty days.

"Lightnin" Lauds Sale in "Old Man" Role

Frank Bacon, famous for his creation of the role of "Lightnin'," commends Chic Sale's "old man" characterization in "His Nibs," which Exceptional Pictures Corporation has produced with Sale as the star. As Frank Bacon's fame rests upon his masterful interpretation of old "Lightnin'" Bill Jones, Exceptional Pictures points with special pride to Mr. Bacon's praise of Chic Sales in his "old man" characterization. Here is what "Lightnin'" wrote to Sale:

"I was very glad of the opportunity of seeing your first motion picture, 'His Nibs,' and can assure you it gave me an hour of real entertainment.

"Your old man character is a classic."

Goldwyn Publicity Man Publishes New Book

L. H. Mitchell, of the Goldwyn publicity department and formerly on the staffs of the New York World, the Globe and the Evening Telegram, is the author of a new book on the fall list of Little, Brown & Co., of Boston, entitled "The Circus Comes to Town." On the title page of the book the author signs himself Lebbeus Mitchell.

"The Circus Comes to Town" is a humorous child story and has just been placed upon the market for the holiday trade.

Canine Supporting Cast for "Wonder Dog"

Century is specializing on dog comedies. Brownie's latest is a slightly new departure for the "Wonder Dog." He is supported by all varieties of canines, some hairless Mexicans, big Danes, poodles, and last but not least Bob," who is Brownie's playmate when he is not working for the screen.

Bookings show there is a growing demand for these dog pictures apart from the drawing power of Brownie himself, declares the Century offices.

Educational Announces New "Cinal Films"

THE Blanchard Film Company has begun work on the fifth of a series of slow motion specialties for Educational under the name of Cinal Films.

The fourth of those novel and instructive specialties, called "The Manly Art of Self Defence," has just been released by Educational Exchanges.

Miss Kellerman has acted in two of the Cinal Films, "The Art of Diving" and "High and Fancy Diving." These are the first and third releases of the series. In the second picture, "Golf," Alex Morrison, former professional at the California Country Club, solves for the golfer such difficult problems as how to keep your eye on the ball, the perfect stance, etc.

"The Manly Art of Self Defense," just made available for theatre presentation, shows how the scientific boxer takes advantage of "openings" that are so brief that they are not observed by anyone outside of the ring. Young Earl France, Pacific Coast lightweight champion, and Billy McCahn, lightweight champion of Ohio, staged the bout for this picture.

Quick Sales Reported on "Heart of North"

Additional sales of great importance were closed this week on "The Heart of the North," the George H. Davis-Joe Brandt feature of the Canadian Northwest which is being offered on the States Right Market by Mr. Brandt and Mr. Davis.

Midland Films, Inc., of Minneapolis, has taken over the feature for the Minnesota, and North and South Dakota territory. The deal was closed early in the week between Tom Burke of Midland and Mr. Brandt.

Sales on "The Heart of the North" were made at the rate of almost one a day during the week just past.

"Foolish Age" Announced for October Release

Doris May's first starring vehicle for R-C Pictures, "The Foolish Age," was passed by the board of censors of Chicago without a single cut, the reviewers commenting enthusiastically upon its wholesomeness and high entertainment value, it is reported.

"The Foolish Age" is scheduled for release October 16 but will have a pre-release screening at the Park theatre, Boston, October 10, at which time it will begin an engagement of three weeks. It is based upon an original story from the pen of Hunt Stromberg, who supervised the production. William A. Seiter directed.

Five Goldwyn's Under Way

Sixth Soon to Be Started; Russian Village Built for "Hungry Hearts"

FIVE big productions are now under way at the Goldwyn studios on the Coast and a fifth will soon be started.

A Russian village has been built near the studio for Anzia Yezierska's "Hungry Hearts," which E. Mason Hopper is directing. Bryant Washburn and Ethel Kay head the cast. Russian players have been engaged as extras to give atmosphere to the Russian portions of the photoplay. Irvin Lossman, a social worker and newspaper man who has just returned from Russia, is acting as technical adviser. Miss Kay spent her early life in Russia. Sonia Marcelle, playing the mother role, was born in Russia and has just returned from a trip to Poland. Sophie Fabian, who plays the music for the actors, has just arrived from Poland.

E. A. Warren has been added to the cast of Gouverneur Morris' "Yellow Men and Gold," which Irvin V. Willat is directing with Richard Dix and Rosemary Theby in the leading roles. The company is now at Catalina Island after spending a week at San Pedro. Two ships have been chartered to make the sea scenes.

It takes Lon Chaney three hours to make up for one of his two roles in "The Octave of Claudius," by Barry Pain—the role of the hunchback. Jacqueline Logan, the "Follies" beauty, plays opposite him. Wallace Worsley is directing. Gossip at the studio has it that the hunchback will be Lon Cheney's most distinctive contribution to the screen.

Director William Beaudine, Cullen Landis, Patsy Ruth Miller and the other players in Julien Josephson's picture, "The City Feller," have returned from Los Olivos where the small town scenes were filmed.

Director Rowland V. Lee, Jack Abbe, Winter Blossom and others in the company acting Gouverneur Morris' Chinese fantasy "What Ho—the Cook!" are making excellent progress on that picture.

Chic Sale a Stage Favorite

Beyfuss Says Star Will Be as Popular on Screen as He Is on Stage

CHARLES (CHIC) SALE is starred in the second offering which has been produced by Exceptional Pictures Corporation, entitled "His Nibs."

Alexander Beyfuss, vice president and general manager of Exceptional Pictures, states that the same regard the vaudeville and speaking stage has for Mr. Sale the motion picture industry will have after they have seen his first photoplay endeavor, "His Nibs," which the corporation has scheduled for a trade showing in the grand ballroom of the Hotel Astor on October 6.

Among the hundreds of the expressions of praise and admiration which Chic Sale has received are the following:

By C. H. Bonte, Philadelphia Public Ledger: "If all vaudeville were as funny and genuinely artistic as Chic Sale, we would be enchanted."

By O. O. McIntyre, the Daily News: "A man I regard as the most artistic producer in New York—a man who has not resorted to the abracadabra and electrobiology of his more successful competitors—once told me that in his opinion Chic Sale was the greatest actor since Joseph Jefferson."

The Detroit Journal: "When the final chronicles of the American stage shall be written, there will be much to be said for vaudeville in the early twentieth century."

The Denver Times: "His entry into motion pictures is significant in connection with the appearance of a new type of character, the exact opposite of the groomed Adonis, which has become intensely popular through the work of its two pioneers, Charles Ray and Will Rogers. Romantic and unpolished simplicity, awkwardness of mien and homely ways form the basis of the new idea of acting.

Production Speeding U at R-C Coast Studios

PRODUCTION activities are speeding up at the R-C Pictures Hollywood studios under the supervision of R. J. Tobin, director general of production.

Pauline Frederick went on location on October 1 to begin the filming of her next R-C production, "Judith of Blue Lake Ranch," under the direction of Colin Campbell. All the rugged atmosphere of the open country of the West will be injected into "Judith of Blue Lake Ranch," together with plenty of romance and adventure.

Doris May resumed work on September 28. She has begun her second production for R-C release, "Eden and Return," a romantic comedy in which the young star will appear as a young girl combatting her father's efforts to make her marry only a wealthy man. William A. Seiter will direct.

Gasnier has also begun work on "Home," a tensely dramatic subject to which he will give his closest attention during the next three or four weeks.

Short-Subjects in Forc at Broadway Houses

The standing that Educatior Film Exchanges, Inc., has won the leading distributor of short su jects is illustrated in its showing f the week of October 2, when fo Educational releases were run in many big first-run houses of Ne York and Brooklyn. During t preceding week the Selig-Rork ph toplay, "The Ne'er to Return Roa was shown at the Strand.

Beginning October 2 "Play Bal the first release of the series Sketchografs, by Julian Ollendor ran at the Rivoli theatre.

At the Central theatre "Ev Leaves," another of the Sketch grafs, was on the program.

Larry Semon Finishing "The Sawmill"

Larry Semon is finishing his latest comedy, "The Sawmill." More than a hundred people were transported into the mountains for this comedy.

No similar timberland comedy has ever been produced, states Vitagraph, and due to the nation-wide publicity Semon and his troupe received when they stopped work on this comedy to fight a forest fire, and the original idea of the comedy itself, exhibitors have made inquiries concerning it at several Vitagraph exchanges.

Fox Units Busy on West Coast

William Russell and Shirley Mason on New Subjects

ADVICES from the New York headquarters of the Fox Film Corporation indicate that the various Fox producing units at the West Coast Studios are rapidly progressing in the new subjects now under way.

Shirley Mason is at work again at the Fox West Coast Studios, less than two weeks after finishing her picture "Jackie." The intervening period is the nearest thing to a real vacation the Fox star has had this year. She spent the time at Coronado Beach, at the southernmost point of California.

The new picture is "Little Aliens," from the story by Myra Kelly. Jack Strumwasser and Dorothy Yost prepared the screen adaptation. Jack Ford again is directing Miss Mason.

For this production Gaston Glass, who for five years was on the speaking stage with Sara Bernhardt in France and the United States, has become, at least temporarily, a Californian, for he has been engaged to play the male lead with Shirley Mason. The cast also includes George Williams, Martha Franklin, Arthur Drew Rankin, Alfred Testa, Richard Lapan and Baby Blumfield.

William Russell appears as a scion of an old Southern family, jealous of its traditions and involved in a feud, in a picture now under way at Fox Film Corporation's West Coast Studios. The story is a screen adaptation of "The Roof Tree," a popular novel by Charles Neville Buck. Jack Dillon is directing the production.

On the Fox lot at Hollywood authentic Southern mansions and humbler dwellings of the region below Mason and Dixon's line are being reared, while many parts of California provide ideal locations for typical Southern exterior scenes. William Russell, therefore, will not go far from the Fox Western centre of production while making this picture.

The same condition occurred in the production of three preceding William Russell pictures, "The Desert Shall Blossom" (working title), "The Lady from Longacre" and "Singing River," in which the handsome and vigorous star was by turn a civil engineer connected with an irrigation project in America's desert regions, a member of a titled English family involved in the seething politics of a small European kingdom, and a rancher and miner in the mountainous Western regions of our own country.

In his new picture Russell is supported by Sylvia Breamer, feminine lead; Florence Deshon, Bob Daly, Arthur Morrison and Al Fremont.

Eileen Percy is at work on a new picture at Fox Film Corporation's West Coast Studios, after a rest of eight days following completion of "Whatever She Wants." The new picture is "Elope If You Must," a comedy drama from the popular story by E. J. Rathe. C. R. Wallace is directing. Eddie Sutherland has been engaged to play the male lead. The cast includes Mildred Davenport in a character role; Mary Huntress, Joe Bennett and Larry Stears.

Edna Murphy and Johnnie Walker, co-starring in a picture being made at the Fox West Coast Studios under the working title "Extra! Extra!" are supported by Wilson Hummel, Edwin B. Tilton, Hershel Mayall and John Sterling.

There are twelve important characters in the second picture starring Dustin Farnum under his new contract with William Fox, and hundreds of extras. It is a sea story entitled "Cursed" and presents the popular star in the role of a harsh and quick tempered ship captain. Bernard Durning is directing the production in California.

Auto Trucks Can Deliver Prints

Rothacker Precautions Ease Fear of Rail Strike

IF the railroad men walk out, as they are threatening to do, the Rothacker Chicago laboratory is preparing to get First National releases out to the exhibitors—strike or no strike.

Forrest J. Alvin, general manager of the United States Motor Truck Company, has placed the entire automotive transportation facilities of his organization at the command of Watterson R. Rothacker.

This means that no matter how long the railroad strike should last it will never be necessary for the majority of theatres to be dark or to run old pictures, as far as the releases of First National and other Chicago Rothacker laboratory clients are concerned.

The Rothacker Chicago Laboratory is peculiarly favorably located from a distribution viewpoint. Over 50,000,000 people live within a night's train ride of Chicago—and within a motor truck radius of about twenty-four hours. It will be entirely practical, in case the emergency warrants, for the Rothacker Chicago laboratory to deliver prints by automobile to over 75 per cent of the American theatres.

When the news dispatches indicated that a railroad strike loomed Mr. Rothacker began planning for an automotive delivery of releases. After several conferences an agreement between the United States Motor Truck Company and the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company was made, whereby the United States Motor Truck organization would deliver Rothacker prints to exhibitors.

The United States Truck Company is one of the largest and strongest automobile concerns in the world. Mr. Alvin is recognized as a leading authority on automotive transportation. During the war he served on the War Industries Board as representative of the motor truck industry. If the union men carry out their threat to tie up railroad transportation, Mr. Alvin will come to Chicago personally to direct the automotive delivery of Rothacker prints.

If the threatened strike materializes, the day the trains quit running Mr. Alvin will marshal his Chicago forces. Chicago is a principal distributing point for United States Trucks. Fifty trucks—more than will be needed—are available in Chicago. These trucks, loaded with Rothacker prints, would leave in all directions.

During the conferences in Chicago Mr. Alvin worked out in detail just how these "trunk line" trucks would operate out of Chicago. For instance, one "trunk line" truck would depart for Des Moines and Omaha; another for Kansas City and Denver. A third would make Milwaukee and the Twin Cities. St. Louis and the Southwest would be another destination. Memphis and New Orleans another rout, and Indianapolis, Louisville and Atlanta another. Similarly the Eastern States would be served.

As these "trunk line" trucks arrive at an exchange city they would unload that exchange's quota of prints. Then the United States Truck transportation facilities of that exchange's territory would be at the service of the exchange in relaying the prints on the smallest cities in that section.

In case it is necessary in order to make release dates, the "trunk line" trucks would be operated by relay drivers—the trucks pushing on day and night until the furthermost exchange city is reached.

These "trunk line" trucks would not "mean very much" if it were not for the fact that the United States Truck organization covers America like a network. In every exchange city the local United States Truck distributor would be able to place more than sufficient automotive transportation facilities for the exchange to get the Rothacker prints out to the surrounding towns. There is a United States Truck distributor in every sizable town in the country. An exchange could rush releases to the larger towns in its territory, where the work of distribution would be taken up by the United States Truck distributors.

Mr. Rothacker's arrangement with Mr. Alvin extends also beyond the Rocky Mountains. Releases printed at the Rothacker-Aller laboratories in Los Angeles would be distributed in the same way.

Sweet Renews Contract with Century Film

Harry Sweet has renewed his present contract with Century Film Corporation for two additional years. He has just finished a picture called "The Dumb Bell," directed by Tom Buckingham.

New Arliss Picture to Be Comedy Drama

A new George Arliss photoplay is forthcoming, and not only will it be a new picture, but Mr. Arliss will be seen in a characterization new to most of his myriad of admirers. Announcement to this effect is made by Henry M. Hobart, president of Distinctive Productions, Inc., producers of "Disraeli," in which Mr. Arliss is starred.

The forthcoming production is adapted from the story "Idle Hands," by Earl Derr Biggers, published in the Saturday Evening Post. Forrest Halsey, who wrote the scenario for "Disraeli," has finished the scenario for "Idle Hands," and Henry Kolker, under whose direction "Disraeli" was made, will again direct. Harmon Wright will continue as Mr. Kolker's assistant, and Harry A. Fischbeck will again be at the camera. Mr. Hobart is now completing the selection of the cast who will support Mr. Arliss. The cast will be announced later.

Fox Specials in Demand in Scandanavia

According to a report from Arthur G. Gregory, manager of Fox Film Corporation's general office for Scandinavia, at Amagertorv 29, Copenhagen, Denmark, the place recently became a Mecca for all the most prominent distributors in Sweden and Norway, as well as Denmark. The occasion was the screening by Mr. Gregory of "Checkers," "If I Were King" and other Fox special productions which have won popularity in various parts of Europe. Without exception, the communication to the New York office states, the distributors made bids for "Over the Hill," "Queen of Sheba" and "A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court," anxiously inquiring as to when they might hope to obtain the films.

Truex Comedies for Pathe

Short Subject Program Enlarged; Three Two-Reelers Contracted For

THE scope of Pathe's activities in the field of short subjects is to be further enlarged, according to an announcement this week, informing the trade of the addition to its fall and winter release schedule of three two-reel comedies in which Ernest Truex is starred. The arrangements for distribution of the Truex comedies has just been completed between Pathe and the AyVeeBee Corporation, which produced the series. Amede J. Van Beuren is president of the latter organization.

Truex, who is one of the most popular comedians on the American stage, as attested by the great success of his current vehicle, "Six Cylinder Love," which is jamming the Sam H. Harris theatre every performance, is making a reappearance on the silver sheet. He successfully starred in a prior series of comedies, but was obliged to desert studio work because of his triumph on the stage.

"The Bashful Lover," "Stick Around" and "Little, But Oh My," are the titles of the three Truex comedies.

Within the next ten days, Pathe will be in a position to announce the releasing arrangements for this series, as well as for the two Harris-Dickson comedies, which recently were added to the Pathe schedule.

Pathe now lays claim to the most complete line of comedy releases of any organization in the American market. In addition to the Harris Dickson and Ernest Truex mirth makers, Pathe each week releases a Hal Roach comedy, starring either "Snub" Pollard, or Eddie Boland; a reissue of Harold Lloyd's most successful single reelers, and one of a series of one-reel comedies featuring Gaylord Lloyd, brother of Harold.

Mr. Truex began his screen career with Mary Pickford in "The Good Little Devil," playing the role of Charles MacLance, which he originated in the Belasco stage production of this fairy play. His work in both the stage and screen versions of "The Good Little Devil" was second only to that of Miss Pickford. His screen productions include "Oh You Woman," in which this jovial star shared honors with Louise Huff; "Come On In" and "Good Bye Bill," both with Shirley Mason. "Caprice" with Mary Pickford and the two-reel comedies, "The Night of the Dub" and "Too Good to be True," wherein he was starred.

Paramount October Films

Six Features on List; Two of Them Based on Stories by Rita Weiman

UPON Rita Weiman, popular author falls the distinction of having two of her stories in picture form included in the list of six feature productions scheduled for release by Paramount during the month of October.

"Footlights," the first of Miss Weiman's stories on the schedule is released October 2. It was adapted by Josephine Lovett and directed by John S. Robertson. The same day marks the release of "Cappy Ricks," starring Thomas Meighan. This is an adaptation by Albert Shelby LeVino and Waldemar Young of the stories by Peter B. Kyne. Tom Forman directed.

George Melford's production of E. Phillips Oppenheim's story, "The Great Impersonation," is scheduled for October 9. Monte M. Katterjohn, wrote the scenario and James Kirkwood is featured in a dual role. Ann Forrest plays opposite Mr. Kirkwood, while Winter Hall, Truly Shattuck, Fontaine LaRue, Allan Hale and Bertram Johns are prominent in the support.

October 23 is the date of release of George Fitzmaurice's spectacular production, "Experience," which Waldemar Young adapted from the play by George V. Hobart. Richard Barthelmess is featured in the role of Youth and Marjorie Daw as Love. The list of players includes among others John Miltern, E. J. Ratcliffe, Betty Carpenter, Lilyan Tashman, Nita Naldi, Joseph Smiley, Jed Prouty, Sybil Carmen, Robert Schable and Leslie King.

"After the show," also by Rita Weiman, is a William de Mille production and is scheduled for October 30. The story appeared in the Saturday Evening Post under the title, "The Stage Door," and was adapted by Hazel McDonald and Vianna Knowlton. Also released on the 30th is William D. Taylor's production, "Beyond," starring Ethel Clayton. Henry Arthur Jones, the famous English playwright, is the author, and Julia Crawford Ivers wrote the scenario. Charles Meredith is Miss Clayton's leading man.

"Handcuffs or Kisses" at Broadway House

For three days during the past week Elaine Hammerstein, in "Handcuffs or Kisses," was the screen attraction at the new palatial Loew's State in New York. In this picture Robert Ellis, a Selznick director, played opposite Miss Hammerstein in unfolding the interesting details of the plot.

"Handcuffs or Kisses" is first of the new Hammerstein series of six features for the ensuing season. "The Way of a Maid," second attraction in the series, has passed from the laboratory in completed form. William P. S. Earle directed this one. In "The Way of a Maid" the lead is played by Niles Welch who lately signed a long term contract as a Selznick leading man with prospects of appearances with Miss Hammerstein in most of this season's new pictures.

Novel Stunts to Exploit "The Speed Girl"

Realart's pressbook on the latest Bebe Daniels picture, "The Speed Girl," offers exhibitors many suggestions for effective exploitation. The role of the speed girl is particularly appropriate for Miss Daniels, as previous pictures will attest, says Realart, and in this production she never lets up for a moment.

Bebe Daniels uses various means of locomotion throughout the action of the story, including horse, airplane and motor car and it is from this element of speed that the picture derives its name.

As an introductory stunt, Realart suggests a "speed" parade. At the head of it a tumble-down bus, drawn by an old nag, wherein plays a comedy band. Following, a long-legged youth on a kiddie car, a man in a wheelbarrow, another on an old-fashioned high-wheel bicycle, a perambulator, a tricycle, a go-cart; in fact any number of vehicles, the more grotesque the better.

Keep Three Scenarios Ahead of Production

According to a system recently inaugurated at the Hallroom Boys Comedies studio, three completed scenarios ahead of production schedule are always on hand.

This new method is, he declares, preferable for several reasons, one of the chief ones being that the title and a working idea of what the story is to be may be sent East to the New York offices well in advance of the picture, so that exploitation and publicity may be planned ahead of time.

Vitagraph Serial Star a Thrill Maker

Bearing evidence of her battle with a black bear near the close of the seventh episode of "Breaking Through," Carmel Myers has returned to Vitagraph's Hollywood studio for some special interiors. Except for the very opening episodes planting the characters and the plot, this new Vitagraph serial has been exceptionally free from interior scenes.

Vitagraph's new serial is pleasing exhibitors, judging from the reports received on the early episodes which are now running.

"The Son of Wallingford" a Winner

VITAGRAPH has another special that lives up to the meaning of that much-abused word. "The Son of Wallingford" as a screen play has about everything the showman wants.

It was written, directed, subtitled, and edited by Mr. and Mrs. George Randolph Chester, noted writers of short stories, and the authors of the "Get Rich Quick Wallingford" stories which had quite a vogue in the Saturday Evening Post.

The authors bring to the screen the lovable characters made famous in their stories. They call this the one hundred and fifth and it is a worthy successor to the others.

The story is straightforward and full of dramatic possibilities which are fully realized. The many unique stunts which are essential to the plot are well handled. The element of natural humor which runs through the eight reels is an integral part of the picture. The many intricate situations at the climax of the story are well handled. Everybody should be satisfied. It is a splendid piece of work.

All of the well-remembered characters of the Chester stories are here: Big-hearted, jolly J. Rufus Wallingford, "Blackie" Daw, suave and lean; Old "honest" Henry Beegoode, and his son Bert; Violet Bonnie Daw, "Blackie's" wife, and Mrs. J. Rufus. Then there is "Toad" Jessup, Talbot Curtis, Mrs. Curtis, Mary, and last but not least, Jimmy Wallingford, who inherits his father's iobeless ears and many of his mannerisms.

The really clever continuity allows the tale to be told with absolute clearness. It is a special production in every way, in genuine appeal, grip and humanness.

The astute exhibitor should not overlook its possibilities for effective exploitation. There is the circus parade, which J. Rufus stages to further his land-selling scheme; the endeavor of Jimmy to drill an oil well and win the hand of an honest farmer's daughter; the rescue of Jimmy and Mary from the oil-covered pond, all present unusual opportun ties for advertising. And it is a picture that will fulfill every promise of a high-class, successful offering.

The acting on the whole is splend'd. Tom Gallery in the role of Jimmy distinguishes himself. Wilfrid North as Wallingford, Sr., is the exact type of the Chester stories, and George Webb's carefully drawn portrayal of "Blackie" Daw is remarkably true to life. Antrim Short is effective as "Toad" Jessup, and the pair of skin-flints, Henry Beegoode and his son Bertram, were in excellent hands as played by Van Dyke Brooke and Sydney D'Albrook respectively. Florence Hart plays Mrs. J. Rufus, Lyla Leslie is Violet Bonnie, Priscilla Bonner, a pretty and demure Mary Curtis. Martha Mattox is Mrs. Curtis, and Andrew Arbuckle, that fine old actor, is Talbot Curtis.

The story revolves around Jimmy Wallingford's and "Toad" Jessup's efforts to ea n an honest living apart from the influences of J. Rufus and "Blackie" Daw. They go to a distant village and "Toad" discovers oil on Talbot Curt's' farm. They form a company, the Big Hope Oil Company, Inc., and start to drill. After spending all their available cash—$800—they decide to sell their automobile. Mrs. Wallingford buys it and with the renewed finances they continue operations. Unknown to Jimmy, however, J. Rufus Wallingford and "Blackie" Daw hit the same town, buy up a piece of land and start to promote a manufacturing centre. This is a unique piece of business where they erect a huge canvas drop picturing a dozen factories with smoke pouring from every canvas chimney, as a graphic illustration of what the finished product will look like. When they discover they have encroached on Jimmy's preserves, they allow the land scheme to die a natural death. They continue operations on the land, however, and pipe oil to an empty shed through an abandoned gas line from some oil cars stationed five miles distant.

THE CAST

J. Rufus Wallingford	Wilfrid North
Blackie Daw	George Webb
Jimmy Wallingford	Tom Gallery
"Toad" Jessup	Antrim Short
Henry Beegoode	Van Dyke Brooke
Bertram Beegoode	Sydney D'Albrook
Mrs. J. Rufus Wallingford	Florence Hart
Violet Bonnie Daw	Lyla Leslie
Mary Curtis	Priscilla Bonner
Emily Curtis	Martha Mattox
Talbot Curtis	Andrew Arbuckle

A leak in the pipe line floods Jimmy's land, and his well begins to "spout." "Blackie" and J. Rufus work diligently to stir up interest in their scheme, thinking they have the bill of sale in their possession, but in reality it is stolen by a pair of bootleggers and buried in the sand in the pump house. When J. Rufus refuses to sell an interest in the land, the angry townspeople turn to the former owner, Henry Beegoode, and he does a thriving business re-selling the property. J. Rufus turns the tables on Beegoode, however, when the bogus oil well catches fire and the thoroughly incensed citizens realize they have been duped. At the height of the excitement the Big Hope Oil company's oil well spouts forth real oil and everything looks rosy for Mary and Jimmy.

The feature is in eight reels, but so smoothly does the story run it seems like five. The story grips one from the first few feet to the end. It is drama of the best type and we recommend it without hesitation.—J. R. M.

"Mother O'Mine" Scoring

Plays to Big Business When Shown Simultaneously in Four Big Cities

"MOTHER O' MINE," the Thomas H. Ince melodrama, hung up some new records for itself as a box office attraction last week with simultaneous runs in four large cities of the East and Central West.

Indianapolis, Cincinnati, Washington and Pittsburgh gave the sensational Ince success the same enthusiastic reception that it received in New York, Minneapolis, Seattle, Los Angeles and San Francisco upon first presentation a few weeks ago in those cities.

During the first week of its distribution through First National exchanges following transfer of the Ince productions, "Mother O' Mine" played Gift's Cincinnati as the opening attraction for the fall season; the Alhambra at Indianapolis, Tom Moore's Rialto at Washington, and both the Regent and the Blackstone, Pittsburgh, Pa.

It proved such a successful attraction at Gift's that it was early in the week, booked for a second seven days despite a previous booking for that week. The Cincinnati Times-Star says that it "is one of those productions that the public will not permit to come and go with only one week's showing, therefore McMahon and Jackson have billed it again. It played to capacity crowds and bids fair to run into record attendance again."

"Mother o' Mine" is a fast-action melodrama, made by Thomas H. Ince with a cast including Lloyd Hughes, Betty Ross Clark, Joseph Kilgour, Claire McDowell and Betty Blythe.

Variety of Subject Appeal

Diversity of Ass'd. Exhib. Attractions Has Won Exhibitor's Favor

JOHN E. STOREY, sales manager of Associated Exhibitors, Inc., said last week that the policy of releasing the Playgoers Pictures features on the basis of three a month had been successfully launched, and that reports from his branch sales managers indicated that the diversity of these attractions is the basic reason for the popularity of the arrangement with the exhibitors.

He further stated that it is the purpose of Associated to keep the nature of the Playgoers features totally different, so that in no individual month will there be three "westerns" or three "society dramas," but each one will have the elements of amusement value which are attractive to various classes of patronage.

"Starting with 'Home Keeping Hearts,' said Mr. Storey, "Playgoers offered to the exhibitors a beautiful rural American drama reminiscent of the successful old stage productions of this class. Its reception has been very satisfactory, and we are well pleased with the progress it has made to date. Then came 'The Family Closet,' basically a mystery story, built around the old saying that every family has a skeleton in its closet. This feature found a ready market because of its wonderful surprise ending.

"Next in order we released J. P. McGowan in 'Discontented Wives,' a smashing good Western feature with an appeal which reaches the heart of everyone.

"So you see, that judging by these three alone, we have made good on our promise to keep the Playgoers releases different, and judging by the very nice increase in bookings of the Playgoers features on the basis of three a month, we are satisfied that the merit of our policy has been recognized by the exhibitors throughout the country."

Players in "A Man's Home" Qualify as All Star Cast by Past Records

IN a statement issued from the Selznick headquarters during the week, it is pointed out that the expression "all star cast" is very often not at all accurately descriptive of the players found in the picture. The expression as applied to the new Selznick production, "A Man's Home," is declared by the Selznick office to be absolutely justified. "Anyone with a knowledge of pictures" says the Selznick statement, "will be at once familiar with the names and work of the leaders in 'A Man's Home' cast.

Sees "Wallingford" Succes

President Smith, of Vitagraph, Enthused by Chester Production

UPON his return from Canada a few days ago, Albert E. Smith, president of Vitagraph, spent a good part of one day seeing pictures which had been completed in his absence. Vitagraph's production department has never been more active than at the present time.

One of the most enjoyable hour and three-quarters spent by Mr. Smith during the past week was a period in one of his studio projection rooms when he saw George Randolph Chester's special production, "The Son of Wallingford." Immediately after seeing the final print of "The Son of Wallingford" last week, Mr. Smith sent the following telegram to everyone of Vitagraph's twenty-eight branch office managers.

"I have just seen our newest a biggest special, 'The Son of Wa ingford' and want to give you opinion on it. I have seen t picture repeatedly in varic lengths, but in its present form think it is one of the most ent taining pictures I have ever se Your prints have been shipped, a you will have the same opini after you have had this pict screened. As soon as your pri arrive, have one screened for yo entire force, not only salesmen, every single employe. You have picture to be proud of here. Y are getting more prints on t special than on any previous Vi graph special, because the picture worth it."

RARE OPPORTUNITY FOR BUYERS AND SELLERS

Prologue for Pola Negri Film

Special Prizma Subject Prepared by First National

CONVINCED that in "One Arabian Night," with Pola Negri and Ernst Lubitsch, its producer, in the principal roles, it has a sensational novelty, Associated First National has gone in for novelty advertising and exploitation material to put the production across with the public.

Besides a full line of posters, including a twenty-four, six, two, threes and two ones, the company is putting out two styles of lobby display, one in four colors, the other in two colors, and a special art one sheet in seven colors.

The most novel unit and the one on which more money was spent than is usual for material intended for free use of exhibitors is a "Prizma Prologue," a story of Oriental Wardrobe entitled, "The Harem Bride's Trousseau." This is a new angle in advance exploitation for a production and probably the forerunner of a changing style in screen publicity for attractions.

"The Harem Bride's Trousseau," according to information from a private source, cost First National more than a thousand dollars for material and making of costumes, the former including radiant silks, satins, cloth of silver, crepes, veilings and beaded work.

The prologue, which is intended to be shown on the screens of theatres two weeks before the opening date of "One Arabian Night," gives an advance idea of the costumes that are worn by Pola Negri and the other women in the Lubitsch production. Miss Evelyn Napier, a New York model, posed for the Prizma prologue, the picture being directed by Kendall Evans, the famous Los Angeles photographer who recently has turned to specialization in art stills and portraits. Special sets were built for the occasion.

A scene from the special Prizma Prologue picture prepared by First National for its Pola Negri attraction, "One Arabian Night"

Half a dozen different costumes, including the "bridal," "state," "Robe Nuptial" and "Robe du Nuit," are worn in the picture, and all are done in the rich Prizma process colors.

The original intention of First National in making the Prizma feature, which is 370 feet long, was to have it shown a fortnight in advance of opening date for "One Arabian Night," to be followed the next week with a trailer made up of scenes from the production. But the Prizma "interest-reel" turned out such a thing of beauty the suggestion is now offered that exhibitors, by a slight change in titles, may use it as part of an acted or singing prologue, immediately preceding the start of the big feature, because the richness of the colors in the costumes gives to the main story an added atmospheric value.

First National announces that prints of the Prizma Prologue will be available in all exchanges within the next two weeks, so that first run theatres booking the Negri-Lubitsch production for the immediate future may get the novelty in plenty of time to introduce the coming feature to their audiences.

Woody Back From Coast Lauds Realart Films

J. S. WOODY, general manager of Realart Pictures Corporation, just returned to the East from the Coast, speaks enthusiastically of Bebe Daniels's and May McAvoy's new productions for Realart. In a telegram received at the Realart home office in advance of his return., Mr. Woody said:

"Reviewed 'Speed Girl' yesterday and 'Morals' today. Former eclipses all other Daniels pictures and latter is a McAvoy triumph."

"The Speed Girl" is the next Bebe Daniels feature, scenarized from an original story by Elmer Harris, and was directed by Major Maurice Campbell. "Morals," starring May McAvoy, is an adaptation of "The Morals of Marcus Ordeyne," which was written by Edward Locke, the noted author. This book was one of Locke's most popular novels, its sales necessitating the printing of several issues. "Morals" was directed by William D. Taylor.

"Queenie" with Shirley Mason Set for Oct.

Shirley Mason is said to have an unusually excellent vehicle in "Queenie," an early October release by Fox. The story, by Wilfinley Fauley, was adapted for screen by Dorothy Yost with special regard for the Fox star. Ward M. Mitchell directed the production at the Fox West Coast studios.

The various changes of condition and of mood in the life of Queenie provide Miss Mason with especially good opportunities for display of her versatility and her faculty of making almost any type of garb appear distinctive and becoming.

The star is supported by George Hackathorne, Wilson Hummel, Aggie Herring, Lydia Titus, Adolph Menjou and Clarissa Selwynne.

Zierler Buys Hines Feature

FOLLOWING closely upon the decision of Charles C. Burr, president of Affiliated Distributors, Inc., and the sponsors of "Burn 'Em Up, Barnes," the whirlwind romantic comedy in which Johnny Hines amusingly frolics through his initial feature production, to distribute this offering in the independent market, comes the announcement of concrete achievement on the part of Affiliated's sales force.

It is reported that the week's activities on the part of this division of Affiliated Distributors, Inc., have resulted in the successful negotiation of a contract with Sam Zierler, President of the Commonwealth Pictures Corporation of New York City, whereby that organization acquires "Burn 'Em Up, Barnes," for a territory aggregating 17 per cent of the entire country and including Greater New York, New York State and Northern New Jersey. Further, Mr. Zierler is insured by contractual clauses the entire series of Johnny Hines features for the ensuing season.

In commenting on this transaction, characterized as being one of the most important independent film deals of the season, Mr. Zierler said: "I am particularly gratified with the acquisition of Affiliated Distributors series of Johnny Hines feature productions, the first of which, "Burn 'Em Up, Barnes," is a model of clean, wholesome, thoroughly enjoyable entertainment that will go far in establishing Johnny Hines as a star of the same magnitude in feature offerings as he has long been in short subjects."

"Immediately after the screening of 'Burn 'Em Up, Barnes,' I made the statement, without the fear of successful contradiction and which I now repeat that, in my judgment, 'Burn Em Up, Barnes,' is the finest photographed, fastest moving and mast entertaining independent production I have ever seen. So fast is the action and so absorbing is the story in its unfoldment that I was unable to correctly estimate its footage. It seemed all too short. It is my intention to devise, in conjunction with the producer, a most ambitious exploitation compaign for 'Burn 'Em Up, Barnes,' and this plan will be skilfully executed by a special force of field representatives."

Beyond the brief confirmation of the disposal of the territorial rights to Mr. Zierler, Charles C. Burr, the producer, made no other comment save that he was mightily pleased with the entire arrangement.

Hampton Vehicle Opens Theatre

"Star Dust," Hope Hampton's latest starring vehicle for Associated First National, has been selected as the opening attraction for Col. Fred Levy's new Louisville theatre, the week of October 9.

This will mark the initial public presentation of "Star Dust," an event in itself, but additional interest for Louisville is the announcement that the star, Miss Hampton, will appear in person at the opening.

"Miss Hampton is a big favorite all through the South," said Col. Levy, "and I could not have secured a more popular star for our opening feature, added to this the appearance of Miss Hampton in person and I'll venture the prediction that Fourth street will assume a Broadway air during the inaugural festivities."

Endorses First Nat'l Stars

Have Proved to Be Biggest Drawing Cards in His Town, Says Exhibitor

"FIRST NATIONAL has the greatest drawing stars on its lists of any film distributing agency in the nation today."

This is the statement of B. F. Brentlinger, manager of the Victory theatre of Evansville, Ind., as quoted in a statement just received from the First National home-office.

"But, more it is the admission of other theatre men in Evansville who look with envy on the array of stars that First National offers since Associated Producers have signed up for distribution of their products," continues the First National statement.

"Constance Talmadge is the biggest drawing star that can be offered to Evansville theatre-goers. This has been established time after time here and was demonstrated effectually when Wedding Bells broke all box office records in Evansville as well as smashing all attendance records.

"In male stars Charles Ray has come to be among the leaders with Evansville audiences. Next to Constance Talmadge Anita Stewart seems to be the choice of Evansville motion picture audiences. Mary Pickford is a favorite but seems to have lost some of the early popularity which crowded theatres here.

"While he says he is satisfied with his present service from Goldwyn and other producers, Charles Sweeton of the Majestic Theatre is fair and admits the drawing power of the First National galaxy of stars.

"It is a grand array of stars and a great variety of tales that First National gives in its productions, he admits."

"Jungle" Picture in Demand

Martin Johnson's Film Arouses Deepest Interest Here and Abroad

UNUSUALLY keen interest has been aroused by Martin Johnson's "Jungle Adventures," the initial production of the Exceptional Pictures Corporation, which recently played a successful pre-release engagement at the Capitol theatre, New York City, receiving high praise from the metropolitan critics.

Telegrams and letters from exhibitors in every section of the United States are being received at the offices of Exceptional Pictures requesting information regarding this unusual feature production and expressing the desire to book it at an early date.

It is understood that several of the largest national distributors have been in consultation with Alexander Beyfuss, vice president and general manager of Exceptional Pictures Corporation, at the present time, with the object of securing "Jungle Adventures" for release.

It is also known that the majority of the representative state rights exchanges are desirous of obtaining this production for that market and several of them have sent executives to New York with the view to purchasing it for their territory. Mr. Beyfuss has under consideration offers for the greater portion of the United States and Canada.

In addition to the domestic field, Martin Johnson's "Jungle Adventures" is also in demand among the foreign countries.

This has already been proved by the inquiries received for terms for practically every buying country in Europe. The inquiries include among numerous letters, two cables from London and one from Paris. Such continental buyers as have representatives in New York are already in consultation with Alexander Beyfuss.

"Anatol" Smashing Record

DeMille's All-Star Production Has Huge, Country-Wide Success

WITH the arrival of the release date, September 25, and the automatic termination of the pre-release showings in New York, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Washington, Portland and other cities, Cecil B. De Mille's "The Affairs of Anatol" was ushered into a career of record-breaking. That is the statement issued from the Paramount offices and a big batch of telegrams from exhibitors is offered to back it up.

Following are brief excerpts from some of the telegrams received by S. R. Kent, general manaer of distribution, on Monday last: Frank L. Newman, Newman theatre, Kansas City, Mo.: "Congratulations. 'Anatol' showed to over ten thousand people Sunday. They fought like mad to get in. Broke all previous records by approximately two thousand paid admissions. A triumph."

L. W. Carroll, Rialto theatre, New Haven, Conn.: "'Anatol' opened yesterday to biggest crowds in history of Rialto, breaking all box office records by wide margin. In spite of rainy weather crowds stood in line long before opening. Consider 'Anatol' greatest box office attraction ever made."

C. W. Deibel, Liberty theatre, Youngstown, O.: "'Affairs of Anatol' opened to greatest business in history of Liberty theatre. Thousands turned away. Congratulations to all responsible for this wonderful attraction."

John A. Schwalm, Jefferson theatre, Hamilton, O.: "'Anatol' proved most successful opening of any picture shown in our theatre. Everyone pleased."

George Fenberg, Auditorium theatre, Newark, O.: "'Affairs of Anatol' opened to tremendous b iness and I look for record-bre ing week. Congratulations."

Allan S. Moritz, Paramount change manager, Buffalo, N. "'Anatol' opened today and d at four theatres, Hippodro Criterion, North Park and Co Street to most phenomenal busin ever seen here. This is first ti a feature or even a comedy ever played this number of t atres at the same time. Impossi to have played to more people.

Shea Amusement Co., Buff N. Y.: "Business for 'The Aff of Anatol' tremendous. It is biggest box office attraction have played this year. They ca early and stayed late."

Botzum Bros., Orpheum thea Akron, O.: "Congratulatic 'Affairs of Anatol' opened here Orpheum theatre to capacity b ness. All previous records for tendance and receipts broken. F rons enthused. Sure is a kno out."

Phil Gleichman, Broadw Strand, Detroit, Mich.: "Wit thousand dollars smaller adver ing expenditure, 'Anatol' smas house record held by 'Hun esque.' In view of the fact ' moresque' opened on Labor and at same scale of prices, I d this a wonderful tribute to y entire organization."

Oliver Kehrlein, New Fran theatre, Oakland, Cal.: "Unhe of business with 'Affairs of A tol.' Holding them out from P. M. till after ten, a feat n before seen in Oakland. Only gret we didn't have two thous more seats. Expect to run i month."

Eight Goldwyn Releas

Second Group of Fifth Year Product Now Ready for Exchanges

EIGHT pictures are included in the second group of its fifth year product, soon to be relased by Goldwyn Pictures Corporation. Prints of all of the films are in the twenty-two Goldwyn branch exchanges.

The group consists of "Poverty of Riches," Will Rogers in "A Poor Relation," Tom Moore in "From the Ground Up," Max Linder in "Be My Wife," "The Grim Comedian," "The Night Rose," with Lon Chaney; "The Man from Lost River," with House Peters, and Vivian Martin in "Pardon My French." These photoplays embrace a wide variety of subjects and treatment.

"Poverty of Riches," written by Leroy Scott and directed by Reginald Barker, is a powerful drama of thwarted motherhood. Will Rogers has a great role as the poverty-stricken inventor; Noah Vale in "A Poor Relation," adapted from Edward E. Kidder's famous stage comedy.

Tom Moore has been fitted to perfection by Rupert Hughes in his new comedy of an Irish immigrant who rises from ditch-di to builder and contractor. Mason Hopper directed. Linder has another of his orig and irresistible comedies in My Wife," written and directe the star himself, distributed Goldwyn. Vivian Martin ha whirlwind farce-comedy in don My French," from E Childs Carpenter's story of " in the Pantry." This is a M more Kendall production, dire by Sidney Olcott.

New Fox Office Opened in Switzerland

ANNOUNCEMENT of the opening of an exchange in Geneva, Switzerland, is made by Fox Film Corporation. Winfield R. Sheehan, general manager of Fox Film Corporation, when last in Europe, was the recipient of many requests for the establishment of this exchange.

The new exchange is at No. 1 Rue du Commerce, Geneva, and is under the management of J. M. Boimond, a man widely known and well liked in motion picture circles throughout the country. It will form the distributing base for all Switzerland.

Such pictures as "Over the Hill," "A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court," "Queen of Sheba" and the other Fox super-specials will be placed through the Geneva exchange.

Two scenes from Thomas H. Ince's production, "Hail the Woman," a First National attraction

"Hail the Women" Completed

Ince Drama Scheduled for Fall Release by First National

ANNOUNCEMENT came this week from the studios of Thomas H. Ince at Culver City of the completion of "Hail the Woman," the big Ince drama which is scheduled for release late in the fall as a First National attraction.

Built on a broad and absorbing theme depicting a new phase and appreciation of the economic womanhood, "Hail the Woman" is pronounced by Mr. Ince to be the greatest production that has ever come from his studios.

C. Gardner Sullivan, the celebrated writer who is a member of the Ince literary staff, wrote the story and it was placed in production under the direction of John Griffith Wray whose genius has been manifest in some of the more recent of the Thomas H. Ince screen successes.

The story is distinctly American. It is a drama of real people. Its background is the harsh New England hills, and into the characters Mr. Sullivan has built the moral severity of a New England village. It is a story of New York as well, contrasting the coldness of New England's rugged countryside with the warmth of the city's skyscrapers.

Fundamentally "Hail the Woman" is a drama of American life. It pictures the vigorous manhood, and the meek womanhood of the generation past with the new type of manhood and the independent womanhood of the new generation. It portrays the slowness of the rural communities in their adjustment to new conditions, and the more rapid assimilation of the new order of things among the people of the larger centers.

It is a drama of woman's progress, not sermonized, but subtly told by contrast and dramatic development.

It is filled with big situations, such situations as have been revealed under the master craftsmanship of Ince in his great screen successes. The climax in the tiny church in Vermont, and a Christmas scene in a New York orphanage are declared to be tremendous in their human appeal.

To portray the roles of "Hail the Woman," Mr. Ince chose Lloyd Hughes, Florence Vidor, Theodore Roberts, Gertrude Clair, Madge Bellamy, Tully Marshall, Vernon Dent, Edward Martindel, Charles Meredith, Eugenia Hoffman and Mathilde Brundage, every one a player of note.

Nation Wide Business Boom

Only a Few Districts Where Poor Conditions Persist, Says Ginsburg

EXCEPT for two or three very limited districts where local business conditions are still unfavorable, the motion picture industry is showing very spirited activity all over the country. This is the cheering message brought back by Henry Ginsberg, domestic sales director for Educational Film Exchanges, after a trip of four weeks visiting branch exchanges as far west as Omaha.

While discussing conditions as he found them on his trip, Mr. Ginsberg showed that business done by Educational during four weeks in September showed an increase of 75 per cent over the business done during the corresponding four weeks last year.

"Last year," said Mr. Ginsberg, "we were new in the field, and many exhibitors in contracting for our product felt that they were really buying an unknown quantity. We have demonstrated most forcibly the wisdom of their judgment in placing faith in us—for we have kept faith—and the results now that our new year's products are being contracted for give striking evidence of this fact.

"The short subject, too, is certainly holding a place of importance in the exhibitor's calculations that it did not occupy at this time last year. Many exhibitors, I found, are voluntarily giving programs consisting entirely of short reel subjects."

Several changes in the Educational organization were instituted by Mr. Ginsberg on his tour, the most significant of them being the opening of a new and bigger branch exchange in Kansas City, under a new corporation. The branches conducted by the Educational Film Exchange of Iowa and the Educational Film Exchange of Missouri were closed, and on September 18 Mr. Ginsberg opened a better equipped branch in the Film Building, which will be under the management of H. E. Schiller, formerly a salesman for Educational in Kansas City. The new branch will be known as the Midwest Educational Film Exchange, Inc.

Mr. Ginsberg also introduced Joseph Koliski as the new manager of the Pittsburg branch, and A. Kahn as manager at Des Moines.

Branches all the way from Pittsburg to Omaha were visited by Mr. Ginsberg, who spent much of his time, however, with the exhibitors in the key cities.

Arrow Film Issues Exhibitor Aids

Two valuable exhibitor aids have been issued by the Arrow Film Corporation this week. One is a very complete and comprehensive press book on the first Grace Davison feature, "Love, Hate and a Woman," and the other is a little sales book on the new Arrow Comedy Franchise listing the producing units and the stars, and directors and producers of four companies making the 52 comedies covered by the Franchise. While this book is not a press book in the accepted sense of the word, it will prove valuable to both exchanges and exhibitors.

Spectacular Air Attack on Warship Is Shown

The air-bombing of the obsolete warship Alabama pictured in Pathe News, current issue No. 78, furnishes the motion picture screen with several of the most startling views ever presented to the public. Army planes, equipped with giant bombs weighing from 100 to 300 pounds loaded with TNT, are seen in battle action. The most spectacular display is made by a phosphorus bomb exploding above the Alabama and completely hiding it under a mountainous greyish-white "smoke screen." Finally, there is a close-up of the sinking vessel, its deck works all a mass of twisted iron and steel.

Hitchcock and Normand in Screen Snapshots

No less celebrities than Raymond Hitchcock, the famous comedian, and Mabel Normand, the popular comedienne, are the "headliners" in the next issue of Screen Snapshots, the "fan" news reel.

Mr. Hitchcock and Miss Normand have a special Sunday for Screen Snapshots, when a cameraman and director from Mr. Cohn's staff spent the day, at Mr. Hitchcock's invitation, at his country estate on Long Island, where Miss Normand was a guest.

Jess Smith Expanding

The Jess Smith Motion Picture Enterprises have taken over larger and more spacious offices at the same address at 114 West Forty-fourth Street. Mr. Smith has also opened a foreign branch in Paris at 6 Rue de la Paix under the supervision of M. Mercanton. He is also affiliated with Miss Grace Inglis at 6324 Hollywood Boulevard, Los Angeles, Cal. Miss Inglis was formerly associated with Willia and Inglis of that city.

A technical department has also been added to the New York office under the supervision of A. Bela Viragh-Flower.

W. J. Film Names Release

Big Independent Program Headed by King's "The Road to Arcady"

OPENING their fall campaign with a new Society Drama Series of four high-class productions of a very special nature and promising an output of important pictures for the independent market during the coming year that will be of unusual interest to state rights buying exchanges, J. W. Film Corporation announces as their initial offering a Burton King production, entitled, "The Road to Arcady." The new King feature is the first of the Society Drama Series, all four of which will be announced and released in rapid succession and sold either as a series or singly, as the conditions in the different territories may warrant.

The story of Burton King's contribution to the Society Drama Series is laid in New York's famous Four Hundred, and gives many opportunities for elaborate stage settings and beautiful gowns. The plot of "The Road to Arcady" deals with an interesting angle of the question of whether a young girl's sense of filial duty is as strong as her love for a man. The question is complicated because the lovely daughter learns that both the financial status and social prestige of her parents are tottering. Her choice is made tragic because it is influenced by deliberate deception and the climax is said to be not only unusual, but astounding.

The selection of "The Road to Arcady" to introduce the series was prompted, according to E. S. Manheimer, of J. W. Film Corporation, by a desire to give as clear an idea as possible of the type of production of which the set will be composed. Mr. Manheimer feels that there is a real need of high-class, dignified pictures for the independent market to enable the state rights exchanges to meet the demands of the best theatres in their territories. He is endeavoring to supply productions that not only allow for elaborate presentations, but have exceptional advertising possibilities.

Critics Praise "Judgment"

World Film's Big Historical Drama Has Notable Reception

MILTON C. WORK, president of the World Film Corporation, is the authority for the statement that his organization's big spectacular drama, "Judgment," recently announced for the independent market, has received the most unusual tributes from every reviewer in the trade paper field. The consensus of the opinions of all the blase critics corralled by World Film to witness one of the first showings of the production is that "Judgment" is one of the really big pictures of the year, admirably produced and directed and with a remarkably interesting and dramatic story. One reviewer even goes so far as to say that this is the finest European production brought to these shores to date and declares that it should shatter box office records.

"Judgment" is from Victor Hugo's drama, "Mary Tudor," and the role of Mary is in the hands of a newcomer to the American screen, Ellen Richter. Critics declare Miss Richter to be a star who will electrify the country as did Pola Negri, according to a statement from the World offices, and her portrayal of Queen Mary is said to be unequalled for its reality and dignity.

"Judgment" is one of the World's biggest offerings for the fall, to the independent market and this organization, though one of the pioneer film concerns of the industry, has stepped into the ranks of the most important distributors of features almost overnight. Its second big production, "Suspicious Wives," starring Mollie King, is proving one of the big successes of the year, it is said, and territories are selling fast on this offering. Other new pictures being distributed by World, are the five dramas featuring Joe Moore and Eileen Sedgwick and the latest of these productions to be released is a drama of the Canadian Northwest Mounted, entitled, "Arrest Norma MacGregor."

To Distribute Urban Product in Canada

Contractual arrangements have been completed between the Kineto Company of America, Inc. and Charles L. Stephenson, of 28½ Adelaide St., East, Toronto, Canada, whereby the latter secures distribution rights in Canada and Newfoundland for the Kineto Reviews and Charles Urban's Movie Chats.

Clark Cornelius to Release 24 Pictures

Fisher, the general manager of the company plans to successfully establish the program of the Associated Photo Plays, Inc., which, for the year consists of twenty-one pictures, the latest addition to which is a series of five Chester Bennett productions, starring Jane Novak in five big north woods stories.

PATHÉ PRESENTS

GUY de MAUPASSANT'S CLASSIC

THE ORDERLY

The girl whose heart was wayward, but whose life was not

Three men loved her; only one had the right.

Three men sought her, she sought but one. One man triumphed; who was it, the rat-faced, sneaky orderly, the handsome young officer or the distinguished soldier, her husband?

What was her confession? Who did she confess to? Why did she confess, since the confession proved that though her heart was wayward, her character was not?

De Maupassant's famous story, most ably interpreted in De Maupassant's own country.

Pathé Review

Pathé Review No. 120

(One Reel Subject—Released Through Pathé Exchanges)

There are some queer looking fish in this world. Pathé shows some underwater scenes in this Review to prove it. One looks like a Woolworth flowerpot and another like a dish of spaghetti. Next comes an interesting study of the cork-making process. Views are shown from the time the cork bark arrives at the factory, until they are ready to ship. The titler has nobly resisted the temptation to crack a prohibition joke in regard to the present small demand for them.

Other sequences include "The Cliff Road to Switzerland," which, in Pathé color, gives a fair presentation of the wonderful beauties of Lake Lucerne. Robert Aitken, N. A., a famous sculptor, is seen at work, and marble cutting and moulding with clay will be interesting sights for the uninitiated. Some slow motion scenes show animals running, ducks fluttering and whips snapping. It is a diversified and thoroughly interesting reel.—Matthew A. Taylor, M. P. News.

Pathé Review No. 119

Type of production.....1 reel magazine

Harpooning a large porpoise is the most exciting section of this single reel magazine. The porpoise or sea-pig, as he is commonly called, is speared from a small launch off the Florida coast. Lord Waldorf Astor is seen in overalls and is a member of the fishing party. The slow motion section of this reel is made up of views showing several aesthetic styles of dancing. The flexible and gliding movements are shown both in normal and reduced speed. The comedy section records scenes in New York's Bohemia, Greenwich Village. Several restaurants, streets and shops are recorded. Short-haired girls and long-haired gentlemen are cartooned by the artist and then brought into motion in real life. The hand-colored part of this varied magazine shows views in Altdorf, Switzerland, the little town made famous by William Tell and the apple. Lake Lucerne and the mountains and valleys in this section of the Alps made renowned by the Swiss hero, William Tell, are also shown. As a whole this is a varied and entertaining number of Pathé Review far above the average in interest and entertaining value.—Wids.

A film magazine that delivers, 100%

It thoroughly satisfies the strictest requirements of the highest class house. It builds prestige for the others.

It is diversified, novel, original, clean and instructive.

It shows in one reel what people like to see and teaches them what they want to know.

Arrow Feature to be Sensation

ARROW FILM CORPORATION, in making its preliminary announcements of "Ten Nights in a Bar Room," finds an astonishingly wide volume of interest excited thereby. Old showmen, experienced theatregoers, literary men, prohibition advocates, temperance reformers, exchangemen, exhibitors, as well as a large number of the public have sent in innumerable communications to the Arrow offices approving of the action of the corporation in undertaking the distribution of the picture. The feeling in the Arrow offices is unanimous on the point that one of the most popular motion picture productions of all time is about to be offered to the public.

The reputation of "Ten Nights in a Bar Room" is as solid as the rock of Gibraltar. Dr. W. E. Shallenberger, president of Arrow, points out that "Ten Nights in a Bar Room" is a great human interest drama now made into a motion picture production. As novel and play it has a world-wide reputation. For fifty years it has been known to the public, many millions have read the book; many millions have seen the play.

"Ten Nights in a Bar-room" is Arousing Wide Interest

"Perfectly produced and well acted by an all star cast," states Arrow, "there is no doubt that 'Ten Nights in a Bar Room' is capable of making a deep impression in people's mind wherever it is shown. Neither time nor money, and no effort was spared by all concerned in the making of the picture to ensure the presentation of an undeniably great attraction to the public.

"'Ten Nights in a Bar Room' is a literary and dramatic classic, and takes rank as one of the most startling triumphs ever shown on the screen.

"Sensation vies with human interest in unfolding a wonderfully powerful story, in which all who follow it cannot fail to be profoundly interested.

"The Sheaf and Sickle Inn is opened at Cedarville with literally a great flourish of trumpets by Simon Slade. It is not long before Joe Morgan, of the Cedarville mill falls a victim to the allurements of the saloon, and his downward progress is hastened by Slade and his fellow conspirator, Harvey Green, who between them rob Morgan of his mill. In a quarrel between Morgan and Slade, Morgan's little daughter is killed. Morgan ultimately reforms and there is a probability of happiness between him and his much-suffering wife.

"The Sheaf and Sickle is burned and stern justice is meted out to Slade and Green. Slade loses his life on the rapids and Green is disposed of in the fire.

"There are what are technically known as many mob scenes in the production and these crowds are handled with great skill and dramatic effect. The individual members of the cast do splendid work.

"Summing up these qualities," concludes Dr. Shallenberger, "we feel that in 'Ten Nights in a Bar Room' we have the greatest winner in our history. It is one of those Arrows that will go straight to the mark.

"Beggar Maid" Launches Series

IT is not often that a two-reel subject awakens more than passing comment in the Broadway motion picture house, but the exception arrived at the Rivoli last week and was carried over for another week at the Rialto—"The Beggar Maid," a picturization of the Burne-Jones masterpiece now hanging in the Tait Gallery, London.

"The Beggar Maid" reaches the screen through the Hodkinson Corporation. It was produced by Triart Films, headed by Isaac Welper, who gave us "The Miracle Man," and was taken under the direction of Herbert Blanche and Lejaren A. Hiller. The title part is played by Mary Astor, who, although not yet sixteen years of age, gives promise of mounting to stellar heights with almost meteoric speed.

So impressed was Hugo Reisenfeld with this short subject that he put on a special prologue for it, consisting of a duet in an old garden, followed by the recital of Tennyson's poem of the same name, on which Sir Edward Burne-Jones based his famous painting. This is the first instance of a two-reel picture being accorded the honor of a prologue at a Broadway theatre.

Back of "The Beggar Maid" is the most ambitious plan thus far attempted to humanize the great paintings of all ages and at the same time preserve to the utmost the entertainment values so necessary to a successful presentation on the screen. Twelve paintings in all will be picturized and they are to be chosen by an advisory board, made up of the leading art patrons and authorities of the day.

This board has thus far chosen "The Bashful Suitor," by Israels; "The Young Painter," by Rembrandt, and "Mona Lisa," by Leonardo da Vinci to follow "The Beggar Maid."

Picturization of Masterpiece Opens in N. Y. Theatre

"Subjects of this kind," said Mr. Hodkinson, "will do more to answer the insistent demand for better pictures on the part of both press and public alike, than all the promises producers can make. Until this series came along, the masses had to look to indifferently done reproductions for their conception of the masterpieces of art. Here, on the screen, they witness the actual moving impulses back of the painting. They see the artist at work on it, and follow every stroke of the brush in a vivid picturization of his subject. Whether or not the public likes this sort of picture received a decisive answer in its pre-release showings in New York."

Before "The Beggar Maid" was filmed, a careful scenario was prepared, constructed upon the story of King Cophetua and the legend on which Tennyson based his poem. Burne-Jones is shown in a reverie over a volume of verse, and when his neighbor, a young English earl, bursts into praise of the matchless beauty of the daughter of one of his tenants, the idea of the painting unfolds in the painter's imagination. He seeks out the beautiful peasant girl, and, having obtained her consent to pose as the Beggar Maid promptly enlists the services of the Earl as King Cophetua.

The picture was made on the beautiful Long Island estate of Mr. Tiffany, a member of the advisory board, and so infinitely carefully were the details worked out that it is said 20,000 feet of films were used to get the final 1,600 feet comprising the subject.

Immediate Release for "Parted Curtains"

Warner Brothers announce for immediate release their latest feature production, "Parted Curtains," starring Henry B. Walthall and Mary Alden, the portrayer of the mother love role in "The Old Nest." This production follows in the wake of "Why Girls Leave Home," featuring Anna Q. Nilsson, also distributed by the Warner organization.

The cast supporting Mr. Walthall and Miss Alden includes Margaret Landis, Edward Cecil, Mickey Moore and William Clifford.

Rialto Productions Has One Reel Comedies

Rialto Productions, Inc., have secured the world's rights to twelve one reel sensational comedies. The first of these "Holy Smoke" was screened and immediately booked to be shown at the Rivoli Theatre, starting Sunday, October 2d for an extended run. There are twelve in all and three others were screened without even being titled and on the strength of their novel ingenuity, an agreement was entered into for the showing of them for the three theatres, namely Criterion, Rivoli and Rialto.

One of the engagements will be at the Bowdoin Square Theatre for one week beginning October 16th. All in all there will be about 100 engagements made for her personal appearance.

"PartedCurtains" to Be Warner Release

The latest production to be released by Warner Brothers is "Parted Curtains," featuring Henry B. Walthall and Mary Alden, it is announced. The feature has been booked throughout all the Loew picture theatres.

Mr. Walthall and Miss Alden, who portrayed the mother role in Rupert Hughes' story, "The Old Nest," are supported by a cast which includes Margaret Landis, Mickey Moore, Edward Cecil, Charles Wheelock and William Clifford.

"Heart of North" Has Frisco Premiere

"The Heart of the North," the feature of the Northwest, featuring Roy Stewart with Louise Lovely, which Joe Brandt and George H. Davis produced and are State Righting, was given its first public theatre showing this week when it had its premiere at the Tivoli Theatre, San Francisco. The picture was the feature for the week commencing Sept. 19th.

According to a wire that has just come from the Coast, the picture was a tremendous success.

First of New Goldwyn Series Due Oct. 23

The two series will alternate weekly.

Movie Chats in England

Extraordinary Demand for This Release by Theatres and Schools

CHARLES URBAN, president of the Kineto Company of America, has just received word from the Butcher's Film Service, Ltd., of England, which handles the distribution of the Charles Urban's Movie Chats in the United Kingdom, commenting on the extraordinary demand there for this release.

Butcher's states that the demand exists in many circles outside of the theatres, practically all of which are playing the Movie Chats. The remarkable thing about this widespread demand, they write, is that the non-theatrical demand helps along the theatrical demand and vice versa. People who go to the theatres want to see the Movie Chats in the schools and auditoriums, and people who are not in the habit of going to the movies but do see pictures in the auditoriums, get in the habit of going to the motion picture theatres where the Movie Chats play on account of seeing them in other places.

The popularity of the Movie Chats in the United Kingdom is natural, because the English theatregoing public has been educated on this diet for many years, more than a score of them for Mr. Urban made his world headquarters over there from 1896 to 1917.

Their release in America is now a little more than a year old and in that time they have won a tremendous audience by reason of their interesting information. Every one of them is educational, but in the true sense, which means that they are as highly entertaining as they are instructive.

Selig Serial Is in Demand

Export and Import Announcement Arouses Interest of Independents

UNUSUAL interest in the new animal-jungle serial which Colonel Wm. N. Selig has put into production for the Export & Import Film Company, with whom he recently signed a three-year contract, is being manifested by the nation distributors and especially the independent distributors about the country.

L. Auerbach, vice president of the Export & Import Film Company, Inc., which controls the world's rights to the new chapter-picture feature, admits he was mildly surprised at the great number of inquiries received after the announcement of the closing of the Selig contract.

"Proof of the great faith in which the industry holds Colonel Selig, is manifested by the enormous number of letters we have received regarding the new serial he is making for us. As a pioneer in the motion picture business and as a creator of innumerable box office successes, the name of Selig on a serial today is the same as profit insurance for the men handling his films.

"Colonel Selig has felt the pulse of the public and knows what is being demanded of it. Colonel Selig has never made a failure yet. The reason for this is that he has always catered to the changing desires of the people.

"With the swamping of the picture houses with insipid society dramas and the foisting on the people of the two-reel comedies stretched to five-reel form, the picture appetites of the people have changed. The cycle of desire has returned to adventure films, the short subject packed with action and romance.

"The ordinary serial does not fill this need. It is too sensational too ridiculous and too unreal. The new serial Colonel Selig is making for the Export & Import Film Company is being made to meet the new desires of the picturegoers.

"Within ten days we expect to have a print of the first two episodes in New York and we will then be able to back up our unusual claims for this serial on the screen."

Kineto Company Signs European Contract

A big European contract on short subjects was recently entered into between the Kineto Company of America and the Interest Films, Ltd., of England. The arrangement was made through the David P. Howells organization.

The Interest Films, Ltd., will take a minimum of 52 Kineto Reviews during the year from date of contract. Ralph J. Pugh, of London, is Managing Director of the Interest Films, Ltd. He is carrying on a huge exploitation and publicity campaign among the English exhibitors; a campaign on short subjects that is without parallel in the United Kingdom. His advertising pages in the English trade journals have been exceptional and he has already published a 75 page catalogue in colors, giving a detailed description of the first year's supply of Kineto Reviews for England.

Features Completed by Seeling Productions

Charles R. Seeling Productions, making a series of westerns featuring Big Boy Williams for distribution through Aywon Film Corporation, have completed the first three of their subjects and have the fourth in production and are now having continuity prepared for the fifth. The first release will be "The Jack Rider." Following this will be "Vengeance Trail" and then "The Curse of the Timberland." The company is in production in Arizona and will have Will Rogers, Jr., son of Will Rogers as co-star. Later the company will film "Rounding Up The Law," continuity for which is now being prepared.

Speed Up Production of Witwer Comedies

Permission to film part of the second Witwer comedy was granted to Bill Smith of Fidelity Pictures and his company by the Terminal Barber Shops recently. A scene in the largest barber shop in the world will be taken during the coming week. One of the exclusive Fifth avenue shops will be used also for a millinery scene. Added to this an actual prize fight staged in a specially constructed ring and arena was filmed last week for the comedy.

"The Speakers Sex," the second of the comedies, is said to be full of amusing situations and action. The final scenes are being taken this week and Smith will be ready to show the comedy to the trade shortly.

Each of the coming Witwer comedies will have plenty of sport action. The third comedy is a football story entitled, "The Emancipation of Rodney." The actual winning game of the season including the cheering section and the frantic students will be shown for the comedy.

Two New Comedians in Hallrooms

Two new comedians have been added to the ranks of fun-makers in Hallroom Boys Comedies, in the persons of Gilbert Wells and Joe Roberts. Both these additions to the producing company make their initial appearance in these comedies in "Whoa, Henry!" which was turned over this week to Federated Film Exchanges of America, Inc., for release.

"Mickey" Distributed in Omaha and Nebraska

The Fontenelle Feature Film Co., of Omaha, Neb., announces that it has secured "Mickey" for distribution in the Nebraska and Iowa territory. The picture is now available for exhibitors in those states through the Fontenelle exchange.

Realife Series Bought by Jos. di Lorenzo

Joseph di Lorenzo, formerly manager of the Exchange Service Department, Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, and more recently purchasing agent and manager of the Sales Contract Department, Associated Producers, Inc. has acquired the world's rights to a series of the Realife Comedies, produced by E. A. Barker of Los Angeles. Mr. di Lorenzo has also been appointed Foreign Sales Manager by the Pacific Film Company of Culver City, Calif.

"Barry Gordon," a dramatic story by William F. Batson, will be the next vehicle for Herbert Rawlinson. Hobart Henley will direct, and Margery Daw, Doris Pawn and Winter Hall are the principals.

The filming of Eileen Sedgwick's "Clutch of the Octopus" serial has been started. Edward Kull is directing.

The following subjects have been finished: "The Wolf Breed," starring Lon Chaney, with Irene Rich Dagmar Godowsky as the principal supports; "Ropes," starring Miss Du Pont, under the direction of Paul Starden. "Dr. Jim," starring Frank Mayo, under the direction of William Worthington.

BRUNTON

Chester Bennett Productions is at work on the first subject titled "Deliverance." The story is laid in Alaska and stars Jane Novak. In the cast are Noah Beery, J. Frank Glendon, Leslie Bates and Florence Carpenter.

Music and The Picture

As Viewed by Our Readers

Dear Sir:

I need a couple of first-class organists who can play pictures and play them properly. Can you put me in connection with anyone? Kindly advise at once.

Yours truly,
E. BEATTY,
Bijou Theatrical Ent. Co.,
Battle Creek, Mich.

I notice in a cue sheet for "World's Apart," by J. C. Bradford, it seems to contain some beautiful numbers, but I notice also that it does not give the publisher's names. The addition of the tempo is certainly a splendid item.

Truly,
LESLIE GROSSMITH,
ARMADALE CASTLE,
JAMES BAY,
Victoria, B. C., Canada.

The writer personally believes that the motion picture houses throughout the country can play a very important part in this nation-wide movement, the Advancement of Music, and should be helped in every possible way to that end. The kind of music which they present to the public is indeed important, and the music that accompanies the presentation of pictures will have an influence either for good or bad on the audience.

Now, the possibility of increased sales of pianos to theatres, by reason of any change in their type of music is not so important to the writer as it is for them to be exceedingly careful in the class of music presented, as I have previously stated.

In the case of the theatre that has a large seating capacity, an organ is beyond any question one of their first considerations. They, however, are obliged to have in connection with that a piano and the piano must necessarily, by reason of public demand, be a grand. It will be in size fitting the seating capacity of the theatre. The influence of music for good is beyond any question, so let us study as carefully the quality of the music and its presentation as the manager of a theatre would study the type of picture he is going to present.

With kindest personal regards, I am

MARK P. CAMPBELL,
President Brambach Piano Co.

AGAIN THE CUE SHEET

I have been operating an American Fotoplayer for the past six months in the principal theatre of this city and have been an interested reader of your page in the NEWS, in fact, one of one of my first acts on assuming the post was to dig up all our back numbers and read your page, thereby getting some very valuable pointers and suggestions.

This is the first time I have written to you for help and I trust you will be able to render me some assistance. I have gradually been building up a roll library until I have some four hundred rolls, of these possibly one hundred are the light populars, the remainder classics from the lightest to the very heavy and a conservative selection of the Filmusic Company's special dramatics.

I use the "cue sheets" altogether, inasmuch as under the present regime it is next to impossible to get a preview of a picture in order to cue the music to it, so I take particular pains to keep advised of all bookings as fast as bought and if the cue sheet fails to accompany the paper I either wire or write for it, consequently do not miss one in two months.

Lately I have noticed that Mr. James C. Bradford is responsible for the majority of the sheets for the pictures we get, with Mr. Winkler a close second. The latter's product is rather exasperating as he adheres evidently to the Belwin library (I understand in passing he is one of the owners of this concern) and there is a constant repetition of "Capricious Annette," "Roses That Die, etc." "Sleeping Rose" and so on. Now, these may be very delightful numbers, I am unable to secure them in rolls, so do not know but I am quite sure that if I used them night after night as the cue sheets direct, I would very shortly be in bad with our patrons.

On the other hand, Mr. Bradford's suggestions are to my mind much more desirable, he uses exceptionally high grade music, yet the most of it is not over the average "movie fan's" head and he is quite sparing in his use of the strictly dramatic numbers, such as tensions, hurrys, furiosos, agitatos and the like; these numbers I think you will agree with me are not particularly melodious or harmonious as a rule, but indispensable at times.

Doubtless ere this you have begun to wonder where your assistance is coming in, so here is what I am up against. I have noticed from time to time in the Bradford cue sheets the following numbers called for:

Le Deluge—Saint Saens.
Dear Little Mother of Mine—Burleigh.
Elegic—Barmontine.
Mysterioso Furioso—Langey.
Love Song—Wright (Ellen?)
Butterfly—Densmore.
Kunihild—Kistler.
Sailing—Old Song.
Hurry No. 33—Minot.
Pierrette—Hadley.
Intermezzo (Atonement of Pan)—Hadley.
Marguerites—Hadley. (Also several other numbers from "Ballet des Fleures," by this composer.)
The Storm—Langey.
Festival March—Borch.
Lament (from Keltic Suite)—Foulds.
Pleading—Wood.
In the Silence of Night—Rachmaninoff.
Slumber Boat—Gaynor.
Nocturne op. 48, No. 1—Chopin.

I could probably name a dozen more but these are the only ones I can recall at present and here is where my troubles begin, I cannot find any of these numbers above listed in my catalogues and I have the QRS, Melodee, Imperial, Connorized, Artempo and Filmusic Company's, and my reason for writing you is to ask if you would mind forwarding this letter to Mr. Bradford and ascertain if possible where these rolls can be produced if they are cut, if not, of course, that precludes their use as far as I am concerned. I would write to Mr. Bradford direct, but haven't the slightest idea where to address him.

In closing I must apologize for this long letter and assure you of my sincere appreciation for any assistance you can render me. I have built up my library so far from my own knowledge of suitable numbers for the screen, together with numbers selected from the vari cue sheets and it is my desire to use nothing the best music consistent with the requireme of the pictures and from remarks that h reached me, I believe I am accomplishing slo perhaps, but surely, that for which I have b striving among other things, to raise the st dard of music in this community, at least in picture business and if only that far I think effect will be felt outside.

A New Simultaneous Superimposed Moving Picture Camera

New York Engineer Has Machine of German Design

Among the most recent German products of interest to the moving picture world is a camera which embodies the advantages of all present types of cameras and in addition has several new and original features, both optical and mechanical, which eliminate existing defects and enlarge the scope of motion picture photography.

It is practically universally admitted that no moving picture camera yet manufactured has met with the complete satisfaction of the cinematographer. The numerous changes and modifications made on the cameras by the camera men themselves are sufficient proof of this statement.

Disregarding the personal side of the case, that is, the personal whims and idiosincracies of the cinematographers, which can never be refuted, the real reason for these many alterations to the manufactured camera is the lack of cooperation between the man who designs the camera and the man who operates it. In the past, the designer had no definite, practical idea of the demands imposed on the camera while the operator lacked the technical mechanical knowledge to efficiently correct the designer's mistakes.

The main thought which has determined the construction of the apparatus described in the following has been to give the camera man a machine which will fulfill all possible technical requirements. The apparatus has been constructed with the closest cooperation between operator and engineer.

Besides being the ultimate of mechanical construction, this camera includes two features which heretofore have not been included in moving picture camera construction. The first is the Focusmicroscope and the second is the Superimposed Picture Attachment. This latter permits the operator to take simultaneously two pictures on one film. This device is particularly adaptable for the taking of trick pictures involving ghosts, visions, etc.

Material and Mounting

The camera is constructed of metal. The box and the footplate are made of aluminum, the gears of bronze, the shafts of silver steel and the holders of brass. The gear teeth are cut in such a way that the wear is practically nil and so that a continuous easy motion is assured. All shafts are placed in ball bearings made by the well-known firm of "SKF-Norma G.m.b.H."

Film showing how pictures can be taken with superimposed simultaneous device

All fixed as well as all moving parts have been designed so as to bring the center of gravity of the camera and the point of attack of the crank-handle as near as possible to the footplate and the support. In this way the mechanical moment of the crank is at a minimum and a solid support is assured. The holders are placed side by side inside the camera. By means of careful and skillful arrangement of details lost space has been eliminated to such an extent that in spite of the camera's wonderful possibiliies and its remarkable optical qualities, the exterior dimensions are only 7.5" x 5.1" x 12.2".

Optical Equipment

The new 5emm. Plasmat f:4 and a 40mm. Trioplan f:3, both from the firm of Hugo Meyer-Gorlitz, are used for taking pictures. (Each objective is of 35mm. focal distance and can be put in place from the outside.) The objective can be changed as a whole, being mounted in the setting F, which is firmly connected with the picture glass plate B. By simply pulling out and pushing in the objectives can be changed and yet they have an absolutely firm position. (See Figure 1.)

A lengthening telescope is also provided which can be placed on the front of the apparatus in such a way that objectives up to 2500mm. focal distance can be used, which is necessary for big pictures of artistic effect and especially for scientific pictures of natural size.

Picture Observation

The observation of the picture as well as the accurate focus is obtained from behind by means of the Focusmicroscope (M). It is placed on the lefthand side of the apparatus and shows the picture produced upright on the film, in about twice the size, linear enlargement. (See Fig. 2.) This microscope has an anastigmatic lens of 60mm. The ocular opening (O) of the microscope is provided with a special shutter (A), which opens itself when touched with the eye and closes itself when the observation is completed, thus preventing the ocular from being opened through negligence. This device is especially valuable for observation during the taking of a picture when both hands of the operator can be free to serve the handle and the blinders. A magnifying glass placed on the side of the camera permits inspection of the picture by someone other than the operator.

FINDER.

A camera finder (C) is provided in addition to the Focusmicroscope. The optic axis of this finder is located vertically over the axis of the objective camera lense and is parallel to it. In front of the frosted glass plate of the finder can be placed interchangeable vignettes which produce an exact similarity between the finder image and the film image.

SUPERIMPOSED PICTURE ATTACHMENT

In the modern moving picture industry it is often necessary that one picture shall include objects in two different fields, such as in the case of apparitions, visions, ghosts, etc. (See Fig. 3.) To obtain an effect of this sort it is customary to take the pictures one after another on the same film, which requires a return movement of the film to take the second picture. This method takes time, is expensive and is also inexact. If the picture demands that the actions of the actors in two different places shall correspond, then considerable difficulties are met with when the photographing is done at different times. It is impossible to reach a good collective acting and harmony in the movements of the actors can only approximately be reached by counting the revolutions which often results in the entire picture being spoiled.

With the Superimposed Picture Attachment these difficulties will be overcome. The Superimposed Picture Attachment makes possible, by the employment of two objectives, the taking of photographs of actions in two different fields on the same film at the same time. It consists of a small camera (N) which can be placed on the left-hand side of the camera after the Focusmicroscope has been removed. The small camera is then in direct connection with the main camera. Inside the small camera is placed a Tessar plan 55mm. and a second moving arrangement, which is connected by a coupling to the main moving arrangement. The attaching and removing of the Superimposed Picture Attachment is accomplished in the simplest possible manner. (Refer to Sketch No. 1.)

O_1 is the main objective; B_1 the rotation locking device; F is the film; P, a 45 degree prism, B_2 the rotation lock device and O_2 the objective for the Superimposed Picture Attachment. O_1 light

Buffalo Meeting of S.M.P.E. to Be Bigger and Better Than Ever

Many Interesting Papers Scheduled to Be Read at Convention

With the number of important discussions which will take place and the number of interesting papers which will be read, the fall convention of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, scheduled for Buffalo, N. Y., promises to be bigger and better than any meeting yet held by the society. Besides the convention the annual meeting and election of officers will be held at the same time, October 31, November 1, 2 and 3.

Arrangements have been made by the committee to hold the convention at the Hotel Statler. Added interest has been created by the social program which has been mapped out. This will include among other events a theatre party and a banquet.

The moving picture industry in general has been looking forward to the annual convention with great anticipation, and the announcement of papers to be read and their authors makes it appear that the gathering will be much more interesting than it had even been hoped.

Dr. W. E. Story, Jr., has been making tests by which he has been comparing the relative efficiencies of large and small condensers, and his talk on these tests will be valuable and interesting. Dr. Story will also give a short talk on photometric measurements to determine the lighting of the motion picture setting before taking the picture.

"Industrial Mechanigraphs" will be the subject of the paper to be read by Harry Levey of the Harry Levey Corporation. A film demonstration will accompany Mr. Levey's talk on this subject.

L. A. Jones of the Eastman Kodak Company will talk on the effect of studio lighting on those working under it. "Analysis of Motion" will be the subject of the paper to be read by Charles P. Watson of Novograph Film Corporation.

A talk on the "Commercial Applications of the High Intensity Arc" will be given by A. D. Cameron of the General Electric Company. C. A. B. Halvorson is going to demonstrate a "Point Source of Light." One of the most interesting events on the program will be a demonstration of pictures which C. Francis Jenkins has taken with his high speed camera at the rate of 1,500 per second.

Following is the synopsis of a paper on optical glass which will be read at the convention by H. N. Ott of the Spencer Lens Co.:

The glass used in lenses of the early times was glass selected from the regular commercial glass. Until Abbe's time in the early eighties no special attention was devoted to the making of optical

H. A. Campe, president of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers

glasses for their specific purposes. From that time on very careful consideration has been given to producing varieties of glasses for different purposes and to perfecting these glasses in regard to homogencity and freedom from striae, flaws and stones.

With the exception of a little optical glass made in 1893 no optical glass was made in this country before the war. Some experimental work was seriously taken up in 1912 which resulted in a little glass of indifferent quality. This production was improved from that time to 1917.

It was only after the problem was seriously taken up by the Geophysical Laboratory of the Carnegie Institution and by the Bureau of Standards that any real progress was made. This was the beginning of a development which in three years has permitted us to make glass equal to the European product—and in some instances better—they have been at work on the problem for forty years. Part of the credit for this progress is due also to firms which co-operated with the scientific institutions just mentioned, viz, The Bausch-Lomb Optical Co., The Keuffel & Esser Co., The Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co. and The Spencer Lens Co.

Optical glass is now being produced this country in variety and quality ful equal to the products of all the Europe producers. We have found domest clays for the pots and sand for the gla equal to any, and are making chemica of equal purity.

All optical glass is made in pots. most instances where the high grade gla for critical lenses is concerned the gla is allowed to cool in the pot, and the p broken to secure the glass after it is co

These pots are pre-heated for sever days to gradually bring them up to t temperature necessary for the furnac After the glass is made in the furna the pot is removed to one of the pre-hea ing furnaces which has heated up anoth pot; then pot and furnace are allowed cool gradually for several days.

The "batch" is gradually filled in the pot after it has been placed in t large furnace. After it is in a fluid co dition the mass is carefully stirred, t stirring diminishing as the glass is som what cooled preparatory to removing from the furnace.

When the pot of glass is cool the wal of the pot are broken away from t glass and the chunks of glass of varyi sizes are carefully examined for any i perfections. If the chunks are too lar for the purpose, they are broken, ca being taken to break away any parts wi flaws. The refuse glass is thrown awa or remelted.

After the chunks are prepared they a gradually brought up to a heat where th are plastic. The mass is then molde to a rectangular slab, two opposite edg of which are polished for more caref and critical inspection. This polishing done after the slabs have been careful annealed in cooling. If no imperfectio are present the glass is ready for the ma ket. These slabe are used for maki small lenses.

If large lenses, such as telescope lens of the refracting type are involved, t process is the same except that great care and longer periods of annealing a necessary because of the greater mas It is necessary to start with a mass lar enough so that after removing the i perfections, there is still enough in o piece to make the lens blank. Ma times several moldings and annealin are necessary to get finished disc fr from flaws.

Where reflectors for large reflecti telescopes are wanted the glass is pour from the pot into a circular mold of t

Dressner a Successful Distributor

When the motion picture theatre owners held their convention in Washington last spring, the local owners, as hosts, looked about for the most efficient and amiable master of ceremonies the city could provide, and "Abe" Dressner was the man selected. The success of many of the details which contributed to the entertainment of those who attended the convention was largely due to the efforts of "Abe" and in business he brings to bear the same qualifications which make him a success as a master of ceremonies. "Abe" Dressner is president of the Washington Theatre Supply Company, Washington, D. C., distributors of Power's Projectors for the District of Columbia, Maryland, Virginia and part of West Virginia. New Booth an Ad for Theatre

An attractive ticket booth which is ornamental and inviting, makes the patron feel like he is spending his money wisely when he purchases tickets for admission to the theatre and confident that he will be well repaid for time and money he is spending in high grade amusements, has been placed on the market by the National Plastic Relief Co.

This much has been assured him by the fact that the exhibitor has been careful i selecting his ticket booth; which is fairly good proof that his class of entei tainment has also been given careful cor sideration.

The octagon-shaped ticket booth shown in the illustration, is of a characte individual; in the designing of this booth the manufacturers have taken into con sideration three principal factors, namel —neatness, attractiveness and inexpen siveness. All of which are of vital impor tance to the exhibitor.

The ticket booth, being the gateway t your theatre interior, must be of beauti ful design and inviting appearance. Thi booth is nine feet nine inches high ove all and four feet three inches wide, i constructed of best grade lumber, orna mented with plastic relief ornaments, with a composition dome. The dome has a six inch diameter opal glass globe at top which is wired for illumination at night There are twentyfour light sockets in cor nice at top of booth outside, and on inside there are light sockets at top of each of the octagon corners, one socket over ticket-seller, one in center of ceiling, and one at bottom on each side of ticket-seller, two feet from floor, three feet apart for ticket-selling machine and electric heater.

The circle top ticket window is glazed with polished plate glass, and has a three-inch diameter speak hole and curved top money opening. In front of the plate glass is an ornamental brass grille, hinged to swing out. Money shelf is of marble. Door in rear of booth is equipped with hinges and lock, and is glazed with best quality double strength window glass, as are also all windows, except ticket window. The ten-inch marble bottom base is cut to conform to the lobby floor slope.

Adams Brothers Add Another House to Chain with Reopening of Newark

Peter A. and Adam A. Adams Now Own Movie Theatres in Jersey City, Newark, Paterson and Passaic

The latest venture into the motion picture theatre game of Peter A. and Adam A. Adams, of Paterson, N. J., was the reopening of the Newark theatre, Newark, N. J., under their management. The theatre was built by the Minor interests, but later passed to Spiegel. The present managers control houses in Passaic, Jersey City and Paterson. The house was recently opened with the Paramount picture, "The Great Moment." Harry A. Finter, a showman of twenty-seven years' experience, will manage the house. A twenty-five piece orchestra will be conducted by Leopold Freudberg.

The theatre has a capacity of about two thousand people. The main auditoriu is finished in marble and red silk tape try, with lights throughout to harmoniz with the color scheme of the tapestry o the house. The stage settings are mad entirely of silks, stains and plush. Th predominating color of the stage settin is gray and rose, with backing of ric blue. The main picture curtain is a gold en hue.

The projection room is equipped wit Simplex machines, General Electric mo tor generator sets and transverters. A re viewing room, where pictures are alway looked over before their showing, is simi larly equipped.

Open Remodeled Fremont House

The old Fremont Opera House, practically rebuilt during the summer, was reopened during the week of September 18-24, much to the gratification of the approximately 12,500 inhabitants of the city of Fremont, Ohio, and the nearly if not quite 20,000 dwellers of the country outlying.

While the theatre will offer high class road attractions whenever available, it will specialize in motion pictures, and will be open every afternoon and evening, Sunday included.

Having a big asset in a First National sub-franchise, the management has been able to present First National attractions at frequent intervals and will continue so doing right along.

The theatre is owned by A. H. Jackson of Fremont, former member of Congress from the Thirteenth Ohio district, made famous by ex-Mayor Brand Whitlock of Toledo, Ohio, now and for some time past United States Minister to Belgium, in his novel, "The Thirteenth District."

Carl F. Miller, one of the best known theatre managers in Ohio, continues in a managerial capacity, with Frank Hudson as stage manager, and Prof. Charles Weiderhold in charge of the orchestra which will play pictures, presenting prologues every now and then, as well as road attractions.

Hudson has been the theatre's stage manager since 1891.

Hollywood to Have Another

A motion picture theatre to cost $262,000 will be built on the corner of Las Palmas and Hollywood Boulevard, Hollywood, Cal., by the Citizens Trust and Savings Bank of that city, according to a building permit secured.

Claim to Have Exclusive Patents

Following the publication, a few weeks ago, of a news item telling of the installation of a vacant seat indicating system in a western theatre, a letter was received from the Guerin theatre Seating System. The Guerin company stated that they were the only vacant seat indicating system that held patents allowing the reproduction of the seating arrangement on an indicator board. A few weeks ago the News published a detailed description of the Guerin Vacant Seat Indicating System.

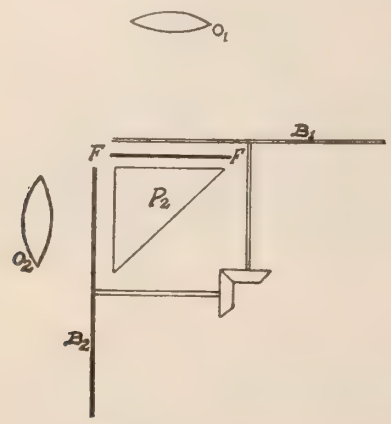
the film from the front, O_2 lightens it through the prism from the rear. In front of and behind the film blinders are put up. Of course, it is also possible to blind in the usual way in front of the objectives.



Sketch No. 1

The pictures of the two objectives are now side by side as seen in Sketch No. 2. In this way it is possible for the actor to see his vision and harmonize his actions with that of the vision during the photographing of the set, a feat which could not be done in the past. The numerous possibilities of this attachment would lengthen this article inordinately, still an expert can readily see its possibilities, as for instance, by the use of objectives with different focal distance. It will only be mentioned that this arrangement gives no loss in light and that it is possible by changing the two rotating blinders to reach whatever light intensity is desired.

As the Superimposed Picture Attachment can be removed, it is only on the camera in case of necessity and does not disturb the apparatus when in ordinary use.

Objective Mounting.

As already mentioned, the objectives are mounted in a holder, which is fixed to the picture glass plate and the objectives can be changed in the holder. The objective is located in the interior of the apparatus. The front door of the camera is provided with a ring in which the blinders and the tube for long focal distances can be attached. The movement for the exact focus and the iris blinder for the objective is operated from the rear of the camera by the levers S and I which move over registering dials.

Rotation Locking Device.

The rotation locking device has an opening of 170° which can be diminished during the photographing to 0°. This device is operated by means of the lever R on the back of the camera. The possibility of increasing or diminishing the opening during the operation of the camera makes it possible to blind as much as wanted beyond the limits of the iris blinder. (See Fig. 4.)

Snatcher.

The snatcher is quite a new arrangement. It works simultaneously over and under the picture glass and in such a way that when the handle of the crank is moved forward only the lower part operates and when the machine is reversed only the upper part works. In this way, the film roll will only be drawn ahead but never pushed by either a reverse movement or a forward movement. As the roll is an element only for tension this means a great advantage.

Corridor.

The corridor is made of steel and c be removed with the picture glass pl as a unit. The cleaning thereof is that reason very easy. The film is l through the corridor by means of t springs and pressed against the pict glass plate by a frame of German silv the picture glass plate. This device ma is possible to locate vignettes from the o side without opening the apparatus. universal vignette makes unnecessary placement of a black film, and this vigne can be given any form by cutting it w a knife.

Holders.

The holders are moved by a friction rangement. Their angle of change c trolled by a double-catch lever wh works forward as well as backward. film runs entirely over metal rolls, dispe ing with the use of velvet.

Kliegl Bros. Move Into New House

Kliegl Brothers-Universal Electrical Stage Lighting Co., one of the country's oldest and largest manufacturers of electrical stage and studio lighting apparatus, electrical and mechanical stage effects and accessories for the theatre and motion picture studio, have removed from 240 West 50th street, into their own new quarters, at 321 West 50th street, in the centre of the theatrical district.

The building itself just completed, is 57 x 100, four stories high, and basement, with an aggregate floor space of 22,821 square feet, and the entire building will be used by this aggressive and successful firm.

More and new machinery has been added to their plant, better enabling them to take care of their increasing volume of business, with speed and dispatch, and gives them one of the finest and most modern plants of its kind, equipped for handling small and large assignments.

Twenty-five years of endeavor in the invention, design and manufacture of their product has built the business where it stands today, recognized as among the leaders of stage and studio lighting apparatus and electric effects.

Business was first conducted in the old Star theatre building, Broadway and 13th street. When the theatre was demolished, they moved to corner of Broadway and 39th street. An incident is recalled when crowds gathered in the neighborhood to witness a snow storm in July, and curiosity over the apparent phenomenon was satisfied after learning that a demonstration was being conducted showing a "Kliegl" Electrical "Snow Storm" Effect. Expansion of business at that stand made it necessary to seek larger accommodations, and they moved to 240 West 50th street. After several years of successful business, plans were visualized for a building of their own, materialized their present location.

The average layman little realizes wh great importance effective stage and the tre lighting is to the success of moti picture and theatrical productions, yet t success of most productions is largely pendent on proper and effective illumi tion, and Kliegl Bros. have contributed large degree.

Specialists in the art, the same super type of service will be maintained in th new plant—only, in a larger sense a with greater speed, prepared to equ a stage completely.

The new home of Kliegl Bros., Universal Electric Stage Lighting Co.

Warner Brothers Erect House in Home Town as a Tribute of Devotion to Father

Build Theatre in Niles, Ohio, in Place Where They Made Their Start — Present It to Benj. Warner

When the Warner Theatre was erected recently at Niles, Ohio, on the site of the old Opera House that had been burned down the year before, citizens of that town saw only a modern theatre, embracing the latest refinements and innovations designed for refined entertainment and the comfort of its patrons, not knowing that the walls of the house stood as a monument and tribute of filial devotion—that of the five Warner brothers for their father, Benjamin Warner.

The Warner "boys" received their start in Niles—the first exhibition of moving pictures in that town being given by Albert Warner. But although they went forth into commercial fields, Niles always remained the center of their thoughts.

Some time ago the theatre of which their father, Benjamin Warner, was manager, burned to the ground, and caused the sons to come to the decision to erect on the spot a temple of the motion picture art which would stand as a tribute to the parents whose love and devotion have given them the strength to fight the battles of life, and also as a mark of gratitude to the community which had given them their start in business.

In this house will be shown for the first time all the productions bearing the name of Warner—and on the opening night every foot of film that was flashed on the screen was a Warner product. Thus the whole project was Warner—the house conceived, executed and financed by them —and all the attractions bearing the names of the Warners—Harry M., Albert, Jack L., David and Samuel L. Warner.

The structure of the theatre itself is unique in many respects. It is built with a seating capacity of nine hundred, and is arranged so that at any time it appears to be needed a balcony can be placed in, bringing the number of seats in the house up to fifteen hundred.

The projection room of the Warner Theatre is the largest in the city of Niles. It is eight feet deep and extends the whole of the 54 foot width of the house. A battery of two Simplex machines projects the pictures 120 feet to the screen.

A special system designed by the architect of the theatre keeps the house cooled by air. A large organ was installed in order to present musical numbers that would be equal to the high class of f presented. The seats in the theatre all upholstered with leather, and are signed principally for the comfort of patron. All the comfort facilities ar the type of which metropolitan ho would be proud. The citizens of N should be well pleased with the War for the modern house which they built for that town.

The pictures presented on the ope night were the feature, "Why Leave Home," the jungle produc "Miracles of the Jungle," and a con number featuring the Warner Monty Banks.

Theatre for West Asheville, N. C.

Construction work on a new motion picture theatre for West Asheville, N. C., will be started within sixty days and the structure will be ready for occupancy before February 1. The building will be erected by J. H. Buckner, directly opposite the West Asheville postoffice on the Haywood Road. It will be occupied by a first-class motion picture theatre operated by M. Roth, of Spartanburg, S. C.

The structure will be of tile and brick and will be two stories in height, thirty by one hundred feet. A large basement for supplies will be included in the plans. A spacious balcony will be erected for colored patrons.

West Asheville is now without a theatre, but hundreds of residents have joined in the request that an adequate motion picture theatre be built. The remarkable growth of this suburb of Asheville has resulted in Mr. Buckner's decision to erect a modern house for the town.

M. Roth is a successful theatre man of Spartanburg, S. C., where he operates two motion picture theatres.—Keeney.

Start Construction of Omaha House

Construction of a new motion picture theatre in Omaha is far under way by the World Realty Company, operatives of the Sun, Moon and Muse theatres in that city. Location of the theatre is at fifteenth and Douglas streets. Steel for the structure arrived in Omaha last week and work is rapidly being pushed to complete the building by spring. The name of the theatre has been announced.—Kennebeck.

PICTURE COUNTER.

The rear of the camera is provided with all necessary levers and handles. A recorder shows the number of meters of film used, while another recorder (Y) shows the revolutions and number of pictures. These recorders embody features which will be welcomed by operators. During the work it is often necessary to locate a certain picture on the film roll. With the commonly used picture counter it was impossible to immediately locate the picture by means of the mark on the counter when moving at a speed of 16 pictures per second.

The picture counter on this apparatus has a stop arrangement which is operated by a lever. At the desired moment the indicator is stopped and the reading can follow in peace. When released, after taking the reading, the indicator will move forward to the place at which it would have been had it been permitted to operate uninterrupted. This arrangement makes it possible to exactly locate a definite picture, which for double or repeated re-photographing is of great importance.

CRANK.

The crank can be placed in either of two openings, G1 and G2 on the right side of the camera. Its position can be fixed by means of a small set screw. Again it is worth while to call attention to the low position of the crank handle which tends to stabilize the camera more firmly on its support.

All rights for the manufacture of this camera in the United States, Great Britain and the British Colonies are controlled by Hjalmar E. Skougar, a consulting industrial engineer, New York City.

Feature Subjects of Short Length

"Hot But Healthy"
(Star Comedy-Universal)

HIS is a sort of mild burlesque of the customary hot time that the traveler may expect if he crosses the Rio Grande into Mexico. Roach, the featured comedian, has traveled the lowest berth of a freight train—down ng the trusses of a car. Arriving at the er he succeeds in crossing over and imiately falls in love with a senorita. This rs her serenader who turns the tramp over he police. He is being led to jail but ipating the hangman's noose or a misspent eating hot tamales he sprinkles a box of et tacks over the ground as he walks. And barefooted greasers are forced to release prisoner in order to extract the tacks from painful extremities.

the American returns to the senorita and s with her. He is followed by the police. result is a race develops as to which party reach the boundary post. It may interest to know that the boundary post is seem- endowed with life. For it starts a race self. However the American and his dark y outdistance the Mexicans and are safely ied. A fair comedy which carries enough olery to please the average patron.—th One Reel.—LAURENCE REID.

"A Little Love Nest"
(Prizma)

TRULY appealing number is this dainty tribute to bird romance as presented by na. The color process is vividly brought n the foilage of the tiny warblers that sing songs and build their tiny nests. A series se-ups brings them in communion with pectator. Some of the feathered romancers red beaks and they might belong to the bird specie. A tender touch is the shot of l fancier—a quaint clay modeler, who, in pare time, is moulding safe and snug homes is feathered friends. The tiny edifices are oned after the style of flower-pots and otter at his task arouses the deepest thy. One instinctively feels that here is a who has absorbed some of the divine poetry The number accompanied by the "Love " song from "Mary" makes an attractive horoughly appealing prologue for any pho- feature which revolves around youth, and springtime.—Length One Reel.—RENCE REID.

"Baseball"
an Ollendorff Sketchograff—Educational)

RE is a very timely little sketch conceived nd executed by Julian Ollendorff which the heroes of the day—now that the Series approaches. Figures of baseball's g luminaries—McGraw, Huggins, Babe Jennings, John Evers, and a host of are shown in cartoon form—with and t hirsute adornment. The sketcher has a leaf from Marcus in revealing just how difference a few hairs make.

you imagine Babe Ruth with side-whisk- the vintage of 1850? He is a combina- f Santa Claus and a bearded sage of ity. And the sight of him is surely to e laughter. Scenes are flashed of some league park—with the players taking batting practice and tossing the lil' ol' apple about. And these photographs are interspersed with animated work, the combination proving good entertainment at this time or any other time. Certainly the sketch is a short subject of much appeal. The Rialto crowd liked it.—One Reel. —LAURENCE REID.

"Put and Take"
(Hallroom Boys Comedy—Federated)

THE lil' ol' put-and-take top serves as the idea behind the latest Hallroom Boys comedy featuring Sid Smith. Which is to say that the piece is strictly up-to-date, even though there are lengthy stretches when there is scarcely a ripple of humor. The action opens in a brokerage office with the Hallroom boys cheating with the top. Indeed Percy has his pockets filled with fake tops which have "Take All" written on every side.

When the cheaters are discovered at their trickery the time-worn chase is taken up with all the characters running around aimlessly from one room to another. Finally Sid makes his escape and runs into a group of cops who neglect to pound the pavement or guide traffic because they also are spinning the lil' ol' top. Finally he is chased to a teetering board a-top a sky-scraper. The following incident presents him executing a balancing act before he loses his equilibrium and falls through space. A fairly pleasing comedy.—Length, 2 reels.—LAURENCE REID.

"Eve's Leaves"
(Sketchograph One-Reel—Released by Educational Exchanges, Inc.)

A SORT of fashion review, of unique nature. Has been a product of a stop motion camera, and some clever ideas of turning most anything into the figure of a woman, by a few strokes of the brush, are worked out. The sketches of clothes women have worn since the fig-leaves of Eve, are shown. They grow more amusing, as they come nearer to the years we can remember, the mutton leg sleeve, the straight front and habit back, etc., to the 1921 models, showing the short skirts. The future models indicate that abbreviated bathing suits, will rank among fashions in dresses. Most of these sketches are silhouettes, and decidedly entertaining. They are the work of Julian Ollendorff.—LILLIAN GALE.

"Screen Snapshots"—No. 10-F
(Federated)

FEDERATED introduces a few top-notchers in its latest "Screen Snapshots." Dorothy Phillips is observed flying via aeroplane from Los Angeles to San Francisco. When the machine reaches the latter city a landing is made on one of the streets in the wholesale district. Gilda Gray is shown at Long Beach showing how easy it is to shimmy when one has left the cold water, and when she fades out of the picture, the camera catches Gloria Swanson in New York buying a new and very sporty looking motor car. Ben Turpin and Ora Carew put over a mild burlesque in the following scene, which is followed by close-ups and long shots of Stroheim's picture, "Foolish Wives."—One reel.—LAURENCE REID.

Advance Feature Review

"Shadows of Conscience"
(Russell's Productions)

"SHADOWS OF CONSCIENCE," Russell's Productions first photoplay featuring Russell Simpson, has all the marks of a genuine state right success. It is a melodrama with western background rather than a western of the "shoot 'em up" variety, although a spectacular shooting and two ferocious and realistic man to man fights add action to the plot. Simpson has a role which fits him well and portrays the part of the hero excellently.

Unusually elaborate and expensive settings are used to give the story atmosphere and one of the most spectacular blizzards ever shot is a realistic feature of the production. Some magnificent and rugged scenic backgrounds also are seen and the photography is above the average.

The story of "Shadows of Conscience," which, by the way, should prove a good box-office title, concerns a man of rough exterior but kind heart, Jim Logan, who comes to Jackson Hole country in search of his sister, who had eloped and gone West with Wade Curry, who turns out to be a villainous proprietor of a frontier saloon and amusement hall. Confronted with his villainy, Curry attempts to shoot the brother, but kills Alice the sister, who threw herself between the fighting men. Curry accuses the stranger of the crime and stirs his friends to lynch him for the killing of a woman, and Logan, realizing his peril, holds off the crowd with his revolver and goes out into the raging blizzard carrying with him a child orphaned by Curry's gunmen, and whom Curry wished to retain in order to get the property left to the child by his father.

Ten years later we find Logan, a successful cattle rancher, in old California, and the orphan, a beautiful girl of eighteen. Some good comedy is injected here in the story where the hands on Logan's ranch go to escort the girl home from the convent, where she has been in school.

Curry also comes to the coast and accidentally hears of Logan and starts his machinations to ruin Logan and become guardian of the girl, whose estate he still covets. He finally procures the arrest of Logan on a warrant for the murder of Alice Curry in Jackson Hole Country, ten years before, which leads up to the big closing episode of the melodrama, where Logan, in the presence of a crowd of officials and ranchers, denounces Curry and so works on his feelings that Curry believes he sees the ghost of the woman he killed and collapses, leading to the vindication of Jim Logan.

The continuity throughout the photoplay is excellent and the suspense interest and constant action make it a moving melodrama which should be enjoyed in all classes of theatres.

The cast: Jim Logan, Russell Simpson; Wade Curry, Landers Stevens; Alice Curry, Barbara Tenant; Pedro, the halfbreed, W. Bradley Ward; Wesley Coburn, Nelson McDowell; Judson Craft, Ashley Cooper; Winnie Coburn, Ida McKenzie; Winifred Coburn, Gertrude Olmstead. Written by Francis Powers and John P. McCarthy. Directed by John P. McCarthy.—Length, 7 reels.—L. H. MASON.

"DANGEROUS CURVE AHEAD"
(Goldwyn)

pert Hughes Scores Again With an Exceedingly Clever Domestic Comedy-Drama

HE author of "Scratch My Back" and "The Old Nest" has demonstrated again that he is quite in a class by himself when it comes to fashioning stories exploiting domestic themes. That he pos-s a marked versatility is evident when his latest opus, "Dangerous ve Ahead" is compared to the offerings mentioned above. He has ped from farce-comedy to the domestic hearth as it is found in the e of an elderly couple whose children have left the old nest with the ity of a born story teller. Now he takes up the expression of a young ried couple and has shown with remarkable insight, philosophy and or the inner working of the home—the thousand and one trifling in-nts of happy and quarrelsome domesticity.

d by exploiting these incidents to the utmost he has steered clear of trical entanglements except when he employs an arbitrary touch to t a dramatic climax. It is the sparkling humor which will fascinate picturegoer. And this note is brought forth with a running fire of ment—not in the shape of conversation but more in the trend of philo-ical satire. This "Dangerous Curve Ahead" is exceedingly human. in following the adventures of this average couple—watching the tiffs e breakfast table—the patching of the quarrel—the rearing of the lren—these are enough to send any audience into humorous appreciation.

Certainly the patrons of the Capitol in New York thoroughly enjoyed themselves. There is a verisimiltude about the story that made y witness feel an actual participant. And it is this ability to make patrons live his characters that makes Rupert Hughes touch the en springs of humanity a trifle better than his contemporaries.

me will argue that he has not been entirely convincing in showing the pt transition of the character of the wife. Dangerous curves are not ing the domestic road which she travels as much as Mr. Hughes d like to have us think. She has flirted in her youth and her impulses at direction are the basis of the quarrels. After a lapse of ten years wife has social aspirations which causes a dramatic climax. And the shows her being restored to her place in the home when she once es that a dying child might be saved through her presence at the de. This climax does not spoil the story. It is only a minor chord is satirical symphony which efferveses with delightful humor throughhe major portion of the action. The birth of the first child with the and strutting in the familiar pose is screamingly funny. Again the nce of the picture show is hilariously funny. The "midnight mar-" as Mr. Hughes calls the "walking the baby to sleep" and which ds the father stubbing his toes about the room is just one sample e extraordinary human treatment which marks the story as a whole. fairly scintillates with a complete array of lifelike incident. And the are exceptionally clever. The acting of Helene Chadwick as the Richard Dix as the husband, and Lefty Flynn as the danger man is as ssive of life as a human outlook can make it. The picture is perfectly d and staged.—Length, 7 reels.—Laurence Reid.

notion picture that will strike home to many young American married couples Dangerous Curve Ahead," a Goldwyn feature, written by Rupert Hughes, comes to the _____ theatre next _____ for _____.
e Chadwick, called the "most photographed girl in America," has the prin-role. The story of the play concerns the early married life of a small town ho was the belle of her community before her marriage to an easy-going tically inclined husband. Inwardly chafing under the restraints imposed by res of the home, and the rearing of her two children, she seizes the oppor-to taste again of the butterfly life in society, while her husband is away siness.
she avoids the Dangerous Curve, and is brought to her senses by the illness little child, eagerly resuming the yoke of domesticity, is dramatically por-with wonderfully fine human expression—such as Rupert Hughes knows so ow to convey. The picture is splendidly acted and carries a strong flavor ma and keen suspense. It is a picture which serves a message and yet werfully compelling drama.

"AFTER THE SHOW"
(Wm. DeMille-Paramount)

Obvious Story of the Theatre; Fairly Pleasing

STORIES of the theatre may be divided like Gaul into three parts—those which feature an actress leaving the warm radiance of the footlights for the glow of the domestic hearth—those which revolve around the "little unknown" who gets a position in the chorus and climbs to the heights through sheer talent and perseverance, and those who get ahead through some unscrupulous manager or "angel," although they may be innocent of the methods which assure their success. "After the Show," William de Mille's newest contribution, is a variation of the latter idea because it carries another central figure other than the stage-struck girl—this figure being the poor, downtrodden doorkeeper.

Rita Weiman, the author, has made a likeable story from these characters, although the plot is familiar and easily anticipated. Really it is quite single-track in development for the interest rests with the extensive breath of sentiment and the pathos which surround the figures like a halo. In not a few places the story becomes quite sticky because of this emphasis of sweet sentiment. Charles Ogle stresses this element to the utmost by playing the doorkeeper with a deeply sympathetic attitude. The stage-struck girl has a difficult time reaching the inner office, but when the old man sees her he elects himself her guardian and sees to it that she is properly protected against all hazards. If she is hungry he takes her to a dairy lunch. If she needs shelter he gladly gives up his room and seeks less pretentious quarters. When the sentiment indicates that it has spent itself, the drama intrudes with the figure of the "angel."

Miss Weiman has departed from the usual angle which is to show a lustful manager disguised in sheep's clothing. The "angel" is a man-about-town, tainted with Wall Street money. He is young and assertive. Therefore the plot is convincing enough when he makes a play for the unsophisticated, but wholly charming girl. The call of romance is stronger than the call of protection and she responds and nearly flirts with danger before she is rescued by the old man. His love is so strong that he attempts suicide. And the "angel" sees the light by showing his manly qualities. He gives up his blood in a transfusion operation. The story ended at the old man's recovery, but Mr. de Mille tacks on an anti-climax for no apparent reason. Realizing the shortcomings of the plot he has injected some good incident—some of which reveals back-stage life and a performance. It is well staged and the atmosphere is always correct. Jack Holt and Lila Lee assist Charles Ogle in the biggest part he has ever had, and all acquit themselves creditably.—Length, 6 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

A picture produced by William De Mille and which is said to be as gripping as "Midsummer Madness," as human as "What Every Woman Knows," and equally as charming as "The Lost Romance" is "After the Show" which has been adapted from a story by Rita Weiman. The picture is marked for its beautiful settings, highly dramatic situations cleverly enacted and faultlessly directed, beautiful lightings and other technical effects. A complete musical show sequence is one of the conspicuous features of this story which takes one on an intimate journey back-stage and offers the spectator a peep into the lives of those who labor behind the scenes.

It is said to contain great dramatic interest and wondrous heart appeal and certainly is realistically convincing. The featured players have been selected for their adaptability as well as for their talent and among the cast are such favorites as Jack Holt, Lila Lee, Charles Ogle, Eve Southern and others. "After the Show" is one of William De Mille's master productions.

PROGRAM READER

If you want to make a journey back stage you should see William De Mille's splendid Paramount production, "After the Show," which will be the big feature at the _____ theatre next _____. The picture mirrors the lives of those behind the footlights, who mask the sorrows and tragedies of their own lives with a smile and a song, that the world may be amused. A complete theatre setting with audience hall, orchestra pit, stage and back stage areas, with dressing rooms, wings, flies and the typical stage accoutrements, was constructed to make the picture as realistic as possible. It is a fascinating picture which grips with its dramatic scenes and is excellently acted by Jack Holt, Lila Lee and others.

SUGGESTIONS

You can tell your patrons that this is William De Mille's production. Which is enough to satisfy them that an exceptional picture will be offered. Make mention that it is adapted to the screen from a story by Rita Weiman, who has been responsible for many fine film successes—among them being Elsie Ferguson's attraction, "Footlights." Describe it as a fascinating story of life behind the footlights—that it is a story of the theatre—that magic land has ever charmed those who do not belong to the acting profession. A very attractive presentation can be made from this picture, an exploitation campaign being conceived after the suggestion of the plot. The title can come in handy in several ways.

"THE BARRICADE"
(Robertson-Cole)

Excellent Acting and Theme Make This Interesting

THE theme of "The Barricade" is that of false pride and ingratitude which kept a rising young physician from continuing on friendly terms with those who had been responsible for his education and beginning of his success, especially his foster father, an orthodox Jew. T characterization of William Strauss in this part and the generally ex- nt acting of a fine cast of types, gets the production by as good enter- ment and it should be accepted in houses where action is not consid- essential to a feature's success.

story "The Barricade" is very simple. A physician, influenced by society wife cuts himself loose from his old associations. The time es when his foster father is about to be evicted from the home he had tgaged that the physician might be given his medical education. A er sister, unknown to the old Jew, goes to the doctor and tells him the .. The physician is remorseful, arranges the financial matters for the ly and renews his former relations. The doctor's wife also gets a ge of heart and the foster sister's no good husband reforms, making it ll around happy ending.

he picture begins with the boyhood of the doctor, showing scenes in Jewish home to which he comes when his own father dies leaving him e care of "Jacob Solomon," an East Side cigar manufacturer. It is er episodic in construction, the scenes for the most part illustrating narrative story told by titles. The love interest is negligible, interest in production, centering on the method by which the doctor will be ught to a sense of the obligations he owes to his foster father.

he picture was directed by William Christy Cabanne from a story by Daniel Carson Goodman. In acting opportunities and honors, Mr. uss must be given first place, but Dorothy Richards in the role of ris" gives a performance that stamps her as an actress of intelligence talent.—Length, 6 reels.—J. S. Dickerson.

SUGGESTIONS

e theme of this picture is its greatest exploitation asset. Use well written g talk in your newspaper displays based on the false pride idea, with cuts lustrate. Stills should be used in your lobby. If you desire to bill a star am H. Strauss should be selected, as he has the best role. Among the women, thy Richards gives a most likeable performance. The picture is not one which itself to lobby displays especially well. Prologue in which Jewish customs Jewish music are used are suitable.

"FOOTLIGHTS"
(Paramount)

Entertaining and Skillfully Constructed Vehicle for Star

"FOOTLIGHTS" is an intelligently constructed and carefully produced vehicle for Miss Ferguson, characterized by exceptional acting on the part of the star and a well selected supporting cast and should prove a satisfactory offering in any theatre where any of Miss Ferguson's pictures are accepted.

The picture is an adaptation of a S. E. P. story, written by Rita Weiman. Of plot there is little, and the only villain presented is a blackmailing maid, but the narrative scenes as they follow one another to a perfectly logical and rather unique ending are always interesting.

Miss Ferguson plays the role of a New England girl, who aided and abetted by her grandmother, goes on the stage, to become after hard work a famous star, known to the public as Lisa Parsinova, a temperamental Russian with a scandalous past and a record of many amours. It is this stage history of the actress that forms the basis of the plot development of the story. The actress is under the necessity of keeping her true identity from being known since it would ruin her professional reputation. However, her maid learning that "Lisa Parsinova" is really "Lizzie Parsons," blackmails her mistress and finally sells the information to the actresses' lover. About this time the actress decides that she will again become "Lizzie Parsons" and arranges to have "Lisa Parsinova" be accepted as drowned by going out in a row boat alone and then disappearing. The plan works so far as the public is concerned, but the lover armed with the information the maid has sold him overtakes her on the way to the old New England home and the inference is that they will let "Lisa Parsoniva" stay dead and that "Lizzie Parsons" will become a Mrs.

Aside from the fake drowning twist there is nothing very novel about the story but a combination of good acting, interesting incident and well constructed sequences, coupled with fine titling keeps the production always building to its logical conclusion.

Miss Ferguson is given ample opportunities for a display of all her talents and the atmosphere of the production is splendidly maintained. Marc MacDermott has almost as good an acting role or at least he makes it seem so by a fine performance.

The feature undoubtedly ranks as Miss Ferguson's best production to date and should do well at the box office.—Length, 6 reels.—J. S. Dickerson.

THE CAST

Lizzie Parsons / Lisa Parsinova ..... Elsie Ferguson
Brett Page ..... Reginald Denny
Oswald Kane ..... Marc MacDermott
Etta ..... Octavia Handworth

Story by Rita Weiman.
Scenario by Josephine Lovett.
Directed by John S. Robertson.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

The Paramount picturization of Rita Weiman's story, "Footlights," starring Elsie Ferguson which comes to the ———— theatre on ———— next, is unique in every detail. It tells of Lizzie Parsons, a New England girl, who becomes a vaudeville entertainer and impersonator.

She attracts the attention of Oswald Kane, a theatrical manager, who resolves to introduce her on the New York stage as a Russian actress. Lizzie signs a contract, which states that for ten years she is to be under his management and in that time not to reveal her identity.

Lisa Parsinova, as Lizzie is now known, makes her debut with great success. Brett Page, a wealthy New Yorker falls in love with her. There is something about his upright, big American manner that makes her hate the lie she is living. She thinks Randolph is in love with the temperamental actress rather than her true self. Then follow developments of an interesting nature. Reginald Denny, leading man, heads a strong supporting cast.

PROGRAM READER

Elsie Ferguson's latest Paramount picture, "Footlights," which will be the feature at the ———— theatre next ————, is a story of the stage and has an unusually vital theme. The plot deals with a young country girl who is ambitious to become an actress and who later impersonates a Russian actress, by which she wins fame. When a young man enters her life and professes love for her, she is convinced he loves the erratic Russian actress and not the woman herself. So when she arranges to have the Russian woman drown and appears as plain Lizzie Parsons, only to discover her error regarding her sweetheart's sentiments, she finds happiness. The picture has been splendidly produced and Reginald Denny heads a supporting cast of exceptionally clever players. John S. Robertson was the director.

SUGGESTIONS

Bill this as a vehicle for Miss Ferguson promising a good story, and all the usual bets that Ferguson audiences like. The picture is an excellent one for a fashion display tie-up. Mention that "Footlights" is a story of the stage giving an idea of the role the star plays. Do not give enough of the story, however, to make the plot known. Prologue numbers may be based on the opera "Romeo and Juliet" or a scene from the dramatic version may be staged. We would not use a lobby display on this picture.

CATCH LINES

Before the footlights she was Lisa Parsinova—behind them she was Lizzie Parsons, New England country girl, and keeping a long line of Puritan ancestors from the public is the basis of this entertaining photoplay which one of the most famous screen and stage stars offers as her latest vehicle.

Lisa Parsinova, erstwhile Lizzie Parsons, was Russian and temperamental to her public but in private life she was a puritan minded New Englander who wanted a home, a half a dozen children and the right man for a husband. How to let Lisa Parsinova die a natural death, so Lizzie might live was a question. And what makes "Footlights" so interesting a picture.

"HANDCUFFS OR KISSES"
(Selznick)

ob Story, Not Overdone, Is Satisfactory Entertainment

"HANDCUFFS OR KISSES" puts Elaine Hammerstein behind bars for about three reels and manages to provide, both in these reels and in the remainder, sufficient interest for an audience as ill as genuine entertainment. To provide a novel type of story, the pro- uction forces of Selznick have turned to a magazine story which pur- rts to expose the evils of a girls' reformatory. Let it be said, however, at the picture does not become morbid. The girls are flogged, tor- red, pushed about, scolded and overworked by hard-hearted matrons, but ere is never a supersaturation of tears. In other words the poor, abused roine idea is not overworked. The director has been careful to suggest, at least to dwell somewhat lightly upon all the miseries of the reform- ory rather than emphasize them with realism to the disgust of an audi- ce. Then again there is the healthful and invigorating appearance of e star. It is impossible to become depressed at her sufferings when she pears so fresh and wholesome after them. And this depression, in such picture, is the thing to be avoided.

But not all the picture deals with handcuffs. The kisses have their turn hen the girl is sent out into the world as a servant. Her employer makes r choose between her honor or "back to the reformatory." She runs ay from him, but she cannot escape the situation. As a companion for e matron of a gambling house, she is offered marriage by a dapper ung man whom she despises. The other alternative is, of course, the re- rmatory. For the second time she must choose between "handcuffs or sses." But she has memories of floggings, of iced-water duckings, and e kisses win. Things look dark until the hero, a young lawyer who has one time investigated conditions at the reformatory with little results, pears at the gambling house and adopts cave-man methods. The result inevitable. The dapper young man hasn't got a chance.

Miss Hammerstein's role is certainly a sympathetic one. And yet, as ated above, it is never mawkish. In the beginning she is railroaded to e reformatory by a cruel stepmother who has cheated her of her in- ritance.

The reformatory scenes have been excellently staged. When the girls bel and attack their keepers there is a genuine thrill. The audience ill thoroughly approve of the pummelling which the matron receives. iss Hammerstein presents a pleasing appearance, being in face and figure ue to the type of the average American girl. She is supported by a pable cast. "Handcuffs or Kisses" should easily satisfy as a program ature.—Length, 5 reels.—Matthew A. Taylor.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

It is an interesting and unusual film which will be the attraction at the ———— theatre on ————. Elaine Hammerstein is its star and it is led "Handcuffs or Kisses." This picture, in addition to offering genuine enter- inment, presents a question which must be answered sooner or later by society. "Handcuffs or Kisses" shows conditions in a Reformatory for Girls as they ally exist. It shows the reign of terror of the soul-hardened matron, whose octrine is iron and unyielding discipline. It shows the effect upon the unfortunates ho are entrusted to her care; how the good in them is stifled; the bad in them urtured, and the fires of bitterness against the world which burns in their hearts eled until all finer instincts are dead.

It is not, however, a picture for the moralists alone, nor does it attempt to each a sermon. But as Dickens made such entertaining fiction of "Dotheboys all," so does this picture entertain as it teaches. Miss Hammerstein is seen at r best, and she is supported by such players as Robert Ellis, Florence Billings, obert Schabel and Edward Davis.

PROGRAM READER

Elaine Hammerstein, who is the star of "Handcuffs and Kisses," which will the featured attraction at the ———— theatre on ————, has the putation of being one of the most beautiful stars in moviedom. She is a perfect ample of the American girl, with tall, slim figure, regular features, and large ear eyes. She plays the parts to which she is adapted and in this picture is seen an orphaned ward who is railroaded to the reformatory by a hard-hearted step- other. "Handcuffs or Kisses" is different from the ordinary feature picture. combines thrills and romance with a powerful message to humanity—a plea for e abolishment of the rigid discipline in reform institutions which tends to bring t the bad and stifle the good in all. Miss Hammerstein makes a remarkable pression by her work in this feature, and she is supported by such well known ayers as Robert Ellis, Florence Billings, Robert Schabel and Edward Davis, all reen players of note and reputation. "Handcuffs or Kisses" will be shown r ———— days beginning ————.

CATCH LINES

See pretty Elaine Hammerstein in a picture that offers an appealing slice of e as it really is for your approval.

"GO STAIGHT"
(Universal)

Frank Mayo Appears in a Fighting Parson Role

THIS picture features a story based upon a fighting parson character which is enough indication that the story is limited in its appeal. "Go Straight" is merely a character sketch embroidered with sufficient atmosphere and background to satisfy six persons out of ten who are not expecting too much in the shape of original material. Why the very character of the story is enough to awaken some interest, for a "fighting parson" type of role always extracts sympathy because of the profession and cloth. Let the figure be oppressed on every side by vicious enemies who misjudge him at every opportunity and his loneliness takes on a pathos which, while not entirely convincing, nevertheless carries some appeal.

"Go Straight" is fiction. Any attempt to picture it as life will prove disastrous, for it is hardly reasonable that a disciple of the gospel could be so harassed by his flock. They attend his church and drink in his words and then turn about and condemn him if a vicious exhorter denounces him. Yet this very conflict is necessary to emphasize the character of the story. If a parson cannot fight—well, he is no good for the purposes of the plot. So action is the keynote here—a strong fist and a determined look making the preacher stand out conspicuously. His church is a small frame structure and his flock is atmospheric enough to all intents and purposes.

He is against the ready marriage scheme as practiced by a justice of the peace. He is against all violation of the law. Well the justice's daughter takes his side even when her father attempts to smite him on the cheek. He takes a blow on the other cheek. And then the scriptures are forgotten. A certain skinflint enters the scheme to embarrass the parson but he is routed eventually. A town meeting is arranged where the argument will be settled. But the vicious pillar of the church and town employs a group of moonshiners to waylay the sky pilot so as to prevent his appearance at the hall. He is ambushed but makes his escape and rescues the heroine. There is no moment for love's expression here. He has a higher mission. The picture presents a satisfying climax when the girl's father is caught in the church. A passerby had barricaded the door and the vicious enemy is caught in his own trap. When it looks as if he might be incinerated, the parson rescues him via the belfry rope and this act of courage and sacrifice stimulates the oppressors into a feeling of forgiveness. It moves fast enough and its vigorous characterization and local color compensate for the weakness of the plot.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Frank Mayo, the virile and popular Universal star, is coming to the ———— theatre next ———— in "Go Straight," a picture which permits him an excellent opportunity to flash his talent. Since the star is particularly adept in those smashing, he-man roles, the offering may be said to furnish him with an ideal part. Mr. Mayo plays a fighting parson, who presides over the destinies of a small rural community. He is oppressed by many enemies who are determined to embarrass him to such an extent that he will be forced to leave the hamlet. But Keith Rollins (for such is the name of the minister) is determined to face his problem. His mind is made up to rid the town of its unruly element and to force the vicious members of his flock to accustom themselves to the ways of the law. How he wins them over is occasion to introduce a crisp line of action which carries plenty of vigor and vitality. The star plays up to his skill and his support is adequate.

PROGRAM READER

Did you ever meet a fighting parson? They may look meek in their cloth and they may turn the other cheek, but when the occasion arises where they have to defend themselves they may turn a rugged fist. Frank Mayo is coming to this theatre next ———— in one of his characteristic fighting roles. Yes, indeed. He has his work cut out for him. He is a fighting parson. And when his mind is made up to have his flock respect him and to rid the town of its unruly element —well that determined look and those husky shoulders are sufficient. "Go Straight" is the title of the picture and it carries punch and vigor and plenty of atmosphere and local color. Come next ———— and see Frank Mayo in a fighting role—the kind of role that will make you say—"Atta- boy."

SUGGESTIONS

Just tell them that Frank Mayo is coming in a fighting role. That will be enough to attract your average crowd. Your patrons must be acquainted with the type of role which he plays best. So tell them that he has in "Go Straight" a picture calculated to make them sit up and take notice. The title can be worked up in attractive fashion. It suggests vigor and vitality. Tell them that the star plays a fighting parson here. Enough said. They should come early and often. A prologue can feature local color with a church quartette singing a number. Play up Mayo's popularity and his skill at playing the he-man role.

"A CERTAIN RICH MAN"
(Benjamin Hampton-Hodkinson)

ffective Drama and Moral in This Hampton Production

WILLIAM ALLEN WHITE'S interesting story of the idolatrous worship of money and the evil consequences it brings is brought to the screen with a forcefulness which carries through as very ceptable entertainment. While the tale is burdened with a wealth of aracters which makes the action a trifle hazy to follow in the early els, once the spectator has made the acquaintance of the central figures, s interest is aroused to a point where he automatically becomes a part the drama. It is a story which travels over a score of years and theatri- l or fictional license will have to be excused in several instances. But spite an arbitrary leaning here and there, the plot carries vigor and vi- lity and moves with a definite purpose.

If one searches for truth one may not entirely subscribe to the idea that girl can be urged into matrimony when there has been no parental essure in that direction. A scheming banker, to cover his shortages, re- ests the heroine to marry a wealthy suitor or else suffer the consequences seeing her father and fiance financially involved. The whole substance the story centers around this will to power, although in the background ere is a swan song of blighted love which registers its pathos in com- lling fashion. The romancers never forget their one-time happiness. eanwhile the certain rich man has accumulated wealth by forgetting the man attributes. He has forged to the top through ambition and power. There is some incident which provides a humorous and even a melo- amatic interlude. Some of this is really effective, although much of it uld be eliminated without hindrance to the theme. There is one flaw ich shows a crooked lawyer turning over a letter incriminating the in- cent parties—after a lapse of ten years. The very character of this type uld lead one to think that he wouldn't hesitate an hour to effect a ooked deal or embarass an innocent party. The husband of the heroine es his money and becomes a sodden figure when he realizes that the arriage has been one of convenience. But his presence in the story is manded because it means a note of suspense. Not until the Croesus of e tale loses his wife does he regain his human outlook. He straightway mpensates for the misfortunes he has brought to others.

The story carries several twists and turns and details are brought out in ld relief. Yet because it carries so many stimulating elements it is und to assert an appeal. Robert McKim plays the rich man with his stomary finesse and the supporting company consisting of Joseph owling, Claire Adams and a host of others is good. Except for a delib- ation in telling the plot and a meditation among the players the direc- n is above reproach. The atmosphere is excellent.—Length, 6 reels.—aurence Reid.

By William Allen White.
Produced by Benjamin B. Hampton and associates, William H. Clifford, Elliot Howe, Jean Hersholt and Elliot J. Clawson.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

What is called by impartial critics one of the best photoplays of the year is A Certain Rich Man," which comes to the ———— theatre next ———— th a cast comprising such favorite players as Robert McKim, Claire Adams, Carl ntvoort, Jean Hersholt, Walter Perry and many others of equal ability. This cture is an adaptation of William Allen White's popular story. It is said to rich in heart throbs and wonderfully human and surging with life.

The story is played in settings familiar to every American. It begins and ends the small town. The first episode of the novel that appears in the photoplay in the eighties and another period is laid at the beginning of the twentieth cen- ry, and the last period is modern. The picture is said to be vital and human d hits the lives of ninety-nine out of every hundred individuals.

SUGGESTIONS

A campaign of snappy advertising put out in the shape of program readers and tch lines and throwaways will prove advantageous in putting this picture over. ou can play up the author as one who writes of life as it is lived every day. so mention of the cast will interest the spectators to the point where they will alize that it is exceptionally interpreted. You can put it over as a heart drama ich surges with humanity and lifelike touches—which shows the power of con- ence as the greatest force in the world. Play up that it is a stimulating drama everyday life.

CATCH LINES

Ruthless, relentless, powerful, he strode down the Pathway of Life, crushing ose who opposed him. And when the goal was reached, he found that his gold s only dross. See "A Certain Rich Man," written by William Allen White.

"LITTLE MISS HAWKSHAW"
(Fox)

Cinderella Pattern Provides Program Offering for Eileen Percy

THE Cinderella formula provides the theme around which Eileen Percy's latest Fox offering revolves. And looking at it from every angle one feels justified in stating that it presents her in the most attractive role she has had in some time. Miss Percy is not a comedienne and her recent appearances in farce-comedies have not proven very successful. "Little Miss Hawkshaw," written and directed by Carl Harbaugh, is sweet and wholesome entertainment, and since the star is cast as a heroine who emerges from rags to riches, one can easily see that the role is an entirely sympathetic one.

The picture is pure fiction, there not being much similarity to life because of its convenient situations. It begins with a prologue which shows a proud and stern nobleman casting his daughter out because she has had the temerity to marry beneath her station. The aristocratic "blue-blood" is represented as jotting down his life and attempting to make amends for his harshness. And there is uncovered a wealth of subtitles before the action hits its stride. The setting is a castle in Ireland. The scene switches to New York with the time twenty years later. And the nobleman, grown old and gray, is endeavoring to locate his grandchild, the missing heiress. He has intrusted the mission of finding her to a detective who in reality is a crook. The Cinderella coincidence is uncovered when the gangsters, employed by the detective, present her to him for the purpose of blackmailing the wealthy Irishman.

The heroine is an East Side "newsy" who is having a hard time in life avoiding the brutalities of a foster-father. She is befriended by another detective who is as honorable as the more famous Sherlock is crooked. When the honest sleuth intercedes in her behalf good fortune places the crook in his power. And so a melodramatic touch is added when a fight takes place. There is a moment of kidnapping before she is rescued and brought to Ireland. And she registers surprise when she discovers that she is the rightful heiress after all. There is a slight love interest which might have been made more of had some of the convenient incident been eliminated. The youth in the case is the aristocrat's nephew, who has come to America to help locate the girl. The picture carries a fair sample of lively action and the Cinderella note is well emphasized—so much so that one's sympathy never wanders from the central figure. Mr. Harbaugh has shown more invention with his direction than he has with his story. However, it is equipped with first class atmosphere and settings, and the figures in the tale arouse the interest.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Eileen Percy in the role of a pretty little waif in New York will be the attraction at the ———— theatre next ———— and ———— when she appears in "Little Miss Hawkshaw." This Fox picture first brings Miss Percy to the screen as the mistreated foster-child of an old sailor, but later she comes into her inheritance and gets a husband, a castle and vast estates across the sea to make up for her earlier hardships. The story proper opens in Ireland and the opening scene presents an irate nobleman who ejects his daughter, Patricia, from his castle because she has married the son of a blacksmith. Patricia leaves for America while her husband is placed under arrest by the nobleman.

In the course of years she dies and the baby is left in the care of the old sailor. Eighteen years later the little girl is seen presiding over a news stand. And the nobleman, realizing the injury he has caused her mother, seeks to square the account by finding the grandchild if possible. A couple of detectives involve the story which charms and entertains because of its dramatic moments. Miss Percy gives an appealing performance and is well supported.

PROGRAM READER

Eileen Percy, the vivacious and lovely Fox star, appears in a wholesome and charming picture, "Little Miss Hawkshaw" which comes to the ———— theatre next ————. The story was written by Carl Harbaugh and also directed by him. Miss Percy is seen as a New York "newsy" in an environment of poverty. She rises above her sordid surroundings by sheer determination to better herself. Near the close of the story and after many exciting, amusing and sentimental incidents. She finds her rightful place and gains the love of a true man. It is a story replete with humor and tender emotion and Miss Percy gives a fine portrayal of a poor child who, reared as a waif, turns out to be an heiress.

CATCH LINES

She was reared in poverty and when riches and happiness came to her—well she couldn't believe it. See Eileen Percy in "Little Miss Hawkshaw."

The charming Eileen Percy is coming to the ———— theatre next ———— in "Little Miss Hawkshaw," a picture of charm, humor and sentiment.

"JUDGMENT"
(World Film Corp.)

Historical Drama Adapted From Victor Hugo Play

"JUDGMENT" is a historical drama adapted from "Mary Tudor," the play by Victor Hugo, which in turn, was founded on that portion of the life of Mary, Queen of England, during which an [illegible]n adventurer enjoyed the confidence of the queen and was generally [illegible]ved to be her lover.

[illegible] presents rare acting opportunities for Ellen Richter in the title role [illegible] surrounds her with a most capable cast of types in supporting parts. [illegible]e picture has been produced in a fine atmosphere and is especially [illegible]mendable in its detail. The costuming is good and the sets provided [illegible]llent.

[illegible]e plot of "Judgment" begins with scenes showing an intrigue of the [illegible]assador from the Court of Spain intended to trick "Mary Tudor" [illegible] believing that her lover is unfaithful, and then induces the queen to [illegible]r his death. For this purpose the Spaniard secures the aid of an [illegible]ish craftsman and his sweetheart. The girl proclaims the adventurer [illegible]er lover and is corroborated by the craftsman. The adventurer and [illegible]raftsman are thrown in prison, both to be beheaded.

[illegible]e queen's love, however, proves stronger than her desire for revenge [illegible] through the peasant girl she plans to bribe the prison guards to [illegible]; the adventurer to escape, the craftsman to be beheaded in his place. [illegible] peasant girl, however, uses the queen's gold to effect the release of [illegible]craftsman, her true lover, and the adventurer goes to his death, the [illegible]n learning of the miscarriage of her plans too late to countermand the [illegible]r she had signed that the demands of her subjects might be satisfied. [illegible] picture ends at this point, the inference being that the craftsman and [illegible]weetheart are to be rewarded for their part in the affair.

[illegible]e feature has been nicely titled and the photography is good through-[illegible] The story builds steadily to its tragic climax and the continuity is [illegible]ess.—Length, 6 reels.—J. S. Dickerson.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

[illegible]udgment," a historical drama founded on the reign of Mary Tudor, Queen [illegible]e Scots in England, is the feature attraction at the ———— theatre for [illegible] ———— days' engagement beginning ————.

[illegible]e picture is in six reels and is presented as one of the most dramatic and [illegible]acted productions of the season.

[illegible] tells the story of "Bloody Mary," and her adventurous Italian lover, alleged [illegible] story to have been in complete power during a portion of the queen's reign [illegible]he conspiracy to enhance his own standing by influencing the decree of death [illegible] who stood in his way.

[illegible]e drama is furnished by the twist to the plot when the wily ambassador from [illegible]ourt of Spain by a trick convinces Mary that her lover is unfaithful and as [illegible]ge she sentences him to death at the hands of the headsman, only to regret [illegible]ction and attempt to save his life by bribing the guards. How she fails in [illegible] when a peasant girl who has been working with the Ambassador uses the gold [illegible] her by the queen to free her own lover, makes a climax seldom equalled [illegible]icture.

[illegible]e role of Mary is played by Ellen Richter and the supporting cast is an [illegible]ent one. Many big scenes are used and the attention to detail and historical [illegible] is remarkable.

[illegible]udgment" is one of the big pictures of the year and should interest every [illegible]e patron.

PROGRAM READER

[illegible]e picture is a magnificent spectacle telling in a dramatic way how the adven-[illegible] lover of the queen lost his head when the Ambassador from the Spanish king [illegible]d Mary into believing the man was unfaithful, influenced her into ordering [illegible]ath and then regretting her action tried to save his life by bribing the guards [illegible]nd the wrong man to the gallows, only to be again outwitted by the wily [illegible]ard.

[illegible]e role of Mary is played by Ellen Richter, a European actress who demonstrates [illegible]istrionic ability in a part calling for emotional acting and versatility. Miss [illegible]er is the unhappy queen to the life. The supporting cast, a large one con-[illegible]g many important parts, is faultless and contributes quite as much to the [illegible]ss of the feature as does the star. Many big sets have been required and [illegible]tmosphere of the English court of the period is perfect.

[illegible]udgment" recommends itself to the theatregoers who appreciate good acting [illegible] strongly dramatic story, told in a forceful, logical manner.

SUGGESTIONS

[illegible]erest the classes in the various schools where English history is being studied, [illegible]omen's clubs, etc. Get a list of the people who read historical novels from [illegible]braries and mail them special invitations. Bill as a historical spectacle, using [illegible] for your display ads in the papers. For lobby display use sixteenth century [illegible]nacks if you can get them. Trumpeters in costume to announce your shows. [illegible]., etc., will get attention. Prologue numbers should be musical using old [illegible]sh airs.

CATCH LINES

[illegible]ramatic photoplay, historically correct, concerning the life of Mary, Queen [illegible]ots and her adventurer lover who lost his head when a wily Spaniard of the [illegible] by intrigue convinced the queen the man was unfaithful.

"AFTER MIDNIGHT"
(Selznick)

Satisfying Entertainment Derived from This Dual Role Melodrama

PATRONS of the "program" theatre are apt to find satisfying entertainment from this dual role melodrama which features Conway Tearle as twin brothers—one of whom is an apostle of virtue, the other a disciple of wickedness. Except for the fact that the premise of this dual characterization places a premium upon the wife's intelligence when the good brother assumes the husband's place the picture is entirely logical and certainly melodramatic enough to please those who are ever in search of suspense. The locale of the story is San Francisco's Chinatown and a society section of the city.

The action opens with the interior of a Chinese den, which is ostensibly a restaurant on the surface, but which in reality harbors an opium joint. The introductory sequence offers a note of mystery owing to the inability to identify properly the Occidental figure lounging about the place. He is lured to a back room and invited to look upon the misshapen features of his twin brother. Since the former has been a derelict it does not take much suggestion from certain crooks for him to step into his brother's shoes and assist them in their nefarious scheme of securing title to valuable papers. The suspense is usually keen in these Oriental stories, for one anticipates a line of mystery because of the emphasized suggestion that things are not above board. The derelict brother steps into his brother's shoes and safely hides his identity from his twin's wife.

The latter character is pictured as being very much disillusioned because of her husband's indifferent attitude and his fondness for drink. Therefore his cue is to appear a trifle unsteady in step and not very certain in poise. However his better nature asserts itself because of the faith of his brother's spouse and he decides to play square. The picture drags a trifle in these scenes owing to the intent of the author or director to differentiate the characters. However, when the crooks realize that their prey has not encouraged their scheme they kidnap the wife and lug her to Chinatown. And so the feature introduces its punch scene. The pseudo husband follows in pursuit and succeeds in routing the crooks by employing a good right arm—and left. It is a rapid-action scene, filled with creditable melodrama. The bad brother dies and the hero registers his identity. It is enough to state that his good qualities are sufficient to bring a new-found happiness to the heroine. The picture is well staged as to interiors and locations and is adequately acted by the star, who plays his part with effective sincerity, and Zena Keefe, who plays the wife with much persuasion and appeal.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

An adventurous story of Oriental intrigue—a fascinating story of twin brothers, one of whom was susceptible to weaknesses, the other, possessing sufficient moral courage to keep his head above temptation—an enlivened story of crime, deception, mystery and romance—that is "After Midnight," the Selznick attraction that will be the feature offering at the ———— theatre next ———— starring Conway Tearle. The popular star is supported by a well balanced cast that includes Zena Keefe as his leading woman. John Lynch wrote the story while Ralph Ince directed.

The weak twin had married, but abused his privileges and became such a sodden figure that his wife despaired of ever finding happiness. One night in Chinatown in an opium joint, the stronger brother is lured to a backroom and invited to assume his twin's identity. He jumps at the opportunity since it means that he will find shelter and rest from a derelict existence. The clash of events which subsequently happen are enough to keep the observer in a high state of suspense. The picture is well balanced with dramatic ingredients, is always appealing in its technical equipment and is ably acted.

PROGRAM READER

Can a brother assume his twin's identity and successfully keep that identity from his closest relatives and friends? Is there some trick of gesture or speech which might not be discovered? Conway Tearle, that popular star who has established a large following through his ability to interpret his stories with fine sincerity, plays twin brothers in "After Midnight" and succeeds in hiding his identity during the masquerade. He has a reason. Yet the brothers are so identical in resemblance and mannerisms that the deception is thoroughly successful. This is only an inkling of the interesting plot which features "After Midnight." At the ———— theatre next ————.

SUGGESTIONS

Feature this as an interesting exposition of dual identity. Place stress upon the fact that brothers who are twins can successfully masquerade so that the closest relative cannot distinguish them. Play up that Conway Tearle has acting opportunities here which will further increase his following. Play it up as an exciting, adventurous melodrama on a theme which always holds the attention. For a prologue you can put over a Chinese setting with Oriental figures engaged in song or some characteristic business. Use the title as a means to stimulate curiosity by asking your crowd what occurs after midnight.

CATCH LINES

After midnight the criminal stalks his prey. After midnight the shadows are deepest. See Conway Tearle in the adventurous melodrama, "After Midnight."

KANSAS CITY

A short reel department has been created by the Kansas City Universal branch and H. N. Holmes, who has a creditable record for the last three years with Universal, has been placed at its head, with Park H. Davis, formerly with Associated Producers, as his assistant. The service to be handled through this department will include two-reel Century comedies, all serials, International News, two-reel western dramas, Universal Screen Magazine, two-reel Jewell comedies and one-reel Star comedies.

Harry Cohen has been appointed manager of the Kansas City Select office. Mr. Cohen is expected to arrive from Los Angeles in a few days. C. C. Ezell, L. J. Selznick's personal representative, is in charge of the Kansas City office, following the resignation of Joe Kaliski, who accepted a position as manager of one of the Pittsburgh exchanges, until the arrival of Mr. Cohen.

A Kansas City made film, titled "As the World Rolls On," featuring Jack Johnson, former heavyweight champion, is doing a capacity business at negro theatres in Kansas City. The production was made by William Andlauer of Andlauer Productions of Kansas City.

The Educational Film Exchange of Missouri and the Educational Film Exchange of Iowa, have been consolidated, and in the future will be known as the Midwest Educational Film Exchange. H. E. Schiller has been named as manager.

Realart, First National and Metro branches in Kansas City will move into their new building, which is being erected near Seventeenth and Main streets, the first week in October.

Dwight Thatcher, chairman of the Kansas board of motion picture review, was summoned last week to attend a meeting of the state executive board at Topeka. Efforts are to be made to curtail minor expenses in all state departments, the letter from the state treasurer said.

O. S. Whitaker, formerly of the Universal Film Exchange at Omaha, has joined the sales force of the Kansas City Universal branch.

A merry battle for first standing in sales is on at the Kansas City Goldwyn branch office. H. Haynes was setting the pace until R. Gregory passed him in a spurt, but Haynes staged a great comeback and now is at the top of the list.

The Brooklyn theatre of Kansas City has been purchased by E. C. Ward.

OKLAHOMA CITY

The Chamber of Commerce of Oklahoma City, being desirous of making Oklahoma City a moving picture producing center, has appointed a committee to investigate the situation, with power to act in the premises, with promise of special inducements and privileges to the first and succeeding producing companies locating and making films in the city.

Mr. McNamee, special New York representative, is touring Oklahoma and Texas with Universal salesmen and reports a big business.

Manager Cammack of the Cozy theatre at Shawnee visited Oklahoma City last week on business and took in Film Row before returning home.

Bert Edwards, of the Fox exchange at Oklahoma City, has returned from New York city, where he has been on business and to get new pointers.

Miss Pearl Easley, secretary of the Hodkinson Corporation, Oklahoma City, made a trial sales trip last week and is reported to have done better than a 50-50 business. Miss Easley was recently elected treasurer of the Oklahoma Screen Club.

The Lyric theatre at Oklahoma City, Okla., has abandoned pictures for stock, and for the remainder of the season will play traveling stock with changes twice a week, and at popular prices.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

"Over the Hill," which began a showing at the Providence Opera House September 12, has gone on a continuous show basis. Instead of two shows daily, five will be given, this being made necessary by the tremendous demand for seats. The prices have likewise been dropped, the dollar seats having been decreased to 75 cents. The change was made imperative because of the short contract the theatre has for the film.

The Strand and Modern theatres ran the same program during the week of September 26, the main feature being "The Affairs of Anatol." The two houses are allied for the purchase of pictures, but it is seldom that both present the same picture, and the outcome is being watched.

CLEVELAND

The Akron musicians at the motion picture theatres are on strike. They have refused to accept a fifteen per cent reduction in wages. Akron theatres are now exhibiting pictures with organ and mechanical instrumental music.

The Metropolitan theatre, one of Cleveland's leading first-run motion picture theatres, goes into Loew's big time vaudeville beginning Sunday, October 9. Pictures will continue to be the feature attraction on the bill, but there will be five acts of vaudeville shown in conjunction with the picture. The first program under the new policy will feature "The Kid." "Bill" Friedman continues as manager of the Metropolitan.

Loew's Liberty, Superior and East 105th street, Cleveland, starting the week of October 9, changes its policy from Loew's big time vaudeville to the split week vaudeville policy. Captain Goodale is manager of the Liberty.

Tom Carroll is back in town after a three months trip into the interior of Europe. Carroll is manager of the Standard theatre, Cleveland. His office looks like a debutante's boudoir, all dolled up with flowers and such like evidence of his welcome back into the ranks of exhibitors.

"The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" set a new engagement record for Steubenville, O. Steubenville has never played a picture over four days. Manager James Tallman of the Victoria theatre, Steubenville, played the picture four days, and then wired in to local Metro Manager C. E. Almy to extend the engagement for the entire week.

Theda Bara is in town. She had a big crowd out to meet her, and to give her the glad hand at Loew's State theatre where she is making four appearances every day this week. Next Saturday Miss Bara will distribute free a box of candy to everyone who admits he hasn't the price for a box of sweets.. This is in conjunction with National Candy Week which begins October 9.. Miss Bara will personally visit all the hospitals and orphans homes and distribute a pound box of candy to each of the inmates.

Federated Film Company has opened an elaborate suite of offices at 412 Ferry street, Pittsburg, to cover the western Pennsylvania territory. Joe Lefko is manager.

Pathe has moved its official poster department to Cleveland. The move from New York to Cleveland was accomplished last week.. C. W. Allers, manager of the Pathe poster department in New York has moved to Cleveland along with the department.

H. E. Stahler, Associated Exhibitor representative, stopped off in Cleveland for a few days visit at the local Pathe exchange.

INDIANAPOLIS

The strike of union musicians of Indianapolis theatre orchestras was settled September 15, when the men accepted a wage-cut ranging from 7 to 9 per cent. They walked out September 4 when managers held out for a 20 per cen[t] deduction. Some houses organized [tem]porary non-union orchestras which s[tuck] through the latter part of the strike. [The] new scale is from $35 to $45.50 per w[eek].

Warning that the child labor laws, [par]ticularly affecting theatres are to [be] strictly enforced is being sent to all [man]agers and owners by the state indus[trial] department.

Agitation for the elimination of [the] long kiss from the screen was st[arted] here last week by the May Wright [Sew]wall State Council of Women. [Mrs.] David Ross, president of the In[diana] Board of Photoplay Indorsers, told [the] council that her body had received [the] cooperation from a local theatre rec[ently] which cut a kissing scene because [the] indorsers objected to it.

CANADA

Winnipeg, Manitoba, moving pic[ture] exchanges are apparently about to [move] their new central headquarters build[ing] at last. New premises will be avai[lable] before Christmas time for the eleven [film] exchange branches in the city, it is [an]nounced. These will be housed in [the] upper floors of the Great West Sadd[lery] building, Market street, a fire proof b[uild]ing. The various floors are being [fitted] out so that each exchange will ha[ve] suite of offices, film vaults, rev[iew] rooms, shipping departments and [all] features.

With the centralization of exchang[es] Winnipeg, there will be four large [film] in Canada in which film exchanges [are] more or less grouped in one large [pic]ture, these being the Hermant build[ing] and Annex, Toronto, the Albee build[ing] Montreal, and the Exchange build[ing] Vancouver, B. C.

The exhibitors and theatre employ[ees] Winnipeg, Manitoba, have entered [into] an agreement for the coming year wh[ich] by no reduction in wages was imp[osed] according to an announcement by P[resi]dent V. Armond of the Winnipeg op[era]tors' union. The agreement was sec[ured] through the Winnipeg Industrial Bu[reau].

George Stroud of Hamilton, Ont., [is] one of the best known theatre mana[gers] in the city, has been appointed man[ager] of the new Pantages theatre, Hamil[ton] which was formally opened on Oct[ober] 3. Mr. Stroud is also manager of [the] Savoy theatre, Hamilton, a theatre w[hich] is controlled by the Famous Play[ers] Canadian Corporation of Toronto.

Announcement has also been made [that] H. S. Dahn, manager of the Ca[pitol] theatre, Regina, for the past six mo[nths] has been appointed assistant manage[r of] the new Pantages theatre in Hamilto[n to] assist Mr. Stroud.

A significant fact is that the boo[king] offices of the Trans-Canada Thea[tres] Limited, controlling many legitimate [and] moving picture theatres across Can[ada] have been transferred from Montrea[l to] Toronto while the executive offices [are] main in Montreal.. Coincident with [the] move was the announcement that Ge[orge] Driscoll was no longer identified [with] His Majesty's theatre, Montreal, an[d it] is understood that he will be in ch[arge] of the booking offices in Toronto [in the] future.

Allen's Toronto Theatres, Limi[ted] sprang a surprise on the populac[e of] Toronto, Ontario, on October 1 w[hen a] formal announcement was made of a [sub]stantial reduction in admission prices [at] seven of the Allen neighborhood the[atres] in the city, these including the Park, [Col]lege, Beach, Beaver, Danforth, [Dan]forth and St. Clair theatres. With practi[cally] all of these houses, the evening pric[e of] admission was reduced to 20 cents [for] adults and 10 cents for children with [the] exception that the general admissio[n for] adults on Saturdays and holidays i[s] 25 cents.

"DAUGHTER OF THE NIGHT" has a great many things to recommend it to the exhibitor. One of those things is the acting of the star,—Eleanor Parry. Add to that the strength of the story, the splendor of the settings, and the power of the RITCHEY posters that are to accompany it,—and sufficient has been said to explain why a majority of the territories have already been sold.

The L. & H. ENTERPRISES, Inc., who will release this feature, fully realize that the posters have been a decided factor in the sale of this photoplay to the state right buyer, which is their main reason for having commissioned the RITCHEY LITHO. CORP. to make the posters for the eight other features that are to follow this release.

An Ideal Achieved

About three years ago, after having spent years in freely expressing my ideas as to some things that I thought should be done in the film business, I decided that most executives in a position to use ideas in the film business considered them worth what they cost, and since mine then cost only ten dollars a year the executives did not use them fast enough to suit me.

At that time I turned over control of my publication, Wid's Daily, to J. D. Dannenberg and Jack Alicoate, two real men who had long been associated with me. I haven't written anything for publication since that time.

I went out to California, got myself a nice little home for the family and devoted my time, energy and ideas to advisory work in association with two independent producers, with whom I had substantial interests.

I presume that it is no news to most folks in the industry, although it may be to some, that I was associated with George Loane Tucker from the time he returned from England four years ago, until his recent untimely death.

I was instrumental in many ways in the organization of the Associated Producers.

Years ago I stated emphatically many times my opinions as to why an independent merchandising service was needed in the film business to give direct contact between the actual maker of pictures, the creator or independent producer, and the theatre owner.

Now I can announce the successful development of an ideal of years—a fundamentally sound sales merchandising organization for the proper co-ordination of the film industry so as to bring direct contact between the independent producer and the theatre owner.

This organization, which I control, was announced to the trade last Spring as the F. B. Warren Corporation. The policy of this corporation is an actual working out of the soundest fundamentals ever applied in the film industry.

I am proud of the product that has been gathered as the first offerings of this corporation. The first pictures were, in my opinion, the best ever offered by any company in the history of the film business, and I have seen every existing company start.

This corporation will offer in the coming month three productions which, in my opinion, are even better than our earlier offerings.

These three coming productions are—first, a visualization of Charles Dickens' "Our Mutual Friend", which is truly a gem,—second, a human little drama that will ring the cash register, visualizing the song "The Old Oaken Bucket", and, third, an exceptionally powerful offering from Lois Weber, with the sure-fire title "What Do Men Want?", considered by the producer, by myself and others who have seen it, her best.

Now I am in the position of being able to say that I shall quit preaching about the film business and how it should be run and practice what I have preached in the operation of an independent sales organization which has been constructed entirely for the purpose of giving a market to any producer of worthy product.

This corporation functions solely as a sales-service organization, acting for the independent producer as a salesman in forming a contact with the theatre owner. The same terms for distribution are given to every producer who has product worthy the efforts of a high-powered organization. Each production will be sold on its merits. There will be no grouping of productions together under the name of the corporation.

This corporation is operating on practically a cost basis, and in planning it I have worked out another constructive ideal. The men who really do the work are the ones who are being well paid,—in other words, our branch managers and salesmen are working under a profit-sharing plan.

In the course of the next six months I hope to be able to shake hands, personally, with the hundreds of my very good friends among the theatre owners who have always taken such a gratifying interest in my efforts to in some way improve this wonderful industry of ours.

Yours for constructive effort,

Wid Gunning

Treasurer,
F. B. Warren Corporation.

70 FIFTH AVENUE
NEW YORK CITY

GENERAL COMMENT: THE BOARD FEELS THAT THE PRODUCERS OF "THE FOOLISH AGE" ARE TO BE COMPLIMENTED ON THEIR SUCCESS IN THE FIELD OF LEGITIMATE SATIRE ON AMERICAN SOCIETY AND CUSTOMS. THE PICTURE IS MORE THAN A MERE COMEDY OF SITUATION. IT IS A COMEDY OF MANNERS CONTAINING A NUMBER OF INTERESTING AND AMUSING CRITICISMS OF PRESENT-DAY FOIBLES.

Sunday, October 9, 1921 — Wid's DAILY — 3

Well, by golly, see who's here—Doris May in a real flippant comedy of youth. Her first picture as a star, and a darned good picture. She's been trouping around with Douglas MacLean and first appeared with him under the Ince banner. But now she is on her own, a bit more slender, a lot more vivacious, and showing the stuff that gave her such a start in "Twenty-three and a Half Hours Leave." Incidentally Bull Montana has the star part of his career.

Bull dresses his part to perfection. His white and black cross striped socks are a hit and Bull in a full dress suit and a top hat is worth going a long way to see. The way that cauliflower ear sticks out is sure a caution.

Play This Up—Get Behind It—It's Sure Fire Audience Stuff

This looks like a sure-fire audience picture. It was shown in an uptown theater at 10:30 o'clock, after the regular show, and a crowded house laughed heartily all along the line once the story was planted, even though a lot of them must have been a bit tired from the previous show.

It contains a lot of good laughs and funny incidents and you had better see it all the way so you can use the best of the many incidents as catchlines for your crowd. You'll be doing yourself an injustice, and the picture as well, if you don't. There aren't so many of these good comedy babies floating around this season that you can afford to miss cashing in on them when they do stick their heads up. And this one has a lot of goods.

REALART STAR FRANCHISE

License for Thirty-six (36) Photoplays, Starring Bebe Daniels, Mary Miles Minter, Constance Binney, Wanda Hawley, Alice Brady, May Mc Avoy

Season of 1921-1922

AGREEMENT made in triplicate this ..... day of ....., 192....., between REALART PICTURES CORPORATION, a Delaware corporation, hereinafter called the "Distributor," party of the first part, and .....

.....hereinafter called the "Franchise Owner," party of the second part, owner or lessee of and operating the.....Theatre, located at Number ..... Street, City (Town) of ....., County of....., State of ....., such agreement being made and entered into at the ..... Exchange of the Distributor, WITNESSETH:

WHEREAS, the Distributor proposes to release during the period of one year commencing on or about September 1, 1921, thirty-six (36) photoplays, in each of which one of the following stars shall enact a leading role, to wit: Bebe Daniels, Mary Miles Minter, Constance Binney, Wanda Hawley, Alice Brady, May McAvoy—no one star appearing in more than eight (8) of said photoplays; and

WHEREAS, the Franchise Owner desires to exhibit thirty-six (36) of said photoplays in the above named theatre;

NOW, THEREFORE, in consideration of the mutual covenants herein contained, the parties hereto hereby agree as follows:

FIRST: The Distributor hereby grants to the Franchise Owner a license to exhibit, at the above named theatre only, at the times hereinafter provided, thirty-six (36) motion picture photoplays in which the Distributor shall have copyright, released or to be released by the Distributor as aforesaid, such license being upon the terms, agreements and conditions hereinafter set forth. To enable the Franchise Owner so to exhibit said photoplays and as an incident to said license, the Distributor will lend to the Franchise Owner one positive print of each of said photoplays and the Franchise Owner will accept such prints for the sole purpose of exercising said license and of using said prints in accordance with the terms and conditions of this agreement.

SECOND: The Franchise Owner agrees to exhibit each of said photoplays at the above named theatre, for ..... consecutive days, upon the dates designated by the Distributor. The Distributor agrees to mail or deliver to the Franchise Owner from time to time, at least two weeks prior to the dates of exhibition fixed therein, written notice designating the photoplays and the dates in accordance with the following paragraph, upon which the Franchise Owner shall be entitled to exhibit the same. In the event that the Distributor is unable to deliver a photoplay on the date so designated, from prints then on hand at its above-mentioned Exchange, the Distributor may at any time give notice changing the dates and the photoplays so designated.

The Franchise Owner agrees to exhibit the said photoplays in accordance with the aforesaid notices, on the days of the week checked or otherwise indicated on the schedule below, in each period of seven (7) consecutive days in successive periods of fourteen (14) days, beginning ..... 192....., it being understood that seven (7) days shall intervene between each such fourteen (14) day period, except that the eighteenth such period shall immediately follow the seventeenth period.

DAYS OF THE WEEK WHEN PICTURES ARE TO BE PLAYED
Sunday	Monday	Tuesday	Wednesday	Thursday	Friday	Saturday

THIRD: The Franchise Owner shall have the ..... run of each of said photoplays in the zone or other locality hereinafter designated, following the pre-release showing thereof (if any) therein: .....

.....

If a zone is specified herein, it shall be understood to be the zone defined in the records or on maps on file in the office of the Distributor. A run shall not be exclusive, unless so expressly designated herein. The Distributor or its licensees may exhibit any said photoplay elsewhere in said zone or locality immediately following its run at the said theatre of the Franchise Owner.

If the Franchise Owner shall fail to exhibit any photoplay at the time designated as in Article Second provided, either because of neglect or refusal so to do or because of breach of this agreement on account of which the Distributor shall be entitled to withhold delivery of said photoplay, the Franchise Owner shall lose, and in such event does hereby waive, the right to the priority of run specified in this article with respect to such photoplay.

FOURTH: The Franchise Owner agrees to pay to the Distributor, at its above-mentioned Exchange, for the license hereby granted the sum of .....

..... Dollars ($.....), in instalments which shall be due and payable as follows: .....

Dollars ($.....) upon the execution hereof, the receipt whereof is hereby acknowledged; and a sum equal to one thirty-sixth (1-36) of the total fee, that is .....

..... Dollars ($.....) on Monday in each period of seven (7) consecutive days in successive periods of fourteen (14) days, beginning ..... 192....., until the full license fee hereunder shall have been paid, it being understood, however, that seven (7) days shall intervene between each such fourteen (14) day period. If any such Monday shall be a legal holiday, such instalment shall be due on the next day not a legal holiday.

As long as Section 906 of the Revenue Act of 1918 shall remain in force, the Franchise Owner agrees to pay to the Distributor a sum equal to the Five Per Cent. Film Rental Tax, computed on and payable at the same time as the instalments of license fee. In the event of any change in the present tax on film rental, the rate shall be increased or decreased accordingly. Should any other state or federal tax be imposed in lieu of or in addition to said tax, the Franchise Owner shall pay to the Distributor upon demand a sum equal to such tax.

FIFTH: The Distributor agrees that it will use its best efforts to have a print of the photoplay next to be exhibited by the Franchise Owner, at its above-mentioned Exchange for delivery to the Franchise Owner in time for showing in the theatre aforesaid on the date specified in the notice referred to in Article Second. The Distributor shall not be liable in any way for failure or delay in making delivery of any photoplay by reason of accidents, labor troubles, fires, delays of common carriers, orders of court, ruling of censors, delays in completing negative or positive prints of any photoplay or destruction thereof, failure or delay of any other franchise owner or exhibitor in returning a print to the Distributor, or other causes not within the control of the Distributor, whether of a similar or of any other nature.

5. The Franchise Owner agrees to deliver to the above-mentioned Exchange of the Distributor or to such other address as the Distributor may direct in writing, by the fastest reliable means of transportation (with the containers properly addressed), all prints of photoplays and all reels, containers and other accessories furnished by the Distributor, immediately upon the termination of the period fixed in the aforesaid notices of exhibition for the showing of said photoplays. The Franchise Owner shall pay all delivery charges both ways, and agrees that all carriers shall be the agents of the Franchise Owner and not of the Distributor.

6. If the Franchise Owner shall use or retain any print delivered hereunder beyond the authorized period of exhibition, or shall fail to deliver the same in accordance with the provisions of Section "5" of this Article, or if any print delivered to the Franchise Owner is run at any theatre other than the one specified herein, in the interval between delivery thereof to the Franchise Owner and redelivery thereof as directed by the Distributor, the Franchise Owner shall forthwith pay to the Distributor for such use, retention or delay in delivery, an additional license fee of twice the pro rata amount per day for the license under this agreement, for each day of such use, retention, or delay, and further shall hold the Distributor harmless on account of any loss, damage or expense resulting therefrom.

EIGHTH: This license and agreement is personal to the Franchise Owner and may not be assigned to or exercised by any other party whatsoever without the written consent of the Distributor. The transfer by the Franchise Owner of its interest in the above mentioned theatre or in the operation thereof shall not relieve the Franchise Owner from liability and obligations under this agreement.

NINTH: If the Franchise Owner shall default in the performance or observance of any term, agreement or condition herein contained or in the performance of any other contract between the parties hereto, the Distributor shall have the right to withhold delivery of any photoplay until such default shall have been cured, or at the Distributor's option, terminate this agreement and the license hereby granted, by mailing or delivering to the Franchise Owner a written notice of its intention so to do, and in the event of such termination, the Distributor shall retain to its own use all moneys theretofore paid to it by the Franchise Owner, and the Distributor of any such default or defaults or any consent given by the Distributor, shall be a waiver or consent in the specific ... The rights and remedies herein enumerated shall be in addition to ... remedies which the Distributor may at any time have at law or in equity.

TENTH: Any claim by the Franchise Owner arising here... to the Distributor at its Exchange where this agreement was entered into, within twenty (20) da... time when and place where said claim arose and the nature and substance of the ... lution precedent to the maintenance of any action or proceeding upon such claim. ...ent or default upon which the claim is based, and no such action or proceed...

A Contract Has Two Sides

You read much about what the Exhibitor is obligated to do, but hear little about the Distributor's pledges. A Realart Star Franchise imposes very definite obligations on the Distributor.

Realart obligates itself:

—To produce and deliver 36 productions, starring Bebe Daniels, Mary Miles Minter, Constance Binney, Wanda Hawley, Alice Brady and May McAvoy. 36—no more, no less—no hold-outs or hold-overs for bigger prices.

—To supply these productions as a season's service, not as individual pictures;

—To guarantee that no one star will appear in more than eight pictures during the season;

—To deliver pictures on specified dates, fixed for a full year in advance at the time a Franchise is signed;

—To divorce playing dates from paying dates, and accept remittances on the instalment plan;

—To declare at the outset exactly what the complete service shall cost for a year; no special assessments;

—To provide adequate exploitation and advertising service for each production.

BRAKES OFF! Slip her into high! Now step on it!

Forty per ——. That's nothing, only a chicken's head.

Fifty ——. There goes your hat! But what do you care! You're having a good time and Bebe's driving!

Sixty ——. What's that put-putting in the rear?

Seventy —— Gosh, those telephone poles look like a picket fence!

Eighty ——. Can't we shake that "put-put" back there?

Ninety! Jumping bullfrogs ——he's passing us! Good-night ——it's a speed cop. S'long Bebe ——we'll see you in jail——!

Speed cops! You'll need traffic cops, fly-cops, reserves, constables and white wings to keep em from tearing down your house when you show this one.

Here is a six-cylinder, hundred-and-twenty fun-power, record breaking comedy with Bebe Daniels at the wheel. Step on it!

HER FACE VALUE

Scenes behind the scenes of a great moving picture studio have a fascination for most fans. Here is a faithful and a thrilling story of a famous star's life.

A SHARP precipice. A girl on a plunging horse. Cameras grinding. A desperate look behind her. A quick cast and her lariat loop slips over a jutting crag. The clatter of pursuing hoofs. Cameras grinding. A frantic scramble over the brink of the cliff.

Down——down——down. She reaches the lariat's end, swinging like a pendulum high above the road. A knife flashes up above. Faces peer over the brink. A hoarse shout from the director. And then——darkness.

Here is the graphically human story of a moving picture star—whom circumstances drove to a desperate bargain with life.

An original story by Samuel Merw
Adapted to the screen and direct by Charles Maigne.

ALICE BRADY

in

HUSH MONEY

The dramatic story of a modern girl who had the moral courage to defy Society and her father's millions for what she believed to be the right.

MONEY. Money to burn! That was the whole trouble. He wrapped his soul and body in his millions and with them bought exemption for his family from every social responsibility.

And then one day while out driving with her lover this money-maker's daughter ran over a boy.

As her father again reached for his check book, the daughter saw the cowardice of hiding behind money bags. And she rebelled.

The battle of wills that followed was nothing less than thrilling.

Here is offered another opportunity for Alice Brady's dramatic fervor and emotional fire, and her rare gift of wearing clothes like a thoroughbred.

Your audience will appreciate both.

"WE have something to be thankful for. And the censors won't have to complain of overwork when they look this feature over. It's replete with romance and drama that give it an appeal to the older minds as well as to the entire boy and girl world.

"An exhibitor ought to have the easiest time of his life filling his theatre with this feature—there are so many angles to work from. This is a serial that should be advertised in a generous way. It will pay you good dividends at the box-office. It has a big, dramatic punch and also has a big appeal from an artistic viewpoint.

"Art Acord was selected to head the cast and he demonstrates his ability to play a part that requires an abundance of nerve, physical power and love of adventure. It's a he-man part and Acord puts it over in great shape.

Says:

EDITOR OF MOTION PICTURE NEWS

"The Rosary" is Classed as "Remarkable Picture"

WE were privileged this week to preview the Selig-Rork production, "The Rosary," a print of which has just arrived from the Coast. There had been rumors that this was a notable production; but this does not express the enthusiasm which a small audience of practical film men accorded practically every foot of this fine effort.

"The Rosary" will be reviewed at length in a future issue. We will not attempt here to give credit, so well deserved, to all those whose skill in many ways evolved this well-rounded success. The story, the continuity, the casting, the acting, the atmosphere—all are of high order. Some members of the notable cast, such as Lewis Stone, Jane Novak, Robert Gordon, Wallace Beery, have done their very best work on the screen. And we cannot pass over the fine character delineations by Bert Woodruff, Dore Davidson, Harold Goodwin, Eugenie Besserer, Pomeroy Cannon and Mildred June. And, of course, to Bernard McConville and Jerome Storm will go the plaudits of successful creative and directorial effort.

In a season quite remarkable for big pictures of a very broad box-office appeal, pictures marked by genuine sincerity and skill, "The Rosary" will take its place and hold its own. We are particularly pleased to give it here something of what the picture deserves because it is an independent production, and because we have always believed that the health of this industry will always be quite largely dependent upon the adequate encouragement of this source of production. Box Office Reports On The Old Nest

ATTENDANCE records broken, often in the midst of unfavorable conditions, engagements extended far beyond the usual run and crowds still left clamoring to see the picture—these are not the only achievements of "The Old Nest." Managers everywhere testify that never have they had a picture that has given such complete satisfaction — the praise has been unanimous. It has stirred new interest in the theatre—set a new mark for producers — it has helped the entire industry.

Lem Stewart, Exploitation Director, Southern Enterprises, Inc.:
"The Old Nest" has broken attendance records in practically every territory and not for a long time have we played a picture that has brought so many favorable comments from our patrons and local committees.

G. E. Benham, Manager Blackstone Theatre, South Bend, Ind.
It has been the most talked-of attraction that has ever played in our city. * * * I have been in the game a good many years and it is the first time in my experience that a picture has satisfied everybody.

F. C. Smoot, President Smoot Amusement Company, Parkersburg, W. Va.:
Without question this picture has done more for the industry than any picture ever made. Business so far has increased each day. They are coming in wheel chairs and on crutches.

Benjamin Apple, American Theatre, Troy, N. Y.
I do not know of any picture that we ever ran which gave so much satisfaction as "The Old Nest." Every day our receipts increased and when it came to saturday it was impossible to take care of the crowd as we had them lined up to the corner from early afternoon until nearly 10 o'clock at night.

H. B. Wright, Strand Theatre, Seattle, Wash.:
"The Old Nest" played to capacity business on opening Saturday and Sunday, with long waiting lines. Every one of our patrons is enthused about the picture and many stop me to tell me about it.

Andrew Karzas, Woodlawn Theatre, Chicago
"The Old Nest" is surely making a hit. It is very unusual to have standing room only now, and it is the first picture we have had in a long time to get real business.

Charles Garfield, Manager Orpheum Theatre, Flint, Mich:
Will extend the engagement for two days longer, making it nine in all. I am very sorry that I was locked in with attractions or instead of showing it nine days I would give it two weeks. Never in my experience have I heard so many comments regarding a picture as I have heard on "The Old Nest."

L. A. Buettner, Cohoes (N Y.) Amusement Company:
Unquestionably it is in the 100% class. In my eleven years experience in the picture business I have never done such a phenomenal business with such satisfaction among my patrons.

Louis St. Pierre, Manager Majestic Theatre, Madison, Wis:
With four days of rain we succeeded in breaking the record for the week. If ever a picture pleased this one did. I am enclosing you additional check for your percentage over guaranty.

W. J. Bittner, Manager Scherer and Kelly, Johnstown, Pa.:
It is simply wonderful. Never in our career have we sent our patrons away with such satisfaction. * * * The theatre that doesn't do business with "The Old Nest" wants to wake up * * * This is the first time I have ever written such a letter to an exchange and am doing so now only for the fact that the picture is deserving of all the praise one possibly could give it.

U. S. Hill, Manager Strand Theatre, Albany, N. Y.:
"The Old Nest" is going over great big. We have been packing them in every night and tonight they are standing out in the street waiting their turns. It is giving great satisfaction with every patron.

F. E. Barry, Manager Jackson Theatre, York, Pa.:
"The Old Nest" is the finest picture we [illegible] ever screened. Turning them away e[illegible] day

Joe Erber, Erber's Theatre, East St. L[illegible] Mo.:
"The Old Nest" is the finest picture I [illegible] ever played. It has the tendency to p[illegible] the atmosphere of any theatre.

K. E. Finlay, Manager Broadway An[illegible] ment Co., Richmond, Va.:
Our previous box office record was exce[illegible] by over $1,000, and it fully lived up t[illegible] the good things you claimed for it. I [illegible] heartily in accord with Marshall Nei[illegible]'s statement that it is the greatest and [illegible] human picture ever made and deserve [illegible] congratulations of the whole industry.

Blair McElroy, Fitzpatrick and Mc[illegible] Wisconsin and Michigan:

Dear Mr. Weiss:

In our conversation over the phone the other day I promised to advise you as to the result of the Old Nest engagement.

Without any question of a doubt it is the biggest production that Goldwyn has ever sponsored, which is saying a great deal. Never in all my experience have I seen a picture grow on the people as a result of mouth to mouth advertising as that which we experienced in our presentation of this splendid production, which helps to place the motion pictures on a par with the finest of all arts. Though we played the picture at two of our theatres simultaneously the business each day kept climbing until the very last moment.

"The Old Nest" is a picture that the industry should be proud of.

Very truly yours,

Dear Mr. Weil:-

It is very seldom a picture has caused me to sit down and write a letter specially commending it, but I feel that in the case of "The Old Nest" I should let you know what a tremendous success it was when played here last week. The picture scored from its very first showing and although business began big, it grew bigger at every performance due to the word-of-mouth advertising which the picture received.

I do not know if the same thing has happened elsewhere or not, but for the first time in my experience I saw a picture get prolonged and enthusiastic applause at its finish. This was true of every performance here of "The Old Nest" and my great hope is that you will produce more like it.

With best wishes, I remain,

Gentlemen:-

The Park Theatre of Roanoke wishes to congratulate the Goldwyn Distributing Corporation on their picture "The Old Nest".

Without a doubt this is the best picture that has been made in years and for a box office attraction it cannot be beat. Wish to say that this picture broke all records of this or any other house in Roanoke with the exception of the $1 top pictures and as far as the number of people played to, it broke the record on these. Ten thousand people saw "The Old Nest" in Roanoke. Ten thousand people left the theatre well pleased and praising the picture to the skies. No exhibitor will get what's coming to him and his house if he does not play this picture.

Here's to Goldwyn's "Old Nest". May there be more of them.

Yours very truly.

I am indeed pleased to inform you of the wonderful three day run we had on your more than pleasing production "The Old Nest" turning thousands of people away during the engagement.

For fifteen years it has been the policy of the Hippodrome theatre not to repeat any production, but we are compelled by requests to give a second showing of "The Old Nest".

Gentlemen:-

I want to take this opportunity to say a word about "The Old Nest". In all my experience I have never played a picture that has won the favorable comment of patrons as did this picture and, though in a small town where a three day run has never been a success, I regret that I did not book it for a week as I am confident I would have done a bigger business each day for a week, as was the case on the three day run. I have heard nothing but the highest praise for the picture, both as a production and a story, and am pleased to say- that I personally think it the best production I have ever exhibited.

My trip to New York has been delayed, but I shall see you probably the coming week to talk over Goldwyn Week.

Dear Mr. Weil:-

I was standing in the lobby watching the audience leaving the theatre after one of the performances of "The Old Nest". A friend stepped to talk a moment and as he was seemingly in a great hurry I asked him what all the rush was about. His reply was:

"I have not seen my mother in eight years. I am afraid to put it off until tomorrow so I am catching the first train tonight".

I mention this as an illustration of just how deeply this picture touches the heart. No doubt there are like happenings wherever the picture is shown. My limited vocabulary does not permit my saying just how wonderful "The Old Nest" is.

There has been much talk of the uplift of the screen but Goldwyn in producing "The Old Nest" has done more for pictures than all the columns that have been written or the uplifting speeches that have ever been made.

Respectfully yours,

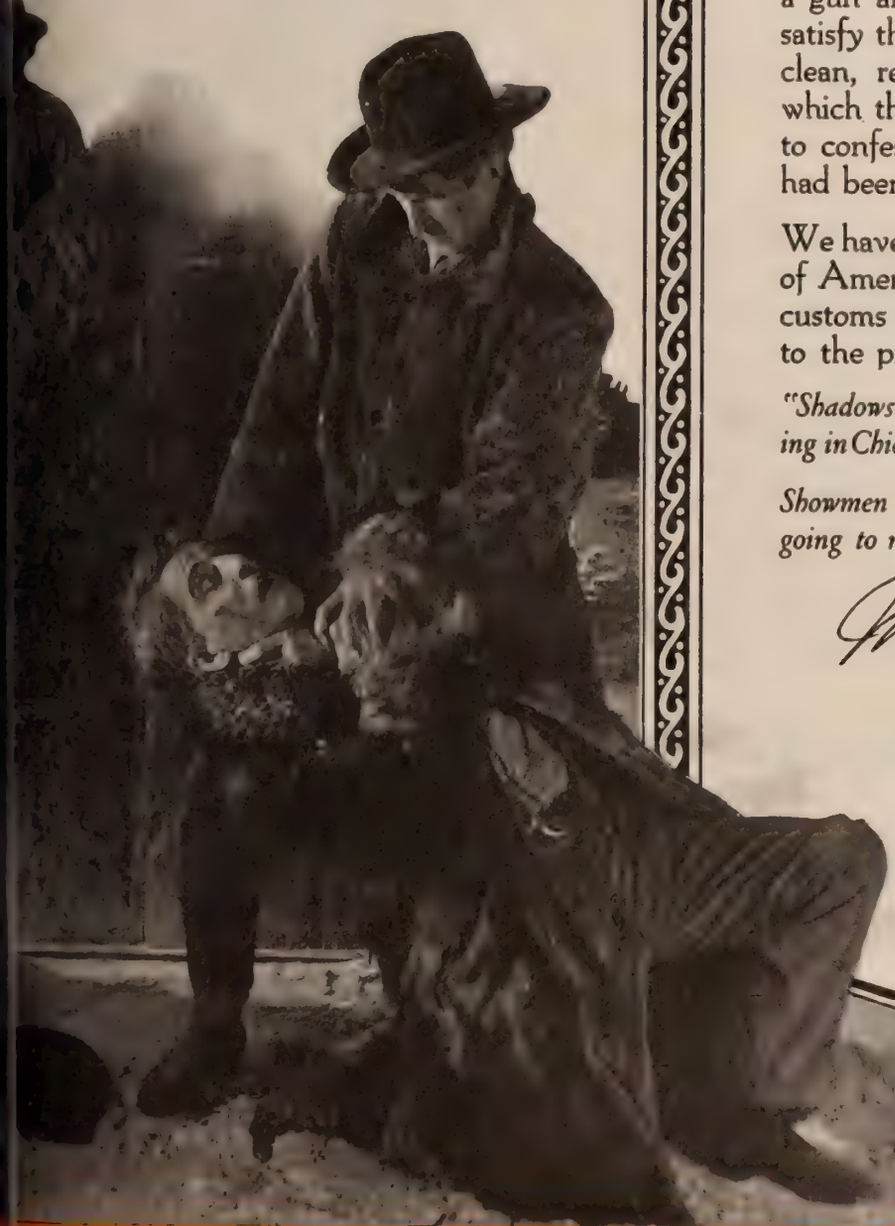
SHADOWS

RUSSELL

OF CONSCIENCE

AN AMERICAN CLASSIC

STARRING ★ RUSSELL SIMPSON ★



IN "Shadows of Conscience" we offer a great virile drama, presentable as a feature attraction in any theatre in the world. The story, produced from the pens of John P. McCarthy and Francis Powers covers a certain chapter of American life on the outskirts of civilization in the early nineties — when the voice of a gun and the noose of a rope served to satisfy the demands of justice. It's good, clean, red-blooded American drama, in which the sinner's conscience forces him to confess a crime of which another man had been accused.

We have placed this subject in the category of American classics, for it is true to the customs of early American life — a tribute to the pioneers of this country.

"Shadows of Conscience" at a recent trade showing in Chicago was pronounced another "Spoilers."

Showmen will grasp its box-office value. It's going to make new receipt records!

My dear Mr. Urban:

I feel that I owe you more than a mere price or mere thanks for your picture "The Four Seasons", which I showed at the Rialto theatre last week.

As a nature feature it is unique. It is beautiful, instructive and above all, intensely interesting. With proper music it becomes an illustrated poem, with an appeal to all classes--highbrow and lowbrow.

Don't let anybody persuade you to make the picture any shorter or to run it in four sections. Friends tried to persuade me to break it up. The audience really loved it--applauded when it was shown, spoke of it on leaving the theatre.

Yours very sincerely,

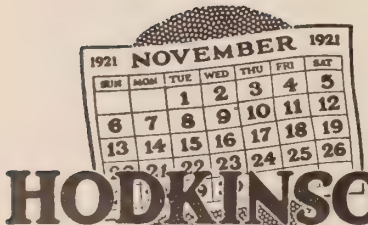
A Masterpiece

"Rip Van Winkle"—by far the greatest known character of fiction or stage to-day, comes to the screen as "a greater picture than a play."

Ward Lascelle has given it all the beauty, fascination and flavor that made the book so popular, and Thomas Jefferson as Rip, gives a performance that will long be remembered and cherished—a performance that equals that of the most beloved of all Jeffersons—his father—Joe Jefferson.

Truly it may be said that "Rip Van Winkle" is a masterpiece.



HODKINSON
ANNIVERSARY

What Phila. Papers said

THE PHILADELPHIA RECORD

To those who remember Joseph Jefferson in his famous characterization of Rip Van Winkle in the play of that name, founded on the story by Washington Irving, there will be a special interest in the production in a screen version of that entrancing comedy with the son, Thomas Jefferson, as the interpreter of the part. It is almost as though Joseph Jefferson himself were stalking on the screen, for Thomas Jefferson made close study of the mannerisms of the older man and has visualized the part with rare fidelity to the masterly original conception. The first public presentation of the picture was made last evening at the Academy of Music, and there was a general satisfaction, not only in that the lovable old vagabond had been re-created, but also in that the spirit of the original tale had been so well transferred to the screen.

THE PHILADELPHIA INQUIRER

Much of the stage version's charm and "wonder of wonders," all of the book's flavor have been caught and crystallized in the film edition of "Rip Van Winkle," which began an engagement in the Academy of Music last evening.

PUBLIC LEDGER

"Rip Van Winkle," which was presented for the first time on any screen at the Academy of Music, is another of the literary classics that has found its way into the movies and, in this instance, quite delightfully so. Thomas Jefferson is quite admirable in the portrayal of the lovable old sot. The picture will be relished, especially by the younger generation, fully as much as was the book.

Plays Three Weeks at Academy of Music to Big Audiences

For three weeks "Rip Van Winkle" at the Academy of Music, Philadelphia, demonstrated as was shown by its increase in attendance, that it is a great box-office picture. Thousands of school children thronged its special matinees.

What it did in Philadelphia it will do in every city, town and hamlet in the country.

The Cleveland Press in an editorial on "The Idle Class" and Heywood Broun's tribute to the genius of Charles Chaplin has this to say:

"HEYWOOD BROUN'S play comments seem to us the soundest and most interesting printed in New York. So we quote what he has to say in the World about Charlie Chaplin, after seeing that comedian in his newest, 'The Idle Class.'

"Broun says, 'If we may begin to lay bets in an effort to pick some particular man of our generation who will later on be called a genius, we should like to back Chaplin.'

"Finally, writing of a situation at the end of the two reels, he says, 'The moment flashes like a blue spark. A complete and perfect effect is finished in an instant. And in that instant anybody who has eyes to see ought to know that he is watching one of the great artists of the world.'

"We endorse that after seeing this newest comedy, 'The Idle Class.'

"This picture is funnier than 'The Kid.'"

Face the Facts

IN the last several issues of this publication an earnest appeal has been made for some unity of organization whereby this industry may maintain its dignity, meet its duties as an American institution, and fight the forces bent upon its destruction.

The need is supreme and immediate: no one will argue that.

The solution is simple: it means only the juncture through a joint committee of representatives, of our existing national organization.

Unjust taxes cannot be removed, adverse legislation cannot be killed, the stigma and cost of censorship cannot be wiped away except through the united strength of the industry—its financial strength, its numerical strength, its unequalled power of publicity.

No one exhibitor, no one producer, no one distributor—and no one organization of either of these three trade branches can, unaided, begin to meet the big issues facing the whole industry.

Does anyone deny this fact?

On the other hand the public has no confidence in and the lawmaker no respect for an industry divided against itself as to its common interests.

Consider some of the pressing issues that face us.

Censorship will never be removed from the statute books—on the contrary it will continue to grow—until the public is enlightened as to just what censorship is.

Does any one organization believe it is fitted to wage this great educational campaign? Who is doing it? When is it to be done?

Censorship bills will be brought again, this year, and with a renewed impetus, in Congress and in every single State legislature save only those which already have passed censorship bills.

Will any organization of any one group in the trade take upon itself full responsibility for defeating each of these bills? Does anyone believe we can continue to go on yanking the horse out of the stable when the barn is in flames?

Massachusetts will soon have a referendum upon its censorship law. If that referendum is lost we can hope for very little in other pro-censorship States or indeed from any phase of the censorship problem from now on.

New York State, and New York City elections will revolve around the question of motion picture censorship. Are we to take a united or just a disjointed, haphazard, perhaps an ill-advised part in the struggle?

Have we any one organization that feels fully competent to handle successfully these very vital situations?

And what part, we are compelled to ask in passing, will those companies who have resigned from the National Association, take in this matter, which goes to the very roots of their businesses?

The industry bears today the pyramided tax burden of over eighty million dollars a year, a financial problem that goes home to every exhibitor, and it seems to us, with more force than the much discussed questions of rentals, advance deposits and the like.

Can anyone expect that Washington will listen with respect to, or be sufficiently impressed by the claims of an industry that can't even claim a united voice in its own behalf?

How long, gentlemen, can so childish a situation continue?

How long can we continue to bark at each other's heels, to engage in petty dissensions, to play politics, to be blind to not only the common but also the great good of the industry that fathers us all?

How long can we continue to fiddle while the big city burns.

* * *

AS we write this editorial Mr. William A. Brady telephones us the cheering news that the Senate Committee by a vote of five to four (Senator La Follette switching in our favor) has voted to do away with the five per cent film rental tax.

Also we are told that the tax bill as it now stands will have a solid Republican backing and become a law within one month's time.

The elimination of this tax will save the industry some six million dollars a year. A large sum and one vastly needed; but even more, its good effect will be seen in a restoration of confidence all along the line.

Mr. Brady also tells us that this victory was won through the united efforts of the National Association and the Motion Picture Theatre Owners; that throughout the effort made for the repeal of this tax a united front was held and that there was not, save in one instance, a single crossed wire.

This is, to us, as cheering as the repeal of the tax itself.

There are other victories greater, far greater than this, to be won.

And, as in this instance, they can only be won by the very same concerted action, the same marshalling of forces to a common end.

With this splendid start can we not begin to tackle the big jobs ahead of us, and which deeply concern the bread and butter destinies of every single individual in the business?

And can we not begin—now?

Richard White Gen'l Sales Mgr. for Fox

FOX FILM CORPORATION announces the appointment of Richard A. White to the post of general-sales-manager with charge of distribution business and branches throughout the United States.

This appointment, which became effective October 6th, is another step in the progress made by Mr. White since he first entered the employ of the Fox organization in June, 1919. At that time White joined the contract department at the Fox home-office. From this beginning his rise has been rapid. He spent part of the summer of 1919 in the Washington branch and acquitted himself so well that he was recalled to the home office and made manager of the contract department in October, 1919, which position he has held ever since.

During the years he has been in the employ of Fox Film Corporation, Mr. White has made a number of trips throughout the United States territory and has met exhibitors in many parts of the country. He comes to his new post of general-sales-manager with a host of good wishers predicting his success. In the near future, Mr. White expects to make more extended trips throughout the territory with a view to personally meeting, in the interest of Fox Film Corporation, exhibitors in sections which he has not hitherto visited.

Coincident with the advancement of Mr. White, Fox Film Corporation announces the promotion to head of contract department of Mr. Jack Sichelman, who has been first assistant-head of that department for the past two years. Mr. Sichelman has been with Fox Film Corporation since September, 1918, at which time he started as deposit clerk in the home office. Subsequently he held other positions of greater importance in connection with contract department, and finally, became the first assistant to Mr. White, whom he succeeds in taking control of the department.

Big Baltimore House Opens to Public October 8th

The Boulevard Theatre of Baltimore made its bow to the public at a special performance to an invited audience on Saturday, October 8. The 1500 guests of Alfred G. Buck, president of American Theatres Company, owners, declared themselves delighted with the new picture theatre.

The seating capacity of 1500 is located almost entirely on the main floor. E. G. Blanke, Baltimore architect, designed the theatre.

"A Man's Home," starring Harry Morey, was the feature exhibited at the opening. As a specialty there was "Moongold," followed by "My Barefoot Boy."

Robert Paul Iula is director of the symphony orchestra; Roy C. Frazee, organist; and Victor Carlson Hargrave, pianist.

Willis and Kidder Leave for the West Coast

After a two week sojourn in the East, Richard Willis, General-manager of the Charles Ray Productions, and Albert A. Kidder, Jr., assistant general-manager, left for Los Angeles this week. The visitors declared that their discussions with film men and theatre owners in New York City and neighboring sections had inspired them with the belief that a growing spirit of optimism predominated in the East.

Marshall Neilan has begun production work on "Penrod," which will star Wesley Barry. Neilan has engaged Frank O'Connor, the former Lasky director, to collaborate with him. The cast requires thirty-five principals, who are now being selected at the Hollywood studio.

The new Loew's State in Los Angeles will be opened Thanksgiving week. The Grenada theatre, a palatial downtown house of San Francisco, will be opened the week of December 5th.

Robert Yost, the Fox studio publicity director, has been appointed manager of the Fox Exchange in Los Angeles.

Moore Starts Libel Acti Against N. Y. Paper

Owen Moore recently instituted action in libel for $100,000 against News Syndicate Co., Inc., publisher the Daily News, of New York Arthur Butler Graham of No. 25 Forty-third street is named as atto for the plaintiff.

The libelous matter complained alleged to have been published in Daily News on or about October 1st had to do with the filing of a suit $600 by a Miss Benrimo who cha that Mr. Moore had failed to pay her amount for rental of an apartment at 6 West Fifty-sixth street. A pur couplet built upon the similarity in s between the actor's name, Owen M and the words "owing more" is also plained of as being maliciously lib and damaging.

The matter has been hanging fire number of months because of the in of the exchange managers to secure able building at once.

Senate Committee Votes Removal of 5 Per Cent Rental Tax

First Victory in Struggle to Remove $5,000,000 Burden from Industry

THE Senate Finance Committee at its final session on Monday, October 10, voted to remove the five per cent. film rental tax from the Revenue Bill. This action, which is of such tremendous importance to the entire motion picture industry, is the first decisive step toward removing a film rental excise tax which has been taken of between five and six million dollars a year which the film interests have been paying since 1919. The vote to recommend the abolition of the rental tax was five to four and followed a vigorous discussion in which Senator Reed Smoot of Utah ably championed the cause of the motion picture industry and was largely responsible for the favorable action.

The recommendation of the Finance Committee will doubtless be ratified by the Senate and no serious opposition is anticipated in the House of Representatives when the revenue measure is returned there for final passage.

News of this big victory for the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry was conveyed in a telegram received today by William A. Brady, President of the association, from Senator William M. Calder of New York, and from Jack Connolly, Washington Representative of the National Association.

Those who have carefully followed the campaign for the removal of the five per cent. retail tax accord great credit for the result to President Brady and to Saul E. Rogers, Chairman of the National Association's Taxation Committee, both of whom led the campaign for the tax repeal and worked indefatigably for many weeks to convince the Senate Finance Committee that the industry should be relieved of this oppressive burden.

Many conferences were held with Senator Smoot, Senator Calder, Senators La Follette of Wisconsin, Dillingham of Vermont, Southerland of West Virginia and other members of the Committee. Under their leadership the repeal campaign was ably augmented by prominent theatre owners in many territories and by leaders in other businesses who were convinced that the picture industry needed such governmental aid to enable it to readjust itself to successfully meet present conditions.

In commenting upon the action of the Senate Finance Committee, President Brady said:

"This is a wonderful victory for the motion picture industry and one which will accomplish much in relieving an acute condition which every branch of the business has felt for many months. I am not only gratified but proud to have been identified with the campaign on behalf of the National Association.

"Great credit is due to Saul E. Rogers, Vice-President and General Counsel of Fox Film Corporation, who is Chairman of the association's Taxation Committee and who has worked day and night on this campaign. Valuable aid was rendered also in Washington by Jack Connolly.

"The entire industry should be grateful to those Senators who have championed our cause, particularly to Senator Reed Smoot of Utah who co-operated so heartily and so effectively with us in the move to abolish this oppressive tax."

Chairman Rogers of the Taxation Committee said:

"I am indeed gratified at the removal of the five per cent film rental tax by the Senate Finance Committee. This is a partial victory. I would have been infinitely more pleased if the Finance Committee had removed all of the nuisance taxes. The burden of my work as Chairman of the Taxation Committee of the National Association was greatly relieved by President William A. Brady and Jack Connolly, the untiring efforts of both of whom were of inestimable value."

The removal of the rental tax will have a far reaching effect in the solution of the exhibitors' problem in regulating their overhead expenses to meet present conditions, and many theatres which closed down several months ago will undoubtedly be enabled to open their doors.

During the twelve months ending May 31, 1920, the sum of $4,072,852.42 was paid to the Government in film rental taxes. In the year ending May 31, 1921, the total amount of the rental tax was $5,931,187.73.

The campaign inaugurated by the National Association for the repeal of the five per cent rental tax will not be discontinued because of the action by the Senate Finance Committee. In fact it will be continued with renewed vigor, now that complete victory is in sight.

The support of every Senator and Congressman will be sought prior to final action by the Senate and the House and every branch of the industry is being urged by President Brady and Chairman Rogers to exert all available influence upon Representatives to ratify the action of the Finance Committee in eliminating the rental tax from the Revenue Bill.

First Nat'l "Get Together" to Be Held in Chicago

THE national "Get-Together" of Associated First National franchise holders will be held, according to the final decision just announced, in Chicago at the Drake Hotel on Michigan Avenue, beginning Monday, October 24, and continuing for four days.

The primary cause for the week's postponement in the time of the "get-together" was the cabled news from England that the delegation of British exhibitors which was being formed to come to America and study the Associated First National franchise plan at close range, would sail from Southampton on the Aquitania October 15.

The "Get-Together" city will be Chicago, instead of Detroit, as previously announced. Because of the number of conventions that have already been booked for the Motor City, it was found impracticable to obtain the necessary hotel accommodations, without dividing the delegates between three or four different Detroit hotels.

License Mesco Pictures to Do Business in Missouri

Judge J. M. Johnson of Kansas City last week applied for and was granted by the Missouri finance department at Jefferson City, Mo., a permit for the Mesco Pictures Company of Delaware to sell its stock in Missouri. He also filed application for a license for the company, which was granted by Secretary of State Becker, for the company to do business in Missouri as a foreign corporation.

The Mesco Company was incorporated under the laws of Delaware with a capital of one million dollars. Of this capital, the affidavits filed for the license show that $584,300 is to be used in the state of Missouri.

Cotton Market Up, Picture Business Better

"THE recent movement upwards in the cotton market has given the entire South a new lease on life as far as business is concerned, and in no industry is the improvement more marked than in motion pictures. Business is booming."

E. M. Saunders, general manager for Metro Pictures Corporation, has reached this conclusion after a trip through all of the Southern States, from which he has just returned to New York.

"I talked with men in almost every line of business," said Mr. Saunders, "and I found every one agreed that the change in the cotton market had been reflected by an all-around improvement in business conditions. The slump suffered when cotton was down seems to have passed and good times are returning faster than any one could have expected a few months ago."

Plaintiff's Side of "Three Musketeers" Controversy

William Alexander of the Alexander Film Corporation gives his version of the "Three Musketeers" controversy. In reply to recently published statements of Thomas H. Ince, Mr. Alexander declares that after inspecting the cost sheets of the Triangle Company he finds the cost of the Ince picturization of "The Three Musketeers" to have been $45,000 in 1916 and that for the same picture made today the cost sheets would show $250,000.

Mr. Alexander further declares that Triangle picture was scheduled for release before Mr. Fairbanks thought of making this subject. The records show, says Mr. Alexander, that "The Three Musketeers" was scheduled for release the week of September 13th, 1921, and it was released according to schedule. An offer of the negative to United Artists "at a very low price" was made, according to Mr. Alexander's statement, but the offer was refused.

"We hold copyright for 518 scenes of the Three Musketeers, continues Mr. Alexander. "The title of the Three Musketeers does not enter into the suit. We are suing to protect our copyright on several scenes that Mr. Fairbanks used which were taken from our version of The Three Musketeers."

Big Savings Can Be Made by Express Shipments

Film companies can effect a big saving by using express service instead of parcel post for shipments in excess of eight pounds between New York and Chicago. This interesting information is conveyed in a bulletin to members of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry from Chairman P. H. Stilson of its Transportation Committee.

Chairman Stilson says that few shippers realize the variance in charges between express and parcel post rates. For the benefit of film companies he has collaborated with the General Manager's office of the American Railway Express Company in making out a schedule showing the express and postal rates between New York and Chicago and the saving to be effected in a choice of carriers.

A Record Week's Business Is Done in Albany, N. Y.

At the conclusion of the biggest business ever done in the showing of two pictures in Albany, N. Y., it was announced that over 30,000 persons had witnessed "Way Down East," which ran for a straight week at the Strand, while nearly as many saw "The Affairs of Anatol," playing for a straight week at the Leland, four blocks away. Never has the Capitol City witnessed such crowds as flocked to these two pictures. The two features, aside from a news reel, constituted the program.

Heads Pathe Sales Dept.

E. A. Eschman

E. A. ESCHMANN has been appointed general-sales-manager of the Pathe organization. Mr. Eschmann was formerly Pathe's branch-manager in Chicago, later feature sales-manager, and more recently assistant-director of exchanges.

The new Pathe sales chief entered the film industry in the employ of the World Film Corporation. While with World Film he served as assistant to the president and general-manager. After four years' association with World Film, he was engaged by Pathe as its branch-manager in Chicago. His success at the Chicago post was responsible for his call to the home-office and appointment as feature sales-manager. Last March he was made assistant-director of exchanges, which position he has held until his promotion to the general-sales-managership.

In and Out of Town

SID GRAUMAN—the one and only Sid—is in our midst this week. Seen around the Astor now and then but busy most of the time with plans for his newest Los Angeles palace.

W. D. RUSSELL, of Chicago, has arrived in town with a picture. Our Chicago man, L. H. Mason, writes, "Russell is a square-jawed, clean-cut, on the level type and you'll like him. He has a good bet in this picture 'Shadows of Conscience,' too."

B. D. Bickerstaff is about due on the Great White Way according to advices from the coast. He brings "Pals of the West," which the F. B. Warren Corporation will release.

Dispute Over Option i Lease Interests Conr

Because of the principles inv Connecticut motion picture interest closely following a Putnam case sche for hearing before the Supreme Co the state at Hartford this month. outstanding legal question to be sett as to whether a lease of a Putnam t taken by Jacob Alpert of that plac David Novogrod of Stonington fror zaire Peloquin of Putnam carried a tion in favor of the former. When and Novogrod leased the theatre f as a motion picture house on Sep 1919, they thought that the terms lease carried a right of option for an tional three years' lease.

The language of the written lease which the question arises is as fo " It is agreed that at the end of the p term of this lease said Peloquin is to buy from said Alpert a further le said theatre for the term of three ye an annual rental of $2,000, plus a crease in taxes and insurance ov present rate, which said Peloquin n compelled to pay."

Superior Court Judge Webb, whom the case has come, held th option as to the extending of the lea a further term was very clearly with quin, and he ruled against the cla Alpert and Novogrod, who are now ing the case to the Supreme Court.

"Wid" Gunning Announces Control of F. B. Warren Corporation

News Followed by Statement of Corporation's Policies in Independent Distributing Field

F. C. GUNNING, better known as "Wid," this week announced his activities in the distributing of independent productions. The announcement, in addition to telling of Mr. Gunning's control of the F. B. Warren Corp., discussed the position of this distributing organization in the industry and recounted developments in "Wid's" career leading to his present association.

Mr. Gunning retired from his publication known as Wid's Daily about three years ago, turning over control of this publication to J. D. Dannenberg and John W. Alicoate, who had been associated with it for some years. Since that time Mr. Gunning has not written anything for publication, although the name Wid's Daily has been continued in use by the publication.

Mr. Gunning was actively associated with the late George Loane Tucker, and has been living in California for several years, acting in an advisory capacity with independent producers with whom he has had substantial interests.

Because of the tremendous success of "The Miracle Man," it became rather well known that Mr. Gunning was associated with Mr. Tucker, although no effort was ever made by Mr. Gunning to bring himself into prominence, this information first coming into print at the time of a court action brought by Mr. Tucker regarding proper credit for himself in the advertising connected with "The Miracle Man."

It was also generally known by many in the trade that Mr. Gunning was an important factor in the organization of Associated Producers.

The new distributing corporation announced to the trade as the F. B. Warren Corporation this Summer was built for the purpose of providing an absolutely independnt sales-service organization, devoted solely to provide a direct contact between the independent producer and the exhibitor.

Mr. Gunning, in discussing this organization, pointed out particularly that each production is sold strictly on its merits, and each production is sold separately, it being a definite policy that at no time shall various productions be grouped together and listed under the heading of a corporate name.

Mr. Gunning, in analyzing the distinct difference between the contract given the independent producer by this corporation and the custoamry contract given in the past, emphasized the fact that his corporation is not in any case giving to the producer advances of any character or guarantee or financial committments of any sort. In explaining why this was so essentially sound, Mr. Gunning pointed out that if a producer-distributor corporation were guaranteeing to a producer the cost of his negative upon delivery, that there must be something fundamenally unsound about the distributor's reasoning and knowledge of production, since the distributor was actually, by that guarantee, financing the production. If the distributor intended financing the production, it would be ridiculous for him not to make his own productions, providing, of course, he knew how, because then when selling them he would have one hundred per cent of the proceeds instead of a much smaller percentage.

Mr. Gunning pointed out that while many contracts have been made in the past wherein various distributors have guaranteed certain amounts as an advance upon the delivery of negative by the independent producer, that invariably difficulty has arisen later on in the matter of the selling of the product, either as to the gross amount of sales accomplished or as to the proper disbursement of the moneys taken in from the theatres in the form of rentals.

Mr. Gunning made it very clear that he had discovered many times the amount of product he had expected to be available in the first year for such an independent organization, and stated that he considered that which had been accepted for distribution of higher quality than any product ever held by a new company in the history of the film industry. He emphasized the fact that in selecting product for distribution only one consideration entered into the negotiations at any time, and that was the quality of the product submitted, the only requirement being that the product be worthy the efforts of a high-powered organization.

Another decidedly unusual innovation which has been developed in a truly extensive form in this new organization is the elaborate plan of profit-sharing evolved for the branch managers and salesmen, whereby the entire organization is really a partnership of a score or more of men, with the earnings of those men entirely depending upon their individual efforts, which means for the first time in the film industry the absolute elimination of unnecessary and unearned profits, leaving the three real factors, the actual creator of the film, the actual salesman of the film and the exhibitor as the only three people entering into the negotiation between camera and screen.

Wid's to Have No Change of Policy or Management

THE following statement, signed by Joseph Dannenberg, president and editor of Wid's Daily, and John W. Alicoate, treasurer and business manager, has been issued to the trade press:

"Many of our friends have long known that F. C. (Wid) Gunning withdrew from participation in the management of Wid's Daily several years ago, leaving the control of the publication in the hands of the undersigned.

"At that time he went to California to devote himself to production affairs in which he was interested. More recently he has become identified with the F. B. Warren Corporation, a distributing organization which he controls. In view of this it is deemed advisable that this statement be made:

"Wid Gunning has no participation whatsoever in the management or operation of Wid's Daily. Its policy will remain unchanged. In his new endeavor we extend to Wid our hearty good wishes."

"Innocence" Is Given Trial by Jury in St. Louis

Audrey Munson's motion-picture, "Innocence," was shown to a jury in St. Louis, following the arrest of Miss Munson at the instigation of the Church Federation which charged that certain scenes of the picture were "lewd and obscene." After viewing the picture, the jury recommended that Miss Munson be discharged from custody but advised that the film be given no further exhibition locally.

"Innocence" was booked for showing at the Royal Theatre in St. Louis, and on the very first exhibition of the picture the Church Federation caused the arrest of Miss Munson and all connected with the showing of the picture on the charge that its scenes were "lewd and obscene." It was further alleged that the same might apply to poses by Miss Munson during the course of the performance.

Universal Forms Separate Selling Force for Its Short-Subjects

Art Schmidt in Charge of Department; Some of New Managers Nam

ALERT to the growing importance of the short-subject, Universal Film announces a radical departure in its sales policy by the organization of a separate sales force to take care of its short-length product. Art Schmidt, who has been serving as Universal's district-manager in the territory centering about Cleveland, has been appointed chief of the new selling organization. The plan had been mapped out by H. M. Berman, general sales-manager of the Universal Exchanges during the summer, but Mr. Laemmle's return from Europe and his final approval of the plan were awaited before putting the scheme into practice.

Orders have already gone out to nearly every distributing centre, creating the new sales unit and making the operation of the plan effective. Nearly all of the managers of short product sales in the exchanges have been named, though there are a few exchanges where the selection of the manager has been delayed. The following is the list of managers of short subjects as far as it has been announced:

Chicago, L. Alexander; Milwaukee, W. D. Brody; Kansas City, H. N. Holmes; St. Louis, Nathan Steinberg; Oklahoma, George Benjamin; New York, Louis I. Kutinsky; Des Moines, Harry Gotleib; Omaha, M. G. Rogers; Cleveland, H. Glick; Cincinnati, M. Strauss; Detroit, L. C. Hackford; Buffalo, J. Kauffman; Pittsburgh, Abe Schnitzer; Indianapolis, Tony Klotz; Los Angeles, D. S. Mitchell; San Francisco, C. J. Crowley; Portland, Norman F. Hass; Seattle, L. J. Schlaiffer; Butte, H. T. Nicholson; Denver, J. W. Rue; Salt Lake, L. E. Hoss; and Philadelphia, M. Davie.

A statement issued from the Universal home-office announcing the purpose and scope of the new department follows:

"With characteristic celerity, Universal put into effect last week a sales plan which had been mapped out by H. M. Berman, general sales manager of the Universal Exchanges during the summer and only awaited Carl Laemmle's sanction to be put into effect. Within the last year the importance of the short feature, or, as it is almost universally denominated short stuff has been more and more apparent to every exchange manager in the Universal system. In fact during the past summer it was the comparative inexpensiveness of the serial and the short dramas and comedies that kept open many of the small houses and hundreds of the theatres situated in small towns. The importance of the short stuff is becoming more apparent to the big feature house too and many careful managers have spent twice as much time selecting short stuff as they put on the selection of the feature program. Nothing of this new importance of the short subject escaped Mr. Berman's attention.

"Conditions at Universal City have been such during the last few months that it was possible to make a short program product of unusual excellence without interfering at all with the extensive feature program of Jewel and Special Attractions. In view of these facts Mr. Berman decided that it was essential to the efficient operation of the exchange system to divorce the short stuff from the features and to place a general manager at the head of a separate selling force so that he, himself could devote his entire energies to the selling of Jewels and Special Attractions.

"As soon as Mr. Laemmle returned from Europe the plan was explained to him in all its details and after careful deliberation he approved it in every particular. The selection of the proper man to take charge of the new sales force was the most important detail in connection with the execution of the plan. But both Mr. Laemmle and Mr. Berman were agreed as to the man. Art Schmidt, who has been with the Universal since its organization and with Mr. Laemmle before the organization of the Universal and who has been district manager of the exchange system centering about Cleveland, was summoned to New York last Thursday, the day Mr. Laemmle left for Universal City, and readily consented to undertake the position of general sales manager of the short subjects, as he was heart and soul in favor of the plan. His general fitness for larger executive duties than those of a district manager was amply proven by the v substituted for Mr. Berman during l sence at Universal City with the cer

"Mr. Schmidt returned to Clevela next night after a day of conferenc Mr. Berman over the selection of th ager and personnel of the new sales closed up his personal and busine fairs, said good-bye to the men wh worked so loyally under him and on day morning bright and early walke 1600 Broadway where an office ha fitted up for him in the mean time.

"On Sunday Mr. Schmidt kept house and more than a hundred men film industry and personal friends to offer their congratulations. Th ployees of the Cleveland office pre Mr. Schmidt with a gold pen and pencil as a token of their regard in he is held and a little later he was up to the Pathe projection room same building. Here Paul Gustan one of the most important theatre in the middle west and vice-presic Associated Exhibitors, made a pr tion on behalf of nineteen of his ass and competitors in business of a some diamond encrusted scarf pi left the same night for New York final farewell at the station.

"Art Schmidt broke into the fil ness in 1907 as manager of the Machine Company Film Service of ester, N. Y. This was prior to the tion of the General Film Co Schmidt had formerly been distric ager for the Edison Phonograph Co He next started in connection wit Powers, the Victor Exchange of I the Rex of Albany and the Vi Cleveland. When the Universal out the Powers interest Mr. Schm tired from the film business as he turn sold to Powers. But it was n months before Mr. Berman need and he was appointed District with his office in Cleveland."

Herman Robbins Resigns from Fox Film Corp.

HERMAN ROBBINS, who has been identified with Fox Film Corporation since 1914, and since 1918 has been general sales manager in charge of United States exchanges, has resigned. Mr. Robbins leaves the Fox organization with no change in the cordial relationship which has existed between himself and the corporation which he has served so long.

Mr. Robbins rose from booker to manager of the Syracuse, N. Y., Exchange, and later assumed more important duties at the home office. He has made numerous tours of exchanges throughout the United States, and has made a host of friends among the owners and operators of motion picture theatres throughout the United States.

Mr. Robbins states that he has plans, the details of which have not been brought to maturity, and for that reason does not care to make an announcement at the present time.

Oklahoma City Borrows Exploitation Idea from Los Angeles

The "What would you do with a $10 raise," stunt originated at Los Angeles, for use with "The Ten Dollar Raise," is proving a popular exploitation idea. One of the recent tie-ups in Oklahoma City, with a newspaper that had always scorned contests of any kind, and especially those connected with motion pictures.

The newspaper in question is the Oklahoma City Times. The Criterion theatre, which showed "The Ten Dollar Raise" for a week beginning August 28th, took the matter up with the editor of the Times, emphasizing the number of human interest stories which had been received in every contest of the kind which had been run in the country.

The theatre also supplied $50 in prizes, which were awarded by the newspaper for the five best letters of not more than three hundred words received in answer to the question, "What would you do with a $10 raise?"

The newspaper featured the stunt in a box on the front page for ten days prior to the opening of the theatre.

Giant Playing Cards Used to Decorate Lobby

Manager C. W. Irwin, of the Forsyth theatre, Atlanta, used the face cards of several decks of playing cards as lobby decorations for his picture, "King, Queen and Joker," for a three-day run recently.

The Kings and Queens of all four suits of a deck of playing cards, together with the Jokers, formed the main motif of the display. These were strung across the ceiling of the lobby and hung on the walls in effective places.

In place of the stereotyped one-sheets, three-sheets and the like, he had a huge hand made of compo-board and in the hand were three playing cards of one-sheet size. The first card was the Joker, with the face of Sid Chaplin in the place of the face of the Joker. In a like manner, the heroine's face was on the Queen-card and the heavy on the other.

Although it was very simple, it caught the eye, and that's the real object of a lobby, after all.

"Blot" Exploitation Interests School Teachers

When Louis Felt, manager of the Aldine theatre in Wilmington, Del., booked "The Blot," Marc Lachmann, exploitation representative for the F. B. Warren Corporation, made a trip to that city and stirred up keen enthusiasm among the local movie fans for a record-breaking week with this picture.

Lachmann arranged with Dr. David Ward, superintendent of public schools, for a special showing of "The Blot" to members of his staff and the teachers of Wilmington. The story of "The Blot" deals with the low wages paid to school teachers in America. Three hundred and twenty-five teachers attended this showing and left the theatre exploiting the picture with valuable mouth-to-mouth advertising two days before the opening. Every newspaper in Wilmington devoted first-page space to the event and printed interviews with Ward and others.

The Parker Fountain Pen stunt was used. The Aldine gave Parker pens as prizes for the best essays on "What Is the Greatest Blot in Our American Life of To-day"? The Parker people furnished 300 cards, which were used in billing Wilmington like a circus on trees, fences, in windows, etc.

Lachmann then had cards made, which were placed on every writing desk in the lobby of the beautiful Du Pont Hotel. The following was printed in every card:

Did you Blot Your Letter? Now Blot your Troubles with a Visit to the ALDINE THEATRE to see LOIS WEBER'S great American drama, "THE BLOT." Life will seem brighter after seeing this human drama.

The Wilmington newspapers were liberal with their space, and many feature stories and interviews were printed on "The Blot."

A cut on the opposite page shows the "school mam's" assembled in front of the Aldine theatre, with Mr. Lachman at the left of the crowd.

Farmyard Lobby Display Effective as Business Builder

A real old-fashioned "farm-yard" was erected in the lobby of the Rialto theatre, Augusta, recently for a showing of "Homespun Folks," by Manager Shields.

A white picket fence with a gate closed the lobby off from the sidewalk. Behind this, masking the sides of the lobby, ran a red brick wall, with flowers climbing over it, and a small fruit tree at one side of the lobby was pink with blossoms, so real looking that you could almost smell them.

Once inside the picket fence there was a pile of wood waiting to be split, with a sharp but much used ax buried half-way to the hilt in a sizable pine log. At the left of the entrance was a well with a pulley and a "moss-covered" bucket. Beside it was a watering-trough, showing signs of hard usage, for the "stock."

At the right was a white-painted chicken coop, in which a bantam rooster and his mate clucked and scratched in the fresh, moist earth with which their coop had been floored.

The ushers wore overalls, and the cashier was dressed in a simple gingham frock, with a sunbonnet hanging down her back, the strings tied about her throat.

The rural atmosphere was carried out even in the music, and the picture played to good business through its two-day run.

Jackson Makes Good Use of Cut-Outs

Manager James F. Jackson, of the Tudor theatre, Atlanta, banks a great deal on the use of the cut-out; and its effectiveness was once more splendidly demonstrated for a lobby front on "Midnight Follies."

The front of the theatre represented the sides of a bathing pool or fountain. In the center of the lobby was the fountain itself, water fed into it by a big bronze lion.

Cut-outs of five men in evening clothes are posed in the water, all with arms lifted imploringly to another cut-out of a slender, very pretty girl scantily clad, who sits on the edge of the fountain laughing heartily at the plight of her suitors.

Wrecked Car Used to Exploit Picture

For a return engagement of "Too Much Speed," Manager George Schmidt of the Strand theatre, Atlanta, demonstrated to Atlantans the dire results of "too much speed."

Occupying the center of the lobby was a broken down, dilapidated automobile, the remains of a car which had had a dreadful wreck the evening before. This painted tree lay half across the hood, demonstrating that too much speed had caused the car to leave the road and smash into the tree.

The display was one which had considerable effect on the box-office through the week.

Women's Shop Aids Shields on "Everything for Sale"

Manager Shields, of the Rialto Theatre, Augusta, has ideas of his own about exploitation, which were put into effect one week recently, when he was playing "Everything for Sale."

Manager Shields runs three or four carefully selected advertising slides in his theatre, for various Augusta firms, but is so very particular about the firms which he advertises that it is considered quite an effective ad.

Among these ads is one for a local exclusive little shop catering to wealthy women, so that when the picture came, Manager Shields had no difficulty in arranging a most effective tie-up with this shop.

Wax figures from the shop were placed in the lobby, in front of the ticket office and back of it, to the very edge of the auditorium of the theatre. On these figures were draped the most exquisite garments of feminine apparel that one often sees out of a New York shop.

Prices were marked plainly on each garment, and emphasis was placed on the fact that "everything was for sale."

There is a good-sized space back of the ticket-office, between it and the last row of seats, and this space was carpeted in thick green, with tall wicker vases of fresh flowers furnished by the shop. The lights were dimmed, and the space looked exactly like the display room of some very expensive shop.

It didn't cost the theatre a penny—and did it make a hit!

Vitagraph Chautauqua at Crookston, Minn.

Co-operating with the women's auxiliary of the local post of the American Legion at Crookston, Minn., four Vitagraph feature pictures and two Larry Semon and two Jimmy Aubrey comedies were booked at the New Lyric theatre for "Better Shows for Crookston" Week, an annual event which has now become known as Vitagraph Chautauqua Week. The pictures selected were the three Vitagraph special productions, "Black Beauty," "The Heart of Maryland," and "Trumpet Island," and "The Scarab Ring." The women interested themselves in selling the tickets, coupon tickets for the four attractions being sold at a special price, and the week "went over big."

A. S. Catsworthy, Vitagraph representative, had personal charge of the event. As a first step he thoroughly papered the town. He had everyone talking about Chautauqua Week and secured plenty of newspaper publicity. One of his most successful stunts was the appearance of "Black Beauty," hitched to a buggy and driven by a "hick." On the horse's blanket was printed: "I am driving 'Black Beauty' to 'Trumpet Island' to win 'The Heart of Maryland' with 'The Scarab Ring.'" Oil paintings of the productions were used to adorn the theatre lobby and the street curb.

Seattle Tries the Midnight Matinee Idea

A special Midnight Matinee as a novel means of introducing "The Three Musketeers" was the plan carried out by manager H. B. Wright of the Strand theatre in Seattle recently.

This matinee, which was held at midnight on the Saturday that the picture opened an indefinite run in Seattle, attracted a great number of people, filling the house practically to capacity. All seats for the performance were reserved, and sold rapidly a week before the attraction opened its run.

Barry Burke Puts Over "The Old Nest"

Barry Burke, manager of the beautiful Palace theatre, Ft. Worth, Texas, had a very extraordinary lot of exploitation stunts for "The Old Nest," and we are glad to say he was richly repaid.

Exploitation included twenty-five four-sheets, eighty three-sheets, four hundred one-sheets. One hundred street car signs, the space for which cost nothing. Four window hook-ups (one of which is illustrated on the back page) Western Union desk and girl in lobby. Special showing of picture to Mothers' Congress and newspaper men, and mothers' matinee.

The prelude was an appropriate stage set with a woman made up as mother and a violin solo.

The mothers' matinee was handled through the American Legion and the Palace was host to all "Gold Star" Mothers.

The furniture store window hook-up had a card in it reading "Time to Feather the Old Nest."

The Ft. Worth papers were liberal with their advance notices, the different stunts Burke pulled off, as well as the most

Capitalizes Modern Miracle

Wendt Takes Advantage of Unusual Event Recently Occuring at Toledo

LOUIS LAMONT, Toledo man, has just had his sight restored after a period of twenty years' darkness. A serious operation worked the miracle.

These and similar words told a most wonderful story only recently in Toledo papers. Reading this notice, Harold F. Wendt, Publicity Director of the Rivoli Theatre, Toledo, O., hit upon a plan which was sure to make many friends for his theatre, proving thereby that it is news that counts and that theatres can capitalize upon certain items of timely interest, if they know news when it is news. Wendt has a "nose for news," having been a newspaperman for several years previous to his entering the amusement business.

The papers telling of the restoration of Lamont's sight were hardly on the streets before Wendt got in touch with the "new born old man." Lamont was queried and said that he had never seen a movie, but had seen what they called stereopticon views, twenty years ago, just before he lost his sight. Mr. Lamont was invited to attend a performance at the Rivoli and the newspapers were informed of the coming event.

All the Toledo papers sent good men to cover the story of the erstwhile blindman's first glimpse of a motion picture. Lamont related to the editors the last theatre in which he had been was an extremely dirty place and that he sat on a bench from which he watched the panorama on the bed sheet stretched on the end wall.

He then gave his impressions concerning the new Rivoli theatre with its upholstered chairs and of the wonderful thing that the motion pictures seemed to him.

Toledo papers carried full column accounts of the story as well as having photographers on the job to shoot Lamont. Wendt had a local moving picture man on the job and took pictures of Lamont entering the theatre, his making the acquaintance of Mr. Turpin and his departure. Lamont was invited to return as a guest of the theatre the following week, when he had the unique pleasure of seeing himself upon the screen, as well as taking a trip through the huge projection booth to see what it was that made Lamont, he himself, walk upon the screen.

Baremore Has New Exploitation Idea

At the new Tivoli Theatre, Eig avenue and 50th street, New York, a st that awakened considerable interest in neighborhood was put over by R. W. B more who is handling special publicity the theatre.

Beginning on Monday announcem were sent throughout the neighborh that motion pictures of the children wc be taken in front of the Tivoli Satur afternoon. The cards telling of the ev informed parents that the pictures wc be shown at the Tivoli on the follow Tuesday and Wednesday and then stc in the theatre's vault for six years w they would be shown again. This meth it was explained would give parents opportunity to see their children grow as it was to be an annual event at Tivoli.

Painted signs were used in front of theatre and the stunt given wide publi in several ways, the newspapers also ing attention to the taking of the pictu The cameraman went through the ne borhood in an automobile with signs both sides and back while the camera grinding away. Long before the appoi time crowds of mothers and children v in front of the Tivoli. Many shots, inc ing close-ups, were taken in front of theatre and then from the automobil different sections of the neighborhood

The stunt proved most success Hundreds of inquiries were receive the theatre while the idea made a deci hit with parents who were deeply in ested in learning that they could see t kiddies grow up by means of the Ti motion pictures. Not only did cro turn out for the taking of the films also for the showing of them and in way numberless friends were made for Tivoli. The theatre received unusu fine mouth to mouth advertising that help it to a considerable extent.

Grauman Stages Artistic Prologue for "Footlights"

"Twenty Minutes in Venice, Calif.," was the title of the prologue number, which Sid Grauman, managing director of Grauman's theatre, Los Angeles, recently presented for the premier showing of "Footlights."

The stage was dressed to show the typical Venice Beach board walk, special scenery for the purpose being painted.

In a huge semi-circle on the stage, there stood the faithful snake charmer's booth, the hot dog stand, the fortune teller's retreat, the candy wheel concession and in the center of all—the bathing girl show, presented on a stage within a stage. On the smaller stage, at the beginning of the act, groups of girls in collective poses were revealed by successively drawing the curtain aside. Each group represented a particular California beach for the girls in the act had been the winners of a "Beach Beauty" contest staged by the Los Angeles Evening Express.

Amid the characteristic chatter of the beach "barkers," interposed by the songs of a male trio, the three Romanos sisters appeared in a dance creation. A parade of tiny bathing beauties followed across the stage. Then, ushered by two automobiles in which several adult beauties rode, the parade proper began, accompanied by members of the orchestra playing wind instruments, marching across the stage as an impromptu band. Previous to this, a score of civilians had filed before the booths, and three halted, peering offstage seeming to watch the approach of the parade. Whereupon each of the beauties appeared singly. In conclusion, every member of the company assembled and joined in a final chorus.

Boquets Admits Patrons at Indianapolis Alhambra

The Alhambra of Indianapolis used a colorful bit of exploitation for "Mother O' Mine" this week with generous recognition from the papers. During the latter part of last week it was advertised that all who would bring a bouquet to the first few showings of the film on Sunday would be admitted free. The bouquets, it was explained, were to be given to all the mothers in Indianapolis hospitals. Both the Alhambra and the mothers fared well.

Somerville Builds Another Atmospheric Lobby Front

Manager Somerville, of the Isis theatre, Greensboro, N. C., formerly of the 14th Street theatre, New York, created a fine Chinese lobby on "Where Lights Are Low" last week, one of the most artistic and complete in detail ever shown in Greensboro. Chinese lanterns of all colors and shapes lined the front of the theatre, and inside the lobby, covering all the light globes and making a subdued effect. A specially made, huge box-like lantern covered with yellow cheese-cloth was hung outside, with the name of the feature and Hayakawa traced in Chinese letters. Canvas covered the side walls on which were painted wistaria vines and garden scenes, with bright butterflies and flowers. Fresh, green turf along the floor added realism. The ticket-booth was transformed into a yellow canvas pagoda. Black dragons were painted on the front walls, and two Chinese flags hung outside. Weird music kept up the atmosphere inside.

"Wordless Speech" for "Too Much Speed"

With a 'wordless speech" the Rotarians of Charlestown, Kentucky, introduced a "Too Much Speed" campaign. At the noon-day meeting of the Rotary Club, the president introduced one of the members, W. A. Abbott, who was to deliver a message without articulation. The man reached beneath the table and produced the now-familiar "Too Much Speed warning hand taken from the block Paramount one-sheet.

The members were aware that an anti-speed drive was being sponsored by the organization, and the dramatic introduction of the slogan and symbol was especially impressive. The newspapers had been following the "wordless speech" innovation closely and the incident received free publicity. One of the best tie-ups was with the Yellow Cab Company, the taxi monopoly of the town, which printed an ad with the warning hand. Norman Dixon, Paramount exploiteer from Cincinnati did it all this time.

Franklin Extends Himse for "Old Nest"

"The Old Nest" played Shea's Hip drome, Buffalo, last week and for the gagement Managing Director Harold Franklin worked out one of his arti presentations.

Artificial trees to which had been wi artificial apple blossoms were attached the pillars of the marque. Real b nests were placed in the branches. Ha ing from the sides of the marquee w pieces of boards on which was pair "The Old Nest." Trees, blossoms birds' nests continued into the lobby.

The prologue which Manager Fran originated for the showing was unusu interesting. It opened with Lake's nov overture, "In a Bird Store," played by Hippodrome orchestra, as the stage set showing the front of a bird store was veiled. Manager Franklin arranged a local bird establishment for about cages of all sizes inclosing various b from parrots down to canaries. When music in the theatre started the songs of the flock began to sing.

As the overture closed the stage dimmed and Whistler's painting "Moth was unveiled as a soloist sang Dvor "The Old Mother."

The feature itself began as the last n of the song died away. As an accomp ment for the Buffalo presentation Franklin secured the score recently during the showing at the New Capitol theatre.

Postals Advertise Coming Showing of All Star Picture

Manager H. A. Schwann of the O'Kare theatre, Eau Claire, Wis., is already advertising his forthcoming engagement of "The Affairs of Annatol."

Mr. Schwann and Leon J. Bamberger, Paramount exploiteer, have devised a scheme to advise all of Eau Claire that "The Affairs of Annatol," is a real all star picture.

One of the stills is a group picture of all the artists and technical staff involved in the picture. This formed one side of a post card. The reverse side set apart space for the address and the other half, contained a key to the principals in the picture. It was inexpensive and Mr. Schwann says it has started the ball of discussion rolling and the picture is eagerly awaited.

This cut shows how Manager Williford of the Rialto theatre, Union, S. C., uses cut-outs to advantage in exploiting his attractions.

Williford Dresses Up for Sunday Shows

The accompanying cut shows the way Manager Williford of Rialto theatre, Union, S. C., dresses up his lobby for Sunday display. While Constance Talmadge and Ruth Roland are featured, the whole week's program is pictured. The big banner and cut-out caught the attention first, and the whole group provided ten minutes' interest to all passers-by—which means a large proportion of the population in his case.

Baltimore Window Display Secured by Boasberg

Accompanying is a cut showing a window display, which Albert Boasberg, Paramount exploiter secured in a Baltimore drug store during the showing of "The Great Moment," playing at the Century theatre.

The drug store gave a window which was half-covered by an enormous banner, which in turn was dominated by the Star's name. The picture was playing at the Century theatre.

Gigantic Bill Board Advertises Missouri Attractions

The National Printing and Engraving Company erected a 258-sheet poster for the Missouri theatre, St. Louis, which the National proclaims to be the "World's Largest Poster." The enormous board is 93 feet wide and 20 feet high. To execute these posters required two Miehl presses on which the 84 double sheet blocks were printed, and two medium presses for the 90 single blocks. The paper alone weighed 35 pounds. The entire work of printing and mounting the paper took four days' time.

This was part of the Missouri's plan to knock 'em cold for "The Great Moment." Charles E. Raymond, the Paramount exploiteer, contracted for the work.

Brooker Uses Teaser Advertising for "Too Much Speed"

Manager Brooker of Loew's Theatre, Ottawa, Ontario, put over a real sensation prior to the presentation of "Too Much Speed," at the Loew house during the week of September 12. Previous to an announcement that this picture would be screened at the theatre, a mysterious notice appeared in the local newspapers to the effect that "Robert McMorran" would offer the sum of $5,000 towards the apprehension and conviction of persons guilty of "Too Much Speed. The advertisements were addressed as a "Warning to Motorists" and fairly large display space was used for the notifications. The notice pointed out that "automobile accidents are becoming so numerous and attended by such serious results" that the reward would be offered. "Patrick McMorran" announced himself as a "citizen and victim of speed fiends," but this was one of the characters in the feature.

On the next day, regular announcement was made that "Too Much Speed" was the title of the next feature at Loew's Theatre.

Mr. Brooker pulled off another stunt on Labor Day when he secured about 30 small boys to march in the local Labor Day parade to advertise Bill Hart's "The Whistle. Each of the boys was outfitted in overalls on which has been sewn the name of the theatre and the title of the current attraction. In addition, the boys diligently blew small tin whistles all through the time of the parade. Incidentally, the lads were more than willing to co-operate with the theatre in order to be in a parade and to be able to make a noise with a whistle. Brooker also used large window space adjacent to the theatre for the exhibiting of a large model of a factory behind which was erected a huge cutout of a steam whistle and also a cutout of Bill Hart.

Clowns Aid Borders with "The Man Tamer"

Professional clowns helped G. F. Borders, manager of the Airdome, Flora, Ill., put over "The Man Tamer."

Mr. Borders found three men in Flora who formerly had been clowns with Barnum and Bailey's circus. These he dressed in regulation clown costumes, and had them parade the town, mounted on burros. They carried a life-size cut-out of Gladys Walton in her lion tamer's costume.

The former clowns remembered many of their old stunts, and created great amusement for the populace of Flora, by staging a one-ring circus at all the important street corners.

Taxicab Company Aid Goldstein Exploit Pictu

"The Girl in the Taxi" was the f booking of the Star Theatre, Portla Ore., after the arrival in the city of new manager, Munro Goldstein. Go stein wasted no efforts on building a sp tacular lobby for his first show and i dentally he built not only a successful but one of the cheapest fronts that ever attracted attention to the Star tic window.

During early and late hours a silhou figure was placed in the cab.

The taxi cost the Star theatre noth as it meant good advertising for its o ers. With the exception of the sev hand-painted posters and framed carc formed the entire lobby which was unusual it attracted unsolicited atten in the leading Portland newspaper.

Stellings Pulls New One for "Love Special"

Ernest G. Stellings, manager of the Grand theatre, Wilmington, N. C., whose clever little novelties have helped put over many a picture playing at the Grand has originated another stunt that stamps him a genius.

Mr. Stellings was playing "The Love Special" and wanted an inexpensive exploitation stunt. He found it in a railway time table.

Wilmington is a Coastline railroad town with office, round house and shops located there. The Seaboard Air Line is another railway running into Wilmington. It was to the Seaboard people that Mr. Stellings went with his idea, which was that the railroad should furnish 5000 of their red covered multiple page time tables for distribution about the city, on which had been pasted some "Love Special" advertising. The railroad advertising department jumped at the chance of publicising the route and all that Mr. Stellings did was to furnish his sticker advertising for the front page in the shape of a herald worded as follows:

"The Love Special. Running from all points and taking all passengers to Lover's Paradise. The Love Special will arrive in Wilmington over The Seaboard Air Line R. R. at 11:00 A. M. Friday, Aug. 5, and will carry passengers daily until Saturday, Aug. 6, at 11 P. M. when it leaves. Wallace Reid, Engineer; Theodore Roberts, President; Agnes Ayres, Passenger. Tickets will be sold at the special station located at the Grand Theatre for the round trip. Fare: Day, 17c.; Evening, 22c. New seats every hour and 20 minutes starting at 11:00 A. M. each day. In Wilmington. Friday and Saturday, Aug. 5 and 6 only!"

Other exploitation devised for the showing consisted of a special lobby display in which the front of the theatre was covered with painted scenery representing a railway station. This of course made a hit in a railroad town.

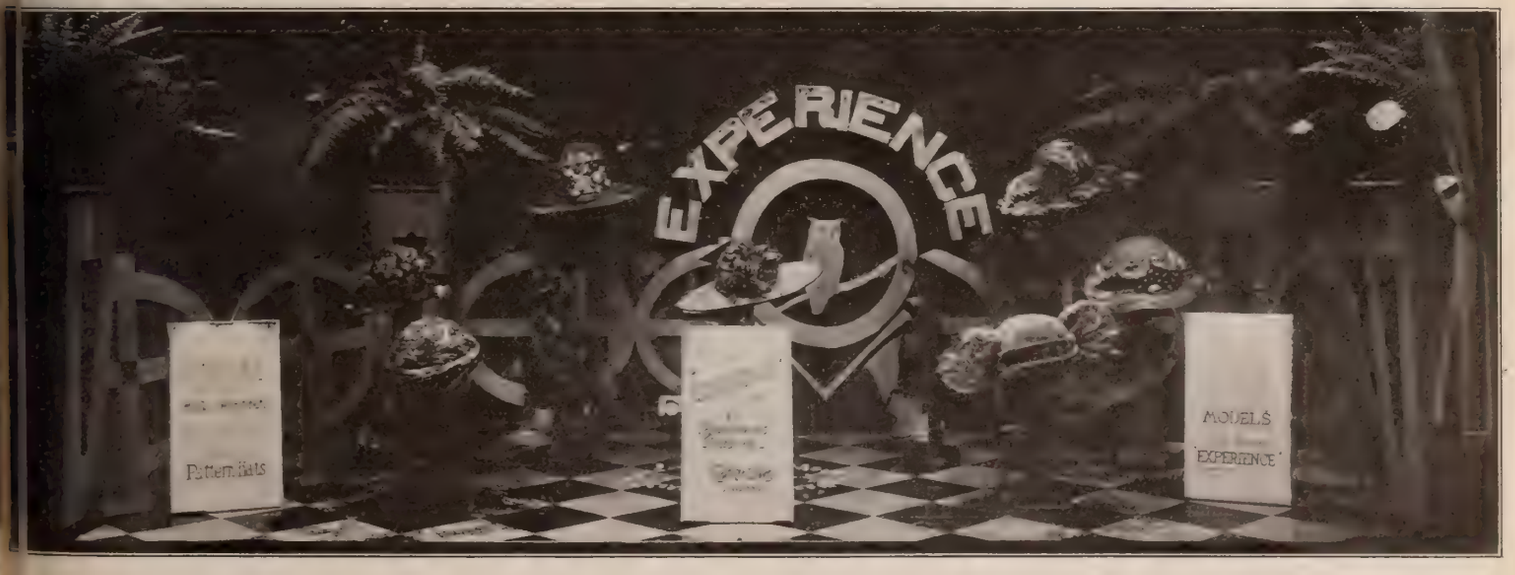
New Kind of Tag Day Originates in Baltimore

It was tag day in Baltimore but it did not cost the citizens anything. Four nice old ladies were placed at the principal street intersections and "tagged" every man that passed. The button-hole ornament of a paper flower on a wire stem. There was a little tag dangling to the stem reading: "Plucked from the Primrose Path at the Century Theatre."

This was part of Albert Boasberg's exploitation for "Experience" playing at the Century theatre. The Paramount exploiteer found that the cost of the flower, tag and all was less than one cent. The stunt was 100 per cent effective. The boutonniere was unusual and the men naturally read the tag to see what it was all about. Secretary Edwin L. Hall of the Whitehurst Enterprises that control the Century is now completely sold on "exploitation."



This window display for "Experience" was secured for the showing of this picture at the Circle theatre, Indianapolis

Music and The Picture

Liberty Boosts Sunday Concert Receip

Portland Civic Organizations Compete in Local Musical Event

THE Liberty theatre, Portland, Ore., a Jensen and Von Herberg house, managed by Paul Noble, has recently put over a musical event that boosted the attendance at the Sunday concerts held weekly at 12:30 noon to capacity business, helped the Liberty daily attendance. interested the whole city anew in music and brought untold publicity for a period of five months.

The Liberty offered a $500 prize to the Portland civic organization which should present the best musical program of four numbers at a Sunday concert. Any civic organization was eligible to the competition which required absolutely no financial outlay on the part of the competitors. Attendance formed the basis of the award, the ticket machine being checked a half hour before the concert commenced and again at the close of the musical.

Twenty organizations entered programs so that the contest extended over a period of five months. The number of persons who were affected by the competition approximates at least 15,000 as the memberships were informed to a man by each group when it came time for its respective program to be played.

Some of the largest and most cultured groups in Portland participated under the name of charity. Some of the worthiest and smaller groups entered the contest because they frankly needed the prize of $500.

Typical of the clubs who entered were the American Legion, Press club, Musicians' club, Society of Oregon Composers, Drama league, Civic league, Newsboys' union, Elks, B'nai Brith, Community Service, Portland Symphony orchestra, Women's Ad club and others.

The local order of B. P. O. E. won the prize and the presentation of the check to the leader of the Elks' band on the Liberty stage was made an event of public interest. When the Elks were promoting their program their band and drum corps paraded business streets for two hours preceding the concert. They had 1,745 persons enter the Liberty between the hours of 12 and 1 p. m. and the Liberty seating capacity is but 2,000. Many persons wishing to hear the concert and not wishing to fight for a seat came earlier as the house opens at 11 a. m.

Second to the Elks was the Community Service, one of the several competing organizations to get Sunday first page publicity for the Liberty and its Sunday noon concert. Their program came at a time when adverse criticism of motion pictures and propaganda for stricter censorship was rampant and undoubtedly it did much to help the screen cause.

The Community Service chose Mothers' day as the Sunday on which to enter their program. A tableau presentation of the painting, "My Mother," by Whistler, was reproduced while one of the most famous singers of the northwest whom money could not have coaxed on the Liberty stage, sang Kipling's "Mother O' Mine." In addition the Community Service announced through the press that a basket of carnations would be given to the oldest mother present and that any mother who wished transportation might call their office and would be taken in a machine to the theatre as their guest. Tickets for these mothers were furnished by girls of the Community Service.

A score of Portland's richest and best known business and professional men sold papers at a business intersection one Saturday noon to help boost the program entered by the newsboys' union.

Portland police took out the patrol wagon and manned by "coppers" dressed in grotesque style "ran in" men found on the streets the Sunday noon of the Police Beneficiation association program. The prisoners were brought to the Liberty and fined admission to the theatre. One of the police sergeants sang as an extra feature of the program.

These few programs show that the contest ceased to be a commercial affair and developed into a civic proposition. Everyone became interested and the fact dawned on thousands of persons who did not belong to any of the contesting groups that Sunday noon concerts were a regular feature of the Liberty theatre.

Henri Keates, Liberty master organist, who played the concerts was boosted immeasurably. His name was brought before the attention of the public constantly. Music lovers came to "Heart of the North" Producer in N. Y.

GEORGE H. DAVIS, co-producer with Joe Brandt of "The Heart of the North," the big feature of the North featuring Roy Stewart with Louise Lovely, which is selling so rapidly on the States Right market, arrived in New York this week from the West Coast.

Mr. Davis, who is treasurer of Quality Film Productions, Inc., the new feature producing unit of which Mr. Brandt is president, made the trip across continent for the special purpose of helping to wind up negotiations pending on the disposal of territorial rights to "The Heart of the North," on which almost all the territories are already sold solid—and to help on the preparation of special exploitation in many of the territories.

Two Popular Stars in "Parted Curtains"

That "Parted Curtains," the Warner Brothers' latest release, bids fair to be one of the outstanding attractions of the year is the firm conviction of Harry M. Warner, senior member of the Warner organization. Mr. Warner bases his statement on the fact that the production contains two stars, Henry B. Walthall, star of "The Birth of a Nation," and Mary Alden, featured player in the "Old Nest," and a strong story.

"The long list of screen plays which Mr. Walthall has starred in," said Mr. Warner, "in addition to his known ability as an actor of renown is but one of the factors that make 'Parted Curtains' a good box office asset. Then there is Miss Alden, who has taken the screen world by storm with her superlative characterization in in 'The Old Nest.' These two stars, offered in one picture, are seldom available for exhibitors. In fact, few productions can really boast of star players for the average feature—although it usually boasts of an all star cast—does not live up to the standard demanded by the public today."

Arrow Chief on Long Tour

Shallenberger Will Confer With Arrow Producers on West Coast

W. E. SHALLENBERGER, president of the Arrow Film Corporation, left recently for an extended trip to the Coast. Dr. Shallenberger intends to stop over in Chicago on an important business deal now pending and expects to remain there a few days when he will continue his trip to the Coast where many important matters await him.

Dr. Shallenberger was accompanied by Morris R. Schlank, who is producing two series of comedies for the Arrow Film Corporation, who are releasing them under a franchise plan. Mr. Schlank has been in New York for a week attending to business connected with his pictures and although he had completed his plans some days previous he waited to accompany Dr. Shallenberger back to the Coast.

While in California Dr. Shallenberger will confer with Ben Wilson, William LaPlante, Eddie Lyons, Reggie Morris, S. M. Herzig and Mr. Schlank, all of whom are producing pictures for "Arrow" release.

Schlank, Herzig and Morris are making two-reel comedies which are being released under the franchise plan and which number such well known players as Eddie Barry, Helen Darling, Jay Belasco, Vera Reynolds, Margaret Cullington, Lilly Leslie, Paul Weigle Harry Gribbon, Neely Edwards, Charlotte Merriam, Eddie Baker, Jack Duffy, Keene Thompson, Harry Tenbrook, and many others equally well known to film fans of these comedies.

Eddie Lyons of the famous team of Lyons and Moran is making a series of special comedies while William LaPlante is filming four novels from the best known works of the late Jack London for "Arrow" distribution. Ben Wilson is making a new serial of "Nan of the North" which stars Ann Little, a series of six Western pictures starring Jack Hoxie and a series of four features from the published works of Peter B. Kyne, so it can be readily seen that there is a great deal of activity among "Arrow" producers on the Coast at the present time.

Film Wins 40 First Runs

"Why Girls Leave Home," Warner Picture, Has Unusual Reception

OVER forty first run contracts on the Warner Brothers' production, "Why Girls Leave Home," have been consummated with exhibitors throughout the country, according to Harry M. Warner, senior member of the Warner organization. In New England alone it is said that fourteen theatres played the production for one and two weeks to capacity audiences. The bookings are said to have been made in one week, following the initial canvassing of salesmen of the Federated Film Exchange which controls the rights to the picture for that territory.

That "Why Girls Leave Home" bids fair to be one of the biggest box-office attractions of the season is attributed, by Mr. Warner, to the fact that S. Barrett McCormick, of the Allen theatre, Cleveland; William Fox, with his first run houses in Detroit, St. Louis and Denver; Temple, Toledo; and scores of others throughout the country lost no time in booking the production.

Harry Rapf, the producer, declared the feature possesses all the elements of popular appeal and that its universal theme—the question of why girls leave home—offers exhibitors one of the greatest opportunities for exploitation and newspaper feature stories. As an example of what has been accomplished with newspapers by the picture, Mr. Rapf stated that no production ever shown on Broadway has received as much free newspaper comment from the New York dailies as "Why Girls Leave Home."

Special Trailers Prepared for Serial

The National Screen Service of New York has prepared two special trailers for the use of exhibitors presenting the new Tarzan serial "Adventures of Tarzan." One of these trailers consists of a pictorial background, illustrating with photographs and drawings the wild animal thrills in the serial. This trailer carries the presentation announcement of the producers and distributors of the Tarzan chapter play, as well as mentioning the names of the stars and the author Edgar Rice Burroughs.

The second trailer is for use in connection with the showing of each episode. This consists of a brief resume of the highlights.

Eddie Lyons Comedies for Arrow Release

ON the eve of his departure for California, W. E. Shallenberger, president of the Arrow Film Corporation, made an announcement which will be particularly interesting to Independent Exchange men.

A series of two-reel supercomedies will shortly be released by the Arrow Film Corporation starring the well known screen comedian, Eddie Lyons, according to Dr. Shallenberger.

Dr. Shallenberger stated that arrangements were made with Mr. Lyons several months ago to produce a series of two-reel comedies which will justify that much-abused term "super," and so Dr. Shallenberger says "Eddie" has certainly made good. The first two comedies, "Oh! Daddy" and "Pardon Me," have already been received.

"The Road to Arcady" Cast Commended

A notable trio of stars is one of the outstanding features of "The Road to Arcady," the first of a series of four society dramas to be released on the independent market by J. W. Film Corporation, according to E. S. Manheimer who recalls the past triumphs of the three leading artists.

"Miss Virginia Lee, who as the leading character in "The Road to Arcady" is said to achieve her greatest success, has a large number of screen triumphs to her credit," said Mr. Manheimer. In 'A Woman of Two Worlds,' a First National production, Miss Lee scored highly in a role that demanded unusual ability. It was after this attainment that J. W. Film Corporation successfully bid for her services.

"Roger Lytton and Harry Benham are the two other figures of this stellar triangle.

"Moving" Title of Next Tweedy Comedy

"Moving" has been selected as the title for the next comedy in the Mirth series being produced by the Shiller Productions for the Reelcraft Pictures Corporation, and in which Tweedy is featured.

The picture is full of actual experiences and happenings which have occured to nearly everyone. This is the ninth in the series and is said to be the best of the lot.

New Independent Distributors Organize

Orbis Pictures, Inc., has been organized under the corporate laws of the state of New York to conduct business as an independent motion picture distributing organization. An announcement to this effect is made this week from the executive offices of the company at 130 West 46th street, New York City.

It is the purpose of Orbis Pictures, Inc., to acquire productions for independent release, and either dispose of them to independent exchanges or else dispose of the product to the exhibitors themselves. The men behind the new enterprise are said to be motion picture men of character and calibre. This it is declared, will insure maximum results for all producers entrusting their product with the Orbis distributing unit.

Clark-Cornelius Name First of 24 Releases

Under their plan of twenty-four productions during the coming year, Clark-Cornelius will inaugurate their releases with "Whispering Women," a picture which is presented by James Keane.

This will be followed by "The Recoil," starring George Cheesboro. The pictures will be released on the individual plan with the exception of the series of Cheesboro pictures. The Cheesboro productions are of the Northwest mounted police type and will be eight in number.

Novelty Post Card Aids Sale of Arrow Picture

The Publicity Department of the Arrow Film Corporation has issued a novelty post card of "Kiki," the dog star from their novelty film, "Watching Eyes," which has attracted a great deal of attention; many inquiries from exhibitors having been received from all over the country in the comparatively short space of time of one week.

"Barricade" Has English and Jewish Titles

As the central figure in William Christy Cabanne's new production, "The Barricade," is an elderly and kindly Hebrew and as the picture will have deep appeal for those of the Jewish faith, Mr. Cabanne has arranged to have a number of prints made with both English and Jewish titles. These prints will be distributed by R-C Pictures Corporation to theatres in neighborhoods with Jewish population.

Dancing Novelties in Christie Comedy

Two distinctive dancing novelties are offered as incidental bits of atmosphere in Christie's latest comedy for Educational, called "Kiss and Make Up," which features Helen Darling and Earl Rodney.

One of these dances is the "Sh-h!" number offered by the dancers from the Los Angeles Midnight Frolic, who were engaged for this picture. The other is a specialty dance by Dagmar Dahlgren, a dancer of considerable renown.

Jane Novak, starring in Chester Bennett Productions, distributed by Associated Photoplays, Inc.

Stimulating Effect of Foreign Films

"A stiff dose of bitters" is the way Carlyle Ellis, director of "Home-Keeping Hearts," the photoplay just released by Playgoers Pictures, characterizes the so-called foreign film invasion. He adds that it is the most salutary tonic American picturemakers have had since Griffith woke up the world with "The Birth of a Nation."

"I'm glad they came and glad we welcomed them," he adds,—"not because they are models for us to follow. They are not. They display almost as many qualities for us to avoid as for us to admire. What they chiefly do worth while is to show us—picturemakers and public—what a conventional rut we have been in.

"A student may learn as much from the bad as from the good. One shows him his faults, the other his opportunities. That is why the German pictures are extraordinarily stimulating. They jar us out of our complacency and open new vistas of possibilities that they themselves only partly penetrate. I would be the last to advocate imitating any of them, but I would also be the last to say they can be ignored."

"Sunshine Harbor" to Be Released Shortly

"Sunshine Harbor," a feature production starring Margaret Beecher and released on the program of the Affiliated Distributors is being prepared for final screening and presentation. A special exploitation campaign is being launched under the direction of the Paglin-Davidson Agency.

A press sheet carrying a number of novel stories and exploitation ideas will be ready next week.

Monopol Pictures Have "Foolish Mothers"

An announcement received from Monopol Pictures Company discloses the fact that "Foolish Mothers," adapted from a story by Wycliff A. Hill, will soon be ready for distribution in the State Rights market. This independent production has a cast headed by such well-known players as Enid Markey, Edward Coxen and Jack Standing.

Monty Banks Comedies Booked by Loew

Monty Banks, the Warner Brothers' screen comedian, has begun active work on a new series of two-reel funmakers at the West Coast studios of the Warner organization. This new series, it is declared, will eclipse anything in the line of screen comedy that Mr. Banks has ever attempted, and exhibitors are assured that the motto of clean, wholesome, entertaining comedies will always prevail in Monty Banks' comedies.

The entire series of Banks comedies are said to have been booked by the Loew Circuit. The latest release, "Peaceful Alley," was screened at the new Loew State theatre, New York.

Youthful Actor in Talmadge Film

Glenn Hunter is one of the few screen artists who has been fortunate enough to skip over all the usual preliminaries and start right in playing leading roles in moving pictures from the beginning. However, Mr. Hunter's success on the stage was already an established fact, when he was engaged to play opposite Dorothy Gish in "Oh, Jo," a Paramount production. Thereafter he played with Constance Binney in "The Case of Becky," which Realart claim as among their best offerings. Mr. Hunter seems scheduled for a successful screen career, since he has been engaged to play the role of Willie Ainsley in Norma Talmadge's next First National production, "Smilin' Through."

Bod Kerr Directs All-Star Mermaid Comedy

Bob Kerr, until recently associated with the Hal Roach productions, has been engaged byy Hamilton-White to direct the latest all-star Mermaid Comedy for Educational. Work on the story, which is as yet untitled, began a few days ago at the studio in Hollywood.

This will be the fifth of the new series of Mermaid Comedies which Educational is releasing. The cast includes such well known comedy stars as Jimmie Adams, Lige Conley, Frank Coleman, Jack Lloyd and others. Park Reis is in charge of the photography.

Co-Stars in Selig Serial

Elinor Field and Van Dyke Featured in Export & Import Release

ELINOR FIELD and Truman Van Dyke will be co-starred in the new animal-jungle fifteen episode serial which Colonel Wm. N. Selig is now making for the Export & Import Film Company, Inc., according to an announcement made by this company.

"Colonel Selig has given the star question great thought," runs the Export & Import Film Co. statement, "and had any number of top-rank stars available for use in this feature serial. Elinor Field and Truman Van Dyke were chosen to meet the peculiar demands of the story, which is of the super-adventure type, and to guarantee the exhibitor booking the new serial all the box-office value 'word of mouth' advertising can bring him.

"Absolutely no effort will be made to dispose of the new Selig serial until the complete feature is finished. In other words, the Export & Import Film Co., Inc. is not going to sell a 'cat-in-the-bag' as some other producers have done, but will screen every episode before it contemplates the sale of the picture.

"There have been serials which were superb for the first three episodes and then fell flat. Colonel Selig's record is insurance against any such happening with this one. His two previous animal serials, 'The Lost City' and 'Miracles of the Jungle' proved that serials can improve with each episode. This is a very valuable feature for the exhibitor to bank on.

"With Elinor Field and Truman Van Dyke in the leading roles we have two players who will immediately win the public over to this serial. Miss Field is a vivacious, young, athletic type of womanhood and screens unusually well. She is superb for the part she plays."

No release arrangements have been announced by the Export & Import Film Company which controls the worlds rights to the serial. At their offices it was said that a print of the first three episodes was expected in New York momentarily.

United Theatres Aggressive in Boosting Clara Kimball Young

NEWS received from Mr. Johnson, New York representative for the Australasian Films, Ltd., which conducts a chain of theatres throughout Australasia, tells of how the United Theatres set the pace for aggressiveness in exploiting first-run productions in all their houses. The photograph on this page shows the front and lobby of the Crystal Palace theatre in Sydney, Australia, playing Clara Kimball Young in "For the Soul of Raphael." The lobby is forty-five feet wide with a height of thirty-five feet, providing more than generous space for all big displays and ballyhoos. The artistic lines of the arch, the motif of which is also carried out in the entrance, gives this theatre a character at once distinctive and decidedly unusual.

The figure of Clara Kimball Young stands nearly fifteen feet high, done in colors, being a cut-out from a 24-sheet poster. It attracted loads of attention because of its huge size. Backing up the out-front display, there was used two six-sheet stands in the inside of the lobby in addition to several decorated boards carrying squeegees with scenes from the play. Despite the hugeness of the figure of Clara Kimball Young and the large specially painted banner behind her, the display did not hide nor destroy any of the beauty of the front, and left ample space for the crowds to pass in and out of the theatre, as the photo shows.

All of the Clara Kimball Young productions have had their entree into the southern continent through United Theatres, Ltd., who report business as good in all sections with conditions getting better every minute.

"I Defy!" Arouses Interest

Private Showing of Picture Evokes Enthusiastic Comment

PRIVATE showings of "I Defy!" the special feature production which signalizes the re-entrance of Morris A. Kashin into the field of motion picture distribution after a protracted absence, have disclosed a picture which, in the opinion of a selected few who were privileged to see it in its uncompleted form this week, rivals many of the really big feature productions which have been offered to exhibitors in this and in past years. The opinions of those who witnessed the vehicle were of added importance in view of the "hard-boiled" attitude common among these people. After the picture had been shown there was not a dissenting voice other than that Mr. Kashin had acquired a genuine cinema ten-strike.

The enthusiastic reports which have followed the exhibition of the picture have encouraged Mr. Kashin to plan bigger things with his initial offering. At present an intensive advertising and publicity campaign is in the process of formation, the work for which is being done by A. L. Feinman under the personal supervision of Mr. Kashin. Mr. Kashin is also planning a novel form of "retailing" "I Defy!" to the public. The "retail" idea, it is intimated, will be of genuine help to the exhibitor in running the picture.

ITEMS OF THE EXCHANGES AND THEATRES

KANSAS CITY

Conclusive proof that the motion picture theatre attendance is again back to normal was evidenced in Kansas City last week. Playing only ordinary attractions, virtually every downtown first-run house played to a capacity attendance all week, despite strong vaudeville and other theatrical competition.

Perhaps the most outstanding triumph of the week was that of "The Fall of Babylon," which established a new record at the Pantage Theatre. The regular playing schedule was set ahead two hours by Manager J. J. Cluxton. A triple tie-up between D. W. Griffith, the Pantage Theatre and the Kansas City "Post" did much towards packing the house for a week's run.

The S. & T. Film Company, which has been handling "The County Fair" as a road show, have turned over the distribution of the picture in eastern Missouri and Kansas to the Standard Film Company of Kansas City. The film will be handled for Iowa and Nebraska by the Liberty Enterprises of Omaha, Neb.

The First National and Educational Film Exchanges Kansas City branches moved into their new building last week at 1712 Wyandotte street. The new home has been built to accommodate a large supply and the shipping and advertising departments have been arranged to meet the exhibitors' demands for "service," according to E. C. Rhoden, manager of First National.

"Disraeli," George Arliss's latest release has been pronounced "wonderful" by the Kansas City Board of Review, according to the United Artists' Kansas City branch office. "The Three Musketeers" also came in for its share of praise, according to L. J. Doty, assistant manager of the Kansas City branch, who asserted that out of the last fifteen productions that the "scissors" had been used on only two.

W. E. Troug, manager of the Kansas City Goldwyn office, reports that many exhibitors in that territory have taken advantage of the offers for Goldwyn Week beginning October 23, and that a large number of week's bookings have been received.

SAN DIEGO

A Robert Morton organ has been installed at the Rialto Theatre by Managers Harry Payne and Jack Wall, and the first public selections on it were rendered in connection with the showing of "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," which was brought back to San Diego to meet the public demand after its first production at the Spreckels Theatre. Robert C. Bruxton, formerly associated with the Strand Theatre in New York city and more recently with the Mission Theatre in Los Angeles, is the new organist at the Rialto.

If present plans are fulfilled another motion picture house will be opened to the public during the first week of November. This will be the Mission Theatre, which is the new name that has been given to the remodeled Isis Theatre, which has been used for road shows for many years. The Mission Amusement Company has been incorporated, with capital stock of $100,000, to hold the lease on the property and operate the new house. Associated with the company is H. H. Homer, who, for a time, was house manager of the Superba Theatre here. He will occupy a similar position with the Mission Theatre.

The Plaza Theatre succeeded in getting the first showing in this city of the Dempsey-Carpentier pictures, which Manager Russell Rogers put on for a week at 50-75-$1.00 prices, with a big attendance.

H. H. Maloney, for the past seven months manager of the Rialto and Star Theatres at Denison, Texas, has been appointed by the Southern Enterprises, Inc., as manager of the Palace Theatre at Dallas, Texas. W. H. Harwell, formerly manager of theatres at Atlanta and Beaumont, succeeds Floyd Stuart as manager of the Old Mill Theatre at Dallas.

E. P. Carpenter succeeds H. H. Maloney as manager of the Rialto and Star Theatres at Denison.

Fire broke out in the Empire Theatre at Waxahachie, Texas, Sept. 28th, and destroyed fixtures and the interior of the building to the amount of $6,000 damages.

Equipment and fixtures were owned by the Waxahachie Amusement Co., which operates the theatre, with one-third insured. The building, owned by Mrs. Pauline Graber of Brenham, Texas, was not insured.

R. H. Tomlinson and Andrew Willingham, both well known to Texas and Oklahoma film fraternity, have joined the Independent Film Service Company's Oklahoma City staff as salesmen. Willingham will handle the Southern and Tomlinson the northern part of Oklahoma, selling the Independent offerings.

Tom H. Boland has purchased for the First National Exhibitors' Circuit of Oklahoma "Out of Dust," a western frontier picture built up from Frederic Remington's famous paintings of the early days.

Al Raymond just returned from Arkansas reports a big sale in that state of "The Adventures of Tarzan." The Orpheum of Tulsa, Okla., has booked the picture and will be on the schedule of Southern Enterprises for the entire circuit in Oklahoma and Texas.

The Dallas, Texas, branch of the F. B. Warren Corporation, under the management of Mack J. Sparks, reports big increase in business.

C. F. Willingham is now auditor for R. D. Lewis at Dallas Texas. He is a brother of J. F., office manager for Independent Film Service.

CONNECTICUT

An intimated rigid enforcement during the coming months of the Connecticut statutes relative to unattended children visiting motion picture theatres and the appearance of children under twelve years of age on the stage in connection with motion picture-vaudeville programs is being closely and interestedly watched by the management of the innumerable playhouses throughout the state.

An unverified report is that officers of the Connecticut Humane Society and other charities and correctional agencies have been for some time checking up on conditions, with a view to definite action a little later. In a considerable number of cities and towns of the State local police authorities are taking no action, leaving enforcement of the statutes to the state police, special police of the Connecticut Humane Society and other allied agencies.

The Redding, Conn., Moving Picture Company has been organized to furnish high-grade motion picture programs in that community. Shareholders in the new company contend that motion pictures are an essential in community life and to make the "old home town" attractive for a desirable type of residents.

A board of six trustees has been elected by the shareholders, which in turn has elected H. C. McCollam, president; A. G. Barnett, secretary and treasurer, and P. Brett Nash, business manager.

Paid up subscriptions to the stock of the company amount to nearly $900, and it is desired to raise about $100 more. Mr. McCollam will build a small concrete addition to the Sanford gymnasium for housing of the apparatus.

Earl B. Raifstanger, manager of the Mahaiwe Theatre at Great Barrington, Mass., is to appear in the picture "Sisters," which is being filmed throu the Berkshire section of western M chusetts.

Fifth Christie Anniversary

October Also Marks Tenth Anniversary of "Discovery" of Hollywood

OCTOBER marks the fifth anniversary of Christie Comedies as an independent film making enterprise and the tenth anniversary of Al Christie's "discovery" of Hollywood, now the film capital of the world.

In 1911 Christie came West, then as the maker of Nestor Comedies, and settled down in the suburbs of Los Angeles (Sunset Boulevard and Gower Street, Hollywood) picking out a corner which has since become famous as the headquarters of Christie Comedies.

Christie made pictures here several years for Universal company, and when Universal City was built, in 1915, moved with the remainder of the Universal companies.

In 1916, when Al Christie, with his brother, Charles H. Christie, formed their own company, the property at Sunset and Gower was acquired and gradually built up until at present the Christie Film Company's studios and plant covers the entire city block and contains the most complete equipment and facilities of any company specializing in two-reel films.

The first three years of the Christie company were a continual fight for recognition of one-reel films which were marked by a decided trend toward light comedy, absence of slapstick and an effort to tell a pleasing and entertaining and amusing story in a thousand feet of film. By the fourth year Christie's single-reel comedies and two-reel Christie Comedies, were recognized as the leaders in their field, and the fifth year marked the departure of the Christies from the independent market to a national distributing agency, Educational Exchanges, Christie still remains as an independent producer, but with unified marketing of films, considers that the "best theatres everywhere" may best be served.

Christie anniversary month is being marked by intensive booking of the new series of Christie two-reel comedies which are in the Educational exchanges. Pictures already in the hands of the exchanges in the new series are "Nothing Like It," with Dorothy Devore; "Oh, Buddy," with Neal Burns; "In For Life," with Viora Daniel; "Exit Quietly," with Bobby Vernon; "Falling For Fanny," with Eddie Barry; "A Pair of Sixes," with Viora Daniel and Neal Burns; and "Pure and Simple," with Bobby Vernon.

"ThreeMusketeers"Scoring

Washingtonians Fill Theatre at Every Showing in National Capital

UNPRECEDENTED in the history of motion-picture presentation in the city of Washington is the attendance for the first half-week of the showing of "The Three Musketeers," with Douglas Fairbanks playing the role of D'Artagnan, at Loew's Columbia Theatre. Up to Wednesday, October 5th, more than twenty thousand people saw this wonderful United Artists production.

The first performance is started at 10 A. M., and the last is screened at 9:30 P. M. From the moment the doors of the theatre are opened a steady stream of Washingtonians crowd their way into the theatre. By noontime there is a "lockout," and it has been necessary for the police reserves to be present the rest of the day to keep the immense crowds in line, declares a report from the offices of the United Artists.

"It is truly remarkable," said Manager Stutz of the Columbia, "with what unanimity the audience express their opinions after seeing 'The Three Musketeers.' Such expressions as 'this is Doug's greatest picture'—'the most splendid production I have ever seen'—'truly a wonderful picture' — 'Fairbanks makes D'Artagnan live again'—are some of the things you hear as they are filing out. The picture has been a 'sell out' since Sunday, and it bids fair to break all house records in point of attendance. For myself I can say that it is the greatest box office attraction ever offered to an exhibitor."

Manager Stutz also said that the advertising matter and newspaper cuts supplied by United Artists Corporation for this picture are the most effective, and has used the newspaper cuts and reading matter accompanying them, very liberally in the four Washington newspapers.

It is more than likely that "The Three Musketeers" will have an extended run at the Columbia Theatre.

Louise Lorraine, Century comedy leading woman, is being loaned to Universal by Century Comedies, for Hoot Gibson's new picture. Miss Lorraine is very well known and popular in the comedy field where she has been leading her distinct type of beauty in support of well known comedy stars. Her youth and beauty and marked prowess as a horsewoman won her this new honor.

Four New Pictures Started

Reid, Meighan, Agnes Ayres, and Dorothy Dalton Begin Features

REPORTS from Paramount's West Coast studio show that four new Paramount productions have just been started or will be under way in the very near future.

Philip E. Rosen has been engaged to direct Wallace Reid in "The Champion," J. E. Nash's screen adaptation of Grant Mitchell's well known New York starring success, "The Champion," by Thomas Louden and A. E. Thomas, and work is to start in a few days at the Lasky studio.

One of the finest casts that could be assembled has been provided for "The Champion." Lois Wilson, popular Paramount leading woman, who has just completed work in "Miss Lulu Bett," playing the title role in this William de Mille production, will have the feminine lead in "The Champion."

Pauline Starke will be Thomas Meighan's leading woman in his new Paramount picture, "If You Believe It, It's So," which he is just starting under the direction of Tom Forman. Other notable players who will be seen in Mr. Meighan's support in this picture are Joseph Dowling, Theodore Roberts and Charles Ogle. The first scenes are being made at Jamestown, Cal., one of the old-time mining camp towns of '49 and colloquially known as "Jimtown."

Agnes Ayres has started upon her career as a full-fledged Paramount star, having begun work at Hollywood in "The Lane That Has No Turning," which Eugene Mullin adapted from the novel by Sir Gilbert Parker.

An unusually strong cast has been engaged to support Miss Ayres, the line-up including Mahlon Hamilton Theodore Kosloff, Frank Campeau, Wilton Taylor, Raymond Brathwayt, Robert Bolder, Lillian Leighton, Charles West and Frederick Vroom.

With Dorothy Dalton in the featured role, George Melford starts his production at once, "Moran of the Lady Letty," an adaptation by Monte M. Katterjohn of the novel by the late Frank Norris. Miss Dalton has just returned from the East and the company goes on location in Northern California waters to get many of the scenes.

Rudolph Valentine, who was featured with Agnes Ayres in "The Sheik," Mr. Melford's preceding production, has the male lead of Ramon Leredo.

Geo. Melford to Make Norris Story

Having finished his big production of "The Sheik," George H. Melford will next produce for Paramount, Frank Norris's novel, "Moran of the Lady Letty," according to a wire just received in New York from Jesse L. Lasky.

"Two Minutes to Go" Will Have Timely Opening at N. Y. Strand

COMING directly at the opening of the national football season, Charles Ray's next First National release, "Two Minutes to Go," is announced this week by Joseph Plunkett for premiere presentation at the Strand theatre, New York City, on October 23rd. The timeliness of the story, which deals with college football, furnishes an exploitation opportunity that is expected by its sponsors to develop into one of the most successful box office stunts ever undertaken by the Strand. Negotiations are now under way for a tie-up with athletic authorities of the foremost colleges in Greater New York, including Columbia University, New York University, Fordham, College of the City of New York and Stevens Institute.

In "Two Minutes to Go," which is the seventh production in which Arthur S. Kane presents Charles Ray for distribution through First National, there is promised "audience appeal" of the strongest type. The narrative deals with the trials of a young college boy who has difficulties combining the job of early morning milk delivery, that earns him his way through college, with his social activities and with football, which he loves, but which he must forego. Not only do the producers promise all the amusing and lovable Ray situations that have won for this star a permanent place among picture fans, but they assure exhibitors that the same brand of action and suspense which made "Scrap Iron" a box office drawing card will be found in the stirring football match in "Two Minutes to Go."

In addition to a cast of unusual excellence, the feminine lead of which, "Sunshine" Mary Anderson, contributes an appealing performance as a college sweetheart, Mr. Ray has brought to his film a line-up of football players who provide the thrills and rough and tumble of a classic football match. Although the star retained a fast knowledge of the game from his own school days, he worked for two weeks under the guidance of an expert coach before going into the line to make the winning touchdown, the stirring climax of "Two Minutes to Go."

Pathe Releases for Oct. 16 Are Announced

PATHE announces its list of short-subjects scheduled for release the week of October 16th. Heading the list is "The Honor of Rameriz," starring Tom Santschi. In the supporting cast are: Ruth Stonehouse, Bessie Love, Edward Hearns, Thomas Lingham, and Jay Morley.

"Snub" Pollard appears in the one-reel comedy, "Law and Order." Pollard appears as a conscientious district-attorney seeking to bring a local "Klan" of auto thieves to justice. Gaylord Lloyd is featured in another comedy titled "Dodge Your Debts."

On the list is the fourth episode of Charles Hutchison's serial, "Hurricane Hutch." The title is "Smash-Through," and the chapter is said to present the star in some unusual feats of daring.

"The Frog and the Ox" is the title of the release in the Aesop's Film Fables series. The Pathe Review presents in Pathecolor scenes from the Vosges Mountains in France. "Sand and Sunshine" is the title of Hy Mayer's Capitol Travelaughs, and the slow-motion subject presents some amusing views taken in New York Zoological Park.

Strong Cast Supporting Tom Santschi

In "The Honor of Rameriz," which Pathe will release on October 16, it is promised that picture patrons will see a Tom Santschi two-reeler western elevated to the status of an intensely dramatic feature through the excellence of the story and the proved quality of the supporting cast. With this object in view, Producer Cyrus J. Williams engaged Bessie Love for a role of importance equal to that allotted to Ruth Stonehouse—which means that Santschi is supported by two screen favorites who have stellar records of their own. The men in the cast of principals are Edward Hearn, Thomas Lingham and Jay Morley, each of whom has a part calling upon his best abilities and energy.

Universal Buys Noted Stories

Popular Writers Contribute Vehicles for Six Stars

UNIVERSAL has bought more than a dozen novels and short stories from the best-known writers in America as vehicles for its six Special Attraction stars.

Frank Mayo will appear in several notable Special Attractions written by eminent authors. A Clarence Buddington Kelland novel, "Wards of the North" which appeared in the American Magazine, will be filmed under the title "Mischief." Another punch-full North Woods story for this star will be "Out of the Silent North," written by Harry Drago and Joseph Noel. These two stories, together with his forthcoming feature "Doctor Jim," furnish the popular star with a trio of sure-fire vehicles which go far in cementing Mayo's grip on the many fans who look forward to seeing him in strenuous outdoor roles of this sort.

"Ropes," a tense story of adventure by Wilbur Daniel Steele, which appeared in Harper's Magazine, has been purchased for Miss du Pont. The blonde star portrays the character of a lighthouse-keepers daughter and the script affords excellent opportunity for this actress to demonstrate unusual dramatic ability. Paul Scardon, will supervise the making of this five-reeler. The story is teeming with thrills, full of absorbing incidents and is a narrative well suited to Miss du Pont's type of beauty and talent. Many opportunities for magnificent and artistic photographic effects abound in the story, it is said.

For Hoot Gibson, Universal's newest star, there have been bought two stories, "Trimmed and Burning" and "Sou'west." "Trimmed and Burning," by Hapsburg Liebe appeared in Colliers.

"Princess Virtue" has been chosen as the next starring vehicle for Marie Prevost. The chic little star will begin work on the new feature the latter part of the week under the direction of George Cox, who has been specially appointed to handle the Prevost picture.

Louise Winter is the author of Miss Prevost's new story, the continuity of which has just been completed by Doris Schroeder, who is also responsible for the scenarios of her first two Universal successes. Casting is now in progress for the story and the list of supporting players soon will be announced.

Another Prevost story bought by Universal for the former bathing beauty is "Sandman." This appealing narrative received considerable praise when it appeared in Telling Tales Magazine. "Sandman" was written by J. U. Giesy and W. M. Clayton.

Gladys Walton is assured of two splendid vehicles, "The Gutter-snipe" by Percival Wilde and "Kind Deeds" by William Slavens McNutt, which appeared in the Metropolitan Magazine. "The Gutter-snipe" is a typical Walton role, almost made-to-order for the winsome, hoydenish star. It is the narrative of one Mazie O'Day who is the life of the Gas House district in New York's little Ireland, Miss Walton, ever fond of a good scrap, has ample opportunity to display her fistic ability in this forthcoming feature which will be directed by Dallas Fitzgerald from the continuity by Wallace Clifton.

Herbert Rawlinson, Universal's newest masculine star, will appear in "The Black Bag," the internationally famous mystery story by Louis Joseph Vance, and "Molloy Campeador" by R. G. Kirk, which appeared in a recent issue of the Saturday Evening Post.

Cast of "Hail the Woman"

Includes Florence Vidor, Hughes, Theo. Roberts, and Madge Bellamy

THE tendency of producers to make their big specials with casts composed entirely of players of outstanding prominence and popularity instead of with single stars is emphasized by the announcement of the cast of "Hail the Woman," the forthcoming Thomas H. Ince production which will be released late this Fall as a First National attraction.

When C. Gardner Sullivan, of the literary staff of the Ince studios, submitted the story of "Hail the Woman" to Mr. Ince it was obvious that the production required not one star but half a dozen.

Florence Vidor, whose work in several Thomas H. Ince productions has been so remarkable that she holds rank as a star, was plainly the most suited for the role of Judith Beresford, heroine of the story, and she was cast by John Griffith Wray, the director for the first place in the cast.

The part of David Beresford, Judith's brother, required a player who could portray a youth of weak characteristics as compared with the stronger personality of the sister, without sacrificing the sympathy of the audience, and Lloyd Hughes, who has played most successfully in the past with Florence Vidor, was selected.

An arrangement was made with Jesse L. Lasky for the services of Theodore Roberts, making a third player of star proportions a member of the "Hail the Woman" cast, and Gertrude Clair was cast for the "mother" part. Madge Bellamy got the role of Nan Higgins, the "wronged" girl in "Hail the Woman." Tully Marshall, famed for her character portrayals, Vernon Dent, Edward Martindel, Charles Meredith, and Mathilde Brundage—every one a well-known player and a favorite with the screen public—have parts of importance in the production. Eugenia Hoffman, an amazingly clever baby, and Murial Frances Dana, a child actor of unusual ability, have roles that are far from insignificant.

Mr. Ince has proclaimed "Hail the Woman" his "great American drama of today," and preliminary reports from the studios, where the picture has been completed and cut, indicate that it will fully meet every expectation.

Duncan Film Completed

Edith Johnson Appears as Co-Star; Antonio Morena Film Progressing

VITAGRAPH announces the completion of the new William Duncan production, in which Edith Johnon appears as the co-star, and also reports rapid and satisfactory progress on the new Antonio Moreno starring vehicle at the West Coast studios of the Vitagraph organization.

The production presenting William Duncan and Edith Johnson in co-starring roles is as yet untitled. It is based on an original story by J. Raleigh Davies and was filmed under the personal direction of Mr. Duncan. The prints have been received at the Eastern offices and those who have seen the picture declare that it undoubtedly is one of Mr. Duncan's best. It presents both stars in different type of roles from which they recently have become so closely associated.

In addition to Mr. Duncan and Miss Johnson, the cast includes Jack Richardson, Henry Herbert, Mathilde Brundage and Charles Dudley.

Betty Francisco heads the cast supporting Antonio Moreno in his new Vitagraph production, which is now well under way at the Hollywood studio. Others in the cast include Lila Leslie, Harry L. Van Meter, John MacFarland and Allan Garcia.

The Moreno picture, as yet without a title, is based on the story by George Cameron. Its theme is a modernized story of David, who coveted Beth-Sheba, the beautiful wife of Uriah and sent the husband into the forefront of the hottest battle in order that he might be killed. In the modern picture story Moreno, as the husband, is sent to the worst fever stricken section of India. All the scenes and action are laid in India and are said to be unusually spectacular.

Pathe's Strong Releases

Allen's Wild Animal Pictures Will Augment October 23 List

IN announcing its short subjects for release the week of October 23d, Pathe Exchange, Inc., states that "Capturing Lions by Aeroplane," the second of the series of "Major Jack Allen's Wild Animal Pictures," will augment the schedule.

"The Flaming Trail" is the next story of Holman Day to reach the screen. The scenes are laid in the Maine woods with a forest fire giving plenty of thrills to the exciting story. Edgar Jones and Edna May Sperl are the featured players with Ben Hendricks, Jr., John Woodford and Carlton Brickert playing prominent roles.

Hal Roach presents Gaylord Lloyd in "Trolley Troubles" the latest comedy featuring the brother of the well-known Harold. Gaylord is assisted in the offering by Beatrice La Plante and the entire staff of the Hal Roach Comedians.

"Late Hours" is the title of the current Hal Roach comedy featuring Eddie Boland. "Sunshine Sammy," Ethel Broadhurst, Jean Hope, Dagmar Delgren and Lilymae Wilkinson assist the comedian in his antics and help make the fun fast and furious.

"One Against Many" is the title of the fifth episode of the new Pathe serial, "Hurricane Hutch." starring Charles Hutchinson.

"The Dog and the Bone" is the current animated cartoon of the "Aesop's Film Fables" series produced by Fables Pictures, Inc., and created by Cartoonist Paul Terry. Pathe Review, No. 126, presents an exceptional group of widely diversified subjects.

Commend Gibson Drama

Universal Chiefs Approve of His Choice as Special Attraction Star

"SURE FIRE," in which Hoot Gibson stars, has convinced Universal officials that Hoot Gibson will measure up in every particular to organization's standard for its Special Attraction Stars. While the star's previous efforts in "Action" and "Red Courage" gave entire satisfaction, final judgment was withheld until "Sure Fire" was released for the screen. Following a showing at the Central theatre, New York, where the production was given a thorough test, full approval was accorded the choice of the Western star for a place among the Special Attraction Stars on the Universal Film release schedule.

Of the eight Special Attractions which he will make this year six have already been set. Gibson is now working under Reeves Eason on a picture whose working title is "The Badge of the Fighting Heart." John C. Brownell, New York scenario head, has just purchased for Gibson's use from the Robert H. Davis corporation, "Sou' West." This is a novelette by J. R. Brickley which ran in Western stories. He has also purchased the Hapsburg Liebe story, "Trimmed and Burning" which appeared in Colliers.

In describing the steps which led to Gibson's choice as a Special Attraction Star, Universal says:

"Universal feels extremely encouraged over its success in putting over Hoot Gibson as a five-reel Special Attraction Star. When Harry Carey was made a Jewel Star he had already created a distinct place for Western Special Attractions. This place had to be filled and well filled to balance the offerings which Universal wished to maintain. The field was scanned but no young star of sufficient prominence was available. Then Universal again looked over its crops of incipient stars. 'Hoot' Gibson had been working two-reel Western dramas which had made a sure name for him and real money for exhibitors. Under the direction of Jack Ford and Edward Laemmle he had been able to translate a wonderfully engaging personality and a whirlwind command of horsemanship into mighty compelling drama. Universal consequently decided to make a Special Attraction star out of Gibson."

"Hush Money" Announced

Realart Release Presents Alice Brady in Story by Samuel Merwin

THE story of "Hush Money" was written by Samuel Merwin, one of the foremost authors of American fiction, and is his first original which he has written for the screen. The scenario is a collaboration between Mr. Merwin and Charles Maigne, who directed the picture. Mr. Merwin was a daily visitor at the studio while his story was being filmed and rendered valuable assistance to the director during the production of the story. The theme of the story is perhaps more of a character analysis than appears in the usual photoplay, and Realart asserts that Mr. Merwin drew one of his principal characters from a prominent Wall Street capitalist.

Miss Brady is said to be admirably cast as the daughter of the wealthy New Yorker and in this picture sustains her reputation of being one of the best dressed stars on the screen. As a matter of fact, says Realart, the faultless attire of Miss Brady has attracted international attention. Aside from the wonderful gowns which she wears in "Hush Money," Miss Brady will attract particular attention by her exceptional dramatic interpretation of her difficult role.

One of the principal supporting parts is that of Harry Benham, in the role of Bishop John Deems, whose experience goes back to many years on the legitimate stage. Of late years he has been seen in leading parts opposite many of the better-known screen stars among whom may be mentioned Alice Joyce, Ina Claire and Alice Brady.

Larry Wheat, well-known musical comedy star, makes his screen debut in "Hush Money." George Fawcett, the noted character actor, also has a prominent part in the picture, as does Larry Devine, the boy actor who appeared with May McAvoy and Gareth Hughes in "Sentimental Tommy."

"Great Impersonation" Released October 6

THE Paramount release scheduled for October 9 is George Melford's production, "The Great Impersonation," featuring James Kirkwood. The picture version of this novel was written by Monte M. Katterjohn.

This is a genuine mystery story, involving an interesting case of double identity, Mr. Kirkwood playing a dual role. Playing opposite Mr. Kirkwood in the leading feminine role is Ann Forrest. Allan Hale plays the chief heavy role, and others in the cast are Winter Hall, Fontaine La Rue, Truly Shattuck, Bertram Johns, William Burress, Frederick Vroom and Lawrence Grant, the last named again delineating the Kaiser, a portrayal he has made famous in previous pictures. The production is not in any sense a war picture, but deals with international intrigue in the days preceding the war.

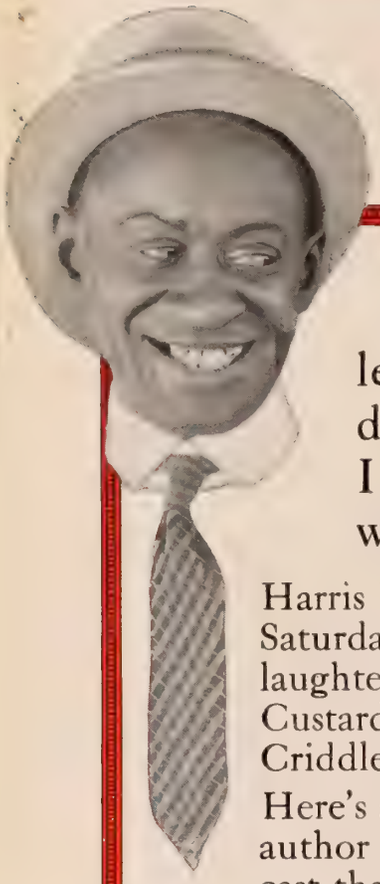
THE CUSTARD NINE

FROM THE FAMOUS STORY
in
THE SATURDAY EVENING POST
BY HARRIS DICKSON



"I'm ketchin' a train what leaves twenty minutes befo' I do, so the Coroner will know I never had nothin' to do with it".

Harris Dickson's "colored stories" in the Saturday Evening Post have given hearty laughter to millions. "Parson Virgil Custard" and "Rev'ren' Baltimore Criddle" are household words.

Here's a real novelty; stories by a famous author who knows the colored people; a cast that is all colored; pictures that were taken 'way down South in Vicksburg.

They are funny; funny in titles; funny in the situations; funny in the intimate glimpses of life among the colored people.

Set yourself for something new and good.

New Series of Lloyd Re-Issues Offered

THE success with which the reissued Harold Lloyd one-reel comedies were accorded by exhibitors everywhere has caused Pathe to release a second series of the comedies. The new series of ten Lloyds will be released October 30, the first offering being "Pistols for Breakfast." As with the first series, these pictures will be released one each week for ten weeks. "Just Dropped In" will be the second release, with "Crack Your Heels," "The Marathon," and "Back to the Woods" following.

In addition to Lloyd, the reissued series boasts of a three-star combination, besides the funmakers whose ensemble antics have set a new standard in comedy. Bebe Daniels, now a star in her own right in feature productions, plays opposite Lloyd; and "Snub" Pollard, featured in Hal Roach comedies, is the spectacled star's running mate in each offering.

Goldwyn Campaign Nets Record Bookings

The real and cumulative effect of Goldwyn's national advertising campaign for the two Rupert Hughes master-pieces, "The Old Nest" and "Dangerous Curve Ahead!" is becoming more apparent each week, says a statement emanating from Goldwyn headquarters. Each photoplay has received more than 1,000 bookings, for showings within four or five weeks of the release date, before the pictures had been released and while the advertising campaign was in progress.

Playgoers Release for Oct. 23

"Tropical Love," Ince Feature, for Early Release

PORTO RICO is the location of "Tropical Love," the title of the next Playgoers Picture release distributed through Pathe. It is a five-reel production directed by Ralph Ince. The release date is announced as October 23rd. The star is Ruth Clifford, who is supported by Reginald Denny. Other well known names in the cast include Fred Turner, Huntley Gordon, Ernest Hilliard, Margaret Fitzroy, Paul Doucet, Catherine Spencer, Carl Axzel and Margaret Seddon. The original story was called "Peaks of Gold," from the pen of Guy McConnell, who has written many vivid yarns of the South Seas.

"Tropical Love," according to a report from Playgoers Pictures, will be a regular release on their "three-a-month" basis, which is finding a ready market throughout the country.

Director Ralph Ince took an entire American company to Porto Rico and produced "Tropical Love" in the exact location called for by the script. The finished picture proves this assertion, for its settings of palm trees, sugar-cane fields and tropical landscapes bespeak their actuality. The feature is replete with touches of Porto Rican native life, notably the action which is centered in the sugar cane fields, with hundreds of workers and several of the picturesque ox-carts used to transport the raw product.

"Tropical Love" is described as a production which reflects in an adventuresome story the alluring call of the tropics, where blue misty hills beckon the adventures with the promise of riches.

Ruth Clifford plays the part of a half-wild Porto Rican girl in whose veins flows the blood of white parentage. Reginald Denny has a wonderful part as a romantic, rollicking devil-may-care "down-and-outer," a derelict of culture and civilization, who has listened to the call of the tropics and fallen under its fatal spell.

It is said that the posters reflect the atmosphere and the broad splashes of color associated with the tropics and are both colorful and alluring to those who buy their amusements from the pictorial display of a theatre's lobby.

Without going into the details of Guy McConnell's story, it terminates in a spectacular hand-to-hand encounter between Reginald Denny, the hero, and Huntley Gordon, who, as an unscrupulous American, is trying to secure the girl's plantation. The denouement occurs when the truth of the heroine's white blood is established and this strange, beautiful, exotic creature of the tropics finds happiness in the arms of the adventure seeking drifter. It is terminated with an intensity of interest seldom matched, and Playgoers Pictures declare that it is a feature of amazing beauty, set in the romantic land of its telling, replete with heart interest and suspense, and far removed from the common run of feature productions.

Ohio Manager Voices Optimism

Advent of Cool Season Brings Public Back With a Rush

ROY H. HAINES, Cincinnati manager for First National, shares the spirit of optimism expressed by many other field managers of the First National organization. Moreover, Mr. Haines believes that prospects as presented in his own territoryy are typical of the general outlook throughout the country, and consequently his statement of conditions in Ohio is made with reference to the country at large as well as to his own particular territory. When questioned as to the reasons for his optimistic forecast, Mr. Haines replied:

"To begin with Southern Ohio is no different from any other section of the country," said Haines, "and the depression here has been no worse, nor have conditions been any better than elsewhere.

"When we say 'depression' we should qualify our statement, for if you analyze a number of amusement enterprises, you will readily find no depression, but on the other hand, a wonderful business.

"The summer parks in Cincinnati have never enjoyed such prosperity as has prevailed since the beginning of their season in early May. Capacity crowds have ruled afternoon and night, from Sunday to Saturday. Our Zoological Gardens, the finest in this country, report the most successful season in the past fifteen years. All other out-of-door places have been served likewise.

"In August during the height of the so-called depression, Babe Ruth Day attracted to the local ball park a crowd of 25,000 and on Monday too. Just recently a circus played a two-day stand in Cincinnati and established a new record, or to be more exact two new records.

"First, they showed to more people in two days than had any other circus in the history of the city, and second, the latest performance of the final night, found so many people on the show grounds unable to gain admission that a third performance was given. Imagine it. So many people clamoring for admission, at 50 cents and a dollar too, don't forget that, that an extra show was necessary.

"Of course, where people are spending their money in such volume in a direction, other businesses are likely to suffer, and one of them has been the motion picture.

"But, it demonstrates the people are still spending their money for diversion, and will always continue to spend it, and with the approach of cooler weather, conditions are going to show vast improvement in the photoplay field. It cannot be otherwise. Business may not be what it was during the war days, and show me anyone who expect such business again, but 'normalcy' will be back in Southern Ohio this fall, and winter and of that there is absolutely no doubt.

"We have seen indications of it here in Cincinnati already with only one or two nights or days of cool weather. On a Sunday, two weeks ago when the weather was more suitable for indoor amusement, than out-of-doors, what was the result? Every solitary motion picture theatre in the city was holding 'em out afternoon and night.

"Similar conditions existed in other sections of our territory, so I am more optimistic than ever, if that were possible.

Paramoun .'s "Forever" Screened for Charity

LEADERS of New York society have evidenced keen interest in the special showing of George Fitzmaurice's Paramount production, "Forever," adapted from George du Maurier's play, "Peter Ibbetson," which will open the new ballroom of the Hotel Plaza Friday evening, October 14.

The entire arrangements are in the hands of the Film Mutual Benefit Bureau, which was organized to assist the American Committee for Devastated France and the Maternity Centre of New York. An elaborate prologue is being prepared under the direction of Hugo Riesenfeld, and in which society people will take part, dancing in costumes of the period of 1840.

"Sunshine Sammy" is Made a Star

Frederick Ernest Morrison, otherwise "Sunshine Sammy," for several years past a ray of joy in comedies produced by Hal Roach for Pathe distribution, is now a screen luminary. This eight-year-old colored boy will be seen this Winter in a special two-reel comedy, called "The Pickaninny." Pathe will release "The Pickaninny" on December 4th.

"The Custard Nine," first of the Harris Dickson comedies produced from a story in the Saturday Evening Post, will inaugurate the Pathe campaign with the release scheduled for November 1st. Two weeks later Pathe will inaugurate the Truex series with "Little, But Oh My." On December 18th, "Stick Around," second of the Ernest Truex offerings, will be issued. "The Beauty Contest," which completes the Harris Dickson series, is slated for issuance on January 1st, and on January 15th, "The Bashful Lover," third of the Truex attractions, will go out to exhibitors.

Elaborate Posters for Wm. D. Taylor Film

In keeping with the sumptuous production which has just been completed by William D. Taylor for Realart, that company announces that especially elaborate posters have been prepared. This is the picture which has for its foundation the celebrated story by William J. Locke and in which May McAvoy is starred.

With the exception of one one-sheet, all the posters have an Oriental motif, the beautiful settings, gorgeous decorations and the colorful costumes of the East lending themselves peculiarly to the limitless effects of lithography.

Adolphe Werkmeister Has Left Pathe

Adolphe Werkmeister, who has been associated with the Pathe organizations, first in France and later in America, almost since Charles Pathe started the original French picture company, has left the Pathe organization to engage in a new motion-picture project the details of which will be announced in the near future. Both here and abroad, Mr. Werkmeister has served Pathe Exchange, Inc., in various executive capacities for a long term of years.

Business Improving Rapidly

So Declares Charles Rogers After Touring Key Cities of Mid-West

THE advent of cool weather and the gradual easing of business depression in many section have combined to bring marked improvement in conditions among exhibitors the country over, according to Charles R. Rogers, general manager of distribution for R-C Pictures Corporation.

Mr. Rogers bases this belief upon his observations and his personal talks with leading exhibitors in many of the key points during his recent trip through the Middle West. He found, according to his statement, that exhibitors with very few, of any exceptions are extremely optimistic. Moreover, the cooler weather has served as an undoubted tonic to box offices which during the summer had been very weak.

"I found a most impressive feeling of optimism wherever I went," declared Mr. Rogers. "The trend undoubtedly is toward a general revival of interest in all sorts of amusements, if, indeed, this revival has not already set in. Exhibitors feel that the autumn and winter season hold much in store for them in the way of prosperity and they believe that the only way to reap the harvest is to show to good pictures.

"That, in brief, is the answer to the entire problem—good pictures. The poor picture cannot get by now. The public is choosing its entertainment with far greater discrimination than it did during the abnormal years of the war when the craving for amusement was so pronounced that the public patronized bad pictures as well as the good ones. But that same public, having returned to normal, is now 'shopping' for its entertainment and exercising a good deal of caution in doing it.

Everywhere, too, I found enthusiasm over the R-C Twenty-six and it is evident that the popularity of Miss Frederick, Mr. Hayakawa and Miss May, who will soon make her debut as an R-C star in 'The Foolish Age' is at high pitch."

"Jungle" Critics in Accord

All Agree That Martin Johnson's Adventures Will Interest Public

MARTIN JOHNSON'S "Jungle Adventures," the first offering of Exceptional Pictures Corporation, which recently played a most successful pre-release engagement at the Capitol Theatre, New York City, which showing was referred to by one of the trade journals as "one of the talked about events in the metropolitan cinema world," is the combination of so many of the factors which spell success, that, since its initial presentation in New York, it has become "one of the most talked about events in the entire motion picture industry."

Taking the consensus of the opinions of practically every film critic on the daily and weekly newspapers and all motion picture publications, as well as the expressed opinion of many of the most important executives in the film industry, Martin Johnson's "Jungle Adventures" contains the following important factors which shall make for one of the big triumphs of the 1921-22 season when it is released to the exhibitors of the country:

First and foremost, this Exceptional Picture is conceded as being most unusual, far from the beaten path of the everyday photoplay. Further, it is unanimously agreed that "Jungle Adventures" is artistic, and has an exceptional entertainment value.

And, then, "Jungle Adventures" is acknowledged as being thrilling, filled with romance and adventure such as everyone has at some time fondly hoped to undergo, and containing what is conceded the finest photography of its kind which has ever been seen.

Some of the scenes contained in Martin Johnson's feature production are nothing short of remarkable, even if considered alone from their photographic standpoint. Of the twenty-four critics who reviewed this picture, every one praised Mr. Johnson's almost uncanny photography.

And because this unique production is true to life, it cannot be other than convincing in every detail. It is the record of actual life beyond civilization's domain, of happenings, of birds and beasts, of human beings, regarding which the civilized world knows very little.

R-C to Release Foreign Production in Fall

THE production, "Phroso," based upon the widely read novel of the same name, by Sir Anthony Hope, and converted to film by Louis Mercanton, one of the foremost motion picture producers of Europe, will be called "Possession," when it is released in November by R-C Pictures.

Instead of employing built scenes that could not fully create the atmosphere he sought for his subject, Mr. Mercanton took his players and his equipment right into the heart of Southern France, where Sir Anthony Hope had laid the original locale of his story.

Another feature of interest is the fact that the cast includes Malvina Longfellow, an American actress of great beauty and talent, who appeared in the original production of "Kismet" in support of Otis Skinner.

Jack Holt and Lila Lee in William De Mille's Paramount picture, "After the Show"

Washington Press Lauds "Three Musketeers"

The Washington dramatic critics were unanimous in their praise of the Douglas Fairbanks, United Artists production of "The Three Musketeers," which had its premier showing at the Nation's Capital at Loew's Columbia Theatre, on Sunday, October 2nd.

Nannie Lancaster, of the Washington Star, said:

"It is not only Mr. Fairbanks' greatest picture; it is one of the great pictures of the screen."

"Douglas Fairbanks' work as D'Artagnan entitles him to a position on the topmost rung of the ladder of fame," said the Washington Post.

"Again Douglas Fairbanks has triumphed," says the Washington Times. "For photographic beauty, marvelous costuming and stupendous settings, there have probably been few pictures to equal it. And none that excels it."

Century Lions to Appear in New Films Shortly

Charles Gay, chief animal trainer for the Century Film Corporation is getting his lions trimmed up for a busy winter. Since filming the last Tarzan story with Elmo Lincoln some time ago, the animals have been resting. Preparations are now being made to use them in comedies and another animal serial, production for which will start very soon.

Gay's work with wild animals has been recognized throughout the country where he has appeared. At one time he toured every prominent city in the world in charge of a wonderful $50,000 group of Abyssian black-mane lions, which are recognized as the fiercest and most valuable of the whole lion family.

26 Sets Are Built for Rawlinson Picture

Twenty-six specially-built sets were used at Universal City for Herbert Rawlinson's first starring vehicle, "The Millionaire." The story was purchased specially for Rawlinson from the estate of George Loane Tucker and was filmed under the direction of Jack Conway. It is now being edited and soon will be ready for release.

Thousand Houses Booked for Goldwyn Week

WITH four weeks in which to obtain additional bookings, the twenty-two branch exchanges report more than 1,000 theatres signed up to show Goldwyn photoplays exclusively for a solid week from October 23 to 29 to be known as National Goldwyn Week. And at that, two or three exchanges have not yet sent in their Goldwyn Week bookings. Others have not reported the bookings obtained last week.

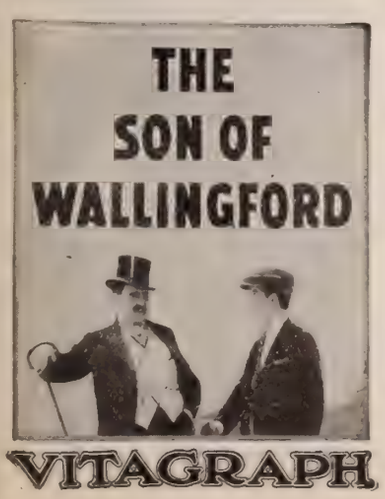
As an additional aid to the exhibitors signing up for a full week the Goldwyn advertising and publicity departments have prepared a service book of an elaborate character.

Edwin Mayer to Write Goldwyn Titles

The Goldwyn company continues to infuse new blood and new ideas into its Western scenario department. Following the appointment of Paul Bern to the directorship of the department with Clayton Hamilton and Ralph Block as his associates, comes the announcement that Edwin Justus Mayer, of the Eastern publicity department, has been transferred to the studios at Culver City, Cal., as title writer. Mr. Mayer has had a long career as a newspaper and magazine writer. His clever Sunday newspaper articles attracted the attention of Samuel Goldwyn, with the result that Mr. Mayer will now write titles for the Lion Brand of photoplays.

Will Rogers Plays Lead in Paramount Comedy

Work was started this week at the Lasky studio, on the special comedy feature, tentatively titled "Ek," for which Will Rogers, has been specially engaged for the leading role. James Cruze is directing and in addition to the well-known Western actor, Lila Lee will play the feminine lead and others will include, Allan Hale, Emily Rait, Clarence Burton and John Fox. The latter is a boy and will interpret the very unusual part of Ek, a vagrant soul looking for an earthly home.



Boston Welcomes "Doug"

"Three Musketeers" Wins Usual Praise from Press and Public

"THE THREE MUSKETEERS" was accorded a tremendous reception in Boston when the picture opened at the Selwyn theatre in that city. The press critics were as enthusiastic in their praise of the picture as the audience which filled the big theatre at the opening performance. Some of the press comments are quoted as follows in a statement just received from the headquarters of the United Artists Corporation.

"Mr. Fairbanks has so interpreted the role of D'Artagnan, Dumas' immortal hero, that there isn't a red-blooded American who wouldn't appreciate every adventure of the young Frenchman."

"Douglas Fairbanks has made us a D'Artagnan as we would have him," says the critic of the Boston Transcript, "over-quick with the sword and temper, slow to smile and quick to think. That Mr. Fairbanks would make a passable D'Artagnan none could doubt; that he could be for two hours the fiery young Gascon of Dumas' tale and not a clever actor assuming the trappings of a romantic part, is revelation itself.

"The very streets of Paris are endowed with an illusion far beyond that of the ordinary setting of the ordinary motion picture."

F. H. Cushman in the Boston Telegram declares that "The Three Musketeers" on a whole is a work of which Mr. Fairbanks may justly be proud, and goes on to say:

"This plot has been embellished in order to afford opportunity for illustrating the many adventures of D'Artagnan, the Gascon, and his three companions, Athos, Porthos and Aramis, all of whom, as chosen members of the King's Guard, would rather fight than eat. There is fighting galore during the progress of the play and it is doubtful if such wonderful fencing was ever seen off the stage or on the screen."

June Mathis Sets Record

Metro Continuity Writer Turns Out Six Features in Five Months

JUNE MATHIS, of Metro's scenario department, is starting work on the seventh photoplay she has handled since her return to Hollywood from New York five months ago. Her visit to New York was made for the opening of the Rex Ingram production of "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," for which she wrote the continuity.

"The Conquering Power," the adaptation of Balzac's "Eugenie Grandet," produced by Mr. Ingram as successor to "The Four Horsemen," was the first work on her return. Then followed "A Trip to Paradise," from Benjamin F. Glazer's English text of a Hungarian drama by Franz Molnar, produced by Maxwell Karger with Bert Lytell as star; "The Idle Rich," another Lytell picture, adapted from Kennett Harris's Saturday Evening Post story, "Junk"; "The Golden Gift," an original story, done with Florence Hein with Alice Lake as star; "The Hole in the Wall," another Alice Lake picture, adapted from Fred Jackson's drama, and "Turn to the Right," a Rex Ingram production of the John Golden stage success by Winchell Smith and Jack Hazzard, on which Miss Mathis collaborated with Mary O'Hara.

Miss Mathis's new picture will be a starring vehicle for Alice Lake. According to present plans, Miss Mathis will devote her time in the future to the Metro producing unit headed by Maxwell Karger, with Miss Lake as star.

Has New Form of Pressbook

Realart Announces Radical Change in Size and Make-Up of Pressbook

BEGINNING with the pressbooks issued for "Dawn of the East," an Alice Brady production of the current season, Realart announces that a radical change has been made in the size and make-up of these exhibitor aids. The new pressbooks contain twice as many pages as they did formerly, and are just the same dimensions as the trade journals, which will no doubt prove a more popular size. Their appearance has been greatly enhanced also by being printed on a heavier grade of coated stock, the covers being in two colors.

The first two pages of the Realart pressbook on "Dawn of the East" contain excellent halftones of the 8 x 10 black and white lobby photos, the 11 x14 colored photographs, the 22 x 28 colored enlargements and the slides, with appropriate descriptions. These pages also contain snappy "program readers" and suggested text for post cards to be used in mail campaigns. The following two pages are given over entirely to practical though inexpensive exploitation suggestions, accompanied by graphic line-cut illustrations. Eight pages are devoted to the cast, a short synopsis, catch lines, one, two and three column advertising cuts with appropriate text, one, two and three column production cuts and many well-written newsy reviews and "shorts" to be clipped and sent to the local newspapers before and during runs.

The last two pages contain the musical setting, a complete list of all of Realarts productions and branch offices for ready reference and a handy order form for accessories. The back cover is made up of reproductions of the posters.

"Historical" Comedy to be Offered by Christie

The Christies are producing a spectacular costume play which is said to be the biggest thing of its kind attempted in a two-reel comedy. Bobby Vernon plays the leading role, and work has been started with Hal Beaudine as director under the supervision of Al Christie.

The play is in the French romantic period, with a rare combination of an American farmyard of the period of 1921, and some say that the leading characters more closely resemble D'Artagnan and his followers in the dream sequence of the picture.

Universal Announces a Lee Moran Release

A new Universal-Jewel comedy starring Lee Moran is ready for release, it is announced at the Universal home office. This latest short reel feature is called "P. D. Q." and shows the comedian as a bicycle-race champion.

William Watson directed the comedy, from a story by W. Scott Darling, of the Universal short reel scenario department. It is the second Universal-Jewel comedy featuring Lee Moran alone. The first was "Robinson's Trousseau," released several months ago and which has been played in many of the big houses of the country.

Viola Dana Picture Is Started by Metro

"Seeing's Believing," a screen comedy written for Viola Dana by Rex Taylor, has been selected by Metro as the little actress's next starring vehicle. The continuity has been prepared by Edith Kennedy, of Metro's scenario department. Harry Beaumont, who directed Miss Dana in her last two pictures, "Glass Houses," by Clara Genevieve Kennedy, and "The Fourteenth Lover," by Alice D. G. Miller, will again be in charge of the production. He is now selecting the cast.

Allan Forrest, who played opposite Alice Lake in "The Hole in the Wall," has signed a Metro contract and will place the leading male role in "Seeing's Believing."

Ince to Do "Jim" for First Nat'l Release

"Jim," a big drama of California and New York, by Bradley King, has been selected by Thomas H. Ince as his next special production for Associated First National Pictures, Inc. It will follow the recently completed Ince drama, "Hail the Woman," which is scheduled for release late this fall.

Florence Vidor and John Bowers have already been signed as members of the cast. Production will start at Culver City within the next week. At least three members of the cast of "Jim" will be players who have been starred in the past, it is declared.

The production will be directed by John Griffith Wray. Mr. Wray and Mr. Ince selected the story and with Miss King laid out the scenario.

Rothacker Printing 60 Reels of Bible Views

THERE is no city, mountain, road, river, hill, tomb, rock or battlefield mentioned in the Bible which is not now on celluloid at the Rothacker Chicago Laboratory.

J. E. Holley, general manager of the Geographical Film Company of Cincinnati, has just returned to America after making a motion-picture geographical survey of Palestine, Egypt and other places that afforded setting for Biblical drama. The negative runs to about sixty reels in length.

Cameraman E. L. Kenepp accompanied Mr. Holley. An improvised portable "laboratory" was built for developing negatives at different points. Prints are now being made at the Rothacker Chicago plant.

Football Stars Make Ray Film Realistic

The line-up of football stars who take part in the stadium scenes of Charles Ray's next release, "Two Minutes to Go," reads like a page of "Who's Who in Football." In an effort to bring the real gridiron atmosphere to his forthcoming production which Arthur S. Kane presents for First National release on October 17th, Mr. Ray engaged more than twenty Western intercollegiate champions of note, one of whom, "Swede" Evans, of the University of Southern California, was a member of the American team at the 1920 Olympic games.

See "Hurricane Hutch" and Lift Serial Ban

Battle Creek, Mich., has followed Eau Claire, Wis., into the line of towns and cities that are raising their censorship bans on serials. For a good many months Battle Creek officials have refused to permit a serial to be played, but when they were permitted to see "Hurricane Hutch," they decided to withdraw the restrictions on the exhibition of this serial. Consequently "Hurricane Hutch" will have an honored position three days a week for fifteen weeks, on the program of the Garden Theatre.

Norma Talmadge and Eugene O'Brien in the Selznick revival of "Poppy"

Arrow Announces First Novelty Film

Arrow Film Corporation this week announces the first of the Novelty films which they will release during the coming year. The title of this production is "Watching Eyes" and, Arrow states it is a real novelty being the life history of a dog "Kiki" told by herself, for "Kiki" is a lady and so those say who have seen the picture, bids fair to take her place as one of the most accomplished leading "ladies" on the screen.

"Kindred of the Dust" Now Being Edited

R. A. Walsh has finished the "shooting" of "Kindred of the Dust," which he started about the middle of August. "Kindred of the Dust," adapted from Peter B. Kyne's famous novel. It went to the cutting and editing rooms last week where several weeks will be spent whipping the American and European negatives into shape for printing. This production will be released by Associated First National Pictures, Inc.

The cast consists of Miriam Cooper, Ralph Graves, star of D. W. Griffith's "Dream Street"; Lionel Belmore W. J. Ferguson, little Bruce Geruin, Maryland Morne, Bessie Waters, winner of an R. A. Walsh-First National beauty contest; Pat Rooney, John Herdman and Eugenia Besserer.

Schedule Provides for All Selznick Stares

Exhibitors who play Selznick pictures are assured by the Selznick home-office that full provision has been made for Eugene O'Brien's, Elaine Hammerstein's and Conway Tearle's starring vehicles in the schedule recently announced under the caption "Forty from Selznick." The Owen Moore comedies are also provided for.

Only last week, at the Selznick studios, in Fort Lee, N. J., one of the pictures in which Conway Tearle will star went through its concluding scenes and two days later Elaine Hammerstein began filming, under direction of Alan Crosland, one of the six pictures she will be seen in this season. Then, too, Eugene O'Brien is just ready to begin another issue of the series in which he will six times come to the screen within a twelvemonth.

"After Midnight," set for release September 20th, is a Conway Tearle picture that is declared to possess advertising possibilities that attend few program pictures.

Shakespearean Scene in "Enchantment"

Shakespeare finds a place in the picturization of "Enchantment," which Cosmopolitan Production has made with Marion Davies in the leading role. One of the scenes will portray part of the action of "The Taming of the Shrew," which will be intimately bound up with the main idea in "Enchantment." The action in the photoplay centers largely around a young lady's idea that she wields absolute power over all men. Father conspires with a young fellow to disillusion her, the youngster to take the main part in the "taming of the shrew."

Marion Davies plays the indomitable young lady. Forrest Stanley appears opposite. Tom Lewis plays the father. Edith Shayne, Arthur Rankin, Corinne Barker, and Maude Turner Gordon are also in the cast. Robert G. Vignola directed.

Striking Posters for "Never Weaken"

Associated Exhibitors has created a splendid array of posters for the new Harold Lloyd production "Never Weaken." It is said that every subject was chosen from the viewpoint of its adaptability to the exhibitors' exploitation plans. The 24 sheet in particular shows Harold Lloyd and Mildred Davis sitting upon a huge iron girder swinging in mid air from the chains by which it is being hoisted. Since the figures are larger than life size and the girder is painted a bright red, this poster offers a splendid opportunity to the exhibitor who likes to hang cut-outs in front of his theatre and around his neighborhood.

The six-sheet showing Lloyd jumping from a swinging piece of iron work to the skeleton of a half constructed sky scraper admits of similar uses, while the three-sheets carry a romantic as well as a thrilling interest.

Broadway Premiere for "I Defy"

"I Defy!" Morris Kashin's first production, is now in the final stages of editing, assembling and titling. The picture will be available for pre-view showings to interested parties on or about the fifteenth of October. While no definite plan of distribution has been outlined by Mr. Kashin and his associates to date, it is known that the picture will be given its American premiere at a big Broadway theatre. The initial presentation of "I Defy!", it is announced will take place within the next three or four weeks.

C. B. C. Acquires Series of New Comedies

As part of an extensive program of short stuff which is being prepared by the C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation for the coming season, comes the announcement from Jack Cohn of that company of the acquisition of a series of comedies.

The series, which is comprised of twenty-six two-reel comedies, to be released at the rate of two a month, will be known as Tip-Top Comedies.

"The Mystery Mind" a Popular Serial

In their reports to the Home Office, exchange managers of the Pioneer Film Corporation, in all sections of the country, are manifesting marked enthusiasm with the results up to this time in bookings on "The Mystery Mind," a serial starring J. Robert Pauline and produced by the Supreme Pictures, Inc.

The story of "The Mystery Mind" was written by Arthur B. Reeve. In the New York territory "The Mystery Mind" is playing in close to 200 theatres.

Plan Exploitation for "Discontented Wives"

Considerable interest has been created by Playgoers Pictures' "Discontented Wives," which has made itself felt in the extensive booking of this Herald Productions feature, starring J. P. McGowan, states the distributors.

Inquiries at the offices of Associated Exhibitors brought forth the information that extensive exploitation is expected in connection with the feature and that the posters, advertisements and lobby suggestions have all been prepared with this end in view. Advance bookings are very satisfactory.

Paramount Aids Fire-Prevention Week

PARAMOUNT is co-operating in the national observance of "Fire Prevention Week," which began on October 9. This time was set to put before the American public the seriousness of fire danger.

Pictures were taken which showed Thomas Meighan, Paramount star, and Conrad Nagel illustrating the danger which comes from throwing matches and cigarettes in waste baskets. Jack Holt is seen stopping a man who started to investigate the gas tank of his auto with a match. Lila Lee illustrated the dangers of an electric iron from which the plug has not been removed; also the peril of gasoline used for cleansing purposes within the house. Lois Wilson, another Paramount leading woman, posed with May Giraci and Mary Jane Irving in a series showing the dangers of allowing children to play with matches.

Big Chicago Houses Book "The Foolish Age"

So pronounced was the success of the recent screening for audiences at the Roosevelt theatre, Chicago, of "The Foolish Age," in which Doris May makes her debut as a star in R.-C. Pictures, that it was booked immediately for an engagement at Barbee's Loop theatre, where the popularity of Miss May has already resulted in packed houses, declares Robertson-Cole.

Not only will "The Foolish Age" be screened at the Barbee theatre but it has been booked day and date by both the Lubliner and Trinz and the Ascher Circuits in Chicago and environs. The Boston premiere will be at the Park theatre.

Goldwyn Studio Activities

Camera Work on "The City Feller" Will Be Completed in One Week

RAPID progress is being made on all the Goldwyn productions now under way except on Gouverneur Morris' "Yellow Men and Gold" work on which, on location at Catalina Island, has been held up on account of heavy rain. The cast is exploring the island waiting for the weather to clear.

Director William Beaudine and the company making "The City Feller," by Julien Josephson will finish the camera work on that picture within a week, it is expected. Cullen Landis and Patsy Ruth Miller have the leading roles.

Edward McWade, Harry Gribbon, William Orlamond and Mary Wells have been added to the cast of Gouverneur Morris' Chinese fantasy, "What Ho, the Cook," which Rowland V. Lee is directing. The Oriental players, Jack Abbe and Winter Blossom, head the cast.

Clare Sheridan, the sculptress who recently came into prominence through modelling busts of the leaders of Soviet Russia, visited the company making the photoplay, "Hungry Hearts," from Anzia Yezierska's stories, this week. She spent the entire afternoon talking with the Russians in the cast and complimented Director E. Mason Hopper on the faithful reproduction of the Russian scenes. Ethel Kay, the America-Russian actress cast for the leading feminine role in "Hungry Hearts," has been taken ill and retired from the cast. A new leading woman will be chosen.

Lon Chaney is playing two parts in Barry Pain's, "The Octave of Claudius," being directed by Wallace Worsley, and he may also play the part of an ape which the story calls for.

Studio executives are enthusiastic over the new Rupert Hughes scenario, "Remembrance," upon which the author has just completed the continuity. Colleen Moore, who played the leading feminine role in "The Wall Flower," Mr. Hughes' new picture photography on which has just been completed.

Coast Stars Honor Vignola

Director Given Hearty Send-Off as He Departs for New York City

ROBERT G. VIGNOLA, director of special productions for Cosmopolitan, was tendered a series of parties by the Los Angeles Movie Colony, prior to his departure last Saturday for New York, as a testimonial of the esteem with which he is held by his co-workers in Hollywood.

Pauline Frederick, who was at one time under Mr. Vignola's direction, gave an old fashioned western barbecue and rodeo at her home in Beverley Hills, Los Angeles, in honor of "Bob." More than 150 were present, among whom were famous motion picture stars, including Marion Davies, Julian Eltinge, Sessue Hayakawa, Director Colin Campbell, Thomas Holding, and many cowboy friends, who were once directed by Mr. Vignola.

Other film celebrities to entertain Mr. Vignola during his brief stay on the coast were Ethel Clayton, Kathleen Williams, May Allison, George Melford and Alice Hollister.

The occasion for these entertainments of Mr. Vignola was his return to Los Angeles, after an absence of more than a year and a half. Prior to his affiliation with Cosmopolitan, Mr. Vignola directed his productions on the west coast, but since aligning himself with Cosmopolitan more than a year and a half ago, he has been almost constantly in New York.

Goldwyn Week Has Excellent Outlook

GOLDWYN Week is going over with a bang, according to a statement emanating from the Goldwyn offices. With the week, scheduled for October 23 to 25, but two weeks off, the branch exchanges are sending to headquarters a constant stream of new bookings.

The exchanges are engaged in a friendly rivalry to see which will turn in the largest number of solid weeks of Goldwyn pictures, and also the biggest rental figure.

For the week commencing Sunday, October 23, National Goldwyn Week, the city of San Diego, Cal., will, in all probability, show more Goldwyn features than any town of its size in the country. The estimated population of San Diego is seventy thousand, and eleven motion picture theatres furnish screen entertainment for its theatregoers.

Male Leads for Realart Stars Are Announced

The "B's" have it in three of the Realart companies working now under production. Warner Baxter is supporting Constance Binney in a production which is to be released in November. Wanda Hawley's third of the present season finds T. Roy Barnes playing the male lead. John Bowers is appearing with Mary Miles Minter in a South Sea Island story.

Classify Goldwyn Product to Aid Exhibitor

In order to help the exhibitor in selecting Goldwyn pictures during Goldwyn Week, Oct. 23-29, that will appeal to his audiences, Goldwyn has made a new classification of all its pictures, arranged in seven groups. This classified list is so arranged that the exhibitor can select without any trouble his bill for the entire week, whether he wants all dramas, mystery pictures, comedy dramas, comedies or adventure stories, or wishes a mingling of them.

New Chief for Goldwyn Scenario Department

Announcement is made of the appointment of Eugene Mullin to the Pictures Corporation's scenario and research department located at the home-office in New York. Mr. Mullin was managing editor of Eastern productions for Goldwyn last year.

Goldwyn Art Director Renews Contract

Goldwyn announces that its art director at Culver City studios, Cedric Gibbons, has renewed his contract and will remain with the corporation as head of the art department for a term of years.

"Chic" Sale in Seven Characterizations in "His Nibs"

Seven distinct characters are portrayed by Charles "Chic" Sale in the novelty feature, "His Nibs," an Exceptional Picture. Top, left, as Theo. Bender, proprietor of the Slippery Elm Picture Palace. Right, Elmer Bender, son of "His Nibs." Center, as Mr. Percifer, editor and self-appointed censor. Full figure, left, representing Wally Crow, local weather prophet. The trio of characters below are those of "The Boy" hero of the film shown by "His Nibs;" Miss Dessie Teed, pianist and soloist of the Slippery Elm theatre, and Peelee Gear, Jr., boy tenor and village wit.

Special Service Section on

Charles (Chic) Sale in "His Nibs"

"HIS NIBS" is entertainment, pure and simple. It is not handicapped by a theme nor does it pretend to preach a sermon.

"Chic" Sale, vaudeville headliner, known from coast to coast as a delineator of rural characters, is presented in seven roles, each one a destinct characterization. Other players well known to fans have parts, in the inserted picture which is a part of "His Nibs." Among these are Joseph Dowling, of "Miracle Man" fame, Colleen Moore, leading woman to a number of big stars, and Walt Whitman, equally famous.

"His Nibs" is a play within a play. The idea on which the picture is built is novel and unique. It might be called "A Night in a Rural Theatre," for the picture begins with narrative scenes in which the star is presented in six of his parts: The proprietor of a rural theatre, a "Hi Holler" type who is general odd jobs man about the picture house, the theatre illustrated song artist and small town sport, the editor of the local paper who has constituted himself a local censor, the lady pianist of the theatre and the town constable. After sequences in which all these characters are introduced as employees of the theatre or as members of the audience (editor and constable) what might have been a drama is presented as the picture being shown for the evening but with comedy titles interspersed with cutins of the audience, the star in his various roles and scenes of the projection booth showing Mr. Sale in his principal part, that of "His Nibs," proprietor and operator of the picture machine of the "Slippery Elm Picture Palace." Mr. Sale's seventh part is that of the hero of the film drama the "Palace" is showing. The story of this part of the film concerns a country boy who goes to the city to seek his fortune only to be fleeced of his money but who finally turns the tables, etc.

The whole production is joined together by clever titles which make a comedy of the drama part of the offering when they illustrate certain action of the narrative scenes mentioned.

Description of the Roles Played by Mr. Sale

FOLLOWING is a text description of the seven roles Charles (Chic) Sale plays in "His Nibs."

The captions are taken from a special program and herald on the picture presented to the guests at the Hotel Astor trade showing.

Thos. Bender—Proprietor, manager and operator of the "Slippery Elm Picture Palace"; better known as "His Nibs."

Wally Craw—Local weather prophet who likes motion pictures but hates "playin' and bellerin'."

Mr. Percifer—Editor of "The Weekly Bee" who appoints himself censor of pictures playing at the "Slippery Elm Palace" much to the annoyance of "His Nibs."

Elmer Bender—Son of "His Nibs," crack marble player and general assistant to his father.

Peelee Gear, Jr.—Boy tenor and wit of the community, who sings the illustrated songs at the theatre.

Miss Dessie Teed—Village organist; a young lady of several summers who furnishes music at the "Palace."

The Boy—Hero of "He Fooled 'Em All," the picture presented on this special occasion.

General Exploitation Suggestions

"HIS NIBS" is an exploitation picture and especially a picture where hokum exploitation can be used to advantage. It should have and without doubt will get from the live wire exhibitors the sort of publicity that "Down on the Farm" and "The County Fair" have received at the hands of the live wire managers. It is a picture for ballyhoos, stunts, lobby displays, novelty prologues, employees and orchestra dressed as "rubes" and all the rest of the tried and true but always reliable methods of selling a picture of the rural type.

Besides being a picture for "hokum," "His Nibs" possesses other exploitation possibilities: These are to be found in the fame of the star in cities where he has played the local vaudeville theatres, in the seven roles he portrays, the other players appearing in the feature, named previously, the novelty of construction and the fact that the exhibitor may guarantee a fine piece of entertainment. Of the several points that of novelty is perhaps the least desirable. Billing a picture as a novelty is liable to lead prospective patrons to believe that its greatest qualification is that of a freak. It will probably be inadvisable to lay much stress on the fact that Mr. Dowling and the other players mentioned have parts, as the action of the insert picture is only incidental and cannot be taken seriously except to illustrate the titles.

Individual Suggestions for Selling "His Nibs"

A CAMPAIGN to sell "His Nibs" should begin with the identifying of "Chic" Sale as the star. Announcement of his name will no doubt be sufficient to do this so far as the regular attendant of vaudeville houses is concerned but for the picture fan a more thorough campaign may be necessary. Hammer home the fact that Sale is a headliner, by relating the merits of his vaudeville act, where he has played locally, his popularity in New York, where he has filled long engagements at the Winter Garden and other Broadway theatres, and then give your prospective patrons an idea of the parts he plays in the picture.

To do this we would use eight fingernail cuts in display ads, one showing Mr. Sale without makeup and the other seven showing him in his seven roles of the picture. Each cut can be captioned to explain the character, perhaps giving the picture cast of characters name he uses and a few words relating to the part. For selling talk in ads tell the general idea of the construction of the picture; that it is a visit to a rural picture show, with sidelights on how "His Nibs" deleted the picture, eliminated the titles with his reasons therefor; and a description of the show given, announcer, illustrated song, piano solo, news weekly and feature picture. It might be well to quote some of the titles used. There would be numberless ways extracts from these could be used.

This cut shows two views of the "lobby display" arranged for the trade showing of "His Nibs" at the Hotel Astor, New York, held Oct. 6. The display covered the walls of the hall leading from the Astor lobby to the grand ballroom where the picture was shown

Many Exploitation Opportunites Offered

Your newspaper advertising should of course contain full explanations relative to any prologue numbers you may stage. Lobby displays should prove popular exploitation on "His Nibs." The rural atmosphere can be carried out to advantage, and if this is done no better ideas can be advanced than to refer to those explained by the cuts accompanying, which are of the "country store" arranged in the lobby leading to the Grand Ball Room, Hotel Astor, New York, for the trade showing of "His Nibs," October 6th.

If, however, you have used this sort of a display recently, which many exhibitors have on pictures like "The County Fair," etc., a front in replica of that of the "Slippery Elm Picture Palace" suggests itself. Description of this is unnecessary since the stills you will obtain will show the "Palace."

Ballyhoos for the picture will probably depend largely on what each local exhibitor can dig up with the least amount of time and expense. Your orchestra on the streets made up as a rube band will certainly get attention, even if you have used it previously in exploiting a picture. A concert in front of the theatre with comedy gags worked up for the "band" will draw a crowd, and with a crowd in front of the theatre, some business is bound to be forthcoming.

The ancient wagon and the "crow bait" horse with a rube driving will be all right too.

The house staff in rural attire will go good if this idea has not been overworked.

Presentation Ideas

PRESENTATION of the picture is important. A prologue of the right kind will add a lot to the show and also bring extra business.

The opportunities for numbers appropriate are unlimited. The country store idea with male quartette and perhaps the "village band" officiating is always sure fire.

Probably the "Old Time Movie Show" stunt will suggest itself to a great many exhibitors. This can be used advantageously but since the picture itself is rather an adaptation of the idea, just the opposite might prove a bigger hit.

The picture machine film and how it works is a great mystery to the average fan.

Suppose you were to present a prologue where your own up-to-date picture machines booth, etc., were brought before the eyes of the audience. This would seem especially appropriate since a lot of the best comedy of the picture is shown in scenes purporting to be in the projection booth of the "Palace" and these sequences may go over the head of the fan if he doesn't have some idea of what a projector is like and an inkling of how it operates.

A plan that would convey the most practical information to an audience would be to transfer the actual operation of presenting pictures in your theatre to the screen.

A simple and inexpensive way to do this would be to send a photographer into the booth to take flash lights of the various operations.

Let him shoot your operators threading up, rewinding, etc., and get closeups of the apparatus.

From his negatives have him print thin positives of lantern-slide size on plates. Caption these to explain the various operations and explain in a simple way the general principles of projection, how the light is used, what the condensers are for, how the lenses magnify the image, etc.

These slides could be hand colored at small cost and it would not be impossible to use film instead of still pictures.

Another plan that would surely be interesting would be to build a duplicate of your booth in canvas on the stage and install an outfit like that in the operating room and then project a picture from the stage in the same manner as has been done so frequently when the "Old Time Movie Stunt" is put over.

"HIS NIBS" is a picture where various contests may be staged. In cities where Chic Sale is known in his vaudeville act a contest for initiations of the various characters the head liner portrays ohght to find favor with the ahdiences. In every city there are plenty of semi-professionals who will be only to glad for an opportunity of trying out in an imitation of so well known a player.

For the smaller houses it perhaps would be better to confine your contest to the amateur ranks and perhaps to make it an affair for boys. Suppose you were to engage the services of a competent "make up" man and announce that all the boys who wished to compete would be made up to resemble Sale in one of the parts he plays in the picture, after which they will be allowed to compete for a prize.

Another contest that should go good would be for "rube" song artists either among the boys or the semi-amateurs. Prizes offered for the best rural song numbers would surely bring out some good entertainers.

Some pluggers could probably be interested in putting on some new rural numbers and perhaps induced to sing some of the old favorites, like "All Round Round With a Woolen String," "Rueben, Rueben, I've Been Thinking" and others that never fail to go over with audiences.

The use of the stock paper, especially 24-sheet stands, is strongly advised. The picture has a catchy title, especially for those who are brought into the theatre by bill board advertising.

Stills decorated with captions from titles and cut-outs are recommended and if possible secure the herald used for the showing of the picture at the Astor Hotel New York.

Special Music Article for "His Nibs" Soon

EXHIBITORS who expect to play "His Nibs" should be interested in an article relative to the music score for the picture used at the trade presentation, held at the Astor theatre, New York, October 6, which will be published as a feature number in the Music Department of the News in an early issue.

James C. Bradford, who wrote the orchestration rendered on the above mentioned occasion, will relate exclusively in the News, the high lights of his score and explain why certain selections have been adapted and how they synchronize with the action of the picture.

Professor Bradford may be counted on to write a practical music article that will be of real value to the orchestra leaders who will later be called upon to publish a score for use in their theatres.

Guests at the Astor for the trade showing were unanimous in their praise of Mr. Bradford's score and it seems certain that it will be widely used or adapted in the house to play "His Nibs," when released.

Kellette Not to Direct Jack Johnson Picture

John William Kellette, writer and director, announces that he will not make the five-reel comedy drama featuring Jack Johnson, the ex-heavyweight champion. Mr. Kellette explains that the cancellation of his contract was prompted by the antagonism which, he says, was displayed toward Johnson during the latter's recent tour of personal appearance in certain cities. Mr. Kellette has under consideration at the present time the production of a state rights feature.

Warren Announces Two Reel Novelty

"A Bear, A Boy and a Dog," the two-reel novelty released by the F. B. Warren Corporation, is declared to be one of the most novel two-reelers of the fall season.

The story of this two reel feature was written by Nell Shipman. Bert Van Tuyle, who so successfully acted as co-director with Miss Shipman in "The Girl from God's Country," is responsible for the direction of "A Bear, A Boy and a Dog."

First of Talmadge Revivals Is Announced

Among the units that were promised for inclusion in "Forty from Selznick" this season were six Norma and six Constance Talmadge revivals. With the release of "Scandal," set for September 20th, the distribution of these greatly popular features begins. "Scandal" has Constance Talmadge as its star, with "Poppy" promised as the lead-off of the Norma features a month later.

Eugene O'Brien Vehicle Released Oct. 20th

The next release in which Selznick will present Eugene O'Brien will be "Clay Dollars," a Lewis Allen Browne story that is now in all Select exchanges ready for distribution as of October 20. However, many of the larger theatres throughout the country will show the new feature on pre-release before the designated date to start its circulation.

F. Levere Winne in N. Y.

F. Levere Winne, owner of the Star Theatre, Cherry Valley, N. Y., and also a representative of the Maqua Company, of Schenectady, one of the largest printing concerns in the Empire State, was a recent visitor to New York. Mr. Winne, in his capacity as sales promotion manager of the Maque Company, is estimating on several colored inserts and it is expected to have some of this company's displays shortly in the News.

Chester Conklin Again in Sunshine Comedies

Chester Conklin again has been engaged by Fox to play principal roles in Sunshine Comedies, filling the place left vacant by the promotion of Al St. John to stardom on the comedy screen.

Scores Hit with Trade Critics

"A Man's Home" Wins Unanimous Praise of Trade Press

IT has been the custom of producers to offer for publication in trade papers excerpts from daily papers of more or less importance when praise has been given to a screen production in which exhibitors are interested, but it remains for the publicity department of Selznick's Enterprises to call attention to what the trade papers have said concerning the merits of "A Man's Home."

Laurence Reid, in MOTION PICTURE NEWS, wrote as follows: "A new type of home picture is presented in Selznick's "A Man's Home," which carries such powerful, human strokes and realistic touches, and which builds with ever increasing suspense because of its rich array of dramatic clashes that it is entitled to a place among the exceptional features of the year. 'A Man's Home' is a picture of invention and suggestion. Ralph Ince is to be commended for what he has wisely left out as much as for what he incorporated. He has appealed to one's intelligence. However, Edward J. Montagne has given him a wonderfully compact scenario which carries all the sure-fire ingredients—all of which are given their proper emphasis."

Monte W. Sohn, editor of Exhibitors' Trade Review, had this to say as part of his review: "Here is one of the best cast pictures of the year and a certain dollar winner for exhibitors. The plot is excellent and has lost nothing in the screen telling. It has perfect continuity and unfaltering suspense throughout its interesting six reels. A great measure of the success the picture is sure to have will be due to the excellent choice of players. Each fits happily into character."

John Spargo, editor of Exhibitors' Herald for New York wrote this opinion: "Clean and bright, delightfully cast and directed in a masterly manner, 'A Man's Home' can almost be said to be in a class by itself. It has excellent exploitation angles and a cast that will draw them in and please by their clever performances."

Arthur James, editor-in-chief of Moving Picture World, had this to say of "A Man's Home": "In our return to big business we are gratified by such productions as 'A Man's Home" which Selznick caused to be specially produced from the dramatic structure builded by Anna Steese Richardson and Edmund Breese. Plus its fine cast, which includes Grace Valentine, Kathlyn Williams and Faire Binney, together with Harry T. Morey, Matt Moore and Roland Bottomley, it is astonishingly well scened, with that atmosphere of size and importance which make for longer runs and special prices."

Joseph Dannenberg, editor of Wid's Daily, wrote this opinion: "Here's an unusual picture from Selznick. It should cause a lot of talk. It should secure a lot of newspaper space because it presents the sort of problem that is being faced in many homes in this country. Too much cannot be said of the manner in which Ralph Ince has held the tempo of this production. It is one of the pictures worth looking into. Better see this and don't give the other fellow a chance first."

P. S. Harrison's reports carried this indorsement: "Perfect pictures are very rare, indeed. When we come across one we all rub our eyes and pinch our elbows to make sure that we are not in a trance. 'A Man's Home' is one such picture. It is peopled with real human beings who act just as real people would have acted in real life. Not one of their acts, not a single one of their thoughts transgresses the laws of logic. It is a picture that should have 100 per cent. appeal."

Hodkinson November Releases

BESIDES the many interesting features which will mark the celebration of Hodkinson Month,—November, 1921,—it will also be made noteworthy by the release of three unusually interesting subjects,—two of them of feature length, the other a two-reeler.

On November 6th, "Jane Eyre" the fourth Hugo Ballin production for Hodkinson release will be published. "Jane Eyre" is the picturization of Charlotte Bronte's novel of the same name and in its making "Mabel Ballin," states Hodkinson, in the title role leaves nothing to be desired, and far surpasses even the very splendid characterizations she gave the screen in The Journey's End, East Lynne and Pagan Love, while, Norman Trevor, who leads the supporting cast, will undoubtedly score as great a success as Fairfax Rochester as he did in Enter Madame the stage play which has been his vehicle during the past year.

"The other feature which will reach the screen in November is The Light In The Clearing made from Irving Bacheller's masterful novel by the Dial Film Company. T. Hayes Hunter, of Earthbound fame, yielded the megaphone for this production.

"As regards the two-reel production, too much cannot be said for it. It is the first of the Triart Productions to reach the screen. It has already scored a very great triumph both at the Rivoli and Rialto Theatre where Hugo Reisenfeld, The Managing Director of the two houses, exploited it with a most elaborate prologue. The Beggar Maid it is called and it tells a fascinating story in a new and unusual way. Mary Astor and Reginald Denny are the featured players and it was made under the direction of Herbert Blache. It is the first of a series of twelve two-reel productions weaving a story behind the famous paintings of all times. During the coming year, the Hodkinson organization will release twelve of these two-reelers, further details concerning which will be announced at a later date.

Allied Announces Its Releases

ALLIED DISTRIBUTING CORPORATION, through its offices at 729 7th Avenue, New York City, announces a rather diversified output for this season. The schedule made up of five-reel productions, a series of two-reel comedies, two-reel westerns, single-reel novelties and a single-reel special, entitled "A Day with the Giants."

In formulating plans for the Allied, C. H. Rosenfeld, president, religiously adhered to selecting subjects for their box-office worth, and is optimistic in his statement that he has selected five winners of superior box office quality. His statement follows in full:

"The comedy series consisting of at least twelve two-reelers will constitute the work of an unbeatable combination including Alexander Alt, Helen Howell and Bobbie Burns. Neither of these stars need any introduction to the comedy field and the unlimited resources and excellent affiliations at their command should be sufficient assurance of slapstick comedies of superior quality and unlimited box office possibilities. They will be released one a month.

"The two-reel westerns should prove a revelation to this field in that they introduce some real genuine western material. The leading man, Mr. William K. Hackett was formerly a member of Mary's Ankle, The Bird of Paradise, and also earned an enviable reputation as a member of the Selig staff. Supported by Eunice Goodrich and a genuine western cast, each and every detail of these westerns are justly handled. Quite a unique attraction is offered in that the leading man's horse Rex, a prize winner of the southwest, wears the only Buffalo hide saddle ever seen in pictures, which was made at a cost of approximately five thousand dollars.

"The series of single reel novelties are in every sense what their name implies. Outdoor and indoor sports of all descriptions are photographed with the usual camera as well as a sterospeed slow motion camera and each subject is worthy of a place on the program of every theatre.

"A Day with the Giants' is a one-reel timely special personally posed for by all the members of the 1921 New York National Base Ball Team. The subject is cleverly staged and all the most importan happenings of a day with a Champion Base Ball Team are registered with the usual camera and also a sterospeed slow motion camera. The subject was produced by the Motion Picture Producing Co. by special permission of J. J. McGraw."

HAL ROACH

The Ruth Roland serial, "The White Eagle," has been shipped East. The release date for this serial has been set for January 1st.

Harold Lloyd's comedy, "Sailor Made Man," is to be given a try-out in four theatres before being shipped East. The picture has just been completed.

"Shake 'Em Up" has just been completed by Snub Pollard under the direction of Charles Parrott. An earthquake and Mexican banditry play important parts in the story.

Two stories have been completed for Harold Lloyd by Jean Havez and Sam Taylor. Selection of the new story is to be made this week and production is to be started immediately thereafter.

The "Snub" Pollard company is now making a comedy laid in the time of 1980. William Watson is directing under the supervision of Charles Parrott.

UNIVERSAL

Jack Conway is directing Frank Mayo in "Wards of the North." The company, which has gone to the Big Bear country, includes Russell Simpson, Wilfred Lucas, Molly Malone, Josef Swickard, Lydia Knott and others.

Production work on "Princess Virtue" has been delayed owing to the illness of Marie Prevost. The complete cast for this picture includes Tom Gallery, George Fisher, George Periolat, Lillian Lawrence, Bertram Grasby, Lillian Rambeau, May Busch and Rose Dione.

The release title of Marie Prevost's subject, "The Girl Who Knew All About Men," has been changed to "Nobody's Fool." This is a comedy drama by Roy Clement, directed by King Baggott.

King Baggott is now assembling an all star cast for "Human Hearts," adapted by Gerald Duffy from Hal Reid's play.

Alfred Allen has been added to the cast of "Man to Man," which stars Harry Carey under the direction of Stuart Paton.

Herbert Hayes has been engaged as the leading man for the next Miss DuPont starring vehicle, which is titled "Clay." Paul Scardon will direct.

Comedy productions now on the way include "As Toiled in the Office," featuring Berth Roach under the direction of Craig Hutcheson.

What the Big Houses Say

EARLY RETURNS FROM WEEK RUN THEATERS

FAMOUS PLAYERS

Affairs of Anatol—
Splendid picture. Women liked it especially. (Middle West.)

Unquestionably De Mille's greatest, from every standpoint. A real hit with me. (Middle West.)

Going good on third week. Had splendid run here. (East.)

A money maker. Did so well the first week that it was held over for a second week and is still going good. (Middle West.)

Sure fire attraction. Doing fine business, on second week of run (West.)

Simply great. Went over splendidly. Eager crowds thronged the box office every performance. (East.)

It sure did go over big. People just rave about it. Held for another week. (Middle West.)

Passing Thru—
Douglas MacLean always draws a good house here, and this picture was no exception. (Middle West.)

Ordinary picture for MacLean. Did good business. (West.)

Fair picture with business about average. (West.)

Cappy Ricks—
A fair picture which attracted good business on account of the star's popularity. (East.)

After the Show—
Fair. Receipts pretty good. (East.)

This went over big at my house. Audiences well pleased. (East.)

The Great Moment—
Gloria Swanson's popularity strong enough to carry her by in most anything. This is pretty good and went across nicely. (East.)

The Great Impersonation—
Business slumped at the end of the week run. Average program picture. (East.)

The Golem—
Business was fine, capacity day and night, during Jewish holidays. Matinees fell off last three days but nights continued big. Will hold over another week. (East.)

Footlights—
Played in conjunction with "The Idle Class" and the double feature drew capacity house all week. (Middle West.)

The Woman God Changed—
Played this second run to the biggest house in town for a week, and with a special lobby and some snappy exploitation, put it across. (Middle West.)

FIRST NATIONAL

The Sign on the Door—
Had fine business on this feature. Very entertaining. (East.)

The Playhouse—
Keaton going over big. Large box office value. (Middle West.)

Wedding Bells—
Empty. Could have been told better in one reel. Receipts average. (East.)

Bits of Life—
Excellent attraction, though a little hard to follow in spots. Entitled to rank beside "Mickey" Neilan's best. (Middle West.)

The author of "A Certain Rich Man" gets the headlines in this display by the Regent theatre, Wichita, Kansas.

Scrap Iron—
First class picture. And it went over big. (Middle West.)

Idle Class—
Extra large business on this production. Consider this a great picture. (Middle West.)

GOLDWYN

Dangerous Curve Ahead—
More pictures like this and the industry would get back to normalcy quicker. Just as strong a box office magnet on last day as first. (East.)

Some good newspaper exploitation put this one across in good style. A lively business all week. (Middle West.)

A knock-out. Did big business on it. (Middle West.)

Fairly good business and entertainment with this picture. (West.)

Very good picture, although we had poor business during run. (West.)

Mediocre production. Business little above average. (West.)

Ace of Hearts—
A bit unpleasant in spots, but it drew well for first three days. Fell off toward the end of the week. (Middle West.)

FOX

The Night Horseman—
A fair, if typical Mix attraction. Nothing to get excited about—but it got by. (Middle West.)

A Virgin Paradise—
Good production. More than usual business with it. (West.)

Over the Hill—
Two weeks to good business and pleased audiences. (West.)

UNIVERSAL

Moonlight Follies—
Going very big. Capacity house at performances. (West.)

Fair. Nice introduction to a star I believe will amount to something if she has a chance. (Middle West.)

Marie Prevost has a good following here, the picture attracting a good attendance for a week's run. (Middle West.)

The Silver Lining—
Average production. Business was fair during run. (West.)

METRO

Home Stuff—
Good work by Viola Dana, but terribly rotten support. Very amateurish, as a whole, and was received in that manner by audiences, as shown by receipts. (East.)

Big Game—
An average picture, on which we had poor business. (East.)

A Trip to Paradise—
A very usual picture. Average business. (East.)

WARREN

Girl From God's Country—
The slash-bang stuff drew its followers. Receipts fair. (East.)

Rather crude in spots. But it went over very well. (East.)

ASSOCIATED PRODUCERS

The Cup of Life—
An ordinary picture with the usual business. (Middle West.)

ROBERTSON-COLE

One Man in a Million—
Fine play. Should be more pictures like it. (Middle West.)

"FROM THE GROUND UP"
(Goldwyn)

Good Incident and Clever Titles Big Aid to Slender Story

TOM MOORE seems to be emulating John Drew. "Same show, same part, different title." "From the Ground Up" is a near relative to "Hold Your Horses" and "Made in Heaven," telling a story in narrative of a young "Harp" who begins at the bottom rung of the ladder and in the course of time, reasonably short too, climbs to the top and incidentally wins a bride from the 400 list.

Rupert Hughes wrote and adapted "From the Ground Up," and while he has neglected to provide a plot, he has furnished material for a reasonable amount of entertainment and in one sequence, a thrill.

The entertainment is evolved from good incident of a comedy turn and from titles that explain the incident in clever fashion. The thrill comes in the middle of the picture when the near heavy of the story, supposedly carrying a large package of home brew ambles out on a girder of a 'steen story building in course of construction from which he threatens to fall off and where he does push a would-be rescuer overboard for a drop of one flight. This sequence is used in the story to make plausable the hero's sudden rise to prominence since the man rescued by the magic of Mr. Moore's smile and his wit, is a rich man's son, who later becomes his benefactor.

The star is eminently fitted for his role and as a vehicle, providing the fan hasn't seen the two previously mentioned pictures too recently, the picture should be accepted as pleasing entertainment. As a production, however, it wanders along to a perfectly obvious finish and at no time will it interest from its story value.

Helene Chadwick is the girl, pretty petite and well dressed. She and Mr. Moore have pretty close to all the scenes. Some very pretty scenery is used as backgrounds and the photography and lightings are exceptional. It is light entertainment suitable for houses where audiences do not take their pictures too seriously and where Tom Moore is popular as a star.—Length, 5 reels.—J. S. Dickerson.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Tom Moore, popular film star, is to be presented in another of his inimitable "Irish" roles by Rupert Hughes in "From the Ground Up," scheduled as the feature photoplay attraction at the ———— theatre for a ———— days showing beginning ————.

In "From the Ground Up" Tom plays the part of a young "harp" employed as "valet to a steam shovel," who through a series of incidents and his own initiative rises to successs as a contractor and who finally wins the heart and hand of the lady fair, who when he first met her he was shoveling dirt at the bottom of the pit where her father was to build a sky scraper.

The picture has been developed with pleasing and in many places amusing incident and the titles which Mr. Hughes has furnished further add to the feature's comedy turn.

In support of the star is pretty Helene Chadwick as the girl, De Witt C. Jennings, and Darrell Foss. Pretty scenic backgrounds, nice clothes, and exceptional sets add to the feature's attractiveness. A real thrill is provided in one sequence too. All in all it is a pleasing evening's entertainment and adds another success to the string which Mr. Hughes and Mr. Moore have contributed to the Goldwyn program.

PROGRAM READER

Popular Tom Moore and Rupert Hughes, as star and author split honors in Mr. Moore's latest starring vehicle on the Goldwyn picture program, "From the Ground Up" which is the feature attraction at the ———— theatre for a ———— days showing beginning ————.

Mr. Hughes, who not only wrote the story for "From the Ground Up," but also contributed the titles and the continuity, has furnished some excellent comedy scenes for Mr. Moore and the pictures registers as a high grade piece of light entertainment in which the star has a likeable role as the young Irishman who climbs the ladder of success and wins the girl of his heart.

In the first part of the feature, Mr. Moore is "valet for a steam shovel," where he meets his prospective bride, daughter of his boss. Opportunities of his own making as well as of chance present themselves and when the picture ends Mr. Moore is a contractor with offices in the building he had helped to erect. He proposes to the girl and is accepted, everything ending happily.

In support of the star is pretty Helene Chadwick, wearing some wonderful frocks and Mr. Moore does some dressing up himself. All in all it is a very pretty and pleasing show, one which will win Tom Moore more friends, if that is possible.

SUGGESTIONS

Play up the titles by Rupert Hughes, calling attention to his previous successes, "Dangerous Curve Ahead" and "The Old Nest." Bill Moore as playing a likeable role for which he is well adapted, that of the young "Harp" who wins his way to success. Prologue numbers with a stage setting showing a sky scraper being erected will be suitable and a novelty. Use stills showing the "dress up" character of the picture. Some of Hughes' titles as captions on stills ought to get attention.

CATCH LINES

Tom Moore and his Irish smile in the story of a "Mick" who started to rise from forty feet below ground and finally proposed to the only girl on the top floor of the sky scraper he had helped build.

A romance that began in the cellar and ended 'steen stories high with Tom Moore playing one of the parts that have made him famous, a young "Harp" who begins at the bottom and works his way to the top, all on account of a girl who was worth working for.

"THE HUNCH"
(S. L. Pictures-Metro)

Some Moments Are Mildly Amusing

GARETH HUGHES got off to such a good start in "The Garments of Truth" that it is to be regretted that his second stellar vehicle, "The Hunch," fails to give him the opportunities to express his peculiar style of comedy expression. The fault isn't so much with the star. We still maintain that his forte is satire of a polite character. But when he is compelled to play exaggerated farce which smacks of slapstick—well, the star seems to be out of his element. There are moments in this Percival Wilde story which are mildly amusing, and if the director had merely skimmed the surface or if he had used a rapier instead of a club, some of the telling points would have undoubtedly scored.

However, the spectator is disarmed in viewing this feature. He cannot bring any censure to bear upon the development since the idea and execution are burlesqued to a degree. In looking at it from this standpoint the picture would get over better had the director been consistent in applying the exaggerated humor. He is inclined to be easy in some of the early scenes but when the principal figures are incarcerated in the jail the burlesque element becomes unduly prominent. He has allowed Gail Henry and Harry Loraine unlimited opportunities to put over some slapstick and they certainly accomplish it with little restraint. It is as if the limitations of the plot demanded extra footage to provide the regulation length.

The plot itself concerns a young man who is anxious to make a "killing" in Jerusalem Steel in order to win over the rich father of his sweetheart. The stock takes a tumble and the youth has an idea that if he could arrange to be murdered and reappear in the flesh at the appointed time he will be forgiven and the father granting his consent. It is rather funny to see him plan his own murder. However, he did not bank upon being kidnapped by some real thugs and robbed of his money and clothing. So he makes his way on foot to the country home of his fiancee—looking very much like a tramp. Here is the point where the plot becomes really exaggerated, and much of the action loses its spontaneity through a repetition of scenes in the village lock-up. The "constable" and his wife put over some rural comedy of the hokum brand. The conclusion introduces all the principals locked up in the jail, although they make a get-away in novel fashion. The story being of single-track character becomes episodic in several places. It manages to entertain mildly, however, without becoming boresome except for the jail incident. The figure interpreted by Hughes is hardly whimsical enough to permit him a chance to show the talent so conspicuous in "Garments of Truth."—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

A farce-comedy entitled "The Hunch" will be the feature attraction at the ———— theatre next ———— with Gareth Hughes as the star. This picture presents the actor in a role which enables him to show his gift for farcial expression. As J. Preston Humphrey, the fiance of a wealthy girl, he puts plenty of spirit in the part. J. Preston is not warmly received by the girl's father so when his stocks fall (he has been dealing in Jerusalem Steel) he proceeds to efface himself from the earth by staging a fake murder.

He will make it appear as if he has been murdered. But when he has planted the necessary evidence the youth is kidnapped and deprived of his money and clothing. He is locked up in the village jail and before long his partners in crime are also incarcerated. The picture sparkles with a deal of homespun humor and efferveses with plenty of action. Mr. Hughes is assisted by Ethel Grandin, John C. Stepping, Harry Loraine and Gale Henry. Percival Wilde wrote the story while George D. Baker directed.

PROGRAM READER

Did you ever have a hunch? Most everybody possesses some kind of a hunch. A man may have a hunch that he will win a lot of money; he may have a hunch that the RIGHT GIRL will come alone; he may have a hunch that he is going to take a long journey. Well, Gareth Hughes has a hunch—that he is going to win a big fortune. He also has a hunch that the girl is going to marry him against the consent of her father. But he didn't have a hunch that he was going to be locked up in the village jail, or that he was going to be kidnapped and deprived of his money and clothing. Come to the ———— theatre next ———— and ———— and see Gareth Hughes in "The Hunch," a picture of rich humor and plenty of action.

SUGGESTIONS

Gareth Hughes is getting over with his pictures. His "Garments of Truth" is proving a winner. So you can tell that he is coming to your theatre in another sparkling picture. Bring forth that he has achieved fame in "Sentimental Tommy," that his style of acting is really distinctive. You can tell them that Hughes' peculiar gift lies in his ability to interpret the whimsicalities of youth. Play up the picture as a comedy-satire which carries plenty of laughs. Emphasize the title and use it in all your exploitation campaign. Tell that Gale Henry is in the cast. Some of your crowd should recognize her name since she has starred in slapstick comedies.

CATCH LINES

Did you ever have a hunch? Is a hunch to be obeyed? See Gareth Hughes in "The Hunch," as funny as "Garments of Truth" and just as entertaining.

"HIS NIBS"
(Exceptional Pictures)

Sure-Fire Rural Comedy Bound to Score

WITH each moment replete with real humor, really artistic characterization, and undisturbed continuity flow, a picture is bound to "get over." "His Nibs" is in that class. Charles "Chic" Sale is the picture. From start to finish he puts over the "hokum" of his rube characterizations, so well known to vaudeville audiences throughout the country, in rapid-fire fashion.

We said Sale was the picture. But, equally, we must credit the clever sub-titles for a goodly share of the humor. Natural, unforced, blending perfectly into the action of the moment, they rebut the oft advanced argument that the perfect picture must have no wordy flash interludes.

Designed essentially to exploit the peculiar abilities as a mimic, possessed by "Chic" Sale, the plot—if such it may be called, finds him in seven different characters. As "His Nibs," proprietor of the Slippery Elm Theatre Palace, he put into force his own ideas of running a theatre. Being also the operator of the antique and balky projection machine, he takes it on himself to cut all sub-titles from the pictures he runs—also such scenes as he deems superfluous—and from the booth window announces his own explanation of the scenes as they are flashed. The bulk of the entertainment is found here, although as the Village Entertainer and Wit, the program Announcer, the lady Pianist, the Village Editor and Censor and the Local Weather Prophet, he lends to the general humor of the piece at such interludes as he is seen in these parts. Too, he is the dupe but finally triumphant, Rube, hero of the three-part drama, exhibited by "His Nibs" at the Slippery Elm Palace.

Presenting myriad leads for striking and successful exploitation, exploitation which need not be accompanied by any but a modicum of expense, the exhibitor, small or big, country or city, is assured of a box office medium which may well be classed with "Down on the Farm" and "The Country Fair." To the wise exhibitor no more need be said. And, in addition to equal exploitation advantages, it is better entertainment than the two mentioned.—Length, 5145 feet.—George D. Gould.

THE CAST

Theo. Bender ("His Nibs"), Wally Craw, Mr. Percifer, Elmer Bender, Peelee Gear, Miss Dessie Teed, The Boy — Charles ("Chic") Sale

Edited and Titled by Arthur Hoerl.
Photography by William H. Tuers and A. J. Stout.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

A picture heralded as being far from the beaten track in both conception and execution, "His Nibs," an Exceptional Pictures Corp. feature, with "Chic" Sale, the widely known vaudeville actor in seven distinct roles, comes to the ———— theatre next ———— for ————. The story concerns a country motion picture exhibitor who humorously explains the various situations arising in the films he shows, doing away at will with both sub-titles and scenes. Comedy moments are interspersed throughout by the other half dozen characters played by Mr. Sale.

The production is said to offer enjoyable, clean comedy from start to finish, the country characters portrayed by the star each being a distinct creation. There is a story within a story, double exposure throughout depicting on the screen of the Slippery Elm Picture Palace, the adventures of Mr. Sale as "The Boy" who, lured into a fake oil transaction is stripped of his money, eventually coming out on top and jailing the promoters.

PROGRAM READER

For just an hour go back in memory to the old home town, with its straggling, shaded streets, its bum of neighborly gossip, its "little world of its own" routine. Go back with "Chic" Sale, "His Nibs," to the days when acquisition of five pennies by hard effort meant the delights of motion picture shows in the country store, or the church basement, or the Opera House once a week. See the old lovable village characters live again; the kindly old Picture Palace proprietor, the smart young fellow always "life of the party" in his own home town; the self-conscious lady pianist and soloist; the super-critical, censorous gentleman who was the forerunner of the Blue Law advocate of today.

Chic Sale will take you back to all this and more in his picture, "His Nibs," in which he enacts seven different roles in uproarious yet quiet comedy fashion.

SUGGESTIONS

Inexpensive yet striking lobby displays go naturally with this production. Its exploitation possibilities will suggest themselves on sight of the film. A "village store" front will be the first thought. Tie-ups with local merchants may be established, particularly clothing stores. A prologue with rural setting, and quartette in rural dress will be effective. Ushers may be similarly attired.

"Chic" Sale's name is known all over the country to theatregoers. Play it up strong, together with the fact that he is one of the leading eccentric character artists of the stage. A brief resume of the parts he plays will excite interest. With proper advance work the production may play to standing room anywhere.

CATCH LINES

Charles "Chic" Sale, vaudeville star, in a screaming comedy drama of rural life in which he enacts seven different parts.

He is proprietor and operator of the village picture theatre, also the lady entertainer, the announcer, the village cut-up, the censoring editor and the hero of the film he presents.

Take ten years off your shoulders, and see Chic Sale, his ancient motion picture machine, his more ancient theatre, and his super-modern method of presenting pictures.

"THE INNER CHAMBER"
(Vitagraph)

Alice Joyce Picture Is Average Entertainment

ALICE JOYCE undoubtably belongs in a modern, middle-class drama such as "The Inner Chamber" proves itself to be. The picture works out into an interesting, but hardly exceptional, bit of entertainment, which will give undoubted satisfaction to an audience which is, first of all, pleased by this star, and secondly, which prefers a story dealing with the trials and tribulations of an above-reproach heroine. As it tells the tale of a girl loved by three men, it presents drama which is neither powerful nor new, but it does offer some new incident, made more appealing by unusual sets. Also there is one character, a jealous suitor of Latin descent, who differs from the average movie type of hero. By carefully planting his volatile disposition, the director has made the climax appear sufficiently convincing.

The heroine is a girl who needs must support her invalid mother. This she does by working as a secretary to a business man. But John Webb Dillon, experienced in screen villainy as he is, is not of innocent intent, and the girl's second admirer saves her from the attacks of the first. Thereupon she becomes an accompanist to a singer. She is unaware that her salary is being paid by admirer number two. When she discovers this fact she becomes highly indignant, and the more so when she learns that her employer already has a wife.

For the second time she is out of a job. Her next venture is as a singer in an Italian table d'hote restaurant. This set is life-like and planned, but the restaurant-owner gives an illustration of over-acting, which cannot escape notice. To this restaurant comes the third and last lover, the young Italian doctor, who cures the girl's mother and wins the daughter's heart. They are married. The ceremony is over and the wedding presents on the table when her husband learns that he is not the only one who has loved her. Without waiting to allow her a chance to vindicate herself, he rushes to her room and places a bullet through the eyes of her image in a mirror. Then he destroys all the perfectly good wedding presents, and shoots himself to finish off the evening's work. As his jealous disposition is emphasized throughout the picture this unreasonable rampage appears very reasonable. There is a happy ending.

The picture is well directed by Edward Jose, and the cast includes Jane Jennings, Pedro de Cordoba, Holmes Herbert, John Webb Dillon and Josephone Whittell. The story is adapted from a novel by Charles Caldwell Dobie.—Length, 5 reels.—Matthew A. Taylor.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Alice Joyce, the beautiful Vitagraph star, is the featured player in "The Inner Chamber," which is scheduled for presentation at the ———— theatre on ————. Miss Joyce long ago endeared herself to the hearts of motion picture-dom and continues to win followers in each succeeding release.

"The Inner Chamber" is a screen adaptation of Charles Caldwell Dobie's famous novel "The Blood Red Dawn." It furnishes Alice Joyce a vehicle with excellent opportunities for emotional acting and presents her in a role that will long be remembered. It is in roles of this type that this favorite of the screen excells. Many beautiful scenes and elaborate interior settings are required by the story. No expense has been spared to make this production one of real merit and one that will stand out in bold relief against many productions of the present year. The continuity was written by C. Graham Baker, who has prepared the continuities of many of the greatest screen successes. The story is one of social life in which the heroine encounters both poverty and affluence. She is beset by unscrupulous social enemies, but rises above all obstacles and difficulties.

Edward Jose, one of the best known motion picture directors, supervised this production. In the cast are such capable players as Holmes E. Herbert, Jane Jennings, John Webb Dillon and Mrs. DeWolf Hopper.

PROGRAM READER

Three men sought her. One a jealous Latin, one an unscrupulous libertine, and the third a successful business man. Of the three she chooses the first, but the third was the "right man."

"The Inner Chamber," which is the feature picture at the ———— theatre, stars the incomparable Alice Joyce in a thoroughly enjoyable human interest drama. The story is founded on the popular novel by Charles Caldwell Dobie, entitled "The Blood Red Dawn." The production was directed by Edward Jose, who has some of the screen's most notable successes to his credit. In support of Miss Joyce are such well known players as Pedro de Cordoba, who made such a hit with E. H. Sothern in "If I Were King." His screen career has been varied and he has appeared in some of the greatest screen productions in the past few years. Miss Joyce herself is afforded exactly the type of role in which she so pleases her admirers. She plays the poor girl, fighting against poverty, and the rich girl, surrounded by luxury. The picture is embellished with elaborate sets and no expense was spared to make the sets thoroughly realistic.

CATCH LINES

Surely you will not want to miss the beautiful Alice Joyce in "The Inner Chamber," a society drama which gives her every opportunity to charm you as much as she has done in the past.

A story of a girl who has to choose between three men. An elaborate production with beautiful Alice Joyce in the stellar role.

"BAR NOTHING"

(Fox)

Buck Jones Has a First Rate Western Here

THOSE exhibitors who cater to program pictures will find in "Bar Nothin'," Buck Jones' newest release, a western which is quite above the ordinary in point of characteristic ingredients. There is plenty of snappy action and incident and the characterization has a ring of sincerity about it that will strike a responsive chord with the spectator. The star heretofore has been burdened with plots which were deliberately worked out, and he seemed to meditate entirely too much for one of these energetic representatives of the West. In "Bar Nothin'" the cowboy star comes into his own.

The plot is a likely tale of an untamed rancher who whoops it up on every pay-day. He rides into town at the head of a group of rollicking cowboys and proceeds to play the bully until he is halted by a girl who makes him realize that he is something of a coward. The heroine has journeyed West with her sick brother in order to take care of him. However, ranch life is proving too much of a task, and so she advertises for a foreman. The hero offers his services and is accepted. At this point the picture develops its punch, and what is flashed takes on the form of highly interesting melodrama. The "heavy" of the plot is weaving a net of intrigue. He is desirous of winning the girl so that he might gain title to her property. But his real motive is to dispose of her cattle to his henchman.

The cowboy comes to the rescue with his breezy personality and sells the herd at the right figure, but before he has had time to pocket the money, the crooked cattle dealer has staged a little ambush. The result is the cowboy finds himself on the trackless wastes of the desert with death staring him in the face because of the absence of water. It appears a trifle convenient when he captures a runaway horse and rides back to the town, and his sudden recovery of energy does not ring entirely true. However, the thrill attached to the scene offers full compensation. The conclusion brings another effective melodramatic touch when he rides to the rescue of his friends. Jones steals some of Tom Mix's stuff when he drops from a bridge onto the roof of a train and captures the villain. "Bar Nothin'" is so crammed with action and suspense, that the romantic note is nearly lost sight of, and when it does appear it only serves to lighten the heavy portion of the story. The picture is adequately staged, carries effective exteriors and is saturated with good atmosphere. The acting is capable throughout. Westerns will not lose their appeal as long as they stick to such standards as are set up in "Bar Nothin'."—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

"Bar Nothin'" is the title of the new Buck Jones picture which comes to the ———— theatre next ————. It is a Western marked for its vigorous line of action and its keen suspense and it furnishes the Fox cowboy star plenty of opportunity to show his skill in the saddle and with the two guns. He plays a rollicking ranchman who loses his "bully-like" nature when a refined Eastern girl proves him a coward. He straightway makes amends by offering himself as a foreman on her ranch and before the story is finished she has occasion to discover that Travis is courageous to a degree.

A certain vicious cattle dealer nearly upsets the plans of the innocent figures and the cowboy is in dire straits until he is fortunate to lasso a runaway horse and rescue himself from the desert. "Bar Nothin" teems with excitement from beginning to end and carries dramatic punch in every scene. Prominent in the cast are Ruth Renick and Arthur Carewe. Edward Sedgwick directed.

PROGRAM READER

Whoopee! Here he comes ridin' at the head of a band of boisterous cowboys. It was pay-day, and the event of collecting the money meant that there was no holding the irrepressible ranchers. So Buck Jones rode into town—to shoot it up and make the natives seek safety. He remained long enough to fall in love with a refined Eastern girl. Come to the ———— theatre next ———— and see the cowboy star, Buck Jones, in his best picture. Come and see "Bar Nothin'" a feature which crackles with snappy Western action and incident. A picture which will keep one keenly interested from start to finish.

SUGGESTIONS

Since this is a Western you know the policy to exploit the feature. If Jones has a following in your locality—well the mere mention of his name will attract the patrons. But you can emphasize that this Western is far above the ordinary in its interest compelling moments. Play up that it crackles with action and incident. Use stills of the star and his leading woman, Ruth Renick. You can put over some breezy copy, in the style of Western speech. Play it up as a fast-moving melodrama which carries sufficient strength to appeal to everyone. Make mention of the fact that Jones is one of the best riders identified with the screen.

CATCH LINES

He was a rollicking cowboy, but when the girl called him a coward—well it sort of took his breath away. See Buck Jones in "Bar Nothin'."

See Buck Jones in "Bar Nothin'"—a picture of fast action and interesting incident. Don't miss it.

"THE CASE OF BECKY"

(Realart)

Constance Binney Has Acting Opportunities in Story of Dual Personality

THIS screen version of David Belasco's play permits Constance Binney the biggest acting opportunities of her career, and her pantomime in the role of the dual figure is certain to be accepted as quite the best work she has contributed. It is an arduous task that she has here—a task that must have called upon a deal of energy, but if the plot fails to ring genuine in many of its sequences at least the impersonation carries the element of reality. The story might not stand close analysis in certain critical quarters because it reveals considerable hokus-pokus which has to do with hypnotism.

Becky is known as Dorothy in her wholesome personality. She is the unwilling subject of a hypnotist attached to a traveling carnival. It is when he casts his piercing eyes upon her and flashes a diamond ring before her concentrated gaze that the girl's unwholesome personality asserts itself and she becomes a veritable tigress. The spell wears off after a time (the reviewer, not being acquainted with hypnotism beyond the average layman's viewpoint, cannot say whether the scheme is correct, although the impression is that the hypnotist, himself, has to bring the patient from under his influence) and the girl becomes her better self. She promises her dying mother to make her escape and finds refuge with a family in a small village—a village which harbors a nerve specialist.

One can see which way the wind is blowing at this point. And the romance is gently introduced and weaves a fabric of charming moments, for the youth of the house falls deeply in love. She accepts an engagement ring, but the mere sight of it cause her to become Becky. Her benefactress, being alarmed, places her in the care of the specialist. And this is the point to reintroduce the hyponotist, who has come to town, sneaked into the house, and placed the girl in his power again. There is a flash of creditable incident which concerns the attempted kidnapping of the girl and her subsequent tigrish impulses. But why did the director place a revolver in the secretary's drawer so that the heroine might use it to injure her sweetheart? Any doctor who has a nerve patient in his care would see to it that all dangerous weapons were carefully hidden. The shooting scene is really irrelevant and does not advance the story. The heroine takes the test and emerges resplendent in health, and when the trap is laid to ensnare the hypnotist, he steps into it. He has lost his power. The long arm of coincidence intrudes when the heroine is revealed as the specialist's kidnapped child, the hypnotist having stolen her in her childhood days. However, there is enough dramatic substance to the picture to hold the attention.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

David Belasco's celebrated play, "The Case of Becky," has reached the screen and comes to the ———— theatre next ———— as a vehicle for the talented and pretty Realart star, Constance Binney. This actress easily assumes the mantle worn by Frances Starr upon the speaking stage and gives a performance marked for its poise and persuasion, and her emotional moments are really praiseworthy. The story revolves around a girl of dual personality. As Dorothy she possesses a lovable, wholesome nature, but since she is the unwilling patient of a hypnotist, he uses his evil influences to transform her into a human tigress—whose nature is to hate and destroy.

The girl makes her escape and finds refuge with a family in the country, but she has lapses when her evil nature asserts itself. It is then that she is placed in the care of a nerve specialist who will experiment to discover which nature is truly dominant. The picture is punctuated with startling dramatic surprises and carries a romance of tender appeal. And the cast is entirely capable.

PROGRAM READER

Did you ever know anyone who possessed a dual personality—whose nature carried two souls—one of which asserted itself in evil thoughts and deeds, the other a soul which found expression through human and wholesome impulses? Probably you have not. But this is not to say that David Belasco's play, "The Case of Becky," which has reached the screen does not spell good entertainment. When you coome to the ———— theatre next ———— you will be entertained with a startling line of drama and Constance Binney is the star. Really this clever little actress demonstrates that she is unusually gifted in histrionic talent. The play will interest you and intrigue you. Come early.

SUGGESTIONS

The names of David Belasco and Constance Binney should be exploited here. You can tell that Belasco wrote the play which had a wide success upon the stage, and that it has come to the screen with all its dramatic strength and characterization. Tell that it gives to the star her biggest acting opportunities and that she avails herself of them. You might use a line of argument concerning hypnotism and get your audience in a discussion as to the efficacy of hypnotism. Prevail upon your crowd to come and see a play out of the ordinary and play up the star and the author. Bill it as a dramatic, surprising, startling exposition of a dual personality. Make mention that we all possess good and evil natures, although the unwholesome personalities are mostly negative.

CATCH LINES

"LADYFINGERS"
(Metro)

Be Sure to Find a Place for This One

THIS picture is quite certain to appeal to the spectator because of its original character studies and the fact that its various sequences spell a line of action that is sure-fire because of its human interest. Bert Lytell has another of his "Jimmy Valentine" parts here and the nature of the plot is similar to the reformed crook stories which have brought him into the limelight so successfully. However, the star must share honors with Edythe Chapman, who in her portrayal of a wealthy, shrewd, but highly eccentric old lady, gives such a dominating performance that really the star is more or less in the background. This old lady, sharp of tongue and independent of will, is eager to locate a lost heir.

The boy had been reared by a gentleman crook, and as the picture develops its opening scene, the action discloses a detective harassing him at every opportunity. The young man is unusually gifted in opening safes, but the police apparently have nothing on him. It is not clearly established how he is able to get on speaking terms with his aunt, but this minor slip will go by unnoticed—what with the wealth of incident and the bright humor flashed. The old lady stands out as a truly unique character. The title writer gives her dialogue of a most individual style and the captions are certain to be appreciated because of their quaintness. It is the purpose of the old lady to test the honesty of the youth, and her scheme is to place temptation in his reach. A wall safe and a small fortune are at his finger tips, but he hesitates. And when the moment arrives to catch him with the evidence, she frustrates the scheme of the detective and her scheming lawyer.

The story is interestingly told up to the fourth reel, when it develops an anti-climax. It is as if the director had so much material to work with that he neglected to call a halt and be satisfied with his job. The suspense is allowed to stray here, which makes the picture seem finished ahead of time. Through all the character development and the melodramatic moments the romantic note is intruding to give it a balance. The youth falls in love with the ward of his grandmother. And she swears by him when she realizes his honesty. The final shot might be dispensed with since it places the eccentric woman in a ludicrous light. It's hardly imaginable that an elderly lady would execute a slide down a steep cliff and maintain her balance at the same time. However, it is good for a laugh. Ora Carew is the feminine lead and gives a charming performance. Bayard Veiller directed the feature. It certainly is one of Lytell's best bets.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

This is a picture of a crook's redemption, brought about by discovering faith in himself through the kindly influence of a quaint, eccentric figure who in reality is his grandmother. The boy has grown to maturity without knowing anything about his family tree. But the lost heir is located and given a home with the old lady. She places temptation within his reach but he refuses to encourage it. And the law is ever hounding him. However, he goes straight and the old grandmother has occasion to feel highly pleased over the turn of events.

The picture is marked for its rich characterization—and the humorous angle is well emphasized through the quaint speeches uttered by the old lady. The picture also teems with dramatic moments and its human interest is well brought forth. "Ladyfingers" will appear at the ———— theatre next ———— with Bert Lytell as the star. It is a picture certain to entertain even the most fastidious. Edythe Chapman and Ora Carew are in the cast.

PROGRAM READER

He had been reared in a school of crime. He had never known the influence of a mother. And the police were determined to get him breaking a safe. But Ladyfingers was too clever for them. One day he found good fortune by discovering himself an heir to his grandmother's wealth. Her plan was to test his honesty. How he comes through with flying colors—and how the old lady proved herself genuine in her eagerness to help him—is told in five reels of clever comedy-drama entitled "Ladyfingers" starring Bert Lytell. The Metro star has a role similar to his famous "Jimmy Valentine." It is a picture teeming with incident and humor and one cannot afford to miss it. At the ———— next ————.

SUGGESTIONS

Tell them that Bert Lytell has another "Jimmy Valentine" type of story here and since he can do the character quite a little better than his rivals of the screen—well the patrons are assured of good entertainment. Tell that the story is really unusual—that it is highly original and affords plenty of incident and humor. Bring forth that it teaches a lesson in tolerance and sympathy. Bring forth that the picture carries a plentiful supply of snappy incident. For a prologue you can put over a burglar satire—with the orchestra playing creepy music. The title is a winner, too, and could come in for some snappy advertising.

CATCH LINES

They called him Ladyfingers—because his hands were delicately shaped. Another reason was his ability to break into safes through his gifted fingers. See Bert Lytell in the humorous and human picture, "Ladyfingers."

"DAWN OF THE EAST"
(Realart)

Story of Adventure and Intrigue Is Satisfactory

IF there is one actress that has her work cut out for her of late—that actress is Alice Brady. In her recent pictures the Realart star has run the overworked gamut of emotions in portraying a variety of characters. She scored effectively as an Italian girl in "Little Italy," and now she comes forward in a picturesque part—that of a Russian countess, and scores with something to spare. The story itself is a familiar one and always obvious in its development. Yet it is saturated with so much Oriental intrigue and atmosphere and carries enough variety of scenes to hold one at attention. In fact the outstanding virtue of the picture is its artistic design—the settings being rich in color and quality.

The direction is always commendable and it is a feather in E. H. Griffith's cap that he has been able to make so much from such orthodox material. He has established his climaxes at the end of his important sequences with no incidental interludes added for the sake of footage. The picture reveals some Chinese customs which may be said to ring with reality. Particularly is this noticeable as they pertain to the marriage laws. Again the picturesque types have been vividly presented, the several characters carrying the story along in places through sheer personality. The Chinese servant will win admiration because of his sympathetic attitude toward the heroine's frail sister.

The plot, trimmed down to its skeleton, has to do with a Russian girl escaping to America and relieving herself of the obnoxious marital bonds which made her the wife of a wily Oriental. She accepts his dowry money under the idea that it will release her from the matrimonial yoke, although she is ignorant of the fact that acceptance of this money constitutes a ceremony. The revengeful Chinaman follows to America and endeavors to involve her in some diplomatic intrigue, but the blackmailing scheme is foiled when he realizes that she is a friend of China. The scenarioist has covered his tracks well and there are no real gaps in the story. There is even excuse for the journey to America because of the sister's frail health. But the Russian characterization doesn't reveal itself. She could just as well have been an English girl or a daughter of any country in Europe. If one is disappointed in the plot the atmosphere and settings offer full compensation. The fan-tan scene is truly colorful. Kenneth Harlan and Michia Itow render good assistance.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Alice Brady, who is rapidly making a name for herself as an exceptionally gifted character actress, has in "Dawn of the East," her newest Realart picture, a story which enables her to flash further evidence of her versatility. The star appears as Countess Natalya, a Russian girl, who with her frail sister, has fled the Revolution and is stranded in China. She becomes a dancing girl in a cafe and is induced by a Chinese antique dealer to accept the betrothal money from a rival merchant and use the money to escape to America. Not understanding Chinese customs, she doesn't realize that such an act on her part is involved with the marriage ceremony.

In America she marries a diplomat, and in an attempt to extort from her the details of a secret treaty with China, she is confronted with her Oriental husband. The attempted blackmail is foiled and when the wily Chinaman appreciates that she is a friend of his country he allows her to have a divorce. The picture is well charged with atmosphere and is interestingly told and acted. "Dawn of the East" will appear at the ———— theatre next ————.

PROGRAM READER

A picture of adventure, international intrigue, romance and human interest is "Dawn of the East," Alice Brady's newest release which comes to the ———— theatre next ———— and ————. The popular and talented Realart star has shown her histrionic capabilities on a score of occasions, her recent work in "Little Italy" calling for praise of the highest order. In "Dawn of the East" Miss Brady has another picturesque role—that of a Russian countess. And the figure is as distinctive as her Italian girl in "Little Italy." So come and see this clever star in a picture calculated to interest you from beginning to end.

SUGGESTIONS

Since Alice Brady has demonstrated her talent for characterization and her ability to interpret widely varied roles, it would be a good plan to announce that she appears here as a Russian countess. She has played several types of late and her portrayal here indicates that she knows character expression. Play up the title and describe the picture as carrying a story of international intrigue and Oriental cunning. You can put over an effective prologue—a tab act with the figures correctly costumed. The Oriental atmosphere might be suggested in a color scheme. Also some Russian dancing might fill out your program in an entertaining manner.

CATCH LINES

She was followed to America by a wily Chinaman, who threatened her life. What happened? See Alice Brady in "Dawn of the East."

"THE FOOLISH AGE"
(Robertson-Cole)

Sparkling Little Comedy With Doris May as Star

IT is a sparkling little comedy which Doris May has for her first starring venture. "The Foolish Age," written by Hunt Stromberg, may be catalogued as a delightful study of that impulsive period of girlhood when it is difficult to reason things out from a safe and sane attitude. The very fact that it bears a resemblance to life makes this satire ring much more genuine than its character on the surface would indicate. The star is seen in the early scenes in the role of a charming undergraduate who, when the great moment arrives to leave the environment of her college, decides to practice what the learned doctor who delivered the baccalaureate sermon preached. His advice is to uplift the downtrodden. So she straightway takes up settlement work.

Being a little daughter of the rich, the idle life does not appeal to her. She has bigger things to do than disport about in finery and attend social functions. So she opens up an office to take care of the derelicts of humanity. It is a humorous scene which shows a motley throng of "down-and-outers" assembling at the office to apply for the position of secretary. And she takes the roughest looking one of the lot. Here is the occasion for Bull Montana to be introduced, and again this colorful type nearly walks away with the honors. The picture develops a deal of funny incident which, while of a fluffy character, nevertheless sparkles with plenty of pep and spontaneity. The heroine is quite determined to show her friends and relatives that she is able to take care of herself. They may say that she is passing through the foolish age, but their toleration of her pet theory indicates their belief in her sincerity.

There is no lapse in the sparkling action. Indeed the by-play indulged in by the impulsive heroine and the erstwhile gangster whom she rescued from the slums is sufficiently amusing to score most anywhere. Particularly funny is the scene which shows the girl giving a box party at the theatre with her crude friends violating all the standards of good etiquette. Montana is attired faultlessly, yet he imagines himself at a circus, because he is shelling peanuts and dropping the shucks on the audience below. And the reception scene is a sure gloom-chaser. There is a note of conflict which introduces the heroine's fiance attempting to embarrass the rough secretary. This dramatic touch is well developed and offers some effective incident. The heroine comes to her senses when she discovers her gunmen reverting to type. The picture is well titled, the scenario is compact and the direction and acting are entirely competent. Doris May has proved that she is capable of stardom and "The Foolish Age" is certain to start her off with flying colors.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Doris May is the star of "The Foolish Age," which comes to the ———— theatre next ———— and ————. This dainty actress, who will be remembered for her fine portrayals while starring with Douglas MacLean, comes into her own here as a star on her own initiative and it must be said that the figure of Margy Carr is ideal for the expression of her wistful and charming personality. Margy has but recently graduated from college with the idea that humanity should be uplifted. Her efforts in this direction cause her all sorts of embarrassment—although many of her adventures are marked for their humorous moments.

After she has brought embarrassment to many of her relatives she suddenly decides to let well enough alone. Her place she discovers is in the home instead of the office. The picture sparkles with humor and is excellently acted by the star and her capable assistants, among whom are included the picturesque Bull Montana, Hallam Cooley and Arthur Hoyt. Hunt Stromberg wrote the story, while William Seiter directed.

PROGRAM READER

Margy had just received her diploma. She was young and impressionable and she had a mind of her own. But her folks said that she was going through the foolish age because of her desire to appear utterly unconventional. It was something of a shock to her relatives and friends when she took up work for the betterment of mankind. She had a secretary who was once a gangster. And when Margy gave a reception at her home for her uncouth friends—well, her impulse proved a profound shock. But she was only going through the foolish age. Everybody has to go through that age at some time. Come to the ———— and see the charming Doris May in "The Foolish Age." Next ———— is the date. Don't forget.

SUGGESTIONS

Here is Doris May as a star. Fans will remember her co-starring venture with Douglas MacLean. And she made a big hit in the clever farces presented to her. So tell them that this clever little actress who possesses charm and talent to an unusual degree has in "The Foolish Age" a picture calculated to establish her as a star to be reckoned with. Play it up as a sparkling human document of a humorous twist. Emphasize that all girls and boys have to go through the foolish age—where they don't quite know their own minds. Treat your copy in a light, snappy fashion. Put on an all-comedy bill. Play up Bull Montana.

CATCH LINES

Did you ever live through the foolish age? It is a fascinating period of life. Come and see the irresistible star, Doris May, in "The Foolish Age."

"HIGH HEELS"
(Universal)

Character Study Makes Fairly Pleasing Picture

THEY have given Gladys Walton a character study as her latest expression on the Universal program, and the role of the selfish, intolerant daughter of an over-indulgent father, gives her enough opportunities to flash her individual talent, even though the emotional heights are never scaled. The petite star plays the part in strictly up-to-date fashion—heedless and headstrong and unduly wrapped up in her own importance. And her portrayal rings true because of the very fact that the emotional chords are not touched. The picture is pleasing enough even though one can anticipate the action from the introductory scene to the final shot, and because it lacks the element of surprise it doesn't hold the interest.

The heroine is permitted to have her own way, the scheme being to show up her selfishness. She is pleasant enough to a young romancer, but when any of her relatives appear on the scene she develops an impulsive tantrum, most of which can be summed up in terms of neglectfulness. Her father suddenly dies and the daughter immediately sees the light of understanding. Her attitude toward her family takes on the form of kindly solicitude. However, the death of the pater causes the other members financial embarrassment and they are forced to give up their palatial home in the city and migrate to a cottage in the country—a cottage which adjoins the estate of the wicked and wealthy ogre who was really responsible for the father's fatal attack.

This is the occasion to introduce some mild incident in which a pair of tiny twins carry the burden of the plot for a while. When the youngsters become lost, the redeemed sister goes to their rescue and wins over their affections. There is an illogical touch added when the girl is forced to dance at a social fete in order to make both ends meet. The interior decorations of the cottage, coupled with the elaborate wardrobe of the heroine, gives the lie to the idea that she is poverty-stricken. Miss Walton displays a wardrobe which is both stylish and varied. The romance enters when a persistent suitor—a doctor by profession—pleads his case and is accepted when the fickle youth of the early scenes shows his true character. "High Heels" preaches an effective little lesson and ingratiates itself because it carries a deal of charm. It is a simple story told in a simple fashion and seven patrons out of ten are likely to vote it a winner. The cast does good work although William Worthington is made up badly as the wealthy enemy. A thrill is tacked onto the finish which shows the heroine rescuing the old man from a fire.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

A charming little story of a selfish society girl, who undergoes a transformation of character is "High Heels," Universal's latest picture starring the petite and popular Gladys Walton. The offering will be the feature attraction at the ———— theatre next ————. The star merely tolerates her indulgent father and neglects her three brothers, one of whom is a cripple and the others being twin youngsters. As Christine Trevor, she is determined to pursue her selfish impulses until the death of her father causes her to realize that her ideas are wrong. She develops into an understanding woman, capable of deep sympathy and kindliness.

The picture offers a charming romance which is developed in a fascinating manner and adding to the picture's interest is a climax of real dramatic strength. The girl risks her life to rescue an enemy neighbor from a burning house. In all "High Heels" will carry Miss Walton still further along the heights of popularity. It is well staged and acted, and is rich in incident.

PROGRAM READER

She wore high heels and dressed in the latest fashion, and she was the product of an over-indulgent father—a man who catered to her every whim. It is no wonder that the girl was wrapped up in her own personality. She became unduly selfish and impulsive and strived only to satisfy her craving for pleasure and stylish finery. Then it happened that sorrow entered her life and the shock of death in the family wrought a transformation in her character. She developed a charming, kindly, unselfish nature, beloved by everyone with whom she came in contact. This is the outline of "High Heels," the clever picture which comes to the ———— theatre next ———— with Gladys Walton as the star.

SUGGESTIONS

Gladys Walton is being heard from in box-office reports. So you are not gambling in presenting her at your theatre. Simply state that she has an ideal vehicle here—one that entertains as well as teaches a lesson in overcoming selfish impulses. Bring forth that the picture offers a charming romance, and that there is plenty of human detail throughout its varied scenes. Play up Miss Walton.

New Projector Announced by Enterprise Optical Mfg. Co.

Has Many Interesting Points of Merit

(The Enterprise Optical Manufacturing Company have prepared the following story at the request of the Motion Picture News Technical Department. This article describes their new "De Luxe" projector, for which they claim many points of merit.—Technical Editor.)

The announcement that a splendid new moving picture projection machine is ready for the market, is Enterprise Optical Manufacturing Company's important contribution to the progress of the industry for 1921.

While the Enterprise Optical Manufacturing Company, now the oldest maker of moving picture projecting machines, has kept pace with the requirements in a rapidly developing industry where the growth in weight of projectors has been from less than fifty pounds to more than five hundred pounds, by building new models from time to time and at other times making improvements on the various models, it now announces the appearance of its greatest achievement during its more than twenty-three years of experience in this line.

A. C. Roebuck, President and Treasurer

This new projector is not a remodeling of an older type, but is a new machine from the floor up and it is only fair to say that for beauty of design, massive appearance, rigidity, etc., it is a wonder.

Few other industries have grown so rapidly and have made greater demands upon the resources of the mechanical engineer in order to keep pace with the rapid evolution than has the art of motion picture projection. In any line of endeavor where much depends on mechanical development, many ideas are put into use that are more theoretical than practical and many things are accomplished by complicated mechanical movements where something more simple will eventually be worked out and it is therefore of the greatest importance to the user that he may have the opportunity of securing apparatus that is not only as simple as possible but that is practical from all points of view and will secure for him the highest type of projection. The new DeLuxe Motiograph claims to fill all of these requirements in a most admirable way. We have endeavored below to list the many points of merit in this new machine.

Beltless Motor Drive and Speed Control

Besides eliminating the annoyances of breaking, stretching and slipping belts and the excess friction on the shafts and bearings as a result of the belt pull, this new connection is extremely simple. The metal and fibre speed control discs, which have proven so successful in use with the Motiograph during the past few years, have been still further improved. The metal disc is attached direct to the electric motor shaft, while the shaft for the double disc is connected to the main driving wheel of the mechanism, with only one geared unit between them for speed reduction. There are no bevelled gears, and as the motor is placed by the side of mechanism, all complicated connections have been eliminated.

The adjustment for speed is in a convenient location just behind and below the mechanism and may be easily set for a slight variation in speed and has a range suitable for all reasonable requirements.

Fire Proof Enclosure of Mechanism

The new DeLuxe fire proof enclosure takes a step in advance. It is not only completely enclosed, but is also very roomy, easily accessible and is of an unusual artistic design. The film gate, hinged at the top opens from the bottom and can be quickly opened and closed.

The side door next to the operator, is provided with three glass windows of plate glass to permit observation of both loops.

The left hand side door may be quickly removed and thereby is out of the way for allowing inspection or repair. It also has a large glass panel to permit inspection.

The left hand rear door is hinged and this in combination with the left hand side door when opened, makes inspection, etc., more convenient, providing easy access to all parts on the left hand side of the mechanism and permits the easy removal of the Intermittent Movement Unit.

Extra Large Shutters

The shutter shaft being placed further from the optical center than usual, permits the use of a larger shutter, which provides for increased speed on the opening and closing movement of the shutter across the aperture plate, thus shortening the period of non-exposure, and also permits the use of the new type of large lenses.

Shutter Adjustment

By a very simple arrangement, the new DeLuxe shutter is provided with an adjusting thumb nut located on the top of the left hand side of the mechanism, which makes it possible to set the shutter to a close degree while in motion. This form of adjustment is highly efficient and very rigid.

Improved Film Gate and Tension

Besides being pivoted at the top and opening from the bottom outward, the new DeLuxe film gate provides for swinging both of the film tension shoes the same distance away from the aperture plate, which prevents moving the film from one side or the other when closing the gate and also prevents uneven tension of one shoe as compared with the other. The tension shoes are made of bar stock, are very substantial, wear for a long time and are easy to replace.

INTRODUCING THE NEW MOTIOGRAPH DeLuxe

THE PROJECTOR PREDOMINANT

Twenty-three years of manufacturing experience in this line has paved the way to unusual success in the development of our latest achievement, the new Motiograph De Luxe Projector, built to meet the exacting requirements of the De Luxe Theatre.

Beltless motor connection, complete fireproof enclosure, steel gears, hardened steel shafts and intermittent, hardened and phosphor bronze bushings, convenience in threading, extremely quiet in operation, and durability unapproached, are the dominant features of this QUALITY PROJECTOR.

Pioneer Projector Manufacturers and Their Personnel

Some of the Officials in the Enterprise Company

It is frequently said that the progress and policies of a business institution is but the reflection of the personnel that is responsible for its existence.

The Enterprise Optical Manufacturing Company, the pioneer in the industry and the only maker of moving picture machines that has continued active as a manufacturer during the past twenty-three years, is fortunate in having as its directing executives a number of men of broad experience in their respective lines of endeavor.

The President and Treasurer, A. C. Roebuck, has had a very unusual business career, combining as it does a broad experience in commercialism in addition to a varied experience in mechanics and mechanical engineering. While beginning his career as a mechanic in a line which required a very high degree of skill, he soon engaged in business for himself and later with Mr. Sears organized the well known mail order house of Sears Roebuck & Co., where for many years he devoted himself to commercialism exclusively. Before having disposed of his interest in the mail order business, the Enterprise Optical Manufacturing Company was established for the manufacture and sale of optical projection apparatus and supplies, such as motion picture machines, magic lanterns, etc., since which time it has become well known for the high quality and artistic finish of the goods it manufactures.

Charles Hahn, Sales Representative

A few years ago Mr. Roebuck became president, Treasurer and Manager of the Woodstock Typewriter Company, where he was again associated with his former partner, Mr. Sears. In this new undertaking he developed a new, standard typewriter called "The Woodstock," which is known as one of the most artistic and at the same time, most simple and efficient standard typewriters on the market, and which is rapidly growing in popularity.

Recently Mr. Roebuck has turned practically all of his time and attention to the Enterprise Optical Manufacturing Company and especially to the development of a new model projector called "The DeLuxe," which represents one of his most important engineering accomplishments, which is described elsewhere in this magazine.

In addition to the DeLuxe Projector, it is understood that he is developing other important improvements in connection with Motion Picture projection machines and accessories, which are to be announced later.

With Mr. Roebuck's varied experience in both merchandising and manufacturing, it can readily be seen that as President and Engineer, he is qualified to use the best judgment in his mechanical developments, his endeavors at all times being governed by the commercial requirements rather than having simply the mechanical end of the business in view.

O. F. Spahr, who is Vice-President and Manager of the Enterprise Optical Manufacturing Company, has been connected with the concern for over ten years. During that time he has watched the sales as well as the concern grow steadily. Mr. Spahr has traveled extensively and is well and favorably known to the trade for in his travels he has endeavored to keep in close touch with not only the Enterprise Optical Manufacturing Company's dealers, but also with the purchasers of their machines. He is well acquainted with the several sections of the county and has made a close study of these sections. He explains that it is a peculiar thing that the buyers in these several sections buy very differently and in view of this, he has selected sales methods which are fitted to meet the peculiarities of these respective sections.

Mr. Spahr believes that there are two things besides care in designing which have made the company so prosperous.

First: The care and watchfulness which is exercised in the manufacturing department to see that nothing but the best of material and workmanship is used in the production of their projectors and a rigid system of inspection to see that the adopted standards are adhered to.

Second: That the company stands for "SERVICE."

Mr. Spahr is a great believer in "SERVICE." In fact, he states that when a purchaser buys one of their machines, the Enterprise Optical Manufacturing Company sees that he gets "SERVICE" regardless of the fact that its product is sold through dealers and not direct from the Enterprise Optical Manufacturing Company.

During the past ten years, Mr. Spahr has made every effort to impress upon each and every one in the sales department the meaning of the word "SERVICE" and each of the department heads is so thoroughly convinced that service is the predominating feature that he has the most harmonious co-operation and each one is working to see that every user of the Motiograph Machine gets "SERVICE." With this strong and efficient force supplementing the excellent qualities of the machine, Mr. Spahr believes, that even with facilities, their greatest trouble will be to supply the demand.

H. A. Larsen, who has been connected with the Enterprise Optical Manufacturing Company for more than fifteen years is the Superintendent of Construction, having worked his way up successively from workman to foreman of departments, assistant superintendent, and superintendent.

Mr. Larsen, in addition to having developed a high degree of efficiency throughout the factory is very popular with all of his employees, believing as he does that one of the most important roads to efficiency is to have the hearty co-operation of all who have anything to do with the production work, with the result that the cost of production is kept as low as possible, consistent with the standards of material and workmanship, and in this line, Mr. Larsen has shown himself fully equal to requirements.

Ira D. Jackson, Traveling Sales Representative

Through the co-operative methods employed, every one connected with projection, feels a personal interest in the finished product and with this object in view, each and every detail connected with the production work is given the attention that is not only essential but indispensable to the production of a machine, the requirements of which are so exacting.

the optical axis, and by the use of a positive carbon, having a large core saturated with special light emitting salts, a more intense illumination is secured than with the former type of lamp and carbons (b) The feed is practically automatic, having a continuous mechanical feed that is free from the complications and annoyances found in connection with electrical automatic feeds.

Large Lamphouse

For the purpose of providing for two types of lamps, as well as for better ventilation and the elimination of heat, the lamphouse has been considerably enlarged. This feature is a great convenience in changing carbons, and will be much appreciated by the operator.

H. A. Larsen, Superintendent

Pilot Lights

(a) For convenience in threading the mechanism for framing the picture, for examination, etc., on the operator's side, a pilot light has been placed in the right hand side of the mechanism. An automatic switch turns on the light as soon as the right hand door is opened and extinguishes it when it is closed. The light is operated by a small 3-cell battery located in a neat casing on the rear side of the top magazine.

(b) A pilot light is also proved for the lamphouse. This the operator will find a great convenience in the exchange of carbons, making adjustments or repairs to the lamp, etc.

Large Magazines

The 3,000-ft. magazines which have proven so popular and are furnished only with the DeLuxe Motiograph, have been still further enlarged in width so as to provide greater clearance when using reels that have become warped so they wobble.

Motor Throwout

A throwout lever disengages the double friction disc speed control spindle from the mechanism, and eliminates all excess burden, in case at any time, it is desired to operate by hand.

Strength

The new DeLuxe machine is massive and rigid in design and construction throughout, including the stand, lamphouse and mechanism. Besides contributing to durability, this factor is of vital importance in the projection of steady pictures, as it prevents vibration.

Simplicity

The new DeLuxe mechanism is a model of simplicity and freedom from complicated or crowded parts. Simplicity is said to be the "highest type of invention work" and in this direction the new DeLuxe machine is not approached by any other.

Material and Workmanship

In this line, the DeLuxe is in a class by itself. Nearly all parts, except shafts and bushings are made of a fine quality of steel and iron, the bushings for the slower running parts being made of the best quality of bronze, while the faster moving shafts and bushings are made of steel, hardened and ground. There are no die castings (soft metal castings or lead molded in dies) used in the DeLuxe machine. Neither, are there any brass gears used. The gears have broad faces, which permits the teeth being cut at a lesser angle, thus avoiding excess enthrust.

Eye Shield

To protect the eyes from the glare of the "spots" on the film gate a double eye shield with colored glass on both sides has been provided to enable the spot to be examined without discomfort from either side of the machine.

Arc Reflector

A special convenience to the operator is found in the arc reflector in each of the doors on the two sides of the lamphouse.

Cam and Balance Wheel

(a) The direct connection between the cam and balance wheel, both being mounted on the same shaft, is of vital importance in connection with steady projection and especially when a machine has been in use for some time.

(b) There is no loose connection or lost motion of any kind between the cam shaft and the driving mechanism.

Removable Intermittent Movement Box

By the loosening of three screws, the oil-tight, compact, Intermittent Movement Box, carrying the balance wheel and intermittent sprocket, may be quickly removed for inspection, adjustment, exchange, etc.

Shutter

The shutter drive spindle is connected to the mechanism gearing by the sliding disc type of universal movement which has proven so substantial and practical during many years of service.

Fire Shutter and Governor

The fire shutter on the New DeLuxe Mechanism is connected with the governor in such a way that it is operating connection both when the film gate is open and closed. The governor is of compact, rigid and most durable construction, being made of steel and iron and has no delicate parts. It is also easily accessible.

Sprocket Idler Adjustment

This important adjustment in the new DeLuxe mechanism constitutes a new development in this line. Besides being highly efficient, and sensitive to slight adjustments, it is compact, strong and convenient, the adjustment being easily accomplished with a screw driver.

Ball Bearings

The take-up spindle is provided with specially designed ball bearings, which makes it practical to carry three thousand feet of film and eliminate all unnecessary drag on the mechanism. It also contributes to the sensitiveness of the take-up, making it more efficient with less power.

Have Modern Fireproof Factory

The Enterprise Optical Manufacturing Company is located at 564 W. Randolph street, Chicago, Ill., in a modern, reinforced, concrete, fireproof building, 100 feet square. When the company first leased space in this building, more than eleven years ago, they had very large fireproof vaults constructed on each floor. One of these vaults is used for the storing of special tools, dies, jigs, patterns, records, and all small parts finished and in process, while the storage of finished goods, lenses, the larger finished assemblies, etc., occupy the remainder of the fireproof storage space on another floor. This precaution operates for a safeguard, not alone to the company, but to the user as well, who need not be deprived of repair parts or accessories in case of fire.

Owing to the unusual degree of accuracy required in modern optical projection work together with the high degree of durability required in order to withstand at times the double normal speed that prevails in many theatres, the requirements in the way of equipment to produce this high standard of efficiency has been very much out of the ordinary. While at one time the use of soft steel and brass was considered sufficient to fill the requirements for even those parts which are subjected to the most wear, and a large percentage of the other parts of the projector was made of what is known as "die cast" parts, consisting largely of lead with certain portions of hardening material included, but depending mostly on the chilled surface for the hardening, the present day requirements will not permit of the use of such materials. In the construction of the Motiograph Projector, there is very little material other than iron and steel, the steel being hardened, tempered, ground and polished so as to secure at the same time the highest degree of accuracy and durability. The use of "die cast" parts is considered unfit for a machine of the De Luxe quality and therefore none have been used.

While the greatest care is necessary in the selection of materials, the selection of workmen to properly work those materials is a matter of no less importance, and that the workmen may produce results of the highest character, machinery and tools of the best quality obtainable are indispensable. Therefore every effort has been made by the company to fully meet these requirements by securing the best, obtainable, and this is why you so frequently hear it said that the material and workmanship in the Motiograph stands without a rival or an approach.

Inventor Presents New Automatic "Non-Rewind" Device

Watchmaker Shows Projector Manufacturers a New Improvement

An invention that gives promise of development into a worth while improvement for projection machines, has recently ben patented by Harry M. Stephenson of Denver, Colorado. This is a device which, added to the present day projector, does away with the second winding of the film.

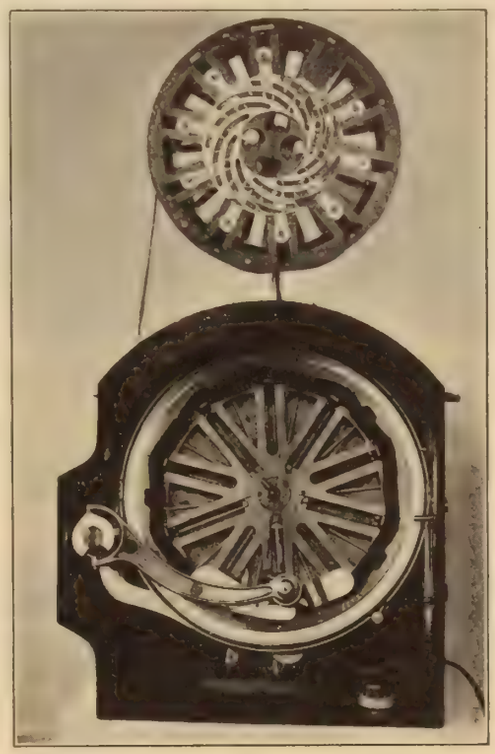
Mr. Stephenson has brought a model of his machine to New York, a photograph of which accompanies this article. An expert watchmaker for years, Mr. Stephenson was attracted to experimenting with an automatic rewind by witnessing the operation of a projector some two years ago. He decided that there is a great deal of room for improvement in this direction.

He spent two years of his time and nearly ten thousand dollars before he applied for his patents. He succeded in obtaining basic patents which protect him exceedingly well and that his rewind is of different principle than any other brought out heretofore.

A number of prominent motion picture men witnessed demonstrations of the new device and were very free in their praise of its effectiveness in doing the job for which it was designed. The technical editor of MOTION PICTURE NEWS in company with the technical engineer of one of the large projector manufacturers witnessed such a demonstration. The construction and workmanship of the model is excellent. In operation it did exactly what the inventor claimed.

In explaining his invention Mr. Stephenson states: "My invention takes the place of the lower magazine of a motion picture projector, adding a feature which does away with the second winding of the film. This, however, does not do away with the present construction of moving picture machines, but embodies the combination of a reversing reel and means for holding standard reels also.

"The motion picture machine is not shown, as this is the demonstrating model. A commercial construction is now being made which will embody the lower part of a projection machine.



This is a model of the Stephenson Automatic "Non-Rewind" device. The projector head would come between the reels.

"The basic principle of the invention, is a rotary contracting drum, which winds the film from the outside and finished in the center by means of ten fingers which travel with the drum and hold the film outward.

"As the film builds up, the fingers yield inwardly and at the point where the film enters, these fingers are lifted and lowered again by positive cam action, without a spring.

"This 'non-rewind' device remedies a condition that is impossible to overcome in the present motion picture machine, namely: the creeping that takes place in the lower magazine during the time the picture is being shown on the screen. Not only is this slipping overcome, but the slipping that takes place during the rewinding of the film.

"With my new device the film is taken from the motion picture machine and inserted about two inches into the reversing reel. No fastening whatever is required, as the fingers hold the film down. Herein lies the condition which keeps the film from creeping. The film is not wound in a round form but is wound from point to point inside the fingers, thus winding the film in the form of decagon.

"The film runs over an automatic governor, which keeps the film at a very light tension, from start to finish of winding.

"When the film breaks in the motion picture machine, the re-threading is much simpler and easier than re-threading the standard reel; this requiring the simple operation of inserting the end of the film and continuing.

"Each machine is equipped with special expanding core reels. One-half of a reel is placed in the machine before winding and when ready to remove the other half is snapped on and the film is then pulled out ready for immediate showing.

"The machine not only saves the tedious task and damage done to film in rewinding, but has two outstanding features, namely: the elimination of the film creeping in the lower magazine of the motion picture machine and the case of operation, such as re-threading in case of a break in the motion picture machine."

The final test as to the practical value of the "non-rewind" will be the building of half a dozen projectors equipped with it. The verdict of the projectionists after using this machine a few weeks will tell the story. So far the model gives promise of success to such a venture but it will be necessary to conduct such an experimental test to get approval for its practical operation.

Mr. Stephenson, it is said, is now arranging to build half a dozen machines equipped with his Stephenson Non-Rewind. The results of these practical tests will be interesting, for their success may mean a great deal to the future design of motion picture projectors.

Latest of Loew's Houses a Triumph in Theatre Construction

Million Dollar State Theatre, New York, a Huge Amusement Centre

Hailed as a triumph in modern theatre construction, the last of the Loew theatres, the State, was recently opened to the public, giving New York another mammoth amusement center and at the same time creating a new leadership for the Loew string through the country. The State, located at Broadway and Forty-fifth street, is indeed a landmark in theatre construction, combining business with beauty and comfort.

The great theatre and office building was erected at a cost of one million dollars. The entire plant, including the Loew Building and Annex, and the theatre, covers an area of 31,500 square feet. The sixteen-story office building is constructed of granite marble with terrazzo floors. All the doors are of hollow steel.

Approaching the theatre one sees the largest vertical theatrical sign in New York City, bearing the name of "Loew's State" and rearing seventy-seven feet above the seventh floor. The power necessary to operate this sign is equal to that required to illuminate the entire theatre.

Passing through the outer vestibule and lobby, which is decorated in imported Sienna marble wainscoting and ornamental cast iron grills, the visitor is impressed with the magnificent foyer. While the orchestra is reached on the street level, two grand marble staircases on each side of the foyer lead to the mezzanine and balcony. Three huge chandeliers are hung in the foyer, one of which boasts genuine gold plating and is set with heavy crystals.

Three walls of the foyer are covered with a mural painting entitled "The Strolling Players," characterizing the various stages and progress of the silent drama. In the foyer, as well as the auditorium, are richly coffered ceilings. The marble floors of the foyer give way in the auditorium to carpeting of taupe, black and burgundy. At frequent intervals Oriental rugs have been placed.

The orchestra and balcony floors have burgundy velour seats, while the loge and box chairs are upholstered in black and gold velvet.

Excellent ventilation is assured through the installation of what is known as the mushroom and aisle hood system. Large blower fans feed fresh air to the auditorium through the aisle hoods, while huge exhaust fans at the ceiling line draw the used air out and always give a spirited circulation, the air being changed in the theatre more than twelve times an hour. A large wellhole off the mezzanine promenade, skirted with Sienna marble rails and balustrades, augments the ventilating plans.

Black, gold and burgundy constitute the color scheme throughout the theatre and give a dignified expression to the handsome draperies. A three-way lighting system of red, blue and white enhances the gold and burgundy of the draperies, which is heightened by the jet black background.

The furnishings, as well as the "inhabitants," of the various rest rooms on the mezzanine promenade, will undoubtedly attract attention. The "inhabitants" of the foyer include a live parrot, a monkey, several live canaries, and as many canaries in porcelain. The latter are housed in gold cages, while the parrot and monkey are expected to have the freedom of the theatre.

Both architect and owners, anxious to secure the best auditorium and stage lighting, engaged Max J. Levy to lay out this important part of the building equipment, and the work was in the hands of the Edwards Electrical Construction Company.

Most of the effects in the auditorium are from concealed sources of light and art glass panels, the particular feature being the coffers in the main ceiling. The lighting in the dome and panels give an effective and pleasing glow to the entire house. A fountain playing in the lobby, with its ever-changing colors, is a new feature. Not only do the lights change in color, but a special mechanism blends the colors as an artist does his paints.

On the stage the magnitude of the electrical equipment is apparent. The switchboard and dimmers are huge, necessitating a special gallery. It will be necessary to have four men in constant attendance on the switchboard, containing more than 125 switches. The theatre is equipped with electrical safety devices, there being three distinct sources of electrical supply. The amount of power used in the office building and theatre consumes about 2,000 h.p. for service required

A sunken electrical display fountain in the main foyer is one of the features. It was necessary to use the same fixtures for the installation of this fountain as used in submarines, as all lights are submerged.

Louis XV. furniture adorns the orchestra rest room, of antique gold, upholstered in black and gold silk. The walls have been treated also in black and gold silk, while a large Aubusson rug covers the floor. Delicate green silk covers the walls of a second ladies' rest room, while the furniture is of the Louis XVI. period, upholstered in green and ivory brocade. The smoking room has ivory Francis I. period furniture, and a huge stone mantel.

Weighing more than 2,000 pounds and heavily incrusted with crystals, the oval dome in the main ceiling is a thing of beauty. It represents a sunburst, and the crystals are surrounded by bands of coffers with rosettes which hang down and form indirect lighting fixtures. The lighting system also comes in for recognition through the unusual illumination of the orchestra pit. A boomerang system has been employed which throws the rays of nine spot lamps from the sounding board in the ceiling on the musicians. There is a second smoking room, fashioned after the old tap rooms. A new type of fan resembling an aeroplane is an attraction in this quarter.

The projection room of the State theatre is probably the largest one in New York City, if not in the United States. It is thirty-five feet in length, thirteen feet wide and twelve feet high. There is also a lavatory and wash room.

The equipment of the projection room consists of three special type "S" motor driven simplex projectors equipped with double speed control handles, double motor snap switches, 3,000 foot magazines, film measuring devices, asbestos heat shields, extra long shutter shafts, Robin speed indicators, etc. Multiple rheostats with a capacity of one hundred and fifty amperes are located in a separate room and are under the projectionists' immediate control through remote control panels located on the front wall of the projection room, opposite each projector.

A Simplex stereopticon and a Simplex spotlight are also a part of the equipment. These, as well as the Simplex projectors having been finished in battleship grey and heavily nickeled make an attractive appearance.

The arrangement of the projection room and equipment was in the hands of J. E. Robin, projection engineer of the Cinema Equipment Center, and Michael J. Campbell, chief projectionist of the Loew theatre. The other projectionists in the State are Thomas D. Burhans, head projectionist; Thomas De Rosa and Joseph Goldhanner.

Vista Theatre Proving a Success

The Bush theatres of San Diego, Calif., are having good success with the most recent addition to their string of houses, the Vista, at East San Diego, a fast-growing suburb. The Vista, with a seating capacity of 600, circuits the same pictures as are shown at the Silver Strand, the Bush theatre in Coronado, across the bay. An Argus mazda projection equipment is used, with a Hoffman curtain. A large electric sign bearing the name of the house surmounts the front wall.—Wright.

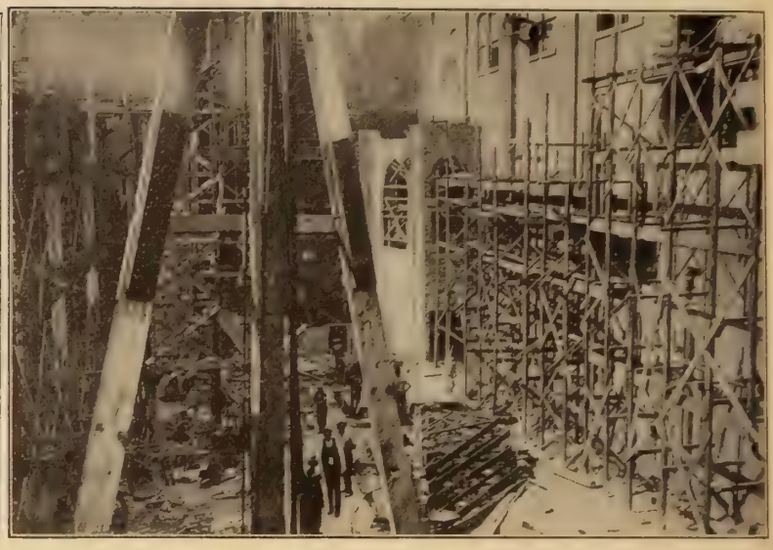
Peter Magaro standing at the side of his theatre in course of construction



The new $130,000 Regent being erected at 410-412 Market Street, Harrisburg, Pa.

Beauty Plays Important Part in New Harrisburg, Pa., Movie Theatre

Shows What Can Be Accomplished in $130,000 Building

Genuine Italian marble stairways are to lead from either side of a most attractive lobby to the mezzanine floor of the new Regent Theatre, now being constructed by Peter Magaro, the owner, at 410 and 412 Market street, Harrisburg, Pa., and everything else in the $130,000 building is to be of a corresponding degree of magnificence as shown by the plans of the architects, Lawrie & Lappley, 2nd and Locust Sts., that city. The walls and much of the steel and concrete structural work already are in place and the contractors, The Central Construction Company, of Harrisburg, are working both day and night, using electric arc lights after dark, in a race to have the beautiful motion picture palace completed before Thanksgiving Day.

The theatre, on a site 250 feet deep with a Market street frontage of 60 feet, is expected to be the most elaborate in Central Pennsylvania. It will have a seating capacity of 1,800, for while the floor space easily could be made to accommodate 2,200 chairs, it is the purpose of the owner to conserve the comfort of his patrons by avoiding crowding that would come through placing the chairs too close together. These seats have been ordered from the American Seating Company of Chicago.

In the front of the theatre extending completely across the sidewalk will be a magnificent marquee, the ceiling of which will contain 2,100 electric light globes, installed by C. W. Eisenhour, of Harrisburg.

High above this marquee, on the front of the building, will be a huge, ornate illuminated sign to announce in electric lights the headliners of each bill offered in the theatre.

The lobby will be open the full length of the marquee, and in the centre will be a Colonially designed box office, with artistic glass dome. The floor of the lobby will be of tiled mosaic and from either side will rise the beautiful Italian marble stairways leading to the mezzanine floor within. The stairs proper and the accompanying balustrades will be in Italian Breche-Pavonazzo marble, specially imported for the Regent by Alexander Pelli & Co., New York City, who have the contract for the stairways and tile work. Imported grey Napolian marble is to be used for the walls and wainscoting.

Parkway, Texas, to Open

The Parkway, the sixth and newest of the Dallas, Texas, chain of Foy neighborhood theatres, is scheduled for opening in the near future. The Parkway is housed in a new theatre building directly in front of the State Fair of Texas and seats over 800.

One of the unique arrangements is a nursery set apart in the balcony where mothers with babies in arms can see the show and their babies at the same time. One portion of the balcony is reserved for smokers. Sanitary drinking fountains are conveniently located in various parts of the theatre.

Two Powers 6-B machines with "type F." lamphouses, including their new mechanical governor speed control, lenses, snap-lite, will furnish the pictures, while a 50-50 ampere double arc electric generator set will be the chief part of the electric devices. A Minusa Gold Fibre Screen is used.

The front and lobby will be very attractive with attractive color designs, with an absence of the usual three and six-sheet posters, because the advertising will be confined mostly to cut-outs and photographs. The theatre will be strictly fireproof, modern and up to date in every paricular.—Nodgt.

Plan Fairfield House

Town Clerk Joseph I. Flint of Fairfield, Conn., is an addition to the motion picture promoters of southwestern Connecticut, having completed arrangements to give his home town, suburb of Bridgeport and summer home of many New Yorkers, a modern playhouse. Plans for the theatre are now being drawn. It will be 64 by 112 feet, of brick, hollow tile and steel construction, provision being made in the building for eight stores. The auditorium of the theatre proper will be two stories high. The entrance will be attractive, being flanked by tall columns and surmounted by a dome. The seating capacity will be about 800, including the balcony.—Agard.

Plan $350,000 House for Indianapolis

A $350,000 photoplay theatre, seating 2,000, for Indianapolis, to be located in the heart of the north side residential district, and several miles out of the business district, is planned by the Boulevard Theatre Company, just organized. Those behind the venture are W. T. Petty of New York City, who says he represents Eastern capital; John H. Bookwalter and Frank H. Krause of Indianapolis, and State Senator Don P. Strode of Kokomo. Tentative approval by the board of park commissioners for the location of the theatre on Fall Creek boulevard has been obtained. One of the features of the equipment will be a large parking space at one side of the theatre. The park commissioners raised the objection that the parking of automobiles in front of the theatre during show periods would congest the boulevard and the parking space was the answer.—Lawler.

Sun-Light Arc Lamps in Demand for Openings

"During the past two and a half years the Sun-Light Arc Lamp, Studio Model, has revolutionized illumination incident to the making of motion pictures, with the result that today it is being used and endorsed by producers, directors and camera men the world over," states C. G. Nesbitt, salesmanager of the Sun-Light Arc Corporation.

"Years ago electricity in the form of illumination was recognized as a powerful advertising medium—the electric sign at once became famous. Now the new Sun-Light Arc Lamps giving 100,000 candle power pure sun-light are available to every theatre owner for exterior illuminating and other purposes. These lamps consume but 150 amperes direct current at 90 to 145 volts, and are revolutionizing extenior building illumination and other forms of exterior lighting just as completely as they revolutionized illumination in the production of motion pictures.

"As an advertising medium this new Sun-Light Arc Lamp is without equal, because it is possible to floodlight an entire building in pure sun-light or in any color of the rainbow, either stationary or revolving, or a combination of pure sun-light with other colors. For example, one of these lamps will light up an entire theatre front so that its architecture will stand out in more bold relief than in daylight. A building so illuminated will dominate the district in which it is located.

"Exhibitors who desire exploitation of their theatres and the pictures presented by them will find unlimited possibilities in the use of these lamps, especially when coupled with their regular press copy.

"Although the new type of lamp has been on the market but a very short time, owners and managers of theatres have been quick to realize the many advantages to be derived from the use of them, and many recent users have found them to be productive of the desired results; namely, putting the house over and at the same time increasing box office receipts.

"The Sun-Light Arc Corporation has recently executed contracts for Marcus Loew in the opening of the magnificent Loew State Theatre at 46th street and Broadway, also in the opening of the Loew 83rd Street Theatre; Max Spiegel of the Strand circuit in the opening of the Sheridan Theatre in Greenwich Village; the Shuberts upon the occasion of inaugurating a vaudeville program at the Winter Garden; B. S. Moss in opening his beautiful new Franklin Theatre. The lamps were also used by Mr. Moss for exploiting the opening of the feature picture "Why Girls Leave Home" at B. S. Moss Broadway Theatre, with much success.

"These new Sun-Light Arc Lamps have therefore proven to be very practical, and in that they are being offered at attractive prices Sun-Light Arc Corporation believes it will enjoy a very large volume of business in these new fields."

Announce Program for S. M. P. E. Meet

Tentative program of the fall convention of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, which will be held in Buffalo, N. Y., on October 31, November 1, 2 and 3, indicates that the "bigger and better" meeting will be all that has been promised. Election of officers will take place at the annual meeting, to be held at the same time as the convention.

Opening exercises will start the convention at ten o'clock on Monday morning, October 31. This will be followed by the address of H. A. Campe, president of the society, and by reading of the minutes of the last meeting. The morning program will be concluded by the election of officers.

At the afternoon session a report of the papers committee will be made, followed by the paper of Dr. W. E. Story, Jr., on "Comparison of Large and Small Condenser Systems." The paper of H. N. Ott on "Optical Glass" will be read. A trip will then be made to the factory of the Spencer Lens Company, and the theatre party will be held that evening.

On Tuesday morning the following papers will be given: "A Point Source of Light," by C. A. B. Halvorsen; "Industrial Mechanigraphs," Harry Levey; "Analysis of Motion," by Charles P. Watson, and "Taking Pitcures at 1500 Exposures Per Second," by C. Francis Jenkins. In the afternoon a trip will be made to Niagara Falls.

Reports of all the committees will be made at the Wednesday morning session. In the afternoon two papers will be read, "Effects of Studio Lights on the Eye," by L. A. Jones, and "Photometric Measurements to Determine the Lighting of a Motion Picture Studio," by Dr. W. E. Story, Jr. A banquet and entertainment will be held at 7.30 o'clock in the evening.

On the concluding day of the convention the papers will be: "Standard Reel, the Need for Impovement as Regards Film Reels," by F. H. Richardson; "Testing and Maintaining Photographic Quality of Cinematrographic Emulsions," by Dr. A. B. Hitchins, and "The High Intensity Arc Lamp," by A. D. Cameron. The afternoon of the last day will be open.

Painting Screen Helps This Exhibitor

How he solved his screen problem by using one of the late products to be placed on the market is told by J. Jacobs, proprietor of the West End theatre, at Fifty-second and New Utrecht avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y. Mr. Jacobs operates a neighborhood house, which has a capacity of eight hundred and fifty.

For some time he has not been satisfied with the old aluminum screen which he had in his house. Simplex machines are used to project to pictures at a throw of 110 ft. on A. C. current. Several weeks ago Mr. Jacobs painted his screen with Major Lite White Hightone paint, and now he declares that his problem has been solved.

"The public is the final judge," he declared. "Seats in the front and front sides were never used; the patrons did not like those in the extreme rear of the house, either. Now they get a good picture wherever they sit. The picture is more distinct and the details are brought out better. The results obtained from the paint are very satisfying."

Mexia House Gets Equipment

A. V. Wade, of the Opera House at Mexia, Texas, has purchased complete booth equipment from the Southern Equipment Company of Dallas, Texas, which included two of the latest Power's six machines and a rectifier.

A Minusa cold fibre screen was also sold to Southern Enterprises for the Strand theatre at San Antonia, Texas.—Noble.

Start Tearing Down Famous Tabor Grand Opera House, Denver, to Build Modern Theatre

Bishop-Cass Company Will Erect Colorado Theater on Old Site—To Seat 2,500

The most significant theatre move to be started in the Rocky Mountain territory since the war was launched Tuesday, September 6, in Denver, Colo., when the wrecking of the famous old Tabor Grand opera house was begun as the first step in building the new Colorado theatre, which, according to present specifications will be the largest and most imposing picture house in the West.

The Colorado, which is to be located at Sixteenth and Curtis streets, the very heart of Denver, will be built by the Denver-Colorado theatre company, a subsidiary of the Bishop-Cass theatres company, which, associated with the Goldwyn Pictures corporation, already has four theatres in the Mountain region—the America in Denver, the America in Sterling, Colo., and the Iris and America in Casper, Wyo.

The building of the Colorado is the latest phase of the expansion of the Bishop-Cass theatres company, which has been growing in importance and prestige with rapid strides since the opening of the specious America theatre in Denver, February 10, 1917.

The officers of this company are Oscar D. Cass, president; Edward A. Bishop, vice president; Alvah G. Talbot, vice president and managing directors of all theatres; E. E. Newman, treasurer; and Joseph S. Jaffa, secretary.

On September 1, the Tabor came into Bishop-Cass control under a long lease, with privilege of renewal, also adjoining property was secured so that, if it be considered desirable, a huge dramatic stage can be built in the theatre.

The Colorado has been designed by W. E. and A. A. Fisher, architects, and will be built by the C. S. Lambie construction company. It will follow Spanish renaishance style of architecture and will have a seating capacity of 2,526. A $50,000 organ will be installed.

Alvah G. Talbot, managing-director of the Bishop-Cass theatres

From the standpoints of both beauty and practicality, the Colorado will have much that is distinctive, resembling the metropolitan structures of the East and Pacific coast.

The main auditorium on the first floor will be 133 feet long and will hold 1,481 seats with perfect sight lines. Above this will be the mezzanine floor, elegantly furnished with rest rooms, offices, etc., with a large opening or pool in the center, surrounded by a promenade, opening directly over the parquet. A rich crystal chandelier will hang above this pool.

The balcony will have 1,045 seats, including beautifully made loges at the front. All the seats in the building will be of the latest style and extremely expensive.

A novel feature will be the introduction of forced ventilation through the 64-feet high proscenium arch, with capacity for changing all the air in the building every two minutes.

Flood lighting with dimmers and changeable color effects will be regulated from the operator's booth, which will be large and well ventilated and at proper distance to give the most satisfactory throw.

The site of this theatre is almost priceless in the hearts of Western people, because the old Tabor Grand, built in 1881 was the first big theatre in the West and literally "grew up" with Denver, being undoubtedly the most important edifice in Denver's history. It has housed at various times all the greatest actors, from Booth and Barrett down to those of the present day. The interior of the building done in pure cherry and beautifully carved, is famous the country over.

The theatre will have two entrances, one on Sixteenth street and the other on Curtis. Inclined planes will replace the present steps. This is not a remodeling project, but one of re-creation. Only the walls and roof of the building as it now stands will be left.

It is expected that the Colorado will be opened to the public about the first of the year. Only the best available pictures will be shown, as has been the policy in all the Bishop-Cass theatres.

Open Barnesboro, Pa., House

J. F. Smith has recently opened his new house at Barnesboro, Pa. The theatre is one hundred feet long by fifty feet wide It is well equipped, having all the latest devices. The projection room has two Simplex machines and a General Electric motor generator set. It has been erected at a cost of $80,000 and is the largest and most up-to-date playhouse in Cambria County outside of Johnstown. The stage has been constructed so that vaudeville acts may be billed.

Erect House for Colored Patrons

A theatre will be erected at Evansville, Indiana, which will be for colored patrons only and will be owned entirely by stockholders of that race. The site chosen for the house is at the intersection of Tenth, Grant and Canal on Lincoln avenue. The backers see a need for a house for colored patrons that would not be of the shooting gallery type that they say they had been heretofore been forced to occupy. The Lincoln Theatre was erected by the Lincoln Theatre Company. The designing was done by Anderson & Company and William Garnjost.

The auditorium will seat approximately 750 with waiting space in the lobby and foyer for 200 more. The playhouse will be equipped with a ventilating system that will provide pure air every few minutes at a seventy degree temperature all the year around.

Reopen Montreal Movie

The Midway Theatre, St. Catherine Street and St. Lawrence Boulevard, Montreal, which was practically destroyed in a bad fire last spring, was re-opened for business on Saturday, September 24. One of the new features of the reconstructed house was found to be a large pipe organ. The Midway is one of the oldest and one of the most successful moving picture theatres in Montreal.—Gladish.

Change Name of Pantage

The former Pantages Theatre, Edmonton, Alberta, has blossomed out as the Metropolitan Theatre and was reopened as a moving picture theatre on September 24. E. Woolman, former manager of the Empress Theatre, Edmonton, is in charge of the Metropolitan while Edgar Williams, an outstanding local musician, has been appointed conductor of the orchestra. The policy of the house is to change programmes twice weekly.

Index to Complete Plan Book and EXHIBITORS' BOX OFFICE REPORTS

EDITOR'S NOTE—Exhibitors will find here a complete list of all feature pictures for the last sixteen weeks arranged alphabetically as an index to The Complete Plan Book for this period, naming the picture, the producer, the star, the release date, and designating the issue of MOTION PICTURE NEWS which contained the original review.

The following also contains our reviewer's opinion encompassed in a brief single line and gives the comments of exhibitors who have shown the picture and forwarded their opinions. And we also publish a final line fairly summarizing a consensus of all opinions received on each picture. As many of the exhibitors do not comment on every picture (merely checking it Big, Average or Poor), we arrive at the consensus not only by the actual comments made and published, but are also guided by the report from exhibitors who have made no actual comments, but have merely checked the box office value of the picture.

All the pictures mentioned are five-reel features, unless marked otherwise. Serials are reviewed also. At the conclusion of this department will be found the "Flash-Backs," being comments on films released prior to June 4, 1921.

PICTURE — BRAND — STAR — RELEASED — PLAN BOOK

ACTION (UNIVERSAL) HOOT GIBSON.....SEPT. 10
"Action melodrama lives up to its title."—M. P. News.

AFFAIRS OF ANATOL, THE (DE MILLE-PARAMOUNT) SPECIAL CAST.....SEPT. 24
"A Knockout—Undoubtedly De Mille's Greatest."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A knock-out. The biggest thing I've played in ages—but business was a little disappointing, doubtless due to bad weather." "The picture did such a good business that it was held over for a second week's run." "Continued its record run during the second week, playing to capacity houses at practically every performance. Only equaled as a box-office attraction by 'Way Down East.'" "Capacity business all week, 20,000 people at four houses on opening day. Patrons liked production." "The cast of famous stars and amusement value of story make this picture a sure fire box office success. Did big business for week." "Scores in splendid manner." "Two weeks' run to good business and pleased audiences." "This feature proved to be a record breaking box office smashing picture. It was necessary to call the police to handle the crowds, thousands being turned away. From a critical review point, the picture stood the acid test, and critics and all others seeing the picture, voted it to be the best yet."

AFTER MIDNIGHT (SELZNICK) CONWAY TEARLE.....OCT. 15
"Satisfying entertainment derived from this dual role melodrama."—M. P. News.

AFTER THE SHOW (DE MILLE-PARAMOUNT) SPECIAL CAST..OCT. 15
"Obvious story of the theatre; fairly pleasing."—M. P. News.

AFTER YOUR OWN HEART (FOX) TOM MIX.....AUG. 20
"Humor and new gags make this quite interesting."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Ordinary offering, but pretty fair business due to Mix fans." "Average quality; fair business."

APPEARANCES (PARAMOUNT) SPECIAL CAST.....JULY 2
"Tedious drama lacks vitality."—M. P. News.

AT THE END OF THE WORLD (PARAMOUNT) BETTY COMPSON.....AUG. 27
"Disappointing melodramatic romance, but may slide by."—M. P. News.
"Very fine entertainment. Splendid two weeks' business. Great story, cast and settings. 100 per cent. satisfactory." "Big returns on this fine picture." "Cooler weather and popularity of Betty Compson here were responsible for a good week's business." "Drew well on account of star. Not an unusually good offering, however." "Very good feature and on which we had fine business."

BARRICADE, THE (ROBERTSON-COLE) SPECIAL CAST.....OCT. 15
"Excellent acting and theme make this interesting."—M. P. News.

"Good incident and gags provide an amusing comedy."—M. P. News.

BEACH OF DREAMS, THE (HAWORTH-ROBERTSON-COLE) EDITH STORY.....JUNE 11
"Desert island picture conventional in theme and treatment."—M. P. News.

BEATING THE GAME (GOLDWYN) TOM MOORE.....SEPT. 17
"Fortune hunter" idea developed into fine entertainment."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Tom Moore scores again in this picture. Excellent box-office attraction, and we played to good business." "Had good business on this production. Seemed to please. Fine picture."

BEAUTIFUL GAMBLER, THE (UNIVERSAL) SPECIAL CAST....JUNE 11
"Time-worn picture obvious all the way."—M. P. News.

BEHIND MASKS (PARAMOUNT) DOROTHY DALTON.....JULY 16
"Poor entertainment and Dorothy Dalton is miscast."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Just fair. Poor title to begin with. Think original title would have drawn much better, but picture was just fair. So was business." "Dorothy Dalton fans sadly disappointed with this last production of hers."

BEYOND (PARAMOUNT) ETHEL CLAYTON.....SEPT. 17
"Spiritualistic propaganda grafted to 'Enoch Arden'"—M. P. News.

BIG GAME (METRO) MAY ALLISON.....AUG. 20
"Fairly interesting picture for May Allison."—M. P. News.

BIG TOWN ROUND-UP, THE (FOX) TOM MIX.....JULY 16
"Mix at his best; a rapid-fire Western comedy."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Mix has made better pictures. Business fair."

BLACK PANTHER'S CUB, THE (W. K. ZIEGFELD) FLORENCE REED.....JUNE 11
"Cost much and achieves little worthy of praise."—M. P. News.

BLACK SHEEP (CHAUDET-HURST-PINNACLE-STATE RIGHTS) NEAL HART.....SEPT. 17

BLOT, THE (LOIS WEBER-B. F. WARREN CORP.) SPECIAL CAST.....AUG. 2
Miss Weber builds up-to-the-minute, entertaining picture."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Good picture with entertaining story, but business fell off a little owing to the return of the heat wave." "Well acted picture with well sustained interest throughout which pleased our audiences. Played to excellent business."

BROKEN DOLL, A (DWAN-ASSOCIATED PRODUCERS) SPECIAL CAST.....JUNE 2
"As it stands, very doubtful entertainment."—M. P. News.

BROKEN SPUR, THE (BEN WILSON-ARROW) JACK HOXIE....SEPT. 1
"Scenic values add to average western."—M. P. News.

BRONZE BELL, THE (THOMAS H. INCE-PARAMOUNT) SPECIAL CAST.....JULY
"Big production, but lacks audience appeal."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Just a fair picture, and we did only average business." "Pleasing, receipts average." "The old double role turns up once more, and is not handled any better than usual. Picture has some good settings, and a fair plot. An average picture and box office attraction." "Why did they 'star' Doris May in this? She was merely a supporting lead, and not much of that." "Average production to average business." "This one is above the average."

BURN 'EM UP BARNES (MASTODON FILMS, INC.) JOHNNY HINES.....SEPT.
"Melodramatic farce furnishes entertainment and couple of thrills."—News.

CAMILLE (NAZIMOVA-METRO) NAZIMOVA.....SEPT. 2
"Nazimova's best bet since 'Out of the Fog.'"—M. P. News.

CAPPY RICKS (PARAMOUNT) THOMAS MEIGHAN.....SEPT.
"Good audience picture with some excellent comedy sequences."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A nice, light picture which is capably acted. Good box offiffice attraction." "A very fine picture on which we had good business."

CARNIVAL (UNITED ARTISTS) SPECIAL CAST.....JULY
"Genuine Venitian backgrounds compensate for talky picture."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A wonderful picture which went over with us in big shape." "This one pleased my audiences, but did not draw." "Fair. Not as good business as I expected. Just cleared expenses."

CERTAIN RICH MAN, A (HAMPTON-HODKINSON) SPECIAL CAST.....OCT. 1
"Effective drama and moral in this Hampton production."—M. P. News.

CHARGE IT (GARSON-EQUITY-STATE RIGHTS) CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG.....JUNE 1
"Interesting picture of the eternal triangle."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Star put it over. Did pretty good business." "Really Clara Kimball Young's most brilliant play. Did good business." "Great story—big business."

CHILDREN OF NIGHT (FOX) WILLIAM RUSSELL.....JULY
"Dream formula furnishes hectic melodrama for Russell."—M. P. News.

CONQUERING POWER, THE (REX INGRAM-METRO) SPECIAL CAST.....JULY 1
"Not another 'Four Horsemen,' but still way above the average."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Pleased our audiences and drew good patronage."

CONQUEST OF CANAAN (PARAMOUNT) THOMAS MEIGHAN...JULY 2
"Fails to come up to expectations."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Very good picture and did a good business." "Very good feature, with excellent receipts." "Drew an average attendance for a week's run." "Commonplace offering, but did pretty good business because Thomas Meighan has friends." "A good picture, well liked by patrons and attracting excellent business." "Fair production with average business." "Pretty good picture. Good business considering weather and street car strike." "A very mediocre production. Failed to please even the Meighan fans." "Well written story and a very interesting insight into small town life. Good cast, excellent support. Meighan is very popular and has such a shy, unaffected manner that makes one unconscious of his acting. Picture has been well received. Business good."

DAUGHTER OF THE LAW, THE (UNIVERSAL) CARMEL MYERS.AUG. 13
"A particularly good melo well worth seeing."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A very good picture with fair box office value." "Fine picture which brought good business."

DESPERATE TRAILS (UNIVERSAL) HARRY CAREY.....JULY 9
"Good story, well worked out, gives Harry Carey many opportunities."—M. P. News.

DEVOTION (ASSOCIATED PRODUCERS) SPECIAL CAST.....JULY 16
"Conventional and highly complicated domestic drama."—M. P. News.

DISRAELI (DISTINCTIVE PRODUCTIONS-UNITED ARTISTS) GEORGE ARLISS .....SEPT. 3
"Conclusive proof that the screen is progressive."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Booked for three days—played to a week of excellent business. More than pleased—it delighted."

DON'T CALL ME LITTLE GIRL (REALART) MARY MILES MINTER .....JULY 2
"Pleasing little picture furnishes ideal role for star."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Best receipts for several weeks. Good."

DON'T NEGLECT YOUR WIFE (GOLDWYN) SPECIAL CAST.....AUG. 6
"Historical picture of doubtful entertainment values."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A catchy title, which is always a big help in attracting attention. Picture better than the average and business as good as could be reasonably expected for the season." "This picture in a tie-up with Harold Lloyd's comedy, "I Do," made last week a very good business week for our house." "Good picture, but only played to average business." "Details of production beautifully brought out in old time atmosphere. Picture has been well received." "Nothing extra—scenes of women fighting are disgraceful. Didn't draw either."

EVER SINCE EVE (FOX) SHIRLEY MASON.....AUG. 27
"Fluffy story carries little interest."—M. P. News.

EVERYTHING FOR SALE (REALART) MAY McAVOY.....OCT. 8
"Charming star in entertaining society picture."—M. P. News.

EXPERIENCE (PARAMOUNT) SPECIAL CAST.....AUG. 20
"Rich settings and fine cast will probably put this morality play over."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Fairly entertaining picture. Business good." "Dull play in spite of the good cast. Did only fair business. Audience disappointed." "Took very well. Business fine."

FACE OF THE WORLD, THE (WILLAT-HODKINSON) SPECIAL CAST .....JULY 30
"Overdrawn and develops wild melodrama."—M. P. News.

FIGHTER, THE (SELZNICK) CONWAY TEARLE.....SEPT. 3
"Conway Tearle drama; conventional, but failed with suspense."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Average picture to average business." "Very good production which brought more than usual business."

FIGHTING BREED, THE (SELIG-RORK-AYWON-STATE RIGHTS) SNOWY BAKER .....AUG. 27
"Something doing every minute in this two-fisted picture."—M. P. News.

FIGHTING LOVER, THE (UNIVERSAL) FRANK MAYO.....JUNE 18
"Frank Mayo stars in fair mystery picture."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Only a fair picture. Business the same." "Went over fairly well with business so so."

FINE FEATHERS (METRO) SPECIAL CAST.....JUNE 25
"Fairly interesting melodrama on an old theme."—M. P. News

FOOLISH MATRONS (TOURNEUR-ASSOCIATED PRODUCERS)..JULY 2
"Three character studies compose interesting picture."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Very entertaining picture and one which brought big business." "A good picture, but vaudeville competition kept the attendance down. Only an average week's business." "Fair, with fair receipts."

FOOTFALLS (FOX) SPECIAL CAST.....SEPT. 24
"Morbid murder mystery is harshly emphasized."—M. P. News.

FOOTLIGHTS (PARAMOUNT) ELSIE FERGUSON.....OCT. 15
"Entertaining and skillfully constructed vehicle for star."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"We had good business on this picture. I consider it a very fine production and it pleased my patrons."

FOUR SEASONS, THE (URBAN-KINETO).....OCT. 8
"A wonder picture of Nature's great dramatic scheme."—M. P. News.

GARMENTS OF TRUTH (S-L-METRO) GARETH HUGHES.....SEPT. 10
"Entertaining farce comedy with Gareth Hughes as star."—M. P. News

GIRL'S DECISION, A (RAINBOW FILM CO.-STATE RIGHTS) SPECIAL CAST .....SEPT. 3
"A Western drama that looks a good State right bet."—M. P. News.

GIRL FROM GOD'S COUNTRY, THE (NELL SHIPMAN-F. B. WARREN CORP.) NELL SHIPMAN.....SEPT. 24
"Moviesque in plot; excellent in all other ways."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Fine production which seemed to please my patrons."

GO STRAIGHT (UNIVERSAL) FRANK MAYO.....OCT. 15
"Frank Mayo appears in a fighting parson role."—M. P. News.

GOD'S CRUCIBLE (ERNEST SHIPMAN-WINNIPEG-HODKINSON) SPECIAL CAST .....SEPT. 17
"Picture would hit high spots with more even continuity."—M. P. News.

GOLDEN SNARE, THE (CURWOOD-HARTFORD-FIRST NATIONAL) BERRY-STONE .....JULY 23
"Old fashioned formula is a good bet for hot weather."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Business not as good as it should have been for people like Curwood productions here." "Book for week, played three days. Business terrible. Picture not so bad." "Fair outdoor story. Warm weather a logical time to show it. Business good."

GOLEM, THE (PARAMOUNT) SPECIAL CAST.....JULY 2
"A distinct credit to the screen."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Excellent business, and a genuine novelty. Good drawing card."

GOOD AND EVIL (HERZ FILM CORP.-F. B. WARREN CORP.) LUCY DORAINE .....SEPT. 24
"Attractive European star in pictorially gorgeous subject."—M. P. News.

GREAT IMPERSONATION, THE (PARAMOUNT) SPECIAL CAST..OCT. 8
Exhibitor Comment—"Went across handily."
"Highly involved story based upon German spy formula."—M. P. News.

GREAT MOMENT, THE (PARAMOUNT) GLORIA SWANSON.....AUG. 6
"First rate entertainment in Gloria Swanson's stellar vehicle."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Very good picture. Pleased the patrons and comment quite favorable. Business better than the average, a portion of the credit for which should go to the merits of the picture itself and to the popularity of the star with local fans, who played well in 'The Great Moment,' as she usually does in other productions." "An ordinary picture which attracted fair business. Women liked it." "Went over fine. Receipts pleasing." "Broke house record for week. Holding over." "Above the average picture, and a good box office attraction." "High class picture which appealed to admirers of Gloria Swanson and Milton D. Sills. Did big business for week." "Fine picture which had very good business during run." "Knockout of a picture. Gloria Swanson drew well with aid of novel exploitation."

GREATER PROFIT, THE (ROBERTSON-COLE) EDITH STORY..JULY 2
"No outstanding quality to redeem out-of-date theme."—M. P. News.

GREATER THAN LOVE (J. PARKER READ-ASSO. PRODUCERS) LOUISE GLAUM .....JULY 30

HEART TO LET, A (REALART) JUSTINE JOHNSTONE.....AUG. 6
"Light and sugary entertainment here."—M. P. News.

HELL DIGGERS, THE (PARAMOUNT) WALLACE REID.....SEPT. 3
"Not Reid's best, but a satisfactory offering, nevertheless."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Very good, played to nice house throughout week's engagement, receipts pleasing." "A picture much below the average of Reid's work. Lacks love interest essential in this star's pictures. Subject did not please." "Fair business. Picture an interesting one. Heat terrific, which hurt business of course." "Far below average of Wallace Reid productions, but attracted good business on account of star's popularity." "Good bill. Drew good business first of week, fair business last of week." "Fairly entertaining, drew usual Reid fans. Fair business." "Mediocre attraction which brought poor business."

HER STURDY OAK (REALART) WANDA HAWLEY.....AUG. 20
"Wanda Hawley picture only mildly entertaining."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Good little picture that got by all right." "Disappointing. Not up to standard. Business poor." "Pleasing, but Walter Hiers carries the honors."

HER WINNING WAY (REALART) MARY MILES MINTER.....OCT. 1
"Miss Minter truly entertains as a mild type of vampire."—M. P. News.

HICKVILLE TO BROADWAY (FOX) EILEEN PERCY.....SEPT. 10
"Eileen Percy's most enjoyable light comedy."—M. P. News.

HOMEKEEPING HEARTS (PLAYGOERS-PATHE) SPECIAL CAST..OCT. 8
"Fairly interesting homespun melodrama."—M. P. News.

HOME STUFF (METRO) VIOLA DANA .....JUNE 18
"Even hokum cannot make this a good one."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Played with Buster Keaton in "The Haunted House" and went over well for a week's run. Favorable comment was expressed by many patrons." "Only fair picture—with business the same." "The only drawing card in this picture is the personality of the star. It is a very poor plot at best. Even the interesting details of country life did not help to put any interest into the story." "Viola Dana as a box-office attraction will soon lose out if she is starred in any more like this."

HOME TALENT (SENNETT-ASSOCIATED PRODUCERS) SPECIAL CAST .....JUNE 25
"Good slapstick on both ends; sags in the middle."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Fair picture with average business."

JOURNEY'S END, THE (BALLIN-HODKINSON) MABEL BALLIN..JULY 9
"Remarkable picture, especially since it is titleless."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Very well balanced picture. Absence of subcaptions well received, consensus being audiences appreciated trend not being broken. Receipts dandy." "No sub-titles are used, and they are not missed. Plot rather trite, but artistically developed. Drew well." "Too sombre and religious. Average business." "Originally booked for week, but was pulled off because management did not believe it would hold up for seven days. The picture is an entertaining one, however."

JUDGMENT (WORLD) STATE RIGHTS-SPECIAL CAST.....OCT. 15
"Historical drama adapted from Victor Hugo play."—M. P. News.

JUNGLE ADVENTURES (MARTIN JOHNSON-EXCEPTIONAL PICTURES CORP.) .....OCT. 1
"Certainly a novel and picturesque film entertainment."—M. P. News.

KING-QUEEN-JOKER (SYDNEY CHAPLIN-PARAMOUNT) SYDNEY CHAPLIN .....JUNE 11
"Fails to come up to expectation."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Full week, but not to a full house. Material for a great comedy, but not with Sidney, who did nothing but overact and kill any possibility he might have had of being accepted." "Picture and business both bad." "Nothing to get excited about—but cleared expenses."

KISS, THE (UNIVERSAL) CARMEL MYERS.....JULY 9
"A well balanced story of old California."—M. P. News.

KISS IN TIME, A (REALART) WANDA HAWLEY.....JUNE 25
"Is diverting enough for hot weather business."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Went over good and brought fine business.' "A fair attraction with ordinary business." "Of medium grade only. Receipts fair."

LAND OF HOPE, THE (REALART) ALICE BRADY.....JULY 9
"Entertaining comedy drama built around new and appealing theme." M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Pleasing performance. Played to dandy afternoons, but poor nights."

LESSONS IN LOVE (FIRST NATIONAL) CONSTANCE TALMADGE .....JUNE 18
"Only a vehicle for the star."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Good picture which drew fine business all week on account of popularity of the star." "Not as good as 'Mamma's Affair.'" "Did good business. The star attracted a large number of our patrons and all seemed well satisfied with the offering."

LIFE'S DARN FUNNY (METRO) VIOLA DANA.....AUG. 6
"Fairly good entertainment here."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Her name drew and business was good—but many expressed disappointment." "Dance draws big here, but this picture is weak in spots. Fine business." "Viola Dana maintained her popularity in the picture. Well liked." "Splendid 'light' picture. Receipts dandy."

LITTLE LORD FAUNTLEROY (MARY PICKFORD-UNITED ARTISTS) MARY PICKFORD.....OCT. 1
"Mary Pickford's ideal picture—certainly a rare treat for her legion of admirers."—M. P. News.

LITTLE MISS HAWKSHAW (FOX) EILEEN PERCY.....OCT. 15
"Cinderella pattern provides program offering for Eileen Percy."—M. P. News.

LIVE WIRES (FOX) EDNA MURPHY-JOHNNIE WALKER.....JULY 9
"New stars appear in orthodox story."—M. P. News.

LITTLE ITALY (REALART) ALICE BRADY.....JULY 30
"Pleasing little picture, with Alice Brady contributing clever character sketch."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Alice Brady won many new friends in this picture, which did a good week's business." "Played on a bill with 'Message from Mars,' making combination that did very good business.'

LOVETIME (FOX) SHIRLEY MASON.....JULY 23
"Sugary and conventional romance ideal for Shirley Mason."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Good picture but title hardly fits it."

LURING LIPS (UNIVERSAL) EDITH ROBERTS.....JULY 30
"Interesting little picture offers human touches."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Fairly good story, but why the title? There is no connection between the two." "The usual business on this picture which was fairly good." "An average production. Fair business."

MAID OF THE WEST (FOX) EILEEN PERCY.....JULY 30
"A weak Eileen Percy comedy."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A poor comedy; average business."

MAN AND WOMAN (JANS PRODUCTION, INC.) SPECIAL CAST..SEPT. 3
"Orthodox program release on 'Clothes-make-man theme.'"—M. P. News.

MAN'S HOME, A (SELZNICK) SPECIAL CAST.....OCT. 8
"Will enter the class of exceptional pictures."—M. P. News.

MAN TRACKERS (UNIVERSAL) LARKIN-HILL.....JULY 23
"Another Northwestern with plenty of action and strong dramatic moments."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Fine—fine business. Everybody liked it."

MAN WHO, THE (METRO) BERT LYTELL.....JULY 23
'Rather novel idea plays out through lack of variety.
Exhibitor Comment—"A laugh-getter from start to finish. Drew big. Bert Lytell is up to his usual standard in this one, while the plot is a clever farce." "Only fair picture which did an average week's business"

MARCH HARE, THE (REALART) BEBE DANIELS.....JULY 30
"Not up to Bebe's usual high standard."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Nice little picture. Daniels draws well here." "Star well liked here and drew well considering hot weather and showers." "Miss Daniels is charming. Subtitles are cleverly worded."

MASK, THE (GEO. H. HAMILTON-EXPORT & IMPORT-STATE RIGHTS) JACK HOLT.....JUNE 25
"Tedious melodrama filled with all the old stock tricks."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Played with Charlie Chaplin in 'The Cure' and did a good business, the credit going to the latter production."

PICTURE BRAND STAR RELEASED PLAN BOO

MATCH BREAKER, THE (METRO) VIOLA DANA.....SEPT.
"The right kind of light comedy entertainment."—M. P. News.

MESSAGE FROM MARS, A (METRO) BERT LYTELL.....JUNE 1
"Lytell acts splendidly in dull morality picture."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Fine theme, poor acting and directing. Receipts good." "A fair picture. Appeals only to the high brow. Fair business." "In conjunction with 'Little Italy,' very satisfactory."

MIDNIGHT BELL, THE (FIRST NATIONAL) CHARLES RAY....AUG. 2
"Whirlwind finish puts over Ray's latest."—M. P. News.

MONEY MANIAC, THE (LEONCE PERRET-PATHE) SPECIAL CAST .....JULY 3
"The Money Maniac" is Leonce Perret's best."—M. P. News.

MOONLIGHT AND HONEYSUCKLE (REALART) MARY MILES MINTER .....AUG.
"Frail and conventional and carries no sparkle."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Drew fairly well. Receipts average."

MOONLIGHT FOLLIES (UNIVERSAL) MARIE PREVOST.....SEPT. 2
"Fluffy little romance presents Marie Prevost as star."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Marie Prevost's first picture was well liked by our audience, but not much as a drawing card."

MORAL FIBRE (VITAGRAPH) CORINNE GRIFFITH.....AUG. 2
"An entertaining picture with plenty of heart interest."—M. P. News.

MOTHER HEART, THE (FOX) SHIRLEY MASON.....JUNE 1
"Little originality in mechanical Shirley Mason picture."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"An exceptionally good picture. One of the sweetest, finest films we ever saw."

MOTHER O' MINE (INCE-ASS'D PRODUCERS) SPECIAL CAST JUNE 1
"Sure-fire audience appeal in spite of formula plot."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Strong picture. Lots of human appeal. Only fair business, however." "At last a picture that lived up to its expectations. Business excellent despite unprecedented hot spell." "Theme not new but well handled. Record breaking business." "Great picture to big business."

MYSTERY ROAD, THE (PARAMOUNT) DAVID POWELL.....AUG.
"Dull and uninteresting society drama."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Did it do good business? Did my audiences like it? Do I like it? To all three questions the same answer will be adequate: Not very much."

NIGHT HORSEMEN, THE (FOX) TOM MIX.....SEPT. 1
"Mix not at his best in this sequel to 'The Untamed.'"—M. P. News.

NO WOMAN KNOWS (JEWEL-UNIVERSAL) SPECIAL CAST....SEPT. 1
"Sure-fire entertainment in this human heart drama."—M. P. News.

NOBODY (ROLAND WEST-FIRST NATIONAL) JEWEL CARMEN..AUG.
"Good murder mystery picture evidently based on Elwell case."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Business fair. Picture just an average one." "Went over pleasingly. Receipts good in spite of criticism that Jewel Carmen showed up better as 'looney' actress than 'sane.'"

OH, MARY BE CAREFUL (PIONEER) MADGE KENNEDY.....OCT.
"Snappy titles and Madge Kennedy's demure personality are sufficient."—M. P. News.

OLD NEST, THE (EMINENT AUTHORS-GOLDWYN) SPECIAL CAST .....JULY 1
"Undeniably Goldwyn's greatest picture."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Very fine production. Did only fair business, however." "Sure did go over big and gave us great business. Splendid production." "Excellent production to big business." "Positively a wonderful picture, and we stood them out for a block." "Fine feature with tremendous heart appeal. Went over big at this house." "The picture ran for three weeks, doing a record business for this time of the year." "Well worth seeing. Receipts fair."

ONE A MINUTE (INCE-PARAMOUNT) DOUGLAS MACLEAN.....JUNE 1
"Amusing hokum puts this one over."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Doug MacLean made a personal appearance in connection with this one and we played to capacity business." "Poor business, with a dull and draggy picture whose climax and denouement was anticipated from the opening scenes. Nothing exciting, and business about equal." "Breezy, light summer entertainment. Somewhat better than Douglas MacLean has done before. Business not so good. Too hot." "Interesting theme. Star popular here and attendance was good considering hot weather." "A pleasing picture which brought satisfactory box office returns."

ONE WILD WEEK (REALART) BEBE DANIELS.....SEPT. 1
"Ingeniously constructed and genuinely entertaining farce comedy."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Good star in mediocre offering. Business fair." "Fairly good attraction and fairly good box office value."

OPEN SHUTTERS (UNIVERSAL) EDITH ROBERTS.....AUG. 2
"An orthodox picture of the 'preachy' type."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"An average picture with the usual business."

OVER THE WIRE (METRO) ALICE LAKE.....JULY
"Picture starts well and loses its punch."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Fairly good business on this picture which is only average."

PASSING THROUGH (PARAMOUNT) DOUGLAS MACLEAN.....SEPT. 1
"Homespun story with MacLean carries enough pep and ginger."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"The average Douglas MacLean picture—light, and with plenty of laughs. Good box office value."

PEGGY PUTS IT OVER (VITAGRAPH) ALICE CALHOUN.....OCT.
"Rural comedy-drama affords satisfactory vehicle for Alice Calhoun."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Star pleasing—nothing to story. A good style show to fair business."

PERJURY (FOX) WILLIAM FARNUM.....AUG. 27
Excellent story material marred by over acting."—M. P. News.

PILGRIMS OF THE NIGHT (FROTHINGHAM-ASSOCIATED PRODUCERS) SPECIAL CAST.....AUG. 20
"Highly involved mystery story is rather puzzling to the spectator."—M. P. News.

PLAY SQUARE (FOX) JOHNNIE WALKER.....SEPT. 3
"Nothing to make this more than an average program feature."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Stars don't pull—story weak—impossible; poor business."

PRIMAL LAW, THE (FOX) DUSTIN FARNUM.....OCT. 1
"Dustin Farnum returns to the screen with an interesting Western."—M. P. News.

PRINCESS OF NEW YORK; THE (PARAMOUNT) DAVID POWELL.....SEPT. 17
"Uninspired story offers little interest."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Not a drawing picture—there is not enough action to the scenes and it lacks interest."

PRIVATE SCANDAL, A (REALART) MAY McAVOY.....JUNE 25
"May McAvoy saves this very ordinary photoplay."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Fair amount of business, but those who saw 'Sentimental Tommy' were disappointed in the star's role in this production." "Star pleases in an interesting subject. Story is appealing. Attendance fair." "Excellent business throughout run. May McAvoy is quickly establishing a splendid following for herself."

QUEENIE (FOX) SHIRLEY MASON.....OCT. 8
"Shirley Mason provides atmosphere in this character study of a redeemed skinflint."—M. P. News.

RAGE OF PARIS, THE (UNIVERSAL) MISS DUPONT.....OCT. 1
"Costs much, but achieves little as entertainment."—M. P. News.

RED COURAGE (UNIVERSAL) HOOT GIBSON.....OCT. 8
"Good type of Western featuring the picturesque Hoot Gibson."—M. P. News.

"REMORSELESS LOVE" (SELZNICK) ELAINE HAMMERSTEIN...Aug. 20
"One of Elaine Hammerstein's best."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A good picture which did good business."

ROAD TO LONDON, THE (ASSOCIATED EXHIBITORS-PATHE) BRYANT WASHBURN.....JUNE 11
"Bryant Washburn exploits London in this feature."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Bryant Washburn's recent personal appearance here made him popular and, as a result, this picture did a good week's business." "Very poor. An ordinary program picture. Fine locations help some." "Washburn at his best; great feature." "Big business on this excellent production." "Poor picture—poor business. A bunch of junk and business showed it."

ROOM AND BOARD (REALART) CONSTANCE BINNEY.....SEPT. 10
"Pleasing little picture with star in suitable role."—M. P. News.

ROWDY, THE (UNIVERSAL) GLADYS WALTON.....SEPT. 17
"Gladys Walton has interesting little number here."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"An exciting drama, well acted. Business better than it has been at any time during the heat."

"SALVATION NELL" (WHITMAN BENNETT-FIRST NATIONAL) SPECIAL CAST.....JULY 9
"Good incident and fine acting gives this exceptional audience appeal."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Excellent photo, but appeals mainly to religious gatherings. Receipts fairly good."

SCRAP IRON (FIRST NATIONAL) CHARLES RAY.....JUNE 11
"Greatest prize fight picture ever made."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Probably the best picture Charles Ray has made, and played to such good business we are holding it over for second week." "Good picture, well received. In spite of Shrine Convention, no unusual business." "The best thing Ray has ever made. Picture intensely interesting and shows realistic fight, although knockout in fight is not shown, which was disappointing to many. Attendance good." "Charles Ray is a favorite here and he gained several new supporters in this production, which did a good week's business." "The picture drags too much. The prize-fight scene is realistic." "This is one of Charles Ray's best pictures and we did very good business with it for a week." "Dandy film with a cash-in on the Carpentier-Dempsey rage. Receipts fine."

SERENADE (R. A. WALSH-FIRST NATIONAL) SPECIAL CAST..SEPT. 17
"Lots of atmosphere and acting, but not so much action."—M. P. News.

SHADOW OF LIGHTNING RIDGE, THE (SELIG-RORK-AYWON-STATE RIGHTS) SNOWY BAKER.....SEPT. 24

SHERIFF OF ETERNAL HOPE, THE (FEDERATED EXCHANGES) JACK HOXIE.....JULY 9
"Conventional western, but will get over in right houses."—M. P. News.

SHOCKING NIGHT, A (UNIVERSAL) LYONS-MORAN.....JAN. 1
"Not substantial enough for five reels."—M. P. News.

SHORT SKIRTS (UNIVERSAL) GLADYS WALTON.....JULY 16
"Gladys Walton does good work in mildly interesting story."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Average picture to fair returns."

SIGN ON THE DOOR (FIRST NATIONAL) NORMA TALMADGE..JULY 30
"Famous stage melodrama retains dramatic strength on screen."—M. P.
Exhibitor Comment—"Exceptionally well received by everybody. Absolutely A 1, splendid." "Fine picture and one which had good business during run." "Fine picture. Played to big houses." "Nothing above the average. Business showed some increase, though. But this doubtless due to recent change in weather." "Norma Talmadge given a big reception on her reappearance locally after absence of more than a year. Has lost nothing in popularity during this time. Picture was moderately well liked."

SINGING RIVER (FOX) WILLIAM RUSSELL.....AUG. 6
"Ordinary western makes real offering for Russell."—M. P. News.

SOWING OF THE WIND (LOUIS B. MAYER-FIRST NATIONAL)..JULY 2
"Moments of interest in theatric story."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Excellent drama with good business all week despite unprecedented hot weather." "Picture had to be cut a great deal. Interesting story and acting good."

STEELHEART (VITAGRAPH) WILLIAM DUNCAN.....SEPT. 24
"Combination of good melodramatic action and handsome hero stuff."—M. P. News.

STING OF THE LASHS, THE (ROBERTSON-COLE) PAULINE FREDERICK.....AUG. 27
"One big punch; balance average Western movie stuff."—M. P. News.

STRAIGHT FROM PARIS (EQUITY PICTURES-STATE RIGHTS) CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG.....JULY 23
"Well mounted production makes satisfactory entertainment."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Excellent Clara Kimball Young picture which pleased our audiences and proved a good box office attraction."

STRAIGHT FROM THE SHOULDER (FOX) BUCK JONES.....JULY 2
"Average Western with Jones in a character study."—M. P. News.

SUCH A LITTLE QUEEN (REALART) CONSTANCE BINNEY....JULY 9
"Hardly substantial enough for the grown-ups."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"My patrons were well pleased with the production. A good business for the week." "Terrible. Sugary, impossible stuff, done to death. Business was very bad." "The start the best part of the production."

THERE ARE NO VILLAINS (METRO) VIOLA DANA.....SEPT. 3
"Perfectly satisfactory romantic-crook play with Viola Dana."—M. P. News.

THREE MUSKETEERS, THE (UNITED ARTISTS) DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS.....SEPT. 10
"Doug's masterpiece one of the screen's most likeable productions."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Fairbanks does his greatest work in this splendid picture. One of the big offerings of the year and a sure-fire box-office attraction. Played to tremendous business the first week of its run." "Sure-fire attraction. Great money-getter. Greatly pleased audiences."

THREE WORD BRAND (PARAMOUNT) WILLIAM S. HART.....OCT. 8
"Bill Hart in triple role Western melodrama."—M. P. News.

THUNDERCLAP (FOX) SPECIAL CAST.....AUG. 13
"Great for the gallery gods."—M. P. News.

TO A FINISH (FOX) BUCK JONES.....AUG. 27
"Buck Jones Western entirely satisfactory in every respect."—M. P. News.

TOO MUCH SPEED (PARAMOUNT) WALLACE REID.....JUNE 18
"Wallace Reid has another entertaining auto story here."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"The picture was selected as the feature in conjunction with the second anniversary musical revue at my house and went over big." "Best Wallace Reid picture. Held over for second week." "Went big with Wally Reid fans and we are holding it over for second week's run." "Weather considered, this went over very well. It is only average, however, and is, basically, a repetition of one of his previous racing pictures." "A very good picture; pleased immensely, and played to very good business despite the extreme heat." "Very good; receipts fair." "Delightful story with star at his best. Boosted attendance figures despite minimum." "Fine production. Pleased my patrons and brought good business." "Had great business on this one in spite of the hot weather. Sure is a knockout."

TRIP TO PARADISE, A (METRO) BERT LYTELL.....AUG. 27
"Lytell splendid in a fascinating, human picture."—M. P. News.

UNWILLING HERO, AN (GOLDWYN) WILL ROGERS.....JULY 23
"Will Rogers at his best—undeniably high-class light comedy."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Good picture with plenty of laughs. Fine summer attraction." "Will Rogers ordinarily draws a crowded house here, but this picture fell below his usual attendance mark. Only fair business."

"Ethel Clayton has emotional opportunities here and expresses them."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Found this to be a mediocre production, which did not attract strongly." "Audiences liked this picture. Did fair business."

WEDDING BELLS (FIRST NATIONAL) CONSTANCE TALMADGE .....AUG. 27
"Constance Talmadge well cast in good audience picture."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Clever and amusing. Business excellent." "Constance Talmadge's name was sufficient to draw a good house all week, without any special effort on the par of the management in the way of exploitation." "Not as good as some of Constance Talmadge's former attractions." "Average feature to usual business."

"Some good incident in ordinary western."—M. P. News.

WET GOLD (WILLIAMSON-GOLDWYN) SPECIAL CAST.....AUG. 13
"Grim melodrama carries adventure and atmosphere."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Good melodrama. Exploitation comes easy for this picture and in our case the exploitation paid, did fine business." "Nothing extra. Had average business throughout run."

WHERE LIGHTS ARE LOW (ROBERTSON-COLE) SESSUE HAYAKAWA .....JULY 9
"Good vehicle for Hayakawa."—M. P. News.

WHERE MEN ARE MEN (VITAGRAPH) WILLIAM DUNCAN.....SEPT. 24
"Fairly entertaining because of the punch."—M. P. News.

WHITE AND UNMARRIED (PARAMOUNT) THOMAS MEIGHAN..JUNE 11
"Fair entertainment in Meighan's latest."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"An excellent picture, which, coupled with the popularity of Thomas Meighan, brought good houses during its run." "Well received, receipts pleasing." "Do not consider picture up to standard set by 'City of Silent Men' nor was business as good. But nothing to complain of. This picture did a satisfactory business for a week's run and pleased patrons." "Pleased patrons although not type of picture usually shown at this theatre. Meighan admirably suited to part." "A good box office attraction." "Fairly entertaining feature with average business." "Fine picture. Business was very good considering the extreme heat." "The first three reels are very good; the rest is cheap melodrama. They seem to be making a mistake in putting this star in too many crook pictures. Business fell off because of the heat." "Not as good as other Meighan pictures. Business was fair."

WHY GIRLS LEAVE HOME (HARRY RAPF-WARNER BROS.-STATE RIGHTS) SPECIAL CAST.....SEPT. 10
"Modernized version of stage play makes interesting picture."—M. P. News.

WIFE'S AWAKENING, A (ROBERTSON-COLE) FRITZI BRUNETTE .....SEPT. 10
"An average society drama; entertainment of the heaviest sort."—M. P. News.

WISE FOOL, A (PARAMOUNT) SPECIAL CAST.....JUNE 11
"Good direction makes this picture very human."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A very good picture. Not much business because of hot weather." "Business so poor on this that it had to be taken off after three days, though booked for a week. Think it failed to appeal because the locations and costuming did not appeal to my clientele of 'flappers,' and young matrons." "Good business followed extensive exploitation." "A good picture, but only a fair business."

WITHOUT BENEFIT OF CLERGY (ASSOCIATED EXHIBITORS-PATHE) .....JULY 2
"Famous Kipling story presented in fine atmosphere."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Wonderful picture which everybody liked, but due to hot weather attendance was cut down somewhat." "Fine feature which took well. Good box office value."

"Flashbacks" on Earlier Releases

"See My Lawyer" (Robertson-Cole)—"Too lengthy and complicated to be amusing."

"Seven Years' Bad Luck" (Robertson-Cole)—"Good picture from entertainment standpoint and brought good returns."

"The Wallop" (Universal)—"An ordinary Western picture. Box-office receipts fairly satisfying."

"Wolves of the North" (Universal)—"Mediocre picture, but it drew the crowds. We advertised this one heavily, but couldn't put it over."

"The Wild Goose" (Paramount)—"Fairly entertaining, but it brought more than usual business."

"The Traveling Salesman" (Paramount)—"Comment none too good and business only up to the average."

"The Scoffer" (First National)—"A little bold for my audience. Receipts only fair."

"Reputation" (Universal)—"An alluring title which attracted business." "The plot is not much, but Miss Dean's acting puts it over."

"Puppets of Fate" (Metro)—"A bad picture that brought very little business." "Viola Dana lives up to reputation here."

"Penny of Top Hill Trail" (Federated)—"Sweet little picture with very little drawing power."

"The Oath" (First National)—"A good picture, but only drew our regular patrons."

"The Magnificent Brute" (Universal)—"Fairly entertaining subject. Box-office figures fair."

"The Magic Cup" (Realart)—"Fairly pleasing, but receipts are light."

"The Lure of Egypt" (Pathe)—"A mediocre production with fair attendance."

"Lavender and Old Lace" (Hodkinson)—"This one surprised me. Afraid it lacked punch; booked it for three days and it went over big. Holding over for another week."

"The Lamplighter" (Fox)—"Average picture to average business."

"Keeping Up With Lizzie" (Hodkinson)—"Entertaining picture with better business than usual."

"It Can Be Done" (Vitagraph)—"Rather unusual and offers fair entertainment."

"I Am Guilty" (Associated Producers)—"This is an excellent Louise Glaum picture and our patrons liked it."

"The House That Jazz Built" (Realart)—"A bright, clever picture which appealed to our patrons."

"The Home Stretch" (Paramount)—"Good picture to our usual capacity business."

"His Greatest Sacrifice" (Fox)—"Heavy drama may satisfy star's admirers."

"The Highest Bidder" (Goldwyn)—"Star well liked and picture was good, but business was only fair."

"Hearts and Masks" (Federated)—"Should fill demand for clean, entertaining light stuff."

"Gypsy Blood" (First National)—"Good picture which went over well and brought good business." "Disappointing. Lacking in originality."

"Good Women" (Robertson-Cole)—"Time-worn theme, poorly developed. Business bad."

"Diana of Star Hollow" (Producers Security)—"A complex story, well acted and entertaining because of action."

"Coincidence" (Metro)—"Light, but breezy enough to get over."

"Bob Hampton of Placer" (First National)—"One of the best pictures of the year in our estimation. One of the best of the season, but it went over just moderately well."

"The Blazing Trail" (Universal)—"A fair feature, but box-office returns were unsatisfactory."

"Beyond Price" (Fox)—"An inconsequential story not suited to Pearl White."

"You and I" (Radiosoul)—"Wonderfully impressive picture; well produced and acted."

"What's Your Reputation Worth?" (Vitagraph)—"Interesting feature gives star emotional oppportunities."

"What Happened to Rosa?" (Goldwyn)—"Plot too flimsy even for farce. Picture very mediocre."

"The Wakefield Case" (Weber-World-State Rights)—"Fairly entertaining to average business."

"Uncharted Seas" (Metro)—"Good picture and drew well."

"The Tomboy" (Fox)—"Better small town pictures have been seen."

"The Sky Pilot" (First National)—"Fine production and one which pleased my patrons very much."

"Proxies" (Paramount)—"Audiences commented favorably on this picture. Business fair."

"Partners of the Tide" (Hodkinson)—"Old stuff. Went over fairly well with my patrons."

"The Other Woman" (Hodkinson)—"Story of dual personality offers interesting moments."

"Mother Eternal" (Abramson)—"Effective drama offered in appealing story of mother love."

SHUBERT CIRCUIT SIMPLEXIZED!

The World.

"Circulation Books Open to All."

"Circulation Books Open to All."

1921, by The Press Publishing Co. The New York World.

NEW YORK, FRIDAY, AUGUST 12, 1921.

Entered as Second-Class Matter Post Office, New York, N. Y.

OVER TWENTY HOUSES IN SHUBERTS' STRING

Big Circuit of Magnificent Vaudeville Theatres Will Be Opened Sept. 15.

The [illegible] announcement of the date for opening [illegible] of new vaudeville theatres was made yesterday by the Shuberts. The newly organized circuit will begin operation Sept. 15 in more than twenty theatres in the principal cities between Kansas City and New York, reaching north to Boston and south to Washington.

The Shuberts have quietly taken over by lease or purchase some of the costliest and most thoroughly equipped theatre properties in the chief cities of the country.

It is the aim of the Shuberts to make their new style of variety superior to any form of similar entertainment. For more than six months a creating staff has been steadily at work preparing material and acts, and this staff remains a feature of the organization. Producers, writers, composers and directors—many of them internationally famous—are included in the personnel of the general staff. As features of each bill there will be condensed versions of famous musical productions, established dramatic successes, operettas and modern revues.

In New York City, the two leading vaudeville theatres are to be the Imperial, now nearing completion, at Seventh Avenue and 59th Street, and the Forty-Fourth Street Theatre.

The Imperial, costing more than $1,000,000, is designed to top any theatre ever constructed by the firm, and the claim is made that in every particular it will be the peer of vaudeville theatres the world over. The seating capacity is 2,200.

In Chicago, Shubert vaudeville is to be shown in that city's most elegant and expensive playhouse, the Wood's Apollo.

The plans for Philadelphia call for two theatres—for the present the Chestnut Street Opera House, which is being remodelled at a cost of over a quarter of a million dollars, and later the Forrest Theatre.

In Brooklyn, the Shubert Crescent; Newark, the Rialto, now undergoing extensive alterations; Baltimore, the historic Academy of Music, which for years has been controlled by Klaw & Erlanger; Washington, the Shubert-Belasco, which is that city's leading dramatic house; Pittsburgh, the Shubert Theatre; Cleveland, the Euclid Avenue Opera House; Detroit, the Detroit Opera House; Cincinnati, the new Shubert Theatre, which is now in course of construction at a cost of more than $700,000; Dayton, the Loerty Theatre, till a few months ago operated by the B. F. Keith circuit; Louisville, the Strand Theatre; Springfield, Mass., the Capitol Theatre, and theatres in Providence, St. Louis and Kansas City.

SO much favorable comment has been made about the posters for WEISS BROTHERS' new Tarzan serial that it is only fair to credit Mr. Bert Ennis, publicity director for the TARZAN SALES SYNDICATE, for the selection of the subject matter that went into their making.

For each of the fifteen episodes in this remarkable series, a complete set of posters was made. In addition there is a twenty-four sheet stand, a window card, and a stock one three and six sheet. It is impossible to conceive of a combination more sure to meet with the public approval than the new TARZAN SERIAL together with the RITCHEY posters designed to advertise it.

Packing Them In At Two Dollars A Seat

READ WHAT THE CRITICS SAY

The Criterion, New York, opened as a reserved seat house, two dollar top, with "Forever." That's big money in these times, but the crowds that pack the Criterion twice daily prove that the picture's worth it.

"As a development of the film art the play is little short of marvelous."
NEW YORK TELEGRAM

"One of the finest pictures of the year. A screen classic. Flawlessly acted, beautiful sets. Sets a high standard for photo-drama."
NEW YORK TELEGRAPH

"A screen triumph. The director has succeeded in catching the spirit of this great love story."
NEW YORK SUN

"Sets a new standard for American films."
NEW YORK CALL

"Remarkable for the exquisite portrayal by Miss Ferguson."
NEW YORK GLOBE

"The best work Wallace Reid has ever done. A notable achievement."
NEW YORK AMERICAN

"George Fitzmaurice has never done anything better. The whole picture deserves all praise."

Gentlemen:

While discussing pictures last week I was asked what picture I was playing against "ANATOL." I replied "THE GREAT IMPERSONATION." My inquirer replied: "That's a good picture." I said "Yes, but we are not doing any business. 'ANATOL' is doing it all."

But "THE GREAT IMPERSONATION" picked up every day until the end of the week, and we have done a wonderful business on it. I don't know when we have had so many of our patrons stop to tell us what a wonderful picture "THE GREAT IMPERSONATION" was.

Very truly yours,

SCREEN STORIES

—all ready for you to read

Your next picture may be among our selected originals—magazine stories—stage plays—novels. You are invited to look them over.

BETTER photoplays—stories that will do your companies and equipment justice—that's the idea back of Palmer service to producers.

In three years the Palmer Photoplay Corporation has become the world's largest clearing house for photoplay material. Its staff numbers one hundred people, including men and women trained intensively in a single but vital phase of the service—judgment of screen values. No story passes the hands of these people for submission to you without it measures up to our exacting standards, both as to dramatic value and technique.

From All Over The World

Palmer stories flow in from all parts of the world. Students of the Palmer Course in photoplaywriting are scattered everywhere. They are earnest, cultivated men and women who had to pass our rigid admission test before they were accepted for training.

From this group will come the big photoplaywrights of the future.

Our part is to discover the talent, train it, and offer the product to the industry. Every story, whether an original, or an adapted fiction story or play, is judged solely upon its merits for the screen.

Meanwhile, recognized authors by the hundreds find our service exactly what they want. Straight 10 per cent commission—no more, no less; they like fair business methods.

You pay only for the story. Our service is paid for by the author who pays the commission.

Will you let us help you out with your next picture?

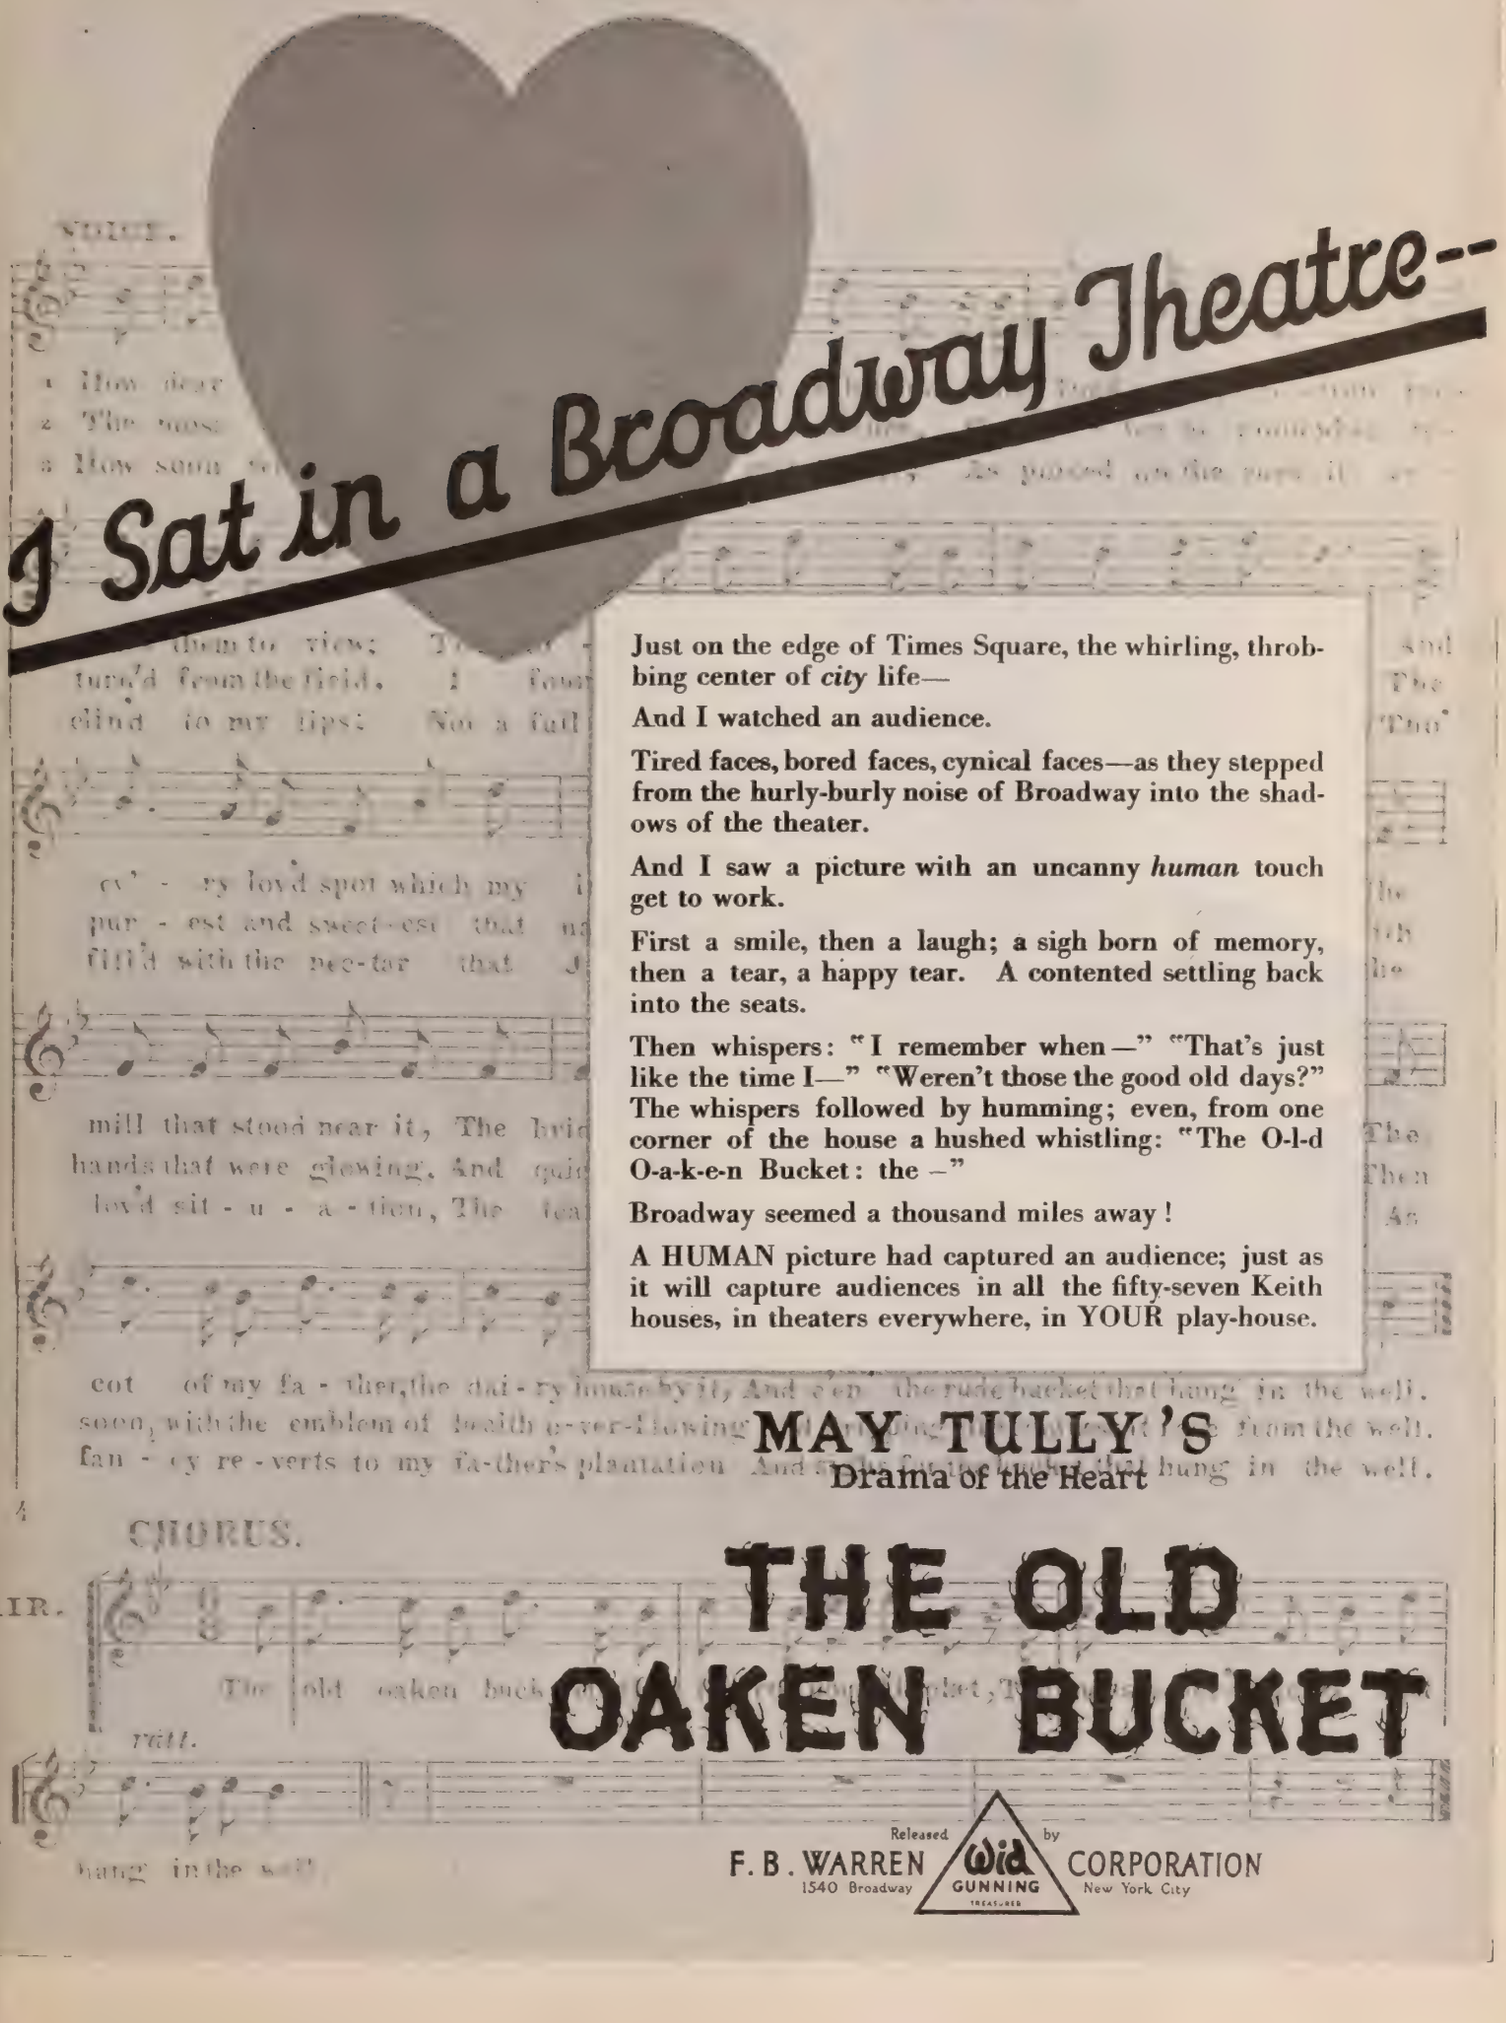
THE OLD OAKEN BUCKET.



I Sat in a Broadway Theatre--

Just on the edge of Times Square, the whirling, throbbing center of city life—

And I watched an audience.

Tired faces, bored faces, cynical faces—as they stepped from the hurly-burly noise of Broadway into the shadows of the theater.

And I saw a picture with an uncanny human touch get to work.

First a smile, then a laugh; a sigh born of memory, then a tear, a happy tear. A contented settling back into the seats.

Then whispers: "I remember when—" "That's just like the time I—" "Weren't those the good old days?" The whispers followed by humming; even, from one corner of the house a hushed whistling: "The O-l-d O-a-k-e-n Bucket: the—"

Broadway seemed a thousand miles away!

A HUMAN picture had captured an audience; just as it will capture audiences in all the fifty-seven Keith houses, in theaters everywhere, in YOUR play-house.

Critics Unanimously Agree*

"His Nibs", proprietor manager and operator of "The Slippery Elm Picture Palace" by Marcus of the New York Times.

"His Nibs" believes in advertising

Arthur James

"Charles Sale has succeeded in contriving a charming novelty that is as clean as a hound's tooth, and as downright funny as anything that has featured its way into our view for a long time."

Marion Russell

"This is the acme of droll comedy, unique characterizations and rural types such as the cinema has never before presented. Suitability—every theatre; entertainment value—above par."

George D. Gould

"The exhibitor, small or big, country or city, is assured of a box office medium which may well be classed with 'Down on the Farm' and 'The County Fair.' To the wise exhibitor no more need be said. And, in addition to equal exploitation advantages, it is better entertainment than the two mentioned."

George T. Pardy

"This offering is a distinct novelty. . . . Here is a chance for the exhibitor to try a real novelty on his patrons, and that is something which does not happen once in a blue moon."

Wm. A. Johnston

"The picture is fine. It is a distinct novelty very well handled and has many points of popular appeal."

Helen Carlisle

"It is amusing, and decidedly different. . . . There is a place for you on the screen, and a big place."

J. S. Dickerson

"'His Nibs' is entertainment, pure and simple. . . . 'His Nibs' is a play within a play. The idea on which the picture is built is novel and unique."

Frank Bacon

"I was very glad of the opportunity of seeing your first motion picture, 'His Nibs,' and can assure you it gave me an hour of real entertainment.

"Your old man character is a classic."

C. S. Sewell

"Here is a production that is entirely different from anything yet presented on the screen. . . . His portrayal of 'His Nibs' is one of the best characterizations ever seen on the screen."

Epes Winthrop Sargent

"There is no difficulty in devising exploitation ideas for 'Chic' Sale in 'His Nibs.' . . . Although he has played mostly the 'big time' he is as well known in most rural districts as President Harding."

John Spargo

"We have had close to an overplus of dual roles in pictures recently, but it remained for 'Chic' Sale, long favorite of the vaudeville stage, to give us a picture in which the star plays seven parts and makes each character a distinct personage with an artistry that is little less than marvelous 'His Nibs' is in a class by itself."

Harry Jordan

"In my judgment the picture held the interest all the way through. In fact, I am quite sure it can be rated as a success."

Testimonial No 7

WID'S Says:

American history now takes its place in a chapter picture. "Winners of the West" is based on a great American theme worthy of an epic. Contrary to the usual serial, it stays right at home and does not wander off to China or Europe, neither does it use auto races, aeroplanes, drawbridges and other devices so familiar to the serial fan, to produce its effect. In "Winners of the West" American history has been caught at a climax and dramatized into a stirring and appealing picture. A romantic tide of history is pictured at its flow and illustrates the adventurous days in the "Roaring Forties." Days filled with Indians, Pioneers, Tomahawks and Prairie battles. This was the time of Kit Carson and Captain John C. Fremont, and the days that led to that mad rush for gold in '49, and the opening of the West.

Edward Laemmle deserves a good deal of credit for his direction of this production. The action is smooth and the human touches are well planned. Art Acord is certainly one of the very best and most daring horsemen in pictures and his work in this production is excellent. From the start he develops a very lovable character. Miss Myrtle Lynd is a very suitable type for the part and does pleasing work. The rest of the cast present good and contrasting types and also are very adequate.

As a whole "Winners of the West" is one of the very best chapter productions of the year. It not only contains the necessary number of thrills, but it is also an innovation in the line of serials. It touches on a subject that is romantic and big, and presents it in a direct and truthful manner. It is filled with historic interest and is clean and censor proof.

THE OLD OAKEN BUCKET.
VOICE.
Gee! But I'd Love to Own a Theatre!--
And have the joy of building the show the week I played "The Old Oaken Bucket."
A two thousand seat palace or a three hundred seat house where all the patrons were "my folks"; a sixty piece orchestra, or a lone piano player; a concert singer specialty or the village quartette—
It wouldn't make any difference.
Oh, boy, what a show this touching, human picture inspires!
I'd make it an "Old Time Song Week." That's the way it "gets" me. I sit through the scenes humming. First, "The Old Oaken Bucket," then "The Sidewalks of New York," "In the Good Old Summer Time," "Sweet Rosie O'Grady" "Home Sweet Home," and ever and often back to "The Old Oaken Bucket."
I picture audiences all over the country warming up to this show, nestling it to their hearts and talking about it afterwards.

ANOTHER BIG GOLDWYN FEATURE
Goldwyn is pushing "The Man From Lost River" as one of the prize features of a prize program. "The Man From Lost River" is a big picture — one of those strong, two-fisted, red-blooded, out-door yarns that every picture-goer enjoys.
This sort of story has made Katharine Newlin Burt and her "The Branding Iron" famous. But "The Branding Iron" was not quite so active, not quite so tender, not quite so swift as this new, vivid box-office production.
It is the kind of picture that made motion pictures popular. House Peters is at his best as The Man.

They'll Be Boosting the Next Day --

And the day after—and the week after.

John Smith at his desk downtown will catch himself whistling; his wife at home will be unconsciously humming –

"The Old Oaken Bucket."

And they'll chuckle. Then the man across the desk or the neighbor who dropped into Mrs. Smith's kitchen for a chat will hear:

"We had a wonderful time at the theater last night. Not at all like the ordinary movie that you get so tired of seeing. Something different. A dandy story, a beautiful picture, so real it doesn't seem to be acting. As wholesome as mountain air. Based on the song, 'The Old Oaken Bucket.' It has me humming yet. You'll be the same after you see it."

They'll be building bigger business every day of your run. They'll be better friends of your house even after it has gone—they'll not forget.

You'll not forget the box office record it sets.

How's Your Form? Are You Champion or Duffer?

America—the greatest nation of athletes since the days of ancient Greece.

The most popular men and women in this country today are not statesmen, artists or scientists—they are super-beings like Babe Ruth, "Big Bill" Tilden, Ethelda Bleibtrey, Alexa Sterling, Charley Paddock, Tom Kerrigan, Jack Dempsey and the other champions.

In "Form," over a dozen of these champs demonstrate in action how they won their crowns. Slow motion photography brings out the fine points, so that fans may follow their favorites more closely than if they were performing in person.

Every inch of "Form" is fascinating. We consider it one of the most interesting short-subjects ever made. And so will you.

The "JUDGMENT!"

Of the Press——

EVERY reviewer who has seen "JUDGMENT!" acclaims it as the big picture of the year. Read what they say:

WID'S:

. . . Intensely absorbing and holds attention from beginning to end . . . the director has created a suspense that builds to a climax that never gives a hint as to what the outcome will be.

DRAMATIC MIRROR:

"Judgment!" . . . distinguished from the average big feature by splendid technical directing, remarkable photography, a unity of plot and action that is keyed with suspense. It is a photoplay that undoubtedly will rank with the foremost pictures of the year.—Henry Irving Margolies.

EXHIBITOR'S TRADE REVIEW:

. . . The sets are magnificent . . . the cast superb . . . the continuity smooth throughout . . . the titles compare favorably with the finest ever written . . . the suspense reaches such a climax in the last reel as to bring audiences to the edges of their seats.—Monte W. Sohn.

MOVING PICTURE WORLD:

In "Judgment!" the World Film Corporation has a production that in many respects ranks with the finest screen portrayals . . . the acting of Ellen Richter could hardly be surpassed . . . makes the part stand out as one of the greatest screen impersonations.—T. S. daPonte.

MORNING TELEGRAPH:

The picture has a somber old world quality that makes it all seem very real. . . . Ellen Richter as "Mary" gives a ruthless and brilliant performance . . . the supporting cast is fine and the picture on the whole absorbingly interesting.

EXHIBITOR'S HERALD:

While hundreds of foreign films are being shipped back without seeing the light of American projection machines, lovers of really good pictures are to be congratulated that "Judgment!" was not caught in the exodus . . . one of the best and most interest-holding yet shown.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS:

The picture has been produced in a fine atmosphere and is especially commendable in its detail . . . the costuming is good and sets provided excellent . . . the story builds steadily to its climax and the continuity is flawless. —J. S. Dickerson.

ROGER FERRI in the Exhibitor's Trade Review:

World Film Corporation bids fair to make history. . . . We don't hesitate a moment in predicting a record-breaking run for this picture wherever shown . . . as a spectacle it has the edge on "Deception" . . . for acting it outdoes and outshines "Passion" . . . the story is far more interesting than either "Deception" or "Passion," for unlike either there is a happy ending . . . there is suspense, the kind that makes for box-office business . . . the star is one who we believe will electrify the country as did Pola Negri . . . properly exploited "Judgment" should shatter box-office records . . . it's the sort of production we'll rave about for weeks and urge every friend to see.

How Many Million Times ---- have how many million people—including yourself—sung "The Old Oaken Bucket?"

Through the city streets it has gone; up from wind swept valleys it has come—unforgettable, undying. 'Round the world it has travelled.

The great songs and poems live forever. And a clean, sweet, pure picture based on a song known to all the world makes a combination without a rival.

They'll love the picture—as they love the song.

This one will hold them tight, put the tears into their eyes, bring back a thousand happy memories—and send them away whistling.

It's a tender, heart-tugging, sentimental story—a real story—one that awakens all the fine memories in all the men and women and boys and girls who see it.

It Hits Them Inside!

The American people want something that hits them inside—in a story, play or picture.

"The Old Oaken Bucket" hits there—and stays there. Twines around their hearts, charms by the sweet simplicity of its story, appeals by the rare beauty of its setting. Tugs at their hearts with the age-old tug of delightful memories.

Every person that has ever stolen apples from an orchard—or gone swimming in the altogether—or held hands with a girl on a picnic where he had to chase her if he wanted to kiss her—

Oh, shucks, every human being—

Will rave about this—and talk about it—send their friends—come again themselves—and hum, sing and whistle the song from the day you put your first poster up.

The Box Office--Versus--Words

Ten thousand words can't tell the story of a stage play or picture that is big because it is HUMAN.

Words can only build the skeleton of description; the heart isn't there.

But the box-office tells the story!

Stage plays with the elements of "The Old Oaken Bucket" have run for twenty years—each year to larger profits. Pictures with these elements have been the outstanding successes of their day.

"The Old Oaken Bucket" is the sort of picture that can only be fully described by the box-office.

Box-offices everywhere will be singing—just as patrons will be humming and whistling—

Living a Year in An Hour

LIVING a year in an hour and feeling years younger by reason of the refreshment of the experience—this describes our idea of Charles Urban's new feature novelty, which he has named " The Four Seasons." Plant life and animal life in its eternal progress from inception to fruition and then its passing after its mission is fulfilled, is possibly the most interesting thing in the world because it never grows stale. Mr. Urban's charming offering is in four parts that consume about an hour in the running. It delights, instructs and thoroughly entertains. It is in competition neither with drama nor comedy, but it has definite elements of both, because nature in motion stirs the deepest pools in the human soul, and in its lighter moods induces pleasant laughter. The whimsical and the grotesque are supplied by the interesting antics of baby bears, juvenile woodchucks, and the equally fascinating performances of other children of the wilds. Flowers, trees, waterfalls and the beauties of the sea are in contrast with the cold grandeur of the snows and each is wonderful.

" The Four Seasons " is one of the screen's most worth-while accomplishments.

Mighty Fine Atmosphere and Characterization Feature This

L. J. Selznick presents
"A MAN'S HOME"
Ralph Ince Prod.—Selznick

DIRECTOR ..... Ralph Ince
AUTHORS.....Anna S. Richardson and Edmund Breese
SCENARIO BY.....Edward J. Montagne
CAMERAMAN ..... William Black
AS A WHOLE..... Very interesting drama. No "movie stuff." Should get by very well
STORY.....What happens in your neighbor's house day after day. Quite natural and true to life. Should be liked
DIRECTION.....Very good. Held tempo splendidly. Melodrama at end not essential PHOTOGRAPHY ..... Very fine
LIGHTINGS ..... Excellent
CAST.....Uniformly fine. Much better than is usually put together. Harry T. Morey, formerly Vitagraph star, excellent as the man. Kathlyn Williams fine as wife. Little Faire Binney excellent as daughter, and Grace Valentine and Roland Bottomly make fine pair of crooks. Matt Moore the lover
EXTERIORS ..... Very good
INTERIORS.....Fine. Look like the real thing
DETAIL ..... Splendid
CHARACTER OF STORY.....Especially fine for houses of the best type
LENGTH OF PRODUCTION.....5,800 feet

Here's an unusual picture from Selznick. It should cause a lot of talk. It should secure a lot of newspaper space because it presents the sort of problem that is being faced in many homes in this country, the problem of the wife having too much money and being away from her husband too much, the influence of bad company and the necessity of protecting the daughter. Now all of these are very definite problems. There are few families indeed that haven't a skeleton of some kind and many of the troubles of the day are the result of internal difficulties in the home superinduced by one of these very questions.

Too much cannot be said of the manner in which Ralph Ince has held the tempo of this production. For practically throughout the entire length there were many opportunities afforded of going wrong, but he has skilfully avoided the temptations to bring in typical and usual "movie stuff," although he has drifted a bit to melodrama at the finish when he stages a fight. Not one of the usual Harry Morey slam bang affairs, but just the same a fight—where the man finally wakes up and the cheap villain gets it good and plenty.

He deserves also special consideration for the cast assembled. Harry T. Morey makes his first appearance since leaving Vitagraph, where he was a star for many years, and Kathlyn Williams, another excellent player, is fine as the wife. The crooks, presented by Grace Valentine and Horace Bottomley, are natural, and little Faire Binney is excellent as the child.

Briefly the story tells of what happens to a rich man so immersed in his business that he lets his wife go her way, how she falls into the hands of a pair of slick adventurers and pays dearly for it, almost to the point of forcing a break of the marriage planned for her daughter to the son of an aristocratic family. How the husband steps in and brings things around, how he finds happiness with his wife, make a fine story, well rounded and ably produced. It is one of the pictures worth looking into. Better see this and don't give the other fellow a chance first.

Should Be Sure Fire. You Can Safely Make Promises

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Pictures that deal with home life, home events and natural affairs of every day are popular this season. "The Old Nest" and "Over the Hill" are but samples. Selznick has given you something unusually worth while in "A Man's Home" and you can tell your people it is something in which they are deeply interested. Because they are. Tell them it is a story of the home, of everyday people, told in a natural, easy manner, and that they will surely like it. You can make promises for this safely. It might be well to have the local editors and ministers of importance see this before you put it on, because it may get you some unusual publicity. For catchlines something like this: "'A Man's Home' is like your home, like your family affairs. See how they look when presented on the screen at the blank theater."

ANNIVERSARY

Famous love story becomes a great screen triumph

In the hands of a master director,—"Jane Eyre,"—that famous love story written by Charlotte Bronté over seventy-five years ago, comes to the screen with all the charm and warmth and thrills that carried the book to the highest peak of popularity.

It is a marvel of photography and beauteous settings; a gripping, mystifying box office drama with Mabel Ballin and Norman Trevor portraying Jane Eyre and Mr. Rochester as only such artists can do it.

"Jane Eyre" is a wonderful picture—by far Hugo Ballin's best contribution to the screen today.

Your theatre needs such a production. It is a picture that builds patronage.

Winkle"

Millions are waiting to see "Rip," Washington Irving's Beloved Character

Mothers and Fathers, and uncounted hosts of their children in every nook and corner of this country, are waiting for an opportunity to see on the screen this greatest and best known of all fiction and stage characters—and especially old "Rip" himself played by a Jefferson.

Exhibitors have a particularly big money-making opportunity in "Rip Van Winkle" during "Children's Book Week," November 13th to 19th—when millions of school children will be urged to see "Rip Van Winkle" and other pictures made from books that have been officially endorsed as good reading for young folks.

"Rip" is more than an audience-builder—it's a surefire box office record-breaker—with exploitation and advertising possibilities enjoyed by few pictures of to-day.

Motion Picture News

Thoughts of the Week

To Robert E. Welsh—A Tribute

IN this involved trade of the motion picture there are two distinct classes of men. One, a very small group, has a keen, practical and sympathetic understanding of picture conditions, operations and values.

We have no hesitation about placing in this rare minority Robert E. Welsh, who has been Managing Editor of this publication for the past five years. He came to us from the Kalem Company and he is leaving us to put his hand again to the commercial wheel in an important capacity with the F. B. Warren Corporation. His ability is decidedly exceptional and we predict for him in his new field a full measure of the skill and loyalty he has given to Motion Picture News. More than that, our heartfelt good wishes go with him.

Unappreciated Industry

AN experienced publicist, with whom we were recently discussing the public attitude toward the motion picture—in particular the lamentable fact that the industry does nothing constructive for itself in a publicity way—said: " One thing you need is a society of fine or technical arts, or both, such as other big industries have today."

We told him that the industry had such a society, a society of technical art, called the Society of Motion Picture Engineers.

" I did not know of it," said he, and we have an idea that this same lack of knowledge or at least of appreciation applies to a number of the leading executives in the industry itself.

For over five years this compact, efficient and excellent organization has devoted itself seriously and successfully to the betterment of the picture on the screen, a matter, it would seem, of prime and practical importance to the producer, distributor and exhibitor of motion pictures.

If anyone is interested in the amount of work and the value of the work done by the Society we suggest the last and sizeable publication, volume twelve, of its transactions. Copies may be had from the Secretary, A. F. Victor, 50 West 67th Street, New York.

The Society has gone its way, asking odds of no one. It does seem, now, as if a little blowing of the horn should be done in its behalf, and that the industry show some real appreciation of so important a work for the common good.

Associate memberships in the Society are open to all; and one of the semi-annual meetings takes place in Buffalo, New York, beginning October 30th.

Cancerous Silence

THE Fort Dearborn Independent refers editorially to this industry as " a body wholly rotten."

The " World's Work " prints an article which refers to a list of seventeen of our recent and most notable pictures as " contemptible devices to attain success."

A majority of the small town newspapers of the country are pro-censorship minded (without having the least conception of what censorship is).

Newspaper clippings pour into the office every week of a nature to make anyone who truly knows the picture and the picture industry grit his teeth in helpless rage.

Never before, in the writer's knowledge has an American institution, a great institution, been made the target of so widespread an attack actuated by downright malice, or ignorance, or hypocrisy.

And yet—

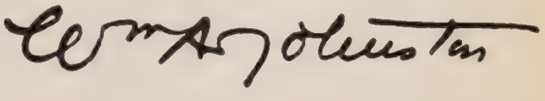
We do nothing to explain, nothing to defend our vital interests, nothing even as Americans for our own self respect.

We do nothing effective because we have no industrial organization.

Read what an exhibitor says in this issue about the necessity of a 100% organization. He means UNITY of organization.

We have a mighty clear idea that every exhibitor in the country will soon be demanding such an organization—and every producer and distributor.

The situation is very grave, gentleman!



R. E. Welsh Joins F. B. Warren Corp.

FOLLOWING the statement made last week that Wid Gunning controls the F. B. Warren Corporation, announcement is made this week of the association of Robert E. Welsh, for the past several years managing editor of "Motion Picture News," with the distributing organization. Mr. Welsh will head the exploitation activities of the corporation.

With a picture career that dates back to the early days with Kalem, Mr. Welsh is one of the best known film men in New York. He has long been recognized as the wielder of a facile pen, and his executive work as an editor marked him for choice by Mr. Gunning when the best in the industry was being sought.

In his five years at the executive post on "Motion Picture News" Mr. Welsh has built acquaintance and friendship among exhibitors and other film men that is country-wide, while he has possessed an opportunity for an insight to the needs of theatre owners and the inner workings of production and distribution equalled by few film men. As "silent partner" in the capacity of confidential adviser to numerous independent producers and big theatre men, he has cemented many friendships and strengthened his reputation for keen film knowledge.

High lights in the career of the new F. B. Warren Corporation executive previous to his association with "Motion Picture News" include, in addition to his service with Kalem, two years as editor of "The Dramatic Mirror" when that publication was a strong factor in the picture field, and newspaper activity that includes work with "The New York American," "The Evening Telegram," and in several Eastern cities.

While quiet and unassuming in manner and always of the type who keeps his name in the background, Mr. Welsh long ago established his worth as an idea man, an organizer, a forceful writer and an editor capable of instilling enthusiasm that achieves.

In the department headed by Mr. Welsh is a nationally known advertising man, Mr. A. L. Hamilton, who comes to the industry from the mercantile advertising field. Mr. Hamilton, who has been at the head of his own advertising agency handling many well-known national accounts, has been attracted to the film industry by the exceptional opportunities offered for real "copy" of definite sales value. Particularly is it expected that Mr. Hamilton's broad experience will find expression in giving real consumer appeal to the exhibitor aids prepared for the coming big specials handled by the corporation.

With Mr. Welch heading a department wherein such recognized advertising top-notchers as Mr. Hamilton are willing to work to learn "film methods," and Mr. Gunning and Mr. Warren, both advertising and exploitation specialists, an array of ability has been gathered which indicates the importance given to exploitation in the scheme of things with the F. B. Warren Corporation.

Business Revival Spreads Through Country

Rapid Resumption of Business in Some Places Described as "Astounding" by First National

THEATRES all over the country are experiencing an astounding revival of business, according to reports being compiled by the home-office staff of Associated First National Pictures. While the resumption of healthy business conditions is found in practically all sections of the country, as indicated by the reports in the First National headquarters, yet the revival is particularly noticeable in the Middle West, though such Eastern centers as Buffalo are also reporting highly satisfactory business.

Describing the situation in Illinois, the First National report declares:

"For instance, in Bloomington, Ill., a town of 28,000 there is the Majestic theatre, operated by A. G. Schade, seating 1,200. The boom started August 22, when 'Lessons in Love,' an Associated First National attraction starring Constance Talmadge, began a three day run. The attendance records were shot all to pieces by this comedy.

"If there had been any more records to break, 'Peck's Bad Boy,' which was shown from Sept. 5 to 7, would have shattered them. As it was, it had to be content with capacity houses. It was going so strong on the third day, due to lavish newspaper reviews, that it would have been held over but for previous bookings. 'The Girl in the Taxi' went big from Sept. 15 to 17, and two days later they had to haul out the S. R. O. sign again, due to 'Bob Hampton of Placer,' every seat being sold for all performances during the three day engagement.

Are You Filing 'Em?

We advised you last week to file every copy of "Motion Picture News"—hunt up the stray ones—arrange them—count—them—see if any are missing.

Did you do it?

You'll need every copy from now on—need it to do business with—need it so badly you'll be coming to us to replace lost ones.

File 'em!

NOW!

"'Passion' was the feature Sept. 26 to 28, and again they were turned away. While 'The Golden Snare,' which came on Oct. 3 for a three day run, didn't do quite as well, there was no fault found with the box office receipts.

"Practically the same success marked the showing of First National pictures at the Crescent Theatre of Pontiac, Ill., a town of 7,000. The house seats 450 and is managed by Hal Opperman. 'Bob Hampton of Placer' started the fireworks by breaking the attendance records during the showing from Aug. 9 to 11. Capacity houses were the rule during Sept. 5 to 7 when 'Passion' was the attraction, and 'The Gold Snare' repeated the following week. 'Peck's Bad Boy' likewise filled every seat Sept. 27 and 28.

"The Bond Theatre, in the same city, which seats 605, reported a full house during the showing of 'Mother O' Mine' on Sept. 23.

"Capacity houses also greeted the showing at the Blackstone theatre, Dwight, Ill., during September when 'Bob Hampton of Placer,' 'Scrap Iron' and 'Passion' were shown. This theatre seats 463 and is in a town of 2,200. 'Scrap Iron,' incidentally, broke the season attendance record at the Kinema Theatre in Los Angeles.

"'The Sign on the Door,' Norma Talmadge's latest, in particular has been giving the summer slump the grand slam. Herbert H. Johnson, manager of the Luna theatre of Lafayette, Ind., reports that it broke attendance and box office records during its three day run in September. Saxe's Strand in Milwaukee likewise hung up some new records during a six day showing late in August, according to Manager E. J. Weisfeldt, due to the popularity of the star and the strength of the story."

In Buffalo, N. Y., the First National survey shows that neighborhood houses which have been closed all summer have resumed business and that theatre patrons are growing in numbers with the passing of the milder weather. The Shea Amusement Company's new North Park Theatre, it is announced, will run pictures day and date with Shea's Hippodrome downtown. The latter house has been re-decorated at an expense of over $10,000, and an elaborate new stage setting has been installed. Loew's State theatre has just been opened, and the Lafayette Square, which is replacing the old Lyric, will be ready for opening by the first of the year. There are also a number of neighborhood houses under construction in the city and the surrounding towns.

Plans Laid for Transportation of Films in Event of Rail Strike

Traffic-Managers in Key Cities to Supervise Relaying of Shipments

ON the West Coast and in the East plans are being rapidly formulated to install emergency transportation service in case the railroads of the country are tied up by the impending walk-out. Motor-trucks, interurban trolleys, motorcycles, and even aeroplanes are included within the scope of the plans being laid down.

A dispatch from Los Angeles states that the officials at Universal City are negotiating for a fleet of aeroplanes to carry negatives to the Eastern laboratories and to distribute prints to the key-cities.

The shipment of prints, paper, accessories, etc., by relay service between key-cities throughout the country, with traffic managers appointed in each of the key-cities to arrange and execute the details of this inter-city transportation, is in brief the general plan of action recommended for immediate operation by the transportation committee of the National Association in the face of the threatening nation-wide railroad strike. This general plan of action was laid down at a meeting of the transportation committee, held on Tuesday of this week at the National Association's headquarters. The general provisions of this plan are embodied in a bulletin of recommendation issued to the distributing organizations by the committee with the urgent suggestion that the recommendations made be adopted at once and put into immediate operation.

The details of distribution will be worked out at once in each exchange center and arrangements made whereby a traffic manager, chosen by each exchange managers association or F. I. L. M. club, will be responsible not only for shipments in his own territory, but for the relay shipments of film and accessories which pass through his city from New York on their way to more distant points. The national distribution campaign will be directed from the headquarters of the National Association, from which shipments are planned to be routed all the way to the Pacific coast.

Yesterday's meeting was under the auspices of the National Association's Transportation Committee, P. H. Stilson, Chairman, and was called at the suggestion of William A. Brady, president of the association, to lay out necessary plans for the emergency handling of all film transportation wherever railroad service is suspended. Those at the meeting were members of the transportation committee, which embraces representatives of most of the film distributing companies, as well as manufacturers, of lithographs, press books, slides, and other film accessories.

Chairman Stilson, who presided, outlined the situation which confronts the industry in the event of a freight and express tieup and urged the immediate necessity of forming a traffic organization with representatives in every key center to be selected by the exchange managers so that responsibility should be centered in one man in every exchange city. He said that in the New York territory there was no serious menace, owing to existing motor truck services which cover not only nearby points but New Jersey, as well and that an expansion of this service could easily be effected to include Albany, Buffalo, Philadelphia, Boston and other points from which shipments could be relayed to cities further away.

Harry T. Nolan, First National franchise-holder of Denver, told of the manner in which film shipments were effected after the Pueblo disaster when train service was suspended. He said emergency relay stations were established and with the active cooperation of exhibitors in forwarding film by automobile from one town to another, practically all bookings were met.

His advice to the company representatives was to maintain release dates as nearly as possible by getting out shipments with all possible speed—giving preference to far away points. It was disclosed at the meeting that most of the companies are now working far ahead of schedule and are rushing to their exchanges prints and advertising matter of subjects that are not scheduled for release for from one to two months hence. As a result of the meeting the following telegram was sent by the National Association to each exchange managers association and F. I. L. M. club in the United States:

"Our Transportation Committee recommends that you arrange for a meeting of your local managers' organization to appoint a traffic manager to supervise the handling of local and through shipments and relaying through shipments in the event of a strike. Wire the undersigned the name, business and telephone address of traffic manager appointed. We will supply traffic manager with names, addresses and telephones of traffic managers of all other exchange centers. Imperative that traffic manager prepare to utilize all facilities for shipping, including interurban trolley, motor car, motor boat and motorcycle. Mail special delivery shipping facilities and plans adopted. Must have this immediately to enable us to route shipments."

In each exchange center the traffic manager will be asked to hold a meeting with the delivery companies and determine the extent of emergency service that can be secured and to list with the National Association the names, addresses and telephone numbers of all such delivery companies so that a co-ordination may be effected in routing the relay shipments from one city to another.

The following telegrams have been received in response to an inquiry from the National Association:

"Responding to your wire seventeenth we are now shipping film via bus line extending south in Missouri for one hundred miles and are arranging for three other lines to operate in three different directions to principal cities and will require exhibitors to pick up shipment at nearest key town on route and return there to be picked up for us. This will be the rule in the event adequate parcel post arrangements cannot be made and as a last resort. We have good established truck routes out of St. Louis.

"Floyd Lewis, President,
"F. I. L. M. Club of St. Louis."

"In event of strike this territory protected by interurban system carrying express all traction cars hourly. Presume that parcel post service will not be interrupted which will take care of any point interurban does not reach. If embargo placed will use truck service to leading cities and insist that exhibitors relay shipments to points from there.

"C. E. Penrod, President,
"Indianapolis Bd. of Exchange Mgrs."

The headquarters of the National Association will be open day and night during the tieup, if it occurs, and a traffic expert will be constantly on call, it is announced.

Wire Briefs from Coast

IN the hope of adding to the efficiency to the staff at Universal City, Irving Thalberg is planning to open a night school for the teaching of motion picture technique.

Charles Ray and his wife will leave on their first trip to New York on November 15th.

Cyrus J. Williams, who just recently returned to the Coast from New York, will resume production activities in the near future.

The new Wilshire theatre, located at Third and Western Avenue, Los Angeles, opens on October 20th. This house is operated by the West Coast Theatres Company. The initial feature presented is Jackie Coogan in "My Boy."

W. E. Schallenberger is still in Los Angeles. He has made no announcement of his plans during the week.

Chamber of Commerce Preparing for Annual Ball

ANNOUNCEMENT was made this week that the Theatre Owners' Chamber of Commerce would give its second annual ball on Saturday night, December 3rd, 1921, in the Gold Room at the Hotel Astor. The affair last year given in the same hotel was so successful and gave so much pleasure to those who attended that already many requests for reservations have been made, and from present indications the demand for tickets will far exceed the supply.

President William Brandt announced the committees who will have complete charge of the event.

Rental-Tax Repeal Awaits Action by Senate

Finance Committee Votes That 5% Excise Be Revoked; Senate Expected to Concur

THE repeal of the 5% film rental tax is not yet definitely assured. Although the abolition of this war-time excise was advocated by the Senate Finance Committee by a vote of 5 to 4, its repeal must yet be ratified by the Senate as a whole. Officials of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry are redoubling their efforts to insure favorable action when the measure reaches the floor of the Senate for final vote.

Following the repeal vote by the Senate Finance Committee, Jack Connolly, Washington representative of the National Association, came to New York for a conference with President Brady and Chairman Rogers of the taxation committee, both of whom will visit Washington again this week to secure further support for the repeal measure, which will mean a saving of between five and six millions of dollars a year for the motion picture industry.

A large number of Senators have pledged their support to Messrs. Rogers and Brady and will stand staunchly for the proposed repeal if it comes to a fight on the floor of the Senate. Senator Smoot of Utah, who was largely responsible for the result in the Finance Committee, will doubtless champion the cause of the picture industry should serious opposition to the tax repeal develop when the Revenue Bill comes up for passage—which it will during the next few days. Similar support is expected also from Senators Calder of New York, Dillingham of Vermont, LaFollette of Wisconsin, and Sutherland of West Virginia, all of whom voted in the Senate Finance Committee for the abolition of the 5% film rental tax—and from a great number of other senators who have not as yet had the opportunity to record their vote on this question of such vital importance to the picture industry.

The announcement by Senator Penrose, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, that he anticipates the adoption by the Republican majority of all amendments suggested by the Finance Committee, is generally regarded as an extremely hopeful indication for the rental tax repeal in spite of the fact that during the past few days there has developed an apparent hostility on the part of some Republican senators to certain recommendations of the Finance Committee. This was evidenced in the action on Senator Reed's amendment to repeal the tax on telegrams, radio and long distance phone calls which was defeated by a vote of 32 to 26.

All the members of the Senate are being canvassed and acquainted with the full facts justifying the industry's appeal for relief from the burden of excessive taxation. Company executives are urging their Senators by letter and telegram to support the amendment to the Revenue Bill which revokes the 5% sales tax. One of the large distributing companies, at the request of President Brady and Chairman Rogers, has communicated with several hundred big exhibitors in various states requesting that they urge their senators to stand by the industry in its hour of need. Exchange managers and special representatives in many territories have invoked the aid of leading business men in other industries also to join with the picture interests in an appeal for fair play to the motion picture business by removing a discriminatory excise that has been felt not only by producers, distributors and exhibitors, but by the public that patronizes the movies.

Exceptional to Announce Release Plans Soon

ALEXANDER BUYFUSS, president and general manager of Exceptional Pictures Corporation, which is releasing Martin Johnson's "Jungle Adventures," and Charles (Chic) Sale in "His Nibs," announces that contracts for the distribution of these two productions are now being consummated. They will be announced in the next issue of the "Motion Picture News."

Clean Pictures Foremost Demand, Says Woody

Realart Executive Completes Ten Weeks' Tour of Nation; Admissions Not Being Cut, He Says

"THE one thing that struck me most forcibly," said J. S. Woody, general-manager of Realart, who just returned from a ten weeks' tour of the country, "was the definiteness with which the exhibitors spoke regarding their intentions to run nothing but absolutely clean pictures. This sentiment is not sectional; it is universal. I cannot fail to see in this desire to show only clean productions a well-defined campaign on the part of the exhibitors to eliminate censorship by stagnation. In other words, they figure, and rightly, that if pictures contain no censorable qualities there will be no necessity to maintain expensive censor boards.

"That is the practical side of it. But there is another, too, which reflects to the exhibitors' credit. As more than one of them expressed themselves to me, they have no wish to run any pictures in their theatres which will antagonize the local reform influences or possibly offend their patrons. The day of the salacious, suggestive pictures is past; clean, artistic productions are the only ones that can possibly survive. And those that seek to masquerade under the cloak of 'pointing a moral' will have short shrift. Producers will do well to read the handwriting on the wall.

"There is little for me to say regarding the dissolution of the recent depression, as other film executives who have been abroad in the field have accurately reported conditions. No one will even pretend that such a depression did not exist. It did, but happily there has been a steady resumption of normal business with the return of the cooler fall weather. I found the exhibitors as a general rule fairly optimistic and in more than one instance, they have shown me that their theatres are doing a greater volume of business than they did a year ago.

"In some sections, it is true, unemployment has had much to do with sluggish attendance, especially in the manufacturing districts, but everywhere I went factories and mills were reopening, which augers well for the coming season.

"Exhibitors throughout the country show decided evidence of being conversant with the major affairs of the day, especially as they affect the motion picture industry. They keep abreast with legislative matters and through local bodies no doubt exercise considerable influence upon their political representatives. Everywhere I went I heard deprecatory comments regarding the shortsightedness of Congress in its advocacy of a high tariff, but few exhibitors think that it will go through. Exhibitors are getting more and more awake to the fact that they have in their control a powerful medium for the molding of public opinion, the screen, and they will not be loath to use it should the necessity arise in the battle to keep the motion picture industry free and untrammeled by political and notoriety-seeking malcontents.

"Before leaving on my trip I heard some talk of exhibitors reducing their admission prices, but from personal observation I can truthfully say that there is absolutely no foundation for such a rumor, barring an obscure case here and there. The moving picture patrons want a big show for their money but they are willing to pay for it. The day of the nickelodeon is a thing of the past."

Fight Going Forward for Repeal of Censorship in New York State

How Legislators Voted on Act Is Shown; Organized Labor for Repeal

WITH an entire new Assembly to be elected to the New York State Legislature on November 8th, the question of continued censorship for New York becomes an important issue in the Empire State. Realizing that it will be of interest to the trade, and especially to those associated with the industry who are residents of the state, the NEWS publishes below a list of the legislators who voted for or against the Lusk-Clayton censorship measure last April.

That the efforts of the film interests in New York State to secure a repeal of the existing censorship statute are being enthusiastically supported by various branches of the American Federation of Labor, is clearly evidenced in the letters being received by J. W. O'Mahoney, chairman of the Freedom for the Screen Committee of the A. M. P. A. These letters assure the motion-picture industry of the state the full co-operation of such organizations as the American Federation of Musicians, the Actors' Equity Association, the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and Moving Picture Machine Operators of the United States and Canada, and the New York State Federation of Labor.

In addition to the election of the new Assemblymen, two senatorial candidates are to be elected this fall in New York State to take the places of Senators McCue and Mullin, who have resigned. The total vote cast last April on the Lusk-Clayton act consisted of 103 votes in favor and 38 votes against. The following Assemblymen voted in favor of the measure:

Simon L. Adlre, Richester; Paul Bailey, Amityville; Ezra A. Barnes, Oswego; H. A. Bartholomew, Whitehall; Henry Baum, Union Course, L. I.; Andrew T. Beasley, Buffalo; Charles H. Betts, Lyons; George Blakely, Yonkers; James F. Bly, Brooklyn; H. W. Booth, Utica; George Brady, Buffalo; J. Arthur Brooks, Cazenovia; Arthur E. Brundage, Newburgh; E. C. Campbell, Albany; W. W. Wheelock, Leicester; Forman E. Whitcomb, Union; Chauncey J. Williams, Remsen; Daniel P. Witter, Berkshire; Judson S. Wright, Falconer; John R. Yale, Brewster; Herbert A. Zimmerman, Buffalo. ....

Of those voting in the affirmative, all are Republicans with the exception of Mr. Beasley, Mr. Flynn, Mr. McArdle, Mr. McKee, Mr. McLaughlin, Mr. Reilly, Mr. Taylor, who are Democrats.

Since the vote was taken, Mr. Pette has resigned from the Assembly, likewise Mr. Lord.

Mr. Jager was not recorded, having been previously unseated. Mr. Roosevelt was also unrecorded, having previously resigned, while Mr. Peck was unrecorded having died earlier in the session.

The following New York State Assemblymen voted against the motion picture censorship bill:

Benjamin Antin, New York; Bernard Aronson, New York; Maurice Bloch, New York; Harold Blodgett, Schenectady; A. B. Borkowski, Buffalo; Thomas F. Burchill, New York; Thomas F. Cosgrove, West New Brighton; Henry B. Crowley, Rochester; Samuel Dickstein, New York; Mario G. DiPirro, New York; Charles D. Donohue, New York; Francis X. Giaccone, Brooklyn; Frederick L. Hackenburg, New York; Ralph Halpern, Richmond Hill; Peter J. Hamill, New York; Albert H. Henderson, New York; George N. Jesse, New York; John J. Kelly, Brooklyn; Owen M. Kiernan, New York; Peter A. Leininger, Long Island City; Nathan Lieberman, New York; William Lyman, New York; Thomas J. McDonald, New York; John T. Merrigan, Albany; Hugh C. Morrissey, North Troy; Edward J. Neary, East Elmhurst; John J. O'Connor, New York; Samuel Orr, New York; Edward R. Rayher, New York; Michael E. Reiburn, New York; Morris D. Reiss, New York; Bernhard Schwab, Ridgewood; August Seelbach, Buffalo; Charles Solomon, Brooklyn; Joseph Steinberg, New York; Sol Ullman, New York; John J. Wackerman, Brooklyn; and Edward J. Walsh, New York.

Of the above, the Republicans are Messrs. Aronson, Blodgett, Borkowski, Crowley, DiPirro, Giaccone, Halpern, Jesse, Lieberman, Morrissey, Neary, Rayher, Reiss, Seelbach, Steinberg and Ullman; Messrs. Orr and Solomon being Socialists, the others Democrats.

The following New York State Senators voted in favor of motion picture censorship:

D. H. Ames, Franklinville; Caleb H. Baumes, Newburgh; Allen J. Bloomfield, Richfield Springs; George T. Burling, White Plains; Alvah W. Burlingame, Jr., Brooklyn; William W. Campbell, Lockport; William A. Carson, Rushville; Frederick M. Davenport, Clinton; F. E. Draper, Troy; Holland S. Duell, Yonkers; Mortimer Y. Ferris, Ticonderoga; Leonard W. H. Gibbs, Buffalo; Maxwell S. Harris, Brooklyn; Charles J. Hewitt, Locke; Frederick W. Kavanaugh, Waterford; John Knight, Arcade; Charles C. Lockwood, Brooklyn; Seymour Lowman, Elmira; Clayton R. Lusk, Cortland; William E. Martin, Buffalo; John B. Mullan, Rochester; Fred B. Pitcher, Watertown; George M. Reischmann, Brooklyn; William T. Simpson, Brooklyn; Parton Swift, Buffalo; W. T. Thayer, Chateaugay; George L. Thompson, Kings Park; Ward V. Tolbert, New York; James E. Towner, Towners; and Charles W. Walton, Kingston.

All of the above are Republicans. Since the vote was taken, Senator Mullan, of Rochester, has resigned and his successor will be elected this fall.

The following voted against the censorship bill:

John J. Boylan, New York; Salvatore A. Cotillo, New York; Bernard Downing, New York; William Duggan, New York; John J. Dunnigan, New York; Daniel F. Farrell, Brooklyn; George R. Fearson, Syracuse; John L. Karle, Glendale; Abraham L. Katlin, Brooklyn; Martin G. McCue, New York; Peter J. McGarry, Long Island City; Schuyler M. Myer, New York; Theodore Douglas Robinson, Mohawk; Edmund Seidel, New York; Nathan Straus, Jr., New York; Jeremiah F. Toomey, Brooklyn; James J. Walker, New York; James L. Whitley, Rochester, and Frank L. Wiswall, Watervliet.

Of the above, Messrs. Boylan, Cotillo, Downing, Dunnigan, McCue, McGarry, Straus, Twomey and Walker are Democrats, the others being Republicans with the exception of Mr. Seidel, who is a Socialist. Mr. McCue has resigned and his successor will be elected on Nov. 8.

As evidence of the support that organized labor is giving the movement to secure the repeal of censorship in New York State, Chairman J. W. O'Mahoney of the Freedom for the Screen Committee submitted copies of the letters that he has received from the various labor organizations affiliated with the A. F. L. In a letter to the New York State branch of the American Federation of Musicians, the parent organization advises:

"Your local is hereby urgently requested to get in touch with the candidates for Assembly of the Democratic and Republican parties in your District and ascertain their opinions on the repeal of the Motion Picture censorship law. I suggest that you address these candidates by written communication and, in addition thereto, have a committee from your union wait upon them for the purpose of advising them that the Motion Picture Censorship law is most unfair to the industry and in its last analysis is an attack on the rights of the people—therefore, should be repealed at the next session of the Legislature. The police powers of the state and municipalities are entirely sufficient to control or forestall the exhibiting of morally objectionable pictures and should not be superceded by moving picture censorship boards, which represent a guardianship over the opinion and rights of the people which should not be lodged in any committee or board, as the exercising of such guardianship as to what the people should be permitted to enjoy as a matter of recreation or education is contrary to the principles of our country."

Replying to Peter J. Brady of the New York State Federation of Labor, Frank Gillmore of the Actors' Equity says concerning the anti-censorship movement: "Let me know your further plans on this subject so that the Actors' Equity Association can render full assistance."

The organized stage employees and operators of New York State are advised officially by the national parent body:

"At the last session of the Legislature there was enacted into law the Motion Picture Censorship bill, which is estimated will cost the motion picture industry over two and one half million dollars, thereby compelling the producers and exhibitors to resort to every possible economy by reducing the number of employees in the studios, the laboratories, and in the picture houses; that is, musicians, operators or assistants, etc."

The members are then directed to communicate with their legislative representatives at Albany at once, pointing out the unfairness of legalized censorship and urging its repeal at the next legislative session.

Hepworth, Noted British Producer, Here

Cecil Hepworth, noted veteran British producer, and Alma Taylor, popular Hepworth star, who are visitors to this country to study local film conditions

CECIL HEPWORTH, the well known British producer, and Alma Taylor, the popular Hepworth star, are in this country on a two months' tour of study and investigation of American studio and film conditions. From New York they will go to Canada, thence to Los Angeles and back to New York. Asked if he wished to make any statement at this time, Mr. Hepworth said that it was his intention to produce for a broader market and that this was largely the purpose of his trip. He will have something more definite to say upon his return to New York. There is considerable variance at present, said Mr. Hepworth, in many minor details of technique between the British and American studios. In a general way, he believes the time has come for a marked progress within studios and laboratories. He also believes that the hit or miss methods of production and distribution must be greatly improved; that things in general from an art and business standpoint must get down to a sounder, more scientific and economic basis.

In a casual conversation among many interesting things said by Mr. Hepworth were these: That Charles Chaplin is destined to become one of the greatest, if not the greatest, producer of pictures; that the day of the independent distributor is at hand—meaning that there must be a clear-cut division between a producer, distributor and exhibitor of pictures; that the heart appeal or emotional picture is wanted by the general public above all other considerations.

Mr. Hepworth's questions and answers shows already a keen insight into and knowledge of American pictures and the American market.

Paramount Club Entertained by Zukor

Three hundred members of the Paramount Club, comprising a large percentage of the Paramount home office employees, were the guests of Adolph Zukor at an all-day outing held Saturday at his country estate, Mountain View Farm, at New City, N. Y. Eleven sight-seeing buses were specially engaged to transport the party, leaving the office at 485 Fifth Avenue at nine o'clock. Each bus was decorated with banners and the crowd attracted much attention.

Sunday-Opening Victory in Chillicothe, Mo.

Exhibitor Repeatedly Arrested at Last Wins Fight; Rome, N. Y., to Vote on Sunday-Opening

A CLEAN-CUT victory for Sunday openings was won last week in Chillicothe, Mo., when the city council passed an ordinance legalizing motion-picture showings on Sunday. The passage of the ordinance was the climax to a long fight which has been waged since the middle of July by W. P. Cuff, a local exhibitor. Word from Rome, N. Y., says that the voters of that city are to be given an opportunity at the elections on November 8th to decide whether or not motion-picture shows will be given in that city on Sundays.

The victory for Sunday opening in Chillicothe, Mo., is regarded as a certain assurance of similar steps being taken in all cities and towns throughout the state where the blue-law restriction is enforced. Both the national exhibitor organization, the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, and the state body, took active parts in the fight in Chillothe though the major role has been played throughout by Mr. Cuff, who is an executive officer of the M. P. T. O. of Missouri and owner of the Strand and the Empire theatres in Chillicothe.

Upon advice of the M. P. T. O. M. Mr. Cuff began showing pictures on Sunday, July 23. On each succeeding Monday he was been arrested and arraigned in police court and tried for violation of the city amusement ordinance, an antique relic.

Did You File 'Em!

If you haven't already built a place—or found a corner—or got some way to file in order, every copy of "Motion Picture News," you'll—well, you'll be lost.

Watch for the answer in next week's issue.

But—it's not too late—have you already filed your copies?

Mr. Cuff was fined $100 at the trial of the first case, and immediately appealed. On the trial of the second case, the jury found him not guilty, and the remaining trials since that time have resulted in "hung" juries.

Then came the victory. Public opinion became so strongly opposed to the radical element, which had drawn the city attorney within its web, that the city council was virtually forced to pass an ordinance last week legalizing motion picture shows on Sunday. The ordinance makes the additional provision that all prosecutions now pending in any court for the alleged violation of the repealed section of the amusement ordinance are forever barred and that the city attorney shall dismiss such prosecutions.

Following Mr. Cuff's second arrest, a series of ads entitled "Fair Play" were started. The newspapers followed the developments closely, and each time Cuff was arrested front-page articles appeared. In addition, other exhibitors in the state circulated thousands of pamphlets, "The Case Against the Blue Laws," which were secured from the national headquarters of the M. P. T. O. of A.

Exhibitors in scores of other Missouri towns see a "handwriting on the wall" in the victory of Mr. Cuff. Lawrence E. Goldman, counsel of the M. P. T. O. M., is preparing a Sunday opening campaign for Kirksville, Mo., where until recently theatres were permitted to operate on Sunday, but since have been notified that the blue ordinance of that city will be enforced if Sunday shows are continued.

Following is a copy of the Chillicothe ordinance, the technical portion of which scores of Missouri exhibitors expect to have put in force in their various localities in the near future:

"Section 1. That Section 388 of Chapter XIV of the Revised Ordinances of Chillicothe, Missouri, 1915, entitled 'Misdemeanors' be and the same is hereby repealed and the following new section in lieu thereof to be known as Section 388 regulating Sunday shows:

"Section 388—Sunday Shows. No person, firm or corporation shall within the corporate limits of Chillicothe, Missouri, give any public entertainment, theatrical or other exhibition whatever on the first day of the week, commonly called Sunday, and any person so offending shall be denounced guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined not less than one hundred dollars nor more than two hundred dollars for each and every offense: PROVIDED, that nothing contained shall be construed to apply to chautauquas, lectures, church or school entertainments, agricultural or industrial expositions or moving picture exhibitions; and, PROVIDED FURTHER, that all prosecutions now pending in any court for alleged violations of said repealed Section 388 are by this ordinance forever barred, and the city attorney is hereby instructed to dismiss said prosecutions.

"Section 2. This ordinance shall be in force from and after its passage, approval and publication."

M. P. T. O. of A. Accuses First National

Complaints Stated to Have Been Received from State Units to Form Basis of Investigation

DECLARING that numerous requests have been received from members of the organization, the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America on Oct. 19 issued a statement to the effect that all allegations made against First National Pictures were to be thoroughly gone into.

The statement in part reads:

"In addition to the demands of several state units affiliated with our National Organization, numerous complaints of members of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America who are subfranchise holders in Associated First National Pictures, Inc., have been received, requesting a thorough investigation of the present management of that company's affairs.

"Despite the attempts that have been made to prevent such an investigation, the complaints are of such a serious and specific nature, and in most instances, affecting the investments of exhibitors, that no effort can be or will be spared by this organization in the protection of its individual members.

"Selected delegates of Associated First National Pictures will meet in the City of Chicago in the very near future for a 'Get-Together' meeting. It is sincerely hoped that an immediate reduction of the exorbitant exhibition values which have been arbitrarily placed by the management of that company on productions which they control, will be made."

The statement then goes into alleged promises of J. D. Williams, General Manager of First National,, that no more than a ten per cent dividend would be declared at any time, excess profits to be devoted toward buying pictures for the free use of subfranchise holders, and queries as to the whereabouts of the excess profits or free pictures.

High rentals impressed by First National, with "Passion" cited specifically as having cost $30,000, and marketed on a $600,000 basis, are discussed in the M. P. T. O. A. statement, as well as the allegation that territorial franchise holders had violated solemn pledges as to not building or buying additional theatres.

The fact that some pictures are not delivered to subfranchise holders in alleged violation of contractural obligations; that subfranchise men have been compelled to play a greater number of pictures than originally agreed on, are cited as other bases of complaint.

Vigorous exception is taken to H. O. Swalbe's letter defending General Manager Williams' stand in refusing to cooperate with the M. P. T. O. A. in investigation of his company.

Universal Sales Conference in Chicago

H. M. Berman, general manager of exchanges, and Art Schmidt, general sales manager of short products, of Universal, held an important sales conference in Chicago this week. The two sales heads left New York last Saturday for the Windy City, after having summoned the Universal exchange managers for the Mississippi valley and as far west as Denver.

It is expected the conference will be confined to Universal's two new big Universal-Jewel pictures, "The Fox" with Harry Carey, and "Conflict," Priscilla Dean's latest feature. "Winners of the West," Universal's thrills - from - history serials, also will be diagnosed and plans discussed for more like it.

Neilsen Sails for Europe for Paramount

Carl Neilsen, a member of the sales staff of the foreign department of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, sailed for Copenhagen, Denmark, on October 7th, on a special mission for the foreign department. He will spend several weeks in Denmark, Sweden and Norway assisting Ingvald C. Oes, manager of the Scandinavian Paramount organization, in his sales campaign for Paramount pictures, according to an announcement by E. E. Shauer, director of the foreign department.

Stork Pays Visit to Home of Henry E. Wilkinson

A new movie luminary arrived in our midst this week when Mrs. Henry E. Wilkinson presented her husband with a little baby girl. October 17th was the gala day at the Wilkinson home in Larchmont and according to an unbiased statement from the proud father, who is general sales manager of the Arthur S. Kane Pictures Corporation, the newest film luminary is a howling success. Mrs. Wilkinson, the baby, and "Hank" himself are all doing splendidly.

"Needed—100% Unity"

Referring specifically to articles in the Dearborn Independent of Chicago and generally to articles in other papers, which through their tenor on the Arbuckle case make serious reflections on the industry, B. P. McCormick, owner of the Liberty theatre, Florence, Colo., calls for a national organization which will take up the cudgels of the industry. His letter follows:

"I am inclosing herewith articles from the Dearborn Independent of Chicago, October 8th issue. Publicity of this character is of grave concern to the entire industry and I feel that you should call the attention of each trade paper to this article and any others of a like nature that you should come across.

"All of us know that Arbuckle is not guilty of any worse offense that hundreds of others have been in all other walks of life, not even the ministry is excepted, as I have a report in today's paper of the charge against one J. A. Spencer, clergyman of Lake Port, Cal., who deliberately murdered his wife (it is charged) that he might be free to live with another woman.

"Nevertheless this Arbuckle affair has cost me personally the loss of patronage and I am sure that all the industry has suffered in the same proportion.

"I think this is a good example of the real need for national organization, for if today we were 100 per cent organized, we could direct our officers to show the newspaper industry our hand and tell them to lay off or lose our advertising indefinitely. We might possibly have to use other language for legal reasons, but we could show them and they would think twice before they would lose this advertising revenue. In so doing we would not be trying to shield any one guilty of crimes; our only motive would be that of protecting our industry against slander and false charges.

"The need for co-operation and organization has never been greater than it is today. Our need for clean pictures has never been more urgent than now, because the reform squads are on the warpath and the producer that turns out a questionable film or the exhibitor that dares to show one should be branded a traitor and driven from the industry."

Mendelssohn Heads Philadelphia Exchange Men

At the annual election of officers of the Exchange Men's Association of Philadelphia, held recently in that city, Felix Mendelssohn, branch manager for Goldwyn Pictures, was elected president, succeeding Bob Lynch of Metro.

Ralph Winsor Now Manager of Superba in "Los"

Ralph Winsor, for several years managing-director of the Star theatre, Portland, Ore., has resigned his position to accept the management of the Superba theatre, Los Angeles. Mr. Winsor began his new duties last week, playing "Go Straight" as the multiple-reel picture and building up a well-balanced program in addition to the feature.

Law Suit Rises Over "Old Time Music Show" Idea

The Edwards Amusement Company 5803 Utica Ave., Cleveland, has filed sui against Jules and J. J. Allen, for an in fringement on "The Old Time Movi Show," which Mr. Edwards claims he ha covered with copyrights in America, Eng land and Canada.

"The Old Time Movie Show" is a old Mary Pickford reel made when mo tion pictures were in their infancy. Mr Edwards claims that it was his idea t revive one of these old films, to make ol time slides and put it on as it was orig inally produced in the nickelodeons. H claims that not only has he the reel an the slides copyrighted, but also the man ner of presenting the novelty.

The first week in September, Allen' Capitol theatre, Cleveland, presented wha Manager Rosenthal called "A Movie o Long Ago."

Kansas Theatre to Have "Exhibitors' Day"

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners o Kansas has declared that November 2n and 3rd is to be "Exhibitors' Day." Fift per cent of the profits on those days are t the exhibitor organization. The week o October 24th has been designated as "Pe Week," and party offices and the executiv committee together with Attorney Genera Hopkins will tour the state during thi week in the interest of "Exhibitors' Day.

Dearth of New Incorporations in New York

THERE continues to be a slump in the number of firms incorporating in New York State, and entering the motion picture business.. During the past week there have been but five and all told these represented a capitalization which amounted to only $300,000, this sum, including one company which has a capitalization of $250,000. The companies, with their directors and the amount of capitalization in each instance, follow:

The Every-Day-Life Film Company, $25,000; Robert Parker, Thomas Nedd, William Johnson, New York. Iden, Payne & Lavarack, Inc., $20,000; E. Kraychie, A. J. Johnston, A. M. Knoedler, New York; Ogden Amusement Corporation, $250,000; Emanuel Glick, Max Berger, New York; Hyman Harper, Brooklyn. Webster Pictures, Inc., $5,000. Charles P. Gilmore, George Roberts, Oswego; Albert N. Webster, Syracuse. National Exhibitors' Service, $500; Oscar A. Price, Washington; Harry S. Laskin, Philadelphia; George B. Clifton, Scarsdale.

The Trade Paper vs. the Press Sheet

By Wm. M. Strong of Rialto and Emery Theatres, Providence, R. I.

TO what uses can a press agent put the MOTION PICTURE NEWS?

In this magazine, as in some one or two others, lie untold treasures for the press agent who wants to put over his show to the best advantage and doll his advertising up so that newspaper readers will ask "Who does the advertising for such-and-such a house?"

"Necessity is the mother of invention" was evolved by some guy who was perhaps once placed in the same predicament a press agent is, who is forced to confine his advertising campaigns to press sheets furnished by men who have graduated from the newspaper class to high salaried jobs, and many of whom "ought to know better." It was months after handling the press work for the Rialto and Emery in Providence, that I formed the definite opinion that every picture I handled for the houses was "The Greatest Picture of the Year, or the Greatest screen success Miss Stickfurd ever dared essay a role in," and other like superlative expressions. And it was such characterizations that drove me into the motion picture magazines for real dope on the pictures. I ransacked my files and discovered not only criticisms and advance reading dope, but designs in the advertising sections that I could use in my displays. I discovered that "all was not gold that glittered." I found that somebody had been telling some "awful lies." Then I started my clipping bureau. I must do something to offset the inconsistencies I found in the press sheets. One can't go on day in and day out and class a picture as the greatest thing ever concocted by mortal man, without getting himself in bad. But he can read up all sides of the picture, and then arrange his campaign so that he has perhaps conveyed the idea he has got the greatest thing that ever happened, but the press agent hasn't said so. That is to say—An advertisement may be arranged attractively, readers may be told in such an interesting vein that the proper atmosphere is created for the exploitation of a picture, without the press agent misrepresenting it.

One may find by reading the magazines that the trade writers are not fearful about calling a spade a spade. This I find to be true when looking over the criticisms. In one section we may find stories that say such-and-such a picture is rotten, in another section we find descriptions of what it is, while still in another section there are well conceived advertisements for the benefit of the exhibitor. There are also found designs in lettering and the like, which are most delightful to the eye.

Now then, establishing the fact that the magazines devoted to the trade carry these ideas, I get down to the brass tacks of how to use them. Taking as an illustration a prominent feature the press sheet from which I would have been unable to have conducted successfully a six weeks' campaign, I clipped everything from the trade papers I could find upon it—advertising, reviews, stories, and the like. These were indexed as I found them, with the result that as soon as announcement was made that the picture was going to be shown I was prepared. I used the official press sheet to open the first week, and then threw it away. I found my clipping bureau of inestimable value to me.

You will note that press sheets have advance stories, day of opening, reviews and the like. You will note that the authors say "Clip these ready written notices out and hand them to your editor. You will probably tickle him to death or something of the sort, with this finely prepared material." Speaking from 20 years of practical experience on newspapers, I have never yet seen an editor tickled to death with such material handed him. On the other hand I should say that his wrath at such damfoolishness had been bitterly aroused. It means lots of work to the editor, because he has got to use his blue pencil, and when he gets through with the "stuff" there is nothing left but a bare announcement. These men want all superlatives cut out. You publicity directors may say you have the greatest picture ever produced, but the editor says "That's what they all say."

I have read many of the Metropolitan papers, and find that most of them eliminate all the bull, and when a profuse bull writer turns in his yarn, he wonders why he doesn't get better notices. I believe in telling the patrons of my houses what we are going to have before it hits town so far as is possible. If one was to buy a suit of clothes he wouldn't buy it "sight unseen." The critical motion picture patron to-day feels the same way about pictures. And—some press sheets don't give you an idea even of what it's all about. Readers can be fixed up from your clipping bureau, so that by the time your newspaper readers have read your story, they know just what you have got, and, presented in a proper manner, you won't have much trouble about bringing the patrons into your house. Press sheets are all O. K. so far as they go, but they fall a long way off from the home plate. The clipping bureau, I find is the good old three-bagger that wins the game in the long run.

"Camille" with Nazimova Opens on Broadway

A MODERNIZED screen version of "Camille," with Nazimova in the title role, opened on Sunday, October 16th, at the Rivoli, New York City. The picture is booked for a two weeks' showing at the Broadway house. Reports from the Metro offices declare that the attendance at the Rivoli for the past week demonstrates that this production is "undoubtedly the most distinctive production" of the Russian star.

The press comments appearing in the New York dailies during the week have been unusually favorable, both Nazimova and her leading man, Rudolph Valentino, winning high praise for their acting. The photography and artistic quality of the settings have also attracted much favorable atttention.

New York Commission to Open Albany Office

November 1st will mark the opening of the Albany office of the New York State Motion Picture Commission. This will really be the headquarters of the commission.

It will have its offices in the State Capital Building.

Ansel W. Brown, of Pulaski, N. Y., will be in charge at a salary of $3,000 per year.

Ayer & Son Will Handle R-C Advertising

AN occurrence of more than usual interest to the motion picture industry is the announcement by R. S. Cole, president of the R-C Pictures Corporation of the selection of N. W. Ayer & Son as their advertising counsel. R-C Pictures have gone as high as they could in their choice. Their decision to place their whole account in the hands of the largest and oldest advertising agency in the country is in accord with policies that are operating towards bringing the R-C Pictures Corporation to the forefront of progressive American moving picture producers. For fifty-two years N. W. Ayer & Son has been directing the advertising of the country's greatest industries and service organizations.

It is announced that there will be no break in the schedule of advertising that has been running in the national and regional trade papers. As has been the rule heretofore, this series will remain black and white in their composition.

NEWSY BRIEFS FROM CENTRAL FILM BELT

Chicago and the Mid-West

L. H. MASON, REPRESENTATIVE, 910 S. MICHIGAN AVE.

Reelcraft's Chicago exchange has secured the rights for "The Adventures of Tarzan," the Numa Picture Corporation's serial, featuring Elmo Lincoln, for the states of Illinois, Wisconsin and Indiana. Manager Harthill is enthusiastic over both the serial and the paper which goes with it, and believes it will be one of the hits of the season.

Salesmanager E. J. Eichenlaub, of Associated First National, is back from a two weeks' tour of Illinois and reports exhibitors' business is showing a steady gain in all parts of the state, and that show men are confident that the winter will prove a profitable one. C. H. Stewart, who was connected with Pathe's St. Louis Exchange for four and one-half years, has been added to Mr. Eichenlaub's staff of salesmen and will cover Southern Illinois for First National.

The National theatre, of Ladd, Illinois, was recently destroyed by fire and John Pini, the owner, has already made plans for building a new house to replace it. The National was a three hundred seat theatre and one of the best and most attractive of the smaller houses in the state.

The Rock River Conference of the Methodist Church, at their annual session held in Chicago last week, endorsed the report of the committee on public policy, the first section of which praised the movies as a great recreational and educational factor, but urged that a new conscience should be developed in the industry. The resolutions also declared it was the state's right and duty to censor motion pictures.

Moving picture stars are popular with the patrons of Jones, Linick & Schaefer's houses and personal appearances have proved such good business getters that Aaron Jones has arranged for the appearance of some more screen personalities at the McVickers and Rialto theatres, following the engagements of Ben Turpin, Lillian Walker, Lew Cody and Ben Alexander. Baby Marie Osborne is appearing at the Rialto this week and Ruth Stonehouse. well known to Chicagoans, principally through her connection with Essanay, will top the variety bills at the two Jones, Linick & Schaefer houses in the near future. George Walsh also is booked to appear at these houses early in November.

Watterson R. Rothacker has returned to his Chicago headquarters after two weeks in the east and is scheduled to leave the latter part of October for the coast where he will visit the new Aller-Rothacker Studios. Rothacker's Chicago laboratory continues to be a center of interest for visiting film celebrities, among those having called at the plant within the past few days being Anita Stewart, Rudy Cameron and Carter De Haven, en route back to the coast.

The merger of the Fulco Sales Company and S. E. Schaffer & Company has been consummated within the last week, and the combined firm is operating under the name of the Fulco-Schaffer Sales Company. The officers of the new concern are Carl Fulton, president; Sam Schaffer, vice-president; J. Jarmin, secretary-treasurer, and R. H. Fulton, general manager. The Fulco-Schaffer Sales Co. will occupy the sales rooms and projection rooms formerly the headquarters of the S. E. Schaffer Company, at 24 E. Eighth Street. It is the intention of Messrs. Fulton and Schaffer to open an office in St. Louis at an early date, and representation in Indianapolis already has been taken over by the Indianapolis Calcium Light Company. Besides handling the Power's Projectors in this territory, the firm will handle the G-E Fort Wayne Generator sets, the Velvet Gold Fibre Screen and a complete line of supplies. Carl Fulton and R. H. Fulton, his brother, will continue their active connection with the E. E. Fulton Company, which, however, is in no way connected with the Fulco-Schaffer Sales Company. The popularity and wide acquaintance among film men of the officers of the Fulco-Schaffer Sales Company would seem to assure a prosperous business in this territory.

Manager Seery, of First National, spent last week in New York in conference with the officials of Associated First National's home office. The First National Chicago exchange has just purchased "Burn 'Em Up Barnes" for Illinois, and the picture is reported going over strong with exhibitors.

Fire Prevention Week is being observed in practically all Chicago motion picture theatres, which are running the films furnished by the Chicago Safety Council. The trailers show accidents and methods of preventing them, as well as fire hazards and fire prevention devices.

Pat Campbell, well-known publicity man, has arrived from New York to handle the exploitation and publicity on United Artists' productions, and will make his headquarters at the Chicago exchange of this organization.

Universal's District Manager H. Stern is back at his desk in the Chicago headquarters after a trip to Oklahoma City, St. Louis, Kansas City, and other western points. He reports business is on the increase and that exhibitors are showing a more optimistic feeling.

Roderick Ross, who has been vacationing for some time at his summer home in Ludington, Michigan, has returned to Chicago and it is rumored may again take an active part in the film industry.

Gus Cook, of the Crystal theatre, Dundee, Illinois, is planning to leave for a two months' trip to Alaska about October 15th.

The New Home theatre, at Rantoul, will be opened within the next week, according to Manager Walter Codington, of that house.

W. D. Burford and John Silha, who have returned from Jackson, Michigan, where they attended the meeting of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Michigan, report the convention was highly successful and that Michigan has an organization which for efficiency and enthusiasm would be hard to beat.

W. D. Russell and Bernie Russell are in New York this week stopping at the Astor. They took Russell's Production's new seven-reel feature, "Shadows of Conscience," east with them and while in New York will give a showing of this excellent picture to the trade.

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Chicago have arranged for the distribution of license certificates showing exhibitors have the right to collect ticket tax, to Chicago members of that organization, who may receive same by calling at the offices of the association, room 207, 910 S. Michigan avenue.

Department heads and salesmen of Chicago's Famous Players-Lasky Exchange tendered a farewell dinner to Milton Kusell at the Sherman Hotel, Friday night. Mr. Kusell has been called to the New York office of Paramount, after having been connected with the Chicago exchange for the past four years. Otto Bolle has been named salesmanager to succeed Mr. Kusell and Neal Agnew becomes assistant salesmanager. Billy Wendell, widely known to local exhibitors as city booker, has been promoted to the Paramount sales force and will cover country territory hitherto looked after by Joe Wolf, who is appointed city salesman to take place of Ralph Bradford, whose resignation was announced in this column last week.

Fitzpatrick & McElroy, Kinema and Empire, are now located at 808½ S. Wabash avenue, sharing quarters with Irving Mack, the hustling publicity and exploitation expert.

Howard Kingsmore has been appointed exploitation representative of Paramount with headquarters at Milwaukee. Mr. Kingsmore comes from New York where he has had newspaper experience, which will be of great value to him in his new position.

Ad Powell and Hermie Applebaum are now operating the Bell theatre on Milwaukee avenue.

Griever Productions has secured the distribution for Illinois and Indiana of the entire Clark-Cornelius Corporation output. "The Eternal Two," starring Corliss Palmer, will be the first releases and will be followed by a number of important features which range in type from westerns to society drama.

Chicago Musical Service Prospering

THE Chicago Musical Service Bureau, a concern that specializes in furnishing competent organists and pianists for motion picture theatre work, recently was organized in Chicago, and already is meeting with great success, filling as it does a valuable place in the industry as the demand for skilled musicians of this class is constantly growing.

C. B. Ball, for many years head of The Rudolph Wurlitzer Company's educational department, which has trained and supplied hundreds of musicians to theatres, is behind the Musical Service Bureau and his son, C. J. Ball, is manager.

The Chicago Musical Service Bureau makes no charge to theatre men for furnishing them with the best musical talent to properly accompany the pictures, excepting the usual cost of telegraming, long distance phone calls, or postage, and now has a list of experienced organists and pianists on hand. The Bureau is now installed in its new offices at 20 E. Jackson Boulevard.

EXHIBITORS' REPORTS ON NEW RELEASES

What the Big Houses Say

EARLY RETURNS FROM WEEK RUN THEATERS

FAMOUS PLAYERS

The Hell Diggers—

A mighty good Reid picture. Pleased everybody. (East.)

As usual, Wally Reid is a sure drawing card. This picture was well liked and it drew capacity houses for week. (Middle West.)

Experience—

Business good, but not as much as the picture deserved. Barthelmess fans rallied nobly to their favorite. (Middle West.)

Poor direction; public expected a better story. Fair business. (Middle West.)

Cappy Ricks—

Knockout of a picture. Meighan an appealing drawing card in the story. (Middle West.)

Business fair. Meighan and picture good. (East.)

After the Show—

Just an average program picture. Patrons failed to enthus over this one. (East.)

Fairly good picture. Business about ordinary. (West.)

The Affairs of Anatol—

This sure did go over big. Patrons thoroughly enjoyed the show and spoke to that effect. (West.)

Played to good audiences second week. Worth looking at once. (Middle West.)

Passing Thru—

Business bad. Picture fair. (East.)

Beyond—

Picture and business only fair. (East.)

What's Worth While—

Good average picture. No criticism to make and heard none. Seemed to please very well. (South.)

What Every Woman Knows—

Good average picture and business, with weather very favorable in every respect. (South.)

White and Unmarried—

Got along fairly well and no particular objection, though picture only about good average. Business was pretty fair. Not much comment heard either one way or the other. (South.)

GOLDWYN

Dangerous Curve Ahead—

Excellent picture which did good business for week. (Middle West.)

Very good picture. Business splendid. (East.)

Not as good as "The Old Nest," but above the average. Played to capacity houses throughout the week. (Middle West.)

Now on its second week and still going good. A money-maker. (Middle West.)

From an entertainment standpoint, one of the best pictures of the year. (Middle West.)

The Old Nest—

Splendid picture. Comment very favorable and business unusually good. Appeal is universal. (South.)

Wonderful picture. Crowds surged into my house every day. Heavy box office receipts. (West.)

Wet Gold—

Tolerably good picture. Seemed to please right well and no unfavorable criticism was heard. Turn in the weather within the past two weeks helped business much. (South.)

FOX

Over the Hill—

Tremendous business. Picture splendid. (East.)

This feature went over splendidly. Is now on second week of run. (West.)

Going over big for the third week in one of the smaller downtown theatres, with expectations for at least an eight-week run. (East.)

One of the greatest pictures ever made. (Middle West.)

Connecticut Yankee at King Arthur's Court—

In spite of second run, went over for a week at capacity. Audience greatly amused. (East.)

Perjury—

Strong picture. Good box office attraction. (Middle West.)

The Primal Law—

Full of pep and punch. Good drawing card. (Middle West.)

Skirts—

Went over very big. Played it all week with jazz band. Hokum goes fine occasionally. (Middle West.)

METRO

Big Game—

May Allison is not going over as good as she used to in this theatre. The picture was a good program picture, nothing more. (East.)

Fine Feathers—

Ordinary picture. Poor business. (Middle West.)

Camille—

Well acted, coherent picture, which seemed to please. Good box office value. (Middle West.)

The Infamous Miss Revel—

An ordinary picture with the usual business. (Middle West.)

Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse—

This production is second to none. Had great business with it. (Middle West.)

First rate on second week of run. A sure-fire box office attraction. (East.)

Garments of Truth—

Very poor picture. Receipts not at all good. (East.)

The Conquering Power—

Fine picture but fails to do a big business. (Middle West.)

UNITED ARTISTS

The Three Musketeers—

Great picture but did not jam them in as expected. Holding over for second week as business was better toward end of week. Many are confused by resemblance to "A Modern Musketeer." (Middle West.)

Average business, which is good, considering this is our third consecutive week. Everybody likes the show. Not everybody likes Fairbanks in the role of D'Artagnan. But the show is big enough to please all, so business keeps up. (Middle West.)

One of the world's greatest pictures. Broke all house records. (Middle West.)

Second week to good business and satisfied audiences. (West.)

Disraeli—

Wonderful picture. Business wonderful, due in part to personal appearance of Ben Turpin, but audience largely composed of people interested in screen presentation of a big stage success featuring an established star. (Middle West.)

Excellent—receipts average. (East.)

Way Down East—

Played here at 44 cents, following a three weeks' run this summer at regular prices. Broke all house records last week, playing to 47,711 paid admissions, and has been held for another week. (Middle West.)

FIRST NATIONAL

The Cup of Life—

A first class picture which drew packed houses. Has been held for a second week. (Middle West.)

Good picture. Had good business on first day, then terrible slump. (East.)

A fine picture which pleased my patrons and brought good business. (West.)

The Invisible Fear—

Played in conjunction with "The Fall Guy," Larry Semon comedy, and the program did a good business all week. (Middle West.)

Went across in nice manner. Receipts about par. (East.)

Have had better Anita Stewart pictures. Did fair business, allowing for street car situation. (Middle West.)

Woman's Place—

Great business . Star very popular at this theatre. Exploitation stunt of parade for votes for Constance Talmadge. (Middle West.)

Ordinary—but Connie's personality put it over. Business good, but picture nothing to get excited over. (Middle West.)

Considered one of the best pictures Constance Talmadge has been in. Business very satisfactory. (Middle West.)

Mother O' Mine—

The title, especially, appealed to patrons and the picture drew a good attendance in a week's run. (Middle West.)

A splendid production. Pleased our audience immensely. Good business. (East.)

Foolish Matrons—

Didn't go so good after first day, although pleased audience. (East.)

Fairly good picture with a rather weak plot. Average business. (Middle West.)

The Midnight Bell—

Believe this is one of Charles Ray's best pictures. Did excellent business for week. (Middle West.)

Although I consider this a fair picture, we had poor business as Ray does not have a large following here. (South.)

One Arabian Night—

One of the best films seen here this year. Settings beautiful and acting above the average. Drew big houses. (Middle West.)

Playthings of Destiny—

The best plot that Anita Stewart has had for some time, but not particularly good at that. Average box office attraction. (Middle West.)

The Idle Class—

My patrons were greatly entertained with this picture, and I had good business on it. (West.)

Everybody liked it. Fine business. (Middle West.)

Wedding Bells—

Very good picture, indeed. One of the best lately; plot interesting, acting good. Comment favorable and cashier kept busy. (South.)

Nineteen and Phyllis —

Picture and business only fair. (East.)

The Scoffer—

Picture and business both poor. (East.)

The Woman in His House—

Business mediocre. Picture fair. (East.)

Scrambled Wives—

Fair business. Picture pleasing. (East.)

Jim, the Penman—

Business fair. Good picture. (East.)

The Sky Pilot—

A good clean story which attracted excellent business. (East.)

Sowing the Wind—

Splendid picture which did good business for week. (Middle West.)

UNIVERSAL

High Heels—

An average picture that is doing just an average business. (Middle West.)

No Woman Knows—

Excellent picture but which failed to pull at box office. Business just fair for week. (Middle West.)

Moonlight Follies—

Fair entertainment in this picture with usual business. (West.)

ROBERTSON-COLE

When Lights Are Low—

Very good. Picture holds up well, and business was good. (Middle West.)

Salvage—

Good starring vehicle for Pauline Frederick. Did ordinary business. (Middle West.)

The Sting of the Lash—

Picture not one of her best. Business good. (East.)

REALART

The Outside Woman—

A good attendance for the week, due largely to a live comedy, "The Idle Class," on same bill. (Middle West.)

Her Sturdy Oak—

Not at all pleasing, either as regards receipts or attendance. (East.)

Two Weeks With Pay—

Bebe Daniels has large following among our fans, and this pleased quite well. Business was about as good as could have been expected. (South.)

Everything for Sale—

Fair business. Picture fair. (East.)

Big Houses Says—

Played this with a special lobby, and lots of advertising, but did not justify expenditure, or expectations. (Middle West.)

Thrills aplenty. Well done in all particulars. Very good business at two houses simultaneously for the week. (Middle West.)

SELZNICK

Handcuffs or Kisses—
The average Elaine Hammerstein picture. Pleasing, and a fair box office attraction. (Middle West.)

Bucking the Tiger—
Unattractive title, and a star whose recent pictures have been so uninteresting that I took this off after a three-day run. Poor stuff. (Middle West.)

Is Life Worth Living?—
This picture is right good. Eugene O'Brien is popular with our fans and it went over quite satisfactorily and profitably. Comment rather complimentary. (South.)

PATHE

The Rider of the King Log—
Very good picture but didn't draw big crowds. Business poor for week. (Middle West.)

HODKINSON

Rip Van Winkle—
Very good picture. Thomas Jefferson's work particularly well received. Not much business, probably on account of strong counter attractions. (Middle West.)

STATE RIGHTS

Why Girls Leave Home—
Tremendous business. I couldn't take care of the crowds on opening night, and had to run an extra midnight show. Title is a sure thing so far as business goes. (Middle West.)

Burn 'Em Up Barnes—
Declared a very fine comedy and well liked by all patrons. (Middle West.)

Charge It—
Mediocre picture. It got by with the usual box office receipts. (West.)

The Raiders—
Franklyn Farnum is getting almost as popular as William. And in this picture he made himself more than solid with our audiences. (East.)

It Might Happen to You—
Picture is mighty good, and business was good. (East.)

Exhibitors' Service Bureau—Pages 2286-2294

Cut showing a picture of the stage setting used in a prologue number for "The Hell Diggers," playing recently at the Howard theatre, Atlanta, Ga.

"Hell Diggers" Prologue Presented at Atlanta

The accompanying cut shows the stage setting provided for the prologue number on "The Hell Diggers" during the showing of this picture at the Howard theatre, Atlanta.

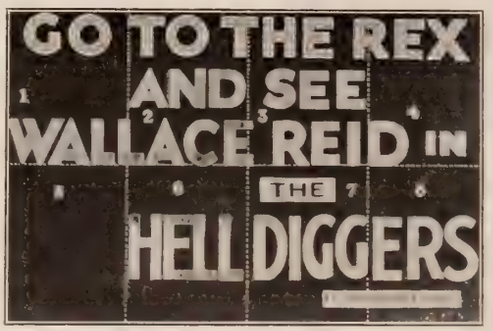
The action of the prologue number was as follows:

The curtains parted to reveal, in silhouette, a miniature dredger made of beaverboard, with tiny openings for windows. All the many wires, and loops and seemingly meaningless cords that seem to surround a dredger were there—and back of the tiny openings, lights burned. Even the shovel-like buckets which dig up the dirt and move it forward, were there, and a stage-hand, seated back of the set, worked a machine which made the buckets of dirt move forward, very realistically.

The dredger was backed by a perfectly plain white drop, against which the blackness of the silhouetted dredger was most effective. Despite the effectiveness it was a comparatively inexpensive affair.

Blue Mouse Erects Artistic Marquee Decorations

The Blue Mouse theatre, Minneapolis, erected an atmospheric marquee decoration for "At The End of the World." Two reproductions of Penrhyn Stanlaw's light houses threw searchlights up and down the main street.



Novelty herald originated by Leon Bamberger, Paramount exploiteer of the Minneapolis exchange. Folded correctly as indicated by the numbers the word "hell" appears on the first page

Bona Fide Safe for Lobby Display

Manager James F. Jackson believes in "revivals" of good pictures, if done properly, and should know, for he has played several at his Tudor theatre, Atlanta, this summer and cashed in on them. The most recent was Bert Lytell and Hazel Dawn in "The Lone Wolf."

Displayed most prominently in his lobby was a huge safe—a real, bona fide burglar-proof safe, with a most modern combination. Over this safe was a huge banner, on which printed in red and black were the words:

"There is $25.00 in cash in this safe. It is yours if you can find the combination and open the safe. No rough methods allowed. If you can't open it, go inside and see 'The Lone Wolf'—then try again."

The sign and the safe, both prominently displayed, attracted considerable attention and Manager Jackson states that a number of people tried to open the safe. None succeeded, though the entire offer was "quite on the level."

Brown's Campaign for "Anatol" Extends Six Weeks

G. E. Brown, recently made managing director of Loew's Palace, the biggest motion picture theatre in Memphis, and which is now operated under the direction of The Consolidated Enterprises, Inc., upset all house records, advertising precedents and space getting records when he put over "The Affairs of Anatol."

Believing that the early bird gets the worm, Mr. Brown started his publicity campaign for "Anatol" six weeks ahead of the picture. Short feature stories were the first inkling given to the public that the picture would show in Memphis. A psychological fact was kept in mind in all the advance notices of the picture and the exact date of the showing was at all times kept a secret. The result of continued announcements, feature stories, teaser ads and tie-ups was that every one in Memphis was talking about "Anatol" and asking every one else when it was going to show.

Then came the week before the opening. Truck pages with cast identification for curiosity arousers, a 4,000 word novelization of "The Affairs of Anatol" illustrated in the leading afternoon paper and big advertising and free publicity displays on the day before and on opening day, brought the picture fans out in thousands. A line was before the box office all day Sunday and continued afternoons and nights throughout the run.

Mr. Brown estimated his free publicity at more than 30 columns; and the picture set up new records for the Palace to shoot at in the weeks to come.

This is the rig that represented the Metropolitan theatre, Iowa Falls, Iowa, in a parade, as told in the accompanying story

Iowa Falls Theatre Grabs Place in Local Parade

One of the features of a two day Fall Festival at Iowa Falls, Iowa, on October 5th and 6th, was a merchant's parade, and one of the features of this parade was the Metropolitan theatre's entry, a rarus avis in the nature of an automobile of the vintage of 1902, which pulled down one of the prizes offered. The entry also served to advertise "After Your Own Heart," which was being shown at the Metropolitan during the festival.

This lobby display on "Reputation" was originated by K. F. Kerby, manager of the Regent theatre, Calgary, Canada

Grand Theatre Issues Novel Introductory Folder

One of the most effective mailing cards that have been sent to active and prospective patrons is that which is being sent out by E. G. Stellings, manager of the Grand theatre, Wilmington, N. C., announcing the six Realart stars in the current season's productions.

On the face of it appears the address, with this clever announcement in the upper corner: "Introducing to Wilmington six beautiful girls who will make their home here—sounds as though the Chamber of Commerce has made another scoop!"

The card consists of seven pages, about 3¾ in. x 4 in.," which fold together. Opening the first fold reveals a halftone cut of Mary Miles Minter, with a brief write-up on the left with an announcement of "Her Winning Way" on the opposite page; the next fold reveals Bebe Daniels and "The March Hare"; the next Alice Brady and "Little Italy"; then Constance Binney and "Room and Board"; fifth, May McAvoy and "Everything for Sale"; and last, Wanda Hawley and "Her Sturdy Oak."

The last page also contains this special ticket offer, "for patrons seeing the first six of these pictures."

"Every time you come to see one of these six pictures listed in this folder, bring the folder and a mark will be made on it; then after you have seen all the first six pictures, you are to bring the folder to me and I will give you a pass good for the next six pictures in which these stars appear. This means that you will see the first two pictures of these six stars for less than ten cents for each picture—and they're some pictures, too! Bring this folder and take advantage of this offer. —E. G. Stellings, Mgr. Grand Theatre."

This lobby display on "Bob Hampton of Placer" is the work of the Palm theatre, Pueblo, Colo.

"Ghosts" Advertise Talmadge Picture

If you get used to seeing a certain spot brilliantly lighted you will be surprised, and your attention caught by suddenly seeing that spot mysteriously darkened when you pass.

That is the theory on which Manager Shields, Rialto theatre, Augusta, Ga., based his exploitation of a Norma Talmadge revival, "Ghosts of Yesterday," when the picture played a three day engagement at his theatre.

The entire lobby was covered by canvas screens, painted dead black. Where they joined the merest cracks of light showed. There was a tall, narrow opening just in front of the box office, as an entrance. Standing on either side of this narrow opening were two tall white ghosts, hooded, with weird green lights cleverly concealed in the swathings of the body, casting a spooky glow over the white-robed figures. Both ghosts pointed to the opening, where the box office could be dimly seen.

The effect, in day-time, was, of course, rather startling, though only about a third as much as at night. Manager Shields' day-time attendance is rather small, however, and his exploitation was directed at the "after-six" crowds. Not a single light was used on the front, even the sign being darkened. There were little streaks of lights from the cracks where the canvas screens joined, and these, with the green lights on the ghost, furnished the only illumination. The only advertising posters used were a twenty-four sheet above the lobby, and two one-sheets, one on either side of the lobby.

Novelty Herald Aids "Sentimental Tommy"

Tom Morrow of the Strand theatre, Charlestown, W. Va., designed a talk-provoking novelty herald for "Sentimental Tommy." A three and one-half by one and a half pasteboard card was used. One side said "Do You Want a Drink of Scotch?" When all the implied affirmatives were uttered, the card was reversed and read: "So do I. A Bit of Scotch, Sir James M. Barrie's 'Sentimental Tommy,' Strand theatre, October 3, 4, 5." Norman Dixon, Paramount exploiter from the Cincinnati exchange co-operated with Morrow.

Stuart Entertains the Dallas Joneses

To exploit "Dangerous Curve Ahead," at the Palace theatre, Dallas, Texas, Harschel Stuart, with the aid of House Manager H. H. Maloney and Assistant Manager Raymond Willie, arranged a three-day hook-up with a local newspaper, and used the traffic cops' semaphores as the basis of novelty advertising.

Stuart arranged a "Jones Family Reunion" and enlisted the aid of the Dallas Dispatch in publishing the affair. Using the name of Mr. and Mrs. Harley Jones, the leading characters in the film play, as the backbone of his idea, Stuart offered the Dispatch the opportunity of joining with the Palace in a joint invitation to every person in Dallas by the name of Jones.

Tuesday's paper carried an announcement that the Jones Family Reunion would be held at the Palace theatre on Thursday morning, and stated that the following day's paper would contain a coupon which, when filled out and presented at the Palace box office on Thursday morning, would entitle the bearer and all those with him to free admittance to the family reunion. The idea hit the local popularity right away. Wednesday's newspaper carried a longer story about the affair and named some of the local Joneses who promised to attend. It also contained the coupon.

About one thousand Joneses were present on Thursday morning and the affair was an all-round success.

The Palace made new use of the stock lobby posts furnished by the Goldwyn Company when Raymond Willie arranged with the police department to place one of the "Dangerous Curve Ahead" ovals on the top of each semaphore. For three days practically all autoists traversing the downtown streets were reminded of the feature showing at the Palace.

This "Through the Back Door" lobby display is by the Imperial theatre, Charlotte, N. C.

Lobby of the Moon theatre, Omaha, decorated for the showing of "The Old Nest"

Two Omaha Theatre Do Things for "Old Nest"

The Sun and the Moon theatres in Omaha, Neb., put over an exploitation campaign for their simultaneous showing of "The Old Nest," by Rupert Hughes, which exceeded anything ever known in the state.

To begin with, the service book suggestion for a tie-up with the telegraph companies was put into such thorough execution that not only did the Western Union place a large artistic card in its main office window but also installed an instrument, desk and an operator in the lobby of both theatres.

The sign in the window was painted on a large piece of light-colored cardboard about six by ten feet. Across it, obliquely, was painted a gigantic telegram blank with "Send her a wire now!" written across it in large type. Above the telegram, in white script was the injunction "Give a thought to mother." Down the right edge of the large sign was the following: "——and see THE OLD NEST now playing Sun and Moon theatres."

At the desks installed in the lobbies of both theatres were the glass signs used by the Western Union and signs reading "Give a thought to mother" and "Send her a wire now." Hundreds of patrons stopped after the performances to send messages.

A tie-up with the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railway was also obtained. It took the form of a large card upon which were pasted four "Old Nest" photographic enlargements of stills. The text painted in large white type upon the card read, "Give a thought to mother, 'The Old Nest.' Leave today to see her via C. M. & St. P. Ry." As a background was painted in light, soft colors two branches of a tree.

The lobbies of both theatres were tastefully decorated, one with tree foliage, the other with vines and foliage over the front of a little frame house constructed in the lobby between the entrance doors on either side. On the gable of the clapboarded house was painted the "Old Nest" slogan, "East, West, Home is Best."

Passers-by stopped all day long and throughout the evening to admire the beauty of the lobby displays.

Orowitz Devises New Stunt Idea

Fred V. Greene's Dover stunt for "The Affairs of Anatol" in which he distributed cards with the star's pictures divided and offered free seats to any persons mating the divided pictures was appropriated and bettered by Eli M. Orowitz, Paramount exploiteer, Philadelphia.

Green and Manager Woodhull at Dover threw away all but five matches. Orowitz sold the unused halves to other exhibitors. Orowitz also printed a list and pictures of the "Anatol" stars on the back of his card to make the matching easier.

Real "Moonshine" Still Used in Lobby

Manager Nichols of Paris theatre, Durham, N. C., used a real "moonshine" still when he showed "The Kentuckians," borrowing it from revenue officers who had secured it nearby. Two fresh-cut trees were placed over the still and shotguns added force to the display. Water was placed in a big tub on the floor, and as the still had just been brought in a few days before, it had the "real" smell, and passersby just had to stop. Many weren't satisfied till they tasted the contents of the tub.

This still played a prominent part in the lobby display for "The Kentuckians" when this picture played the Paris theatre, Durham, N. C.

A log cabin lobby display on "The Rider of the King Log" used by E. R. Rogers, managing director of the Rialto theatre, Chattanooga, Tenn.

"Old Nest" Lobby Pleases Easton, Pa., Residents

For the showing of "The Old Nest" at the Strand theatre, Easton, Pa., Manager Buss and W. R. Ferguson, Goldwyn exploiteer, helped put the picture over to phenomenal business by the use of a pretty lobby display.

On the entrance columns on either side of the theatre they built two tall, narrow pieces of lattice-work which were covered with roses. The special "Old Nest" litho one-sheets were posted near the lattice-work where every passerby would see them.

In the lobby was placed a large writing desk. A man was engaged to sit at the desk and write letters to suggest to others that they do likewise. Paper, envelopes, pen and ink and telegram blanks were placed on the table. At certain hours every day a boy wearing a borrowed Western Union uniform stood in the lobby and carried any telegrams that were written by patrons to their mothers over to the Western Union office. A letter box was placed in a prominent position on a post so that the ones who wrote letters at the desk could post them at once. It was remarkable how many persons upon leaving the theatre wrote telegrams and letters at the desk.

Mr. Buss engaged a singer to render "Home, Sweet Home" at the conclusion of each screening and the song went over big every time.

A special herald for the picture was prepared and distributed among the various stores, where it was enclosed with packages. It was also distributed from house to house.

The newspaper and billboard advertising was increased for this showing with splendid effect.

Masked Beauty Works for "Experience" in Detroit

When "Experience" played at the Strand theatre, Detroit, Albert Boasberg, the Paramount exploiteer, devised a novel street bally-hoo. The most beautiful lady available was masked and driven around town in a brand new, flaming red, Stutz. A sign on the spare tire read: "Beauty will be unmasked to you on the primrose path at the Broadway Strand theatre, the Seat of Screen Superiority."

The car, gasoline, and a liveried chauffeur were furnished by the Stutz Company.

The theatre also hired a man and rented a railroad conductor's uniform. This man worked in hotels and stations. He approached all incoming persons carrying suitcases and begged to inquire if they had lost their tickets. He then handed them something that looked like a railroad ticket which was no more than a herald advertising the picture.

Elaborate Prologue for "One Arabian Night"

An elaborate prologue number for "One Arabian Night," under the title of "A Harem Interlude," was presented during the engagement of the feature of the Brooklyn Mark Strand theatre.

The set which Managing Director Edward L. Hyman provided was an interior of an Arabian castle, palace or harem, the throne room of the Sheik in the foreground. It was a series of high vaulted pillars lit in bizarre red with a sky blue garden back drop contrasting through the arches.

The Sheik with rich turbanne head dress sat upon a dais surrounded by his court attendants, councillors, lackeys, dancing girls, servitors, etc. His favorite wife lolled at his feet. Henry Moeller, tenor, in the part of the Sheik was imposing in a luxurious costume of white and yellow. He stepped from his throne and sang on opening "The Song of India," from "Sadko." As he settled back upon his throne, with his incense pots curling before him, the Mark Strand ballet corps arose from cushions and presented "Danse de Salammbo." Dorothy Bell, soprano, cast as the Sheik's favorite wife, sung in obeisance, "Plus Grand Dans Son Obscurito," from "Queen of Sheba." As the Mark Strand Symphony Orchestra played the processional from "Queen of Sheba," Walter Waitword in the role of the slave dealer, appeared leading the "desert dancer," who was presented to the Sheik and commanded to dance. She laid aside her outer draperies and interpreted a vivid dance, at the conclusion of which the Sheik, enraptured, lifted the royal necklace from the neck of his court favorite and bestowed it upon the newcomer, his latest favorite. Then the prince appeared in the role of the gallant wooer and carried his courtship of the desert dancer to the extent of romantic song. She submitted to his singing ardor and at the finale the prince clasped the dancer in his arms. Jackson Kinsey, baritone, as the prince, utilized "The Bedouin Love Song" to impress the desert dancer. Mme. Serova used "Bayadere" as her chief dance number in the court scene.

Illustrating the story appearing herewith on the prologue number for "One Arabian Night," staged by Managing Director Edward L. Hyman of the Brooklyn Mark Strand theatre

Fashion Show as Prologue for "Footlights"

Manager Creislein, of the Modjeska theatre, Augusta, staged a rather unusual fashion show for "Footlights" when that picture played a three day run at his theatre.

Used in advertising this picture the company furnishes a twenty-four sheet which shows Elsie Ferguson seated on a stage surveying herself in five different costumes. Manager Creislein had cut-outs made of these five figures, which are a little less than life-sized. The costumes worn by their five figures are distinctive and well colored. The cut-outs were placed about the lobby of the theatre at the big cut-out, a sort of close-up of the star seated was cut out and placed on a bench in front of a black velvet drop.

It was an effective bit of exploitation, and quite inexpensive. But Manager Creislein believes that it paid judging from the box-office receipts.

Johnston Exploits "Fountleroy" at Minneapolis

"Little Lord Fauntleroy" was given a rather auspicious presentation in Minneapolis two weeks starting October 1, at the Minneapolis Auditorium.

The Auditorium presented the picture for the second time anywhere in the country and made much of the fact in its advertising and publicity.

Then Manager J. L. Johnston got Miss Pickford's original Fauntleroy costume from Mark Larkin and put it in a department store window with a book and clothes display which attracted lots of attention and caused comment. Then four thousand calling cards reading Mary Pickford Auditorium, October 1, 12:30 to 11:00 Daily with the words "Come and See my Best Play. M. P." written across the corner, were placed in mail boxes in all downtown hotels and in business offices. Eight thousand hand written printed letters on Auditorium women's stationery and reading: "Dear Friends: Just a few lines to tell you that my production of 'Little Lord Fauntleroy' is being played at the Auditorium for the first time outside of New York, starting October 1. I never made a better play. Faithfully. Mary Pickford" and also calling attention to special children's matinees on October 1 and October 8 were distributed to apartment houses and homes of the city with noticeable effect.

A four column 18 inch commercial display and four column, five inch amusement ads played the most prominent part in the newspaper campaign on the picture. The Auditorium was able to get seven column layouts of pictures in three of four papers the opening week. A special children's matinee on Saturday morning, October 1, proved the biggest paid similar matinee the city has seen, the Auditorium seating 2,482, being jammed to the doors. On the second Saturday, October 8, under the auspices of the Zuhrah (Shrine) Ladies, cripples and orphans were guests at the special matinee and another big crowd of youngsters paid to see the special performance.

As a street novelty Manager Johnston engaged a team and an old fashioned Victoria carriage and dressing the driver in costume and two ushers to represent the two characters played by Miss Pickford in the picture had them parade the down town streets during lunch hours, visit different schools, hotels, stores and the National Dairy Show at the Minnesota State Fair Grounds. To carry out the atmosphere of the picture within the theatre a score of ushers were dressed in Fauntleroy costumes and wore their hair in curls.

A large painted sign in a prominent downtown location, street car cards and several thousand sheets of snipe also advertised the showing which proved a big success in spite of bad weather conditions. The usual amount of big paper was also used about the city, with special attention being paid to the posting of 24 sheets in advantageous locations.

"Too Much Speed" Signs Made Permanent

Trolley wires on the main street of Greenville, Tex., were used by Manager Collins of the Opera House from which to suspend huge "Too Much Speed" signs cut out in the shape of "hands."

The signs were allowed to remain after the showing by request of Greenville's mayor as a warning to reckless motorists and as an aid to the traffic police of the city.

Rialto, New Haven, Stages "Footlights" Prologue

The accompanying illustration shows the prologue arranged for "Footlights" at the Rialto theatre, New Haven, by Manager Carroll and Albert S. Nathan, Paramount exploiteer. A little tot was engaged to deliver a "piece" at her tragic best. This suggested admirably the theme of the picture without making it unnecessarily sombre.

"Quo Vadis" Gets Big Exploitation Campaign at Washington

That real exploitation and showmanship is worth while is evidenced by the experience of Alex Yokel in charge of the recent showing of "Quo Vadis" at the National theatre, Washington, D. C.

Mr. Yokel started his campaign with teaser ads in four Washington papers and on Sunday carried 200 lines of display space pages, text advertising and readers. Window cards were distributed, small heralds used in the schools, in the government buildings and wherever practicable.

To further boost the picture, personal letters were sent to every clergyman in the city announcing the engagement and wires dispatched to the most prominent members of the National Reform Association.

A tie-up with the Washington Times was effected whereby by giving away 20 tickets for the show daily the attraction got a fair share of publicity in connection with cash prizes the Times was giving away on a contest the paper was running.

The announcement that "Quo Vadis" tickets were to be given away by the Times was announced in a two column story on the front page, and an eight column ad on page ten. Every day during the week the Times printed the story about the "Quo Vadis" tickets for two columns, and also ran the ad for eight columns. This tie-up proved to be one of the most successful ever operated and brought additional business to the theatre.

Box Parties Latest Stunt at Troy, N. Y.

At Rand's theatre in Troy, N. Y., the management is running slides, suggesting to the patrons that they form theatre parties and to notify the management as to the number in the party so that reservations may be made. The idea has scored a hit and theatre parties have become all the rage in the Collar City.

Prize Drawings Interest New Haven Fans

The Rialto theatre, New Haven, Conn., supplied itself with free lobby decorations for "The Affairs of Anatol" through the drawing contest carried on with the co-operation of the New Haven Journal Courier. The contest was open to any artist in the city and the prizes consisted of cash and free tickets. There were several hundred contributions and each contestant had a clique rooting hard for him. The selected displays were exhibited in the lobby and served to make the Rialto a rendezvous. The newspaper publicity kept plugging in advance and during the showing and didn't cost a cent. The tie-up was arranged with the co-operation of Albert S. Nathan, Paramount exploiteer.

Dixon Tries Novelties on Talmadge Picture

Harry T. Dixon presented "The Sign on the Door," at the Star theatre, Buffalo, last week. Everybody in the neighborhood knew it, for the night before the presentation Harry sent a number of house attaches through that part of the city served by the Star to tie signs on door knobs. The signs announced the fact that "The Sign on the Door," would be shown at the Star. In the morning when father or mother went for the paper or milk bottle the first thing they saw was this excellent bit of publicity. Some thought it was a warning from the Ku Klux Klan or a notice to appear for making home brew illegally, but when they read it residents were greatly relieved and in the evening Harry relieved them of coin of the realm.

Mr. Dixon dressed his lobby in attractive manner for the presentation, flowers and ferns predominating. Mr. Dixon's outlay on his exploitation was small but, because of the means used, the results were big.

"Anatol" Grabs Front Pages at Uniontown, Pa.

The Penn Theatre, Uniontown, Pa., sold the town paper, The Morning Herald, on the idea that the playing of "The Affairs of Anatol" was an event of vast public interest. The editor of the paper saw the picture at a pre-showing and was convinced, so the morning after the opening, the event was described in a half-column news story on hitherto inaccessible page one. William N. Robson, Paramount exploiter, who was in town co-operated in selling the idea to the paper.

The Penn Theatre procedure can be taken up in other communities where theatrical advertising has struck the rut.

Elaborate Prologue Presented by New York Mark Strand

The prologue on "One Arabian Night" presented by Managing Director Joseph L. Plunkett of the New York Mark Strand theatre was one of the finest numbers ever staged in a New York picture theatre.

With the rise of the curtain is revealed a street scene in Bagdad so full of harmonic color, so realistic, that most every one, and especially those who are familiar with the Orient, can even distinguish the supplications of the mendicants, the wailing of the minstrels and the haggling of the turbaned merchants. Frank Mellor, tenor, arrayed as an Oriental prince, renders a solo, "Far Across the Desert Sands" (Finden), the completion of which is the cue for the entrance of four lithe and graceful dancing maidens, who perform "Danse Arabe" to the lilting melody of Ganne's composition of the same name. Then comes Joseph Martel, baritone, portraying the Eastern hunchback clown and singing Finden's "Less Than the Dust" in a manner that is effective.

The climax is reached at the point of the spurning of the clown by the principal dancing girl, whose costume in the prologue resembles that of the star in the picture, and is symbolic of the action that is about to be portrayed on the screen. And, as she turns docilely yet proudly to the prince, the stage is cleared of all but the baritone, who offers his number. At the close of that the curtain falls on the scene, which for colorful dramatic pantomime deserves great commendation.

Hastings Theatre Gets Exploiter's Aid

Fred V. Greene, Paramount exploiteer, recently journeyed to Hastings, N. Y., to aid Manager H. W. Carter of the Hastings theatre put over "The Witching Hour."

Mr. Greene announced that at a certain hour fifty toy balloons with coupons attached as tails would be released. Each coupon was good for a certain number of matinee admissions to the theatre. Good newspaper publicity brought a flock of nearly 375 children in a town of 4,000 people. The matinee attendance was stimulated and the general publicity showed sharp box office increases. The stunt cost Mr. Carter in the neighborhood of an exorbitant $1.50.

Novel Exploitation for "Hurricane Hutch" Put Over at Milwaukee

In exploiting "Hurricane Hutch," for the showing at the New Crystal theatre, Milwaukee, a tie-up with the Wisconsin News was effected whereby a contest was run in which an Indian motor-cycle, thirteen cash prizes of ten dollars each, twenty-five prizes of free season tickets at the New Crystal and twenty-five prizes of one dollar each are to be awarded to the winners.

The details of the contest are as follows: Fourteen riders of Indian motorcycles wearing sweaters on which were big red letters, one letter each for the letters contained in the title of the serial, "Hurricane Hutch," were paraded about the city.

The men rode in "jumbled" formation and the contestants attempted to formulate the title of the picture, using the letters appearing on the backs of the riders.

The first 25 persons turning in the correct title were given free tickets (two each), good for 14 weeks.

The second part of the competition is as follows:

A motor-cycle with a sealed speedometer was placed in the lobby of the theatre. The motor-cycle is run continuously from 1:00 P. M. to 11:00 P. M. daily. The person estimating the nearest to the number of miles the speedometer registers is given a prize of $10.00.

This idea is being carried out each week for a period of twelve weeks.

At the end of the 14th week, the person who estimates the total number of miles the speedometer registers will be given the machine itself.

The News gave the stunt plenty of publicity and great interest has been aroused. The motor-cycles parading about the city gave the opening episode of the picture a big send-off and the balance of the stunt is keeping this interest maintained.

A cut appearing on this page illustrates the exploitation idea.

This cut is explanatory of the story appearing on this page relative to the exploitation campaign for "Hurricane Hutch," put over for the showing of the serial at the New Crystal theatre, Milwaukee, Wis.

Palace Theatre Entertains Rotary Club

The management of the Palace theatre, Hamilton, O., in addition to an unusually extensive and thorough preliminary exploitation campaign for "The Old Nest," tied-up the Rotary Club as a further exploitation feature during the run.

The first evening performance on September 20 was sold to the Rotary Club, the few seats remaining being sold to the public. Part of the proceeds of the tickets purchased by the Rotarians was set aside by the management of the theatre and the club to defray the expenses of the coming Community Chest campaign to finance the city's charities.

The Rotarians conducted a program of addresses, songs and acts before "The Old Nest" was screened. The program committee of the Rotary club the following morning arranged to sponsor a special children's matinee at 3 o'clock that afternoon for the inmates of the Children's Home. The tickets were donated by the management of the Palace theatre.

The campaign was planned by Manager F. C. Meyer of the Palace.

Oriental Lobby Display for "Bronze Bell"

Manager Duncan, of the Strand theatre, Asheville, N. C., built an effective Oriental lobby to enhance his showing of the "Bronze Bell." The side walls were covered with gold-leaf paper, with graceful panels and columns of the same at the corners and flanking the ticket booth. On one sidewall a miniature pond was painted, surrounded by a pebble court, the pebbles being glued on, the whole scene being enlivened by bright flowers and birds. Subdued colored light globes added glamour for the Oriental setting, with a real fountain playing in the center, in which were placed growing water-lilies. A fine three days business showed good results for the extra effort.

Here is the lobby display for "The Devil" which E. R. Rogers, managing director of the Rialto theatre, Chattanooga, Tenn., recently used during his showing of this picture

Ottawa Theatre Stages Fashion Show

For the presentation of "Straight From Paris" at the Loew Theatre, Ottawa, Manager William F. Brooker gave a brilliant fashion show in the large window of a vacant store near the house. The picture was the attraction during the week of September 19.

A stage setting, depicting a house interior, was erected in the window along with a row of footlights. The floor of the window was widened several feet to add to the impression of a stage and to provide room for the wax models which were used for the showing of the handsome gowns.

The picture and the window display were tied up to a special two-page section in the Ottawa Citizen on Saturday, September 17, these pages containing large display advertisements by fashionable fur, shoe and ladies' wear stores of Ottawa. One page was headed: "Big Fashion Spectacle comes to Loew's next week." The other page was headed: "Famous beauty is star of 'Straight from Paris.'"

This interesting exploitation followed a week of special activity on the part of Manager Brooker for the Central Canada Exhibition which was held in Ottawa.

The attraction at the theatre for Fair Week was "Too Much Speed." As a stunt for this picture, large and brightly colored cards were tied to all parked cars in the downtown section on which appeared a reference to the feature with the wards "arrested." "appear before the judge" and "Too Much Speed" of the display matter appeared in large bold-faced type. These words caught the eye first but the whole card read as follows: "You are not ARRESTED and won't have to APPEAR BEFORE THE JUDGE because we haven't found you guilty of TOO MUCH SPEED but we advise you to see Wally Reid at Loew's this week."

Arrow Film Celebrating Eighth Birthday

Arrow's Eighth Anniversary occurs in October. It was in that month, 'way back in 1913, that the corporation opened its small offices in the Times Building—from that small beginning it has blossomed into one of the biggest concerns of its kind in the world, and it is still growing.

Arrow is celebrating its Eighth Anniversary by issuing the biggest Arrow Bulletin it has so far published, a sumptuous volume, full of pictures of stars, producers, reproductions of stills, and a long list of forthcoming pictures.

Aywon Series Received With Enthusiasm

Nathan Hirsh, president of the Aywon Film Corporation, is elated over the reception accorded to the Snowy Baker and Big Boy Williams series by the State Right exchanges throughout the country.

The following territories have been so far disposed of: Standard Film Exchange, of Pittsburgh; Apex Film Corporation, of Minneapolis; Federated Film Exchange, of Omaha; Federated Film Exchange, of Kansas City, Fine Art Pictures, of St. Louis; W. Equity Closes for Canada

Rights for Entire Dominion Are Sold on "The Black Panther's Cub"

ONE of the biggest independent deals of the season was consummated last week in the transaction closed with the Equity Pictures Corporation Ltd. of Canada in their purchase for the entire Dominion of Canada of Equity Picture Corporation's "Black Panther's Cub."

Mr. Arnovitz, president, and Mr. Stewart, general manager, were highly enthusiastic over the prospects of this unusual independent production in the Canadian territories.

"Canada," says Mr. Arnovitz, "has had a siege of tough breaks during the past season and no country has suffered more from the depression than has our country but that hasn't caused us to let down a single iota in our efforts, in fact it has prompted us to redouble our efforts and we have been well repaid."

"The light of prosperity is beginning to shine again and Canada will recover just as fast as the rest of the world in fact faster because Canada is going ahead and will within the next few years be the center of the limelight in many respects where we have been dormant in the past. In our purchase of 'The Black Panther's Cub' we have secured a production that towers head and shoulders above anything in the independent field now being released in Canada. That's what this country needs in independent pictures. Big, clean, worth while productions that can compete with the largest national distributors. Our offices in Montreal and Toronto have orders to go ahead full speed to make this picture the biggest independent winner Canada has seen in years and we have no fear but what the results will more than justify our expectations the same as the results have been elsewhere throughout the States.

"Equity Pictures Corporation Ltd. of Canada, is progressing with extraordinary rapidity in spite of all supposedly existing depression and as soon as things adjust themselves, this growing live wire outfit expect to open offices in every prominent city throughout the Dominion, and be identified as the largest and foremost independent releasing concern in Canada."

A Business-Grabbing Name

Harry Warner Discusses Drawing Power of "Why Girl's Leave Home"

AFTER two big territorial deals had been fully consummated, and these two—the selling of Northern Illinois to the Celebrated Players Film Corp., Chicago, and Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois to the United Film Service, St. Louis—are said to mark the closing of fully three-fourths of the entire country on the Warner Brothers production, "Why Girls Leave Home," featuring Anna Q. Nilsson, Harry M. Warner gave his views on the value, of the production.

"What's in a name?" began Mr. Warner. "The answer is, everything if it's the right name and it would be hard to find a better name for a business getting photodrama than is attached to "Why Girls Leave Home.' A generation of theatregoers were thrilled with the stage play of the same name and millions of people will see the screen version where but thousands saw the original play.

"The production was made with the dual purpose of providing the public with the best of entertainment and pulling the maximum amount of business for the theatre showing the production. Something was done with this picture that I believe has never been attempted before in the history of the industry.

"We believed that the production was one that would be, in the parlance of the show world, 'a clean up.' But naturally our opinion was more or less biased. Therefore we sought the actual opinion of the public in two widely contrasted instances. 'Why Girls Leave Home' was presented before the public of a large cosmopolitan city and also in a small town. The results were the same—capacity business—and the reason the results were the same is because human nature is the same the world over.

"The question of 'Why Girls Leave Home' is one of vital importance and of late has assumed such magnitude that it has attracted the attention of every big newspaper, social welfare organizations and police departments throughout the country."

Harry Warner, senior member of Warner Brothers, the well known independent distributors

Cohn Will Start Two Novelty Subjects

Jack Cohn, of C. B. C. Film Sale Corporation, announce that he will start production wheels moving shortly on two short novelty release features. The exact nature of these releases is not yet divulged, but Mr. Cohn, says that plans are all set for two separate releases that will be distinct novelties and unlike any short releases on the market.

"While the plans are all set for two releases that are unusual in every way, and that are, I think, just what the exhibitors and the public want," said Mr. Cohn, "there are always one or two details that must be re-vamped when one is actually on the ground. For that reason, I don't want to make any definite announcements until production work has been actually started on them."

That these short releases are of feature calibre, is shown by the fact that Mr. Cohn is making a trip West for the special purpose of rounding off the last details and superintending the production of the initial issues himself. While he is in the West he will also work out exploitation details in connection with these releases.

Arrow's New Serial Is Nearing Completion

Arrow's new serial called "Nan of the North" is being completed in Yosemite National Park. Popular Ann Little plays the lead. Leonard Clapham, a well known Western leading man, plays the part of a Canadian Northwest mounted policeman.

Publicity is Accorded Warner Bros. Feature

The widespread newspaper notices that have been accorded the Warner Brothers production, "Why Girls Leave Home," by the New York dailies proves beyond the shadow of a doubt that newspapers will work in conjunction with motion pictures provided the proper attitude is used in the approach, states Warner Bros. This fact has been more than demonstrated by the discreetly planned newspaper campaign inaugurated by Eddie Bonns, Louis Marangella and Lon Young, of the Warner publicity department.

Columns were opened wide to the Warner production and such writers as Sophie Irene Loeb, of the Evening World, Jane Dixon, of the Telegram, Ida Rogers, of the Girls' Protective League, Miss Elizabeth Greene, of the New York Probation and Protective Association, and other prominent welfare workers for the uplift of stranded young women, gave freely their opinions on the questions.

Close Eight Big Deals on Warner Feature

Eight big deals have been closed by Warner Brothers for the exclusive territorial rights to "Why Girls Leave Home," featuring Anna Q. Nilsson, and an unusual number of first run theatres throughout the country have booked the production for early screening, according to a recent announcement.

The following exchanges have purchased the distribution rights in their respective territories: Warner's Exchange, New York, for Greater New York and Northern New Jersey; Independent Film Exchange, Phila., for Eastern Pennsylvania and Southern New Jersey; Federated Film Exchange, Boston, for New England States; Phil Selznick Productions, Cleveland, for State of Ohio; Tri-State Film Exchange, Minn., for Louisiana and Mississippi; Grand and Warner Exchange, Buffalo, New York, New York State above Westchester County; and Columbia Film Service, Pittsburgh, for Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia.

Hallroom Boys Score in "Stars and Stripes"

"Stars and Stripes" is the title of the newest of the Hallroom Boys Comedies featuring Sid Smith on the release schedule through Federated Film Exchanges of America, Inc. The completed picture was received this week at the New York offices of Hallroom Boys Photoplays, Inc., and was given a special screening for the members of the Federated Committee.

In "Stars and Stripes" Percy and Ferdie are seen for the first time as traveling salesmen, who when they meet with a skunk in the course of their journeyings run for the nearest lake. To the same vicinity come "two gentlemen seeking solitude," escaped from a nearby prison—and of course when they see the boys' clothes the chance is too good to miss.

England Welcomes Kinetos

Charles Urban Subjects Are Praised at Their Trade Showing in England

As was recently announced, arrangements for the distribution of the Kineto Review in England, recently were completed with Interest Films, Ltd., with headquarters in London. There comes now the first trade-paper review from the other side of the Atlantic in connection with the release of Kineto Reviews over there.

With the definite assertion that the "Kineto Review is an intensely interesting series which will win popular approval wherever shown," the Film Renter & Moving Picture News in its issue, dated London, October 1, 1921, writes:

"The name of Charles Urban in the annals of the film industry has always stood for perfection and progress. The fact that he is no longer directly connected with the business on this side of the water is a matter for regret by those who recognize his worth, but it is particularly pleasant to know that his activities, though not now conducted in this country, are intended to increasingly benefit the trade as a whole.

"Some remarkable examples of his genius in catering for the public taste were shown by Interest Films, Ltd., last week at the West End Cinema, when a series of intensely interesting short subjects, under the title of 'The Kineto Review,' were submitted to the trade. These are among the most entrancing studies in science, travel, industry and natural history that have ever been thrown upon the screen, and we have no hesitation in saying that exhibitors who, week after week, include one of these short pictures will thereby add a most attractive feature to their program, and thus increase the reputation of their house and spread a knowledge of their own ability as showmen.

"The series screened last week was happily varied in character, and included a number of remarkable nature studies which will at once appeal to the imagination of any audience and add distinction to any program in which they appear. A touch of drama was imparted to the whole, however, by the inclusion of several short incidents which may be very atly described as half-minute thrills of such a character that they literally make one sit up.

"Showmen desirous of introducing an entertaining, illuminating and educative series of pictures into their program, short in length, but full of intense interest to every class of audience, cannot do better than seek and book. 'The Kineto Review.' It is a certain winner wherever it is shown."

"Why Girls Leave Home" Booked By Stanley

One of the biggest booking contracts ever received on a production was consummated with the Stanley Company of America, Philadelphia, by Werner Brothers with their latest attraction, "Why Girls Leave Home," according to a recent announcement. The production has been booked over the Stanley circuit, following in the wake of the recent booking deal made with William Fox, B. S. Moss and the Poli Circuit—all of whom are now playing the feature in their theatres with gratifying results, it is said.

In addition to the Stanley booking two big territorial deals are also said to have been made. Sam Werner, of the United Film Service, St. Louis, has purchased the territorial rights for Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois, and Joe Friedman, of the Celebrated Players Film Corporation, Chicago, purchased the Northern Illinois territory.

New Kineto Review at Criterion in N. Y.

"Wild Babies," one of Charles Urban's Kineto Reviews which is playing at the Criterion coincidentally with "Peter Ibbetson," is a typical example of the Kineto Review where several famous naturalists and photographers have co-operated in gathering the material in it. The picture was edited and put together under Mr. Urban's personal direction. Among the contributors to its subject matter are Raymond L. Ditmars, curator of the New York Zoological Society; Arthur H. Fisher, a well known naturalist-photographer, and F. Percy Smith,, a famous London scientist whose work is quite familiar to American audiences through the Kineto releases.

"Wild Babies" pictures a score of different birds and animals in their relations between the parents and the offsprings; life's story told and retold in the whole animal kingdom; the young deserting the sheltering home to build one of their own.

Dominant Pictures Reports Many Sales

Jacques Kopstein of Dominant Pictures has just completed a series of sales on various productions now being released by that organization. Considerable buying has been evidenced in the Washington and Baltimore territories. He has sold his estern Star two reel dramas to The Seaboard Film Company, for Delaware, Virginia, Maryland, and the District of Columbia, and Maryland. The Seaboard Exchange also bought the series of twelve single New Wed Comedies featuring Harry Meyers and Rosemary Theby.

The Catherine Calvert Subjects which includes six five-reel productions featuring Catherine Calvert have been sold to the Square Deal Exchange of Philadelphia, for Southern New Jersey, Eastern Pennsylvania, Maryland, Delaware, Virginia and the District of Columbia. One of the subjects was also sold to Federated Exchange of Baltimore for the same territory.

Federated Film to Distribute "Heidi"

Federated Film Exchanges of America, Inc., announces that it has contracted with Prizma, Inc., for the exclusive distribution of a two-reel Prizma feature in colors, called "Heidi," which, it is reported, is one of the most novel films shown in some time.

Madge Evans is starred in this unusual feature, which was directed by Frederick A. Thomson. Catherine Carr wrote the scenario, and Tom Cushing, the noted playwright and adapter, edited the production.

Mitchell, of Federated, Buys Rights for South

BY means of negotiations completed this week, M. Mitchell of Federated Films of Atlanta has signed for the territorial rights in Southern States to "The Heart of the North," the feature of the Canadian Northwest produced by Joe Brandt and George H. Davis and being State-Righted by them, and "Dangerous Love," a five-reel super-Western feature based on the novel "Ben Warman," which the C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation is releasing to the independent market.

By the terms of the agreement made by Mr. Mitchell, "The Heart of the North" will be released by him in five of the Southern States, including North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, and Alabama, while "Dangerous Love" will be seen in the same states with the state of Tennessee being added.

Rollo Exchange Opens in New York

A new exchange was added this week to the independent ranks in the New York territory in the opening of offices by the Rollo Sales Corporation at 729 Seventh avenue, New York City, on the tenth floor.

F. C. Sumner has been employed as sales manager of this new exchange and it is understood that it will open a number of new releases many of which were secured from the Clark-Cornelius Corporation. The Rollo Sales Corporation will purchase through the independent market.

Al Feinman Moves

Announcement is made this week of the removal of the advertising and publicity bureau conducted by A. L. Feinman to more commodious quarters at 117 West 46th street, New York City. Expansion of business is one of the important reasons attributed to Feinman's departure from his old stamping grounds.

FINAL scenes on the second Witwer comedy were shot by Director Fleming recently and the cutting and editing is now being completed so that the release will be ready for a trade showing early next week. H. C. Witwer has written all the titles and his slang of the prize ring features this story. In order to give the story all the realism of a fight story a special prize ring was constructed at Cairo, New York and all the fight scenes in the training quarters were taken.

To give the comedy plenty of action and pep, Harry Corbett, William Foster and Tom Poland, all ex-prize fighters went with the company. Miss Muriel Kingston who played opposite Delaney, will be retained for the remaining ten comedies. She has had a wide experience with some of the larger companies. Her latest release previous to entering the cast of the Witwer Comedies was "The Barricade" the recent Christy Cabanne picture. She was also featured in the Toonerville Trolley Comedies and in Robert Harron's last picture before his death, "Coincidence."

Director Fleming who has been engaged for the rest of the series is also a veteran in pictures having started in the old Powers Company eleven years ago. He was formerly with D. W. Griffith and has written and directed numerous comedies.

Bill Smith has been busily engaged during the past week answering requests of exhibitors throughout the country asking for bookings. He has already received bookings from some for as many as thirty and forty days. These were all turned over to the exchange which bought the territory. He expects to announce a large sale of territory the early part of next week.

Following the completion of the second comedy Smith will immediately have work started on the third feature which will also be a sport situation comedy. It is expected that as soon as the New York City bookings are started that Delaney who has been starring in these features will make several personal appearances. Complete exploitation for all the comedies is now being mapped out by the Paglin Davidson Agency and a special supplement will be issued with each comedy for the exhibitors.

Clark-Cornelius Make Big Sale

In spite of the general impression that the marketing of pictures right now is at a low ebb, Mr. S. J. Rollo, general manager of the Clark-Cornelius Corporation, within the last ten days has consummated a number of deals for his corporation that undoubtedly stand as a record for the past two weeks.

In Minneapolis, Mr. Rollo disposed of the entire output, twelve pictures, to the Apex Pictures Corporation. Ira F. Mantzke, general manager of this company, acted as the agent for Apex on the consummation of this deal.

Artcolor Pictures to Resume Production

Louis J. Dittmar, managing director of the Majestic and Rialto theatres in Louisville, Ky., spent all of last week in New York in conference with C. Lang Cobb, general manager of Artcolor Pictures Co., Inc., of which company Mr. Dittmar is president. The immediate resumption of production at the Florida studios of the company and a satisfactory sales plan for early release was the result of these conferences.

Issue Newspaper Sheet on "Parted Curtains"

An attractive four page newspaper sheet has been devised by the Warner Brothers publicity department for "Parted Curtains," the latest Warner release featuring Henry B. Walthall and Mary Alden, it is announced. That this sheet will more than aid the exhibitor is evidenced in the announcement that it contains every conceivable data necessary to put the production over with success.

Prizma Colored Titles for "I Defy!"

THE PRIZMA COMPANY has been specially engaged by Morris A. Kashin to furnish a series of elaborate colored titles and sub-titles for "I Defy!" the spectacular cinema offering which characterizes the return of Mr. Kashin to the field of motion picture distribution after a year's absence.

The motion picture in its entirety has now been assembled, edited and titled. With the completion of the special hand-colored titles by Prizma the early part of the week, it is confidently expected that the production will be available for screening to interested parties the later part of the week.

Maclyn Arbuckle Series Sold to Federated

A deal was closed this week whereby the Maclyn Adbuckle series of pictures that is being released through the Producers Security Corporation, will be handled for Maryland, Virginia, Delaware and the District of Columbia by Peter Oeletsky, head of the Federated Film Exchange of Baltimore.

Two of the Arbuckle subjects, now released, are "Squire Phin," the Holman Day story, and "Welcome To Our City" by George V. Hobart.

New Clark-Cornelius Release Announced

Included in the twenty-four fretures which will be released by Clark-Cornelius Corporation this year will be a series of eight George Cheesboro Northwest Mounted productions made by Milburn Mornate.

The first of the series, titled "The Recoil," is ready for screen examination and will be released by Clarke-Cornelius Corporation the middle of November. This will be followed by the second of the series in about six weeks.

Conway Directing New Selig Serial

THE Export & Import Film Company, Inc., owners of the world's rights of the new animal-jungle serial which Colonel Wm. N. Selig is now making at his coast studios, announces that the filming of the chapter picture is progressing rapidly under the personal supervision of the Colonel.

Mr. J. Conway has been engaged to direct the production of the serial. Conway has been identified with the screen since 1911. He directed many successes for Selig, Bosworth, Reliance, Majestic, Fine Arts and Universal. He also scored with several specials for Metro and Triangle. He is a member of the M. P. D. A.

To Present "Hamlet" in New York November 7

Asta Films, Inc., in conjunction with National Arts of America, announces the presentation at the Lexington theatre on November 7th of the motion picture production of "Hamlet," which is reported to have scored a success in Europe.

The players who appear in this picture are well-known European players, headed by the famous Danish tragedienne, Asta Neilsen. This will be the first showing in America of this great artist's work.

National Screen Service Has Big Library

National Screen Service, Inc., announces that it is able to-day, to serve its subscribers with the main title and scene from any production released during the past two years, up to and including the latest release. This company is now maintaining a large library of trailers as well as a personnel who are be able to operate it. In addition to the regular announcements, the National Screen Service supplies each theatre with an individual opening bearing the name of the theatre. This opening lends a dignity and distinction to the theatres.

New Company Announced

Second National Pictures Corp. Will Produce and Distribute

EXTENSIVE and far-reaching plans covering the production of a series of special feature productions and their consequent marketing on an equitable basis in this country and abroad are made known this week in the text of an important statement from the Second National Pictures Corporation whose incorporation is announced this week.

The formation of this new producing and distributing unit is designed to effect a merger of well-known producers, distributors and exhibitors in an organization in which all will share on the basis of mutual investment and profit. Preliminary plans which have been in the process of formation during the past fortnight and which were completed this week reveal an administrative policy which should find a responsive chord among all elements of the motion picture industry.

The officers of the new venture are men of recognized ability in and out of the motion picture industry. Mr. D. V. Barnes is a retired merchant. He is not a motion picture man but it is asserted he will bring to his new association the sound fundamental principles of merchandising as applied to motion picture production and distribution.

Bernard Levey is vice-president and general manager of Second National Picture Corporation. Mr. Levey has long been prominently identified with the manufacture and marketing of motion pictures. He is also a well-known newspaper man, and at present managing editor of the Pictorial Press Association. Mr. W. J. Auchterlonie is general sales manager of Second National Pictures Corporation and will be in complete charge of the company's sales. The office of treasurer is entrusted in the hands of Mr. J. N. Nemerov of the law firm of Levey and Nemerov.

Signalizing the first move of the new company, the Second National Pictures Corporation has taken under a long term lease half of the eighth floor of the Regan Building at 140 West 42nd Street. Here the company will maintain its executive offices.

At present the company is negotiating for the acquisition of the product of a number of well-known producers and stars. If plans now in their final stages of completion are consummated in time, the names of the company's stars and directors will be available during the next week or two.

The series of animated cartoons known as "Out of the Inkwell" which are animated by Max Fleischer and which were formally distributed by Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, was acquired this week by Second National Pictures Corporation.

"Judgment" Sold for South

Pearce Buys Foreign Spectacle and "Suspicious Wives" from World

ANOTHER independent buyer to acquire "Judgment!" from the World Film Corporation during the past week is J. Eugene Pearce of New Orleans. Mr. Pearce also purchased for his territory the Mollie King production, "Suspicious Wives," another World Film special fall release.

That Mr. Pearce is convinced that he has acquired two valuable attractions is evidenced by a letter he addressed to Milton C. Work, President of World, after viewing the pictures for the first time.

"'Judgment,' in my opinion," he writes, "surpasses any foreign production that has been shown in this country and I do not hesitate to predict that it will rank, shoulder to shoulder with the biggest money-getting' picture ever offered to the independent buyers.

"The acting is marvelous, the vast Tudor settings magnificent in their simplicity and fidelity to the period and the story is just what the American spectator wants. From the very start it provides a succession of tensely dramatic situations. The drama works to a thundering climax with suspense that is fairly breath-taking. Surely, 'Judgment!' must take the country by storm.

"Your 'Suspicious Wives,' starring Mollie King, is worthy of being listed in the A-1 class. After viewing 'Judgment!' I was prepared to feel disappointed in anything that might follow it but 'Suspicious Wives' held me from the first title.

"I am going to send you a report of what these pictures do in the early showing I am going to give them in my Canal Street theatre.

"I am no prophet but our records made in boom times are in danger."

In the advertising pages of this issue, World Film publishes all the reviews of "Judgment!" which have appeared in the press to date, under the caption, "The Judgment of the Press."

Clark Cornelius to Release "Living Lies"

THE CLARK CORNELIUS CORPORATION has purchased the Emile Chautard picture, "Living Lies," which they will release on the state right market. Mr. Chautard is noted as being one of the industry's foremost directors and the fact that his picture will be put out on the independent market is evidence of the quality of production that the state right exchanges are today demanding from the distributor and producer.

This production will be put out by the Clark Cornelius Corporation as a special release. It is considered one of the very fine pictures of the year and will be handled by the distributor in a big way.

Russell Feature Wins Critic's Praise

Indicative of the general spirit of appreciation with which "Shadows of Conscience," Russell Productions' seven-reel American classic, was received at its first trade showing, held in Chicago is the flattering criticism of Virginia Dale, movie critic of the Chicago Journal whose review was published in the issue of Oct. 7th.

"It is an excellent picture," reads the review, "a purposeful, ardent offering, tending toward the melodramatic, but weilding sufficient realism in its dramatics to make it interesting. The players are conscientious, sincere workers with an apparent fund of understanding of the things assigned them to do.

"And never was there better photography. It is of splendid quality, the photography, so clear that it looks stereoscopic. Were there no other attributes for commendation the picture would be worth seeing because of the camera work."

Russell Simpson's work in "Shadows of Conscience" came in for much of the praise that attended the first showing.

ITEMS OF THE EXCHANGES AND THEATRES

SPOKANE

Walter Fenney, assistant-manager of the Stillwell Theatres Company, which includes the Casino, Class A and Unique theatres, left the first of the week to assume the managership of the branch office of the Fox Film corporation in Butte, Mont.

Advance Casino bookings, announced by the Stillwell Theatres Company, include the Mack Sennett picture presenting Mabel Normand in "Molly O"; Hobart Bosworth in "Blind Hearts"; The Thomas H. Ince picture "Hail the Woman"; the King Vidor picture, "Love Never Dies"; H. O. Davis in "The Silent Call" and Hobart Bosworth in "The Sea Lion." This house has a week-run policy.

CANADA

The Garrick theatre, Winnipeg, Manitoba, recently enjoyed great success with the second run of "Alf's Button" in the Manitoba Capital and, following the engagement, announcement was made that the Garrick would screen not a few British-made productions, the first of these being "The Case of Lady Camber." Two other British features were recently given a private screening at the Garrick, these being "Possession" and "Kissing Cup's Race."

The Garrick is practically a new moving picture theatre for Winnipeg and is locally owned and operated. Afternoon prices are 10c. and 25c. while evening prices range from 20c. to 40c.

KANSAS CITY

Ralph Simmons is again back at his previous position as manager of the Kansas City branch of the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, after successfully putting over "The County Fair" with Harry Taylor with the S. and T. Film Company. The latter organization has temporarily ceased activity pending the consummation of deals, and "The County Fair" has been turned over to exchanges for distribution.

Several new theatres have been opened in the Kansas City territory this month, including the Strand at Sharon Springs, Kans., owned by W. E. Ward; the Alice at Hope, Ark., costing $190,000 and owned by F. S. Horton, and the Electric at Stockton, Mo., owned by E. J. Hoff.

G. W. Hinton, formerly Kansas City manager of Associated Producers, will continue as representative manager of Associated Producers' product in Associated First National exchanges, while Sam Stoll, formerly sales representative for Associated Producers, will continue to handle that product through the First National office.

Box office figures at downtown first run houses in Kansas City last week took a decided jump, as a result of "Go To Theatre Week," a campaign which was fostered by the Kansas City Post, a daily newspaper which devoted an entire colored section to the event in its Sunday edition.

SAN DIEGO

One of the latest types of "American" photoplayers has been installed at the California Theatre by Manager Whitson. Other improvements have been made at this house since the Whitson interests took it over, and now it is counted as one of the best of the popular priced motion picture theatres in the southwest. It has a seating capacity of 800.

The Plaza showed to capacity when it offered for a week "The Sign on the Door," featuring Norma Talmadge. The Plaza gives six shows a day, the first at 11 a. m. and the last beginning at 9 p. m.

The bible organ recitals which Manager Wall of the Rialto theatre inaugurated recently as a Sunday morning feature are proving very popular. These are given at 11:45 a. m. and are free to the public.

Mrs. Paul Maiss, wife of the organist at the Superba theatre, has been appearing as a vocalist as an added feature at this house. The Ince production, "The Cup of Life," proved a big attraction during its week's showing.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

Charles Lovenberg, manager of the Keith vaudeville and moving-picture houses in Rhode Island, celebrated his 50th anniversary in the theatrical world here during the week of Oct. 10. He was the recipient of hundreds of telegrams and letters, while his employes gave him a beautiful loving cup.

The Rialto theatre has obtained the franchise for this city of the Realart pictures, the first of which presented Alice Brady on October 17. Several big Universal specials have also been purchased.

After a run of six weeks in Providence, R. I. "Over the Hill," which met with phenomenal patronage closed at the Providence Opera House, October 22. The next picture to be run at this house is "The Queen of Sheba," which is booked for an indefinite engagement.

SO. CAROLINA

Gerald O. Gallagher, who for some months has been manager of the Imperial theatre, Columbia, S. C., has been transferred by the Lynch offices to Atlanta, Ga., where he will have charge of the new Howard theatre. In this new capacity he will be assistant chief of exploitation for the entire Lynch chain of theatres and will also have entire charge of exploitation for the Howard. Mr. Gallagher went to Columbia from Spartanburg.

J. L. Hursey, manager of the Casino and Garing theatres at Greenville, S. C., has been transferred to Columbia, S. C., where he will have charge of the Lynch theatres in the latter city. J. L. Covo, formerly stationed in Greenville, will return to that city to take charge of the Casino and the Garing.

George H. Hickman, who was the victim of bullets fired by the men who attempted to rob the Palace theatre, Jacksonville, Fla., and in connection with which Attorney John H. Pope was found guilty of murder in the first degree, was formerly stationed in Spartanburg, S. C., as manager of a local theatre.

MINNEAPOLIS

John LeRoy Johnston, formerly advertising director for the Finkelstein and Ruben enterprises at Minneapolis and for the past six months connected with the Paramount exploitation department at Los Angeles has returned to the Twin Cities. At present Mr. Johnston is managing the Minneapolis Auditorium. The Auditorium is leased by Joseph Freidman, who is erecting a new independent theatre at St. Paul.

G. R. Ainsworth, former manager of the General Film company at Pittsburg, later manager of the Fox exchange there and more recently manager for Pathe at Washington, D. C., has leased the Olympic theatre at Melrose, Minn., for a long term period. The Olympic is a comparatively new theatre, being only about a year old and has a seating capacity of 600. It is modern and up-to-date in every respect.

INDIANAPOLIS

English's Opera House, legitimate, has booked a revival production of "The Birth of a Nation" for the week of Oct. 23. The seat scale ranges from twenty-five cents to one dollar with tax extra.

The Alhambra last Saturday morning entertained several hundred carrier kids of the Indiana Daily Times at a special performance of "Beyond." Before the show, the kids, headed by their drum corps paraded through the downtown streets with banners announcing their destination.

G. G. Schmidt, owner of the Crystal and several neighborhood houses, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Indiana and member of the city council of Indianapolis, has been chosen as the council's representative on the city plan commission. Mr. Schmidt has been active in the city plan movement since it was started in Indiana more than a year ago. It is rumored that Mr. Schmidt will be a candidate for the Republican nomination for one of the seats in the senate of the state legislature next spring.

DETROIT

While two football games were under way a few blocks away, at a paid admission price, all of the theatres in Sault Ste. Marie, were forced to close their doors last Sunday as a result of an edict from the Ministers association of that city threatening every exhibitor and every patron with arrest should the shows go on.

The exhibitors at the Soo at first attempted to fight the matter, but later decided to withdraw rather than involve their patrons in a court contest. The ministers stationed themselves at the doors of the theatres, armed with pencil and paper to take down the names of every person entering.

Two important announcements pertaining to theatre managements in this territory were made last week. Thomas H. Ealand, for several years connected with the Charles H. Miles theatrical interests in Detroit and Cleveland, as general manager, is to become the manager of the new Tuxedo theatre, which opens Monday Oct. 24, with a policy of family vaudeville and pictures with two changes weekly. Herb L. Weil, well known to every exhibitor in the Michigan territory, will take charge of the new Macomb theatre at Mt. Clemens.

Fred North, for the past three years salesman for the Paramount Detroit exchange, has been made manager, according to announcement by Harry Ross, division manager of this territory.

In connection with the first showing anywhere of her latest picture, "What No Man Knows," Clara Kimball Young is making her second personal appearance at John H. Kunsky's Madison theatre, in six months.

CLEVELAND

All of the exchange managers in the Film Building clubbed together and presented Art Schmidt, of Universal Film Corporation, with a diamond tie pin in memory of their pleasant experiences while associated together. Schmidt left Cleveland, which has been his headquarters as district manager for Universal, to be an important factor in the New York Universal office.

J. H. Lichtenstein has joined the local Fox organization as publicity manager.

Synchronized Scenario Music Company of Ohio commanded by Dave Warner has moved its headquarters to 316 Film Company.

R. R. Schultz is now handing out Vitagraph contracts to exhibitors in and about Cleveland. Schultz formerly was connected with the sales force of the local Robertson-Cole organization.

George W. Erdmann has left Cleveland. He leaves the local management of Associated Producers, to open an Associated Producers office in Indianapolis in connection with the Indianapolis First National Exchange.

H. A. Bandy stays in Cleveland in charge of Associated Producers productions in Ohio.

The Ohio censors have held up Marshall Neilan's "Bits of Life." The show was scheduled for showing this week at the Park. At the last minute "The Conquering Power" was substituted.

WESTERN NEW YORK

Harry Morey, president of the General Theatres Corporation, Buffalo, which controls a chain of neighborhood houses, announces the following changes in managers, effective October 24th:

Jim Wallingford from the Central Park to the Ellen Terry; Harry Dixon from the Star to the Central Park; John Stevens from the Ellen Terry to the Marlowe; O. T. Schroeppel from the Circle to the Star.

Billie West comes from Niagara Falls to manage the Circle. Mr. West was formerly associated with the General Theatres Corporation as manager of the Circle.

Bob Wagner, former manager of the Buffalo Educational exchange, has resigned as manager of the Star theatre, Dansville, and has been succeeded by W. L. Trass, formerly at the Park theatre, Hammondsport. The Opera House in Dansville has been purchased by the Star company.

Edward J. Hayes, manager of the Buffalo First National exchange, has added the Hippodrome, Niagara Falls, and the Elk, Buffalo, to the western New York franchise army. Ben Levine, state supervisor of sales, were in Buffalo over the week end for conferences with Mr. Hayes and his salesmen in the Lafayette hotel. "Mother o' Mine," a First National offering was the feature on the bill at the opening of the new Loew State theatre. Hope Hampton, an F. N. star, appeared at the State in person. W. F. Clark was in town taking care of Miss Hampton's publicity. The star was accompanied by her manager Jules Brulatour. "One Arabian Night," will receive an elaborate presentation at Shea's Hippodrome next week.

The Opera House in Oakfield, N. Y., has been purchased by Frank Aprile who controls the Rex theatre in Geneseo.

Special Service Section on

"Our Mutual Friend"

"YOU'LL like the theatre after seeing 'Our Mutual Friend.'"

That is the keynote of the selling message that the distributors have suggested on "Our Mutual Friend" to exhibitors—and it is a keynote that well fits the production. Insert your theatre name, change the phrase to "You'll like the Blank theatre better after seeing 'Our Mutual Friend,'" and you have the thought that should be in mind in exploiting this production.

Go after "Our Mutual Friend" with two arrows to your bow—an appeal to the class patronage of your town or city and a direct slam at the fans. It's a picture that can be handled that way. The producers have termed it "The Perfect Movie," because it answers every demand that could be made of a motion picture continuity—mystery, thrills, and love interest. That for the fans. On the other hand, never forget for a moment the wide appeal of the Charles Dickens name to a large section of the public.

Start in Advance

IF we had booked "Our Mutual Friend" this would be one occasion when we would start our exploitation work well in advance. For there is room for direct mail work of a sort that is certain to bring results, provided the class of people you will go after in this mail work know about the picture in plenty of time. They are not the habitual picture fans who can be counted on to drop into some theatre almost any night. Rather, they are the people who know Dickens and the story from which this picture was made, and if you let them know in time they'll set aside a night to attend the presentation.

And Such a Blonde!

In the Picturization of Charles Dickens' "Our Mutual Friend"

The principals of the schools, and, perhaps, the teachers; local clergymen; officers of the women's clubs, church societies, etc., in fact, the "telephone directory" class are the ones to make up these direct mail lists. Make the appeal direct and simple—a few words will do the job better than lengthy fulsome praise. Something like this:

"We believe you will be more than interested in the picturization of Charles Dickens last complete novel, 'Our Mutual Friend,' which we will present at the Blank theatre next week. This is one of the selected list of unusual photoplays chosen by the Better Films organizations as worthy of encouragement and support. We will appreciate the value of your good will in aiding us to bring more and more of the better films to Ourtown X. and assure you an evening of rare enjoyment and charm when you visit the Blank theatre during the run of 'Our Mutual Friend.'"

Thrills and romance blend in "Our Mutual Friend," the new F. B. Warren special adapted from Charles Dickens' novel

Two characters "they'll just love," and a love story the women will sigh about in "Our Mutual Friend"

It Hits Both Ways

DON'T get the impression that because we are suggesting appeals to the supposed "highbrows" of your city that this is the sort of picture allowing only that opportunity for exploitation. But in this angle there is the chance to tap unexplored resources and draw people to whom the screen ordinarily has little appeal and at the same time, by the excellence of the entertainment offered, have the assurance that they will be "sold" into future patronage of your house. Remember that—one appeal of this sort to the "better" patronage links your house in their minds with the unusual pictures forever more.

Other appeals to lovers of Dickens have been furnished by the producers for use with this picture and they are the sort that can be used. There is a bulletin sheet that could very easily secure posting on the bulletin boards of the public libraries. Perhaps the judicious use of a few passes will help in this respect.

Where book-store tie-ups are possible and worth-while the opportunity is presented here. Another dealers' tie-up that might be used in windows of all sorts and on store-doors is the printing of neat cards reading: "We consider you OUR MUTUAL FRIEND. Walk in." The invitation can be elaborated to suit the dealers using the card.

"Our Mutual Friend" the Perfect Movie

Exhibitors should get the benefit of this slogan used by the producers to let the public know that here is everything that a "movie" calls for in story and action, plus the genius of Charles Dickens.

How About the Clubs?

THERE'S an appeal in the title to such organizations as The Rotary Clubs, Kiwanis, etc., that should not be overlooked—and you are lucky in having the sort of picture that will meet with approval from this class. You won't have the guilty feeling of getting them into your theatre through a title or stunt and then disappointing them with a cheap "movie."

"Our Mutual Friend" nights when the members of the different organizations would attend the showing can be arranged and the secretaries of the clubs counted upon for publicity. How about selling blocks of tickets—which the clubs could sell to their members at prices they set, taking the profit for some fund?

The two characters shown in the upper right hand corner of this page provide much of the good humor in this production. For a street stunt there is a chance here in dressing up two men to walk about in such costume. One of the characters has a wooden leg—if you can get a one-legged old-timer so much the better, but at any rate you can build a large fake stump to cover the shoe of your man or else disregard the wooden leg entirely. It isn't essential if you get two characters who are picturesque enough to attract attention.

The ad-cuts prepared by the producers on this picture go at the newspaper problem in much the same way that exhibitors will find best to use in practically all communities. They play the name of Charles Dickens up in fair prominence in connection with the title but then go on to sell the romance, mystery, and thrills of the production. This is the neatest way to handle it. There is no need of driving home with a sledge hammer to the booklovers of your town that this is a Charles Dickens story proper prominence the name of the author, the title of the picture, and a picture of one of the characters will do that. This class doesn't need hammer and tong slams. But then go on to let all followers of pictures know that it is also as much a movie story as they could desire.

If your dates on "Our Mutual Friend" are set sometime in the future we would suggest that you watch the news columns for the next few weeks. For we understand that the production is scheduled for a big New York opening and have no doubt that the theatre presenting it there will contribute many new angles to the exploitation of this delightful subject.

Get the Newspapers and Clubwomen

In every community there is a leading clubwoman or other prominent person who seems to have the knack of securing publicity—consciously or unconsciously by their every action. Get to this sort of person on "Our Mutual Friend." Let them know far in advance that you are going to present the portrayal of a Dickens novel and ask their opinion. Before they get through you will have more than the opinion—you'll get cooperation, for they will feel the subtle appreciation of their intelligence and culture implied by your letter.

The same idea can be worked on some of the newspaper men in your town along the lines of enlisting their aid in furthering the better films cause. Get busy!

You'll Like the Theatre Better After Seeing

There's another slogan that will have efficient selling value to a large portion of your public. Teaser copy of real value can be built on the vast meaning in the words, "You'll like the theatre better after seeing 'Our Mutual Friend.'"

WHAT THE MAKERS SAY ABOUT PICTURES

R. S. Cole, president of R-C Pictures Corporation

Strong Cast Presented in "Silas Marner"

A strong cast is presented in "Silas Marner," which Frank P. Donovan is producing from the famous story of the same name by Georgie Eliot.

Work on the production began a little over a fortnight ago at the Biograph Studios and is now more than half completed. Mr. Donovan is personally directing the picture and expects to complete work by the end of the month.

Prominent in the cast is Robert Kenyon, whose legitimate stage work is widely known. Though he has been appearing on the screen only for comparatively a short time, his work in "The Power Within" received unstinted praise.

Besides Mr. Kenyon the cast includes Marguerite Courtot, Craufurd Kent, Virginia Lee and Ralph Kellard.

"The Little Minister" Two-Thirds Complete

Betty Compson is more than two-thirds through her newest Paramount picture, a Penrhyn Stanlaws production of Sir James M. Barrie's play, "The Little Minister," which was adapted by E. A. Bingham. After several weeks spent at the Lasky Ranch where the Thrums Village set was used, the players are now at work in the studio on interiors of the manse, etc. George Hackathorne plays the role of Gavin, and Nigel Barrie is doing the heavy part. This picture will abound in types and the gypsy-like character of Lady Babbie is said to suit the dainty star perfectly. Thompson Buchanan is supervising.

Press Commends "His Nibs"

Trade Reviewers Hail Chic Sale Picture as Unusually Fine Comedy

A DECIDEDLY humorous offering, clean, novel, and interesting, and having in its leading role a vaudeville star of the first magnitude, is the concensus of opinion voiced by the trade press critics with regards to "His Nibs," in which "Chic" Sales plays seven different parts.

George D. Gould in THE MOTION PICTURE NEWS writes:

"With each moment replete with real humor, really artistic characterization, and undisturbed continuity flow, a picture is bound to 'get over.' 'His Nibs' is in that class. Charles 'Chic' Sales is the star. From start to finish he puts over the 'hokum' of his rube characterizations, so well known to vaudeville audiences throughout the country, in rapid-fire fashion."

In the "Exhibitors Trade Review" "His Nibs" receives the following comment:

"This offering is a distinct novelty. There is comedy and plenty of it, and it is upon that the picture makes its bid for popularity. Few pictures have ever contained such clearly indicated opportunities for showmanship and at comparatively little expense."

C. S. Sewell in "The Moving Picture World" states:

"Here is a production that is entirely different from anything yet presented on the screen. His portrayal of 'His Nibs' is one of the best characterizations ever seen on the screen. His make-up in this role is excellent, his humorous touches sure and his interpretation so real that even while you are enjoying the quaint side of his character you feel a strong sympathy for the old man."

Arthur James, editor-in-chief of "The Moving Picture World," has this to say editorially:

"Charles Sale, otherwise Chic Sale of vaudeville, is the newest and best recruit to the screen's actors of importance and he has succeeded in the Exceptional Picture, "His Nibs," in contriving a charming novelty that is as clean as a hound's tooth and as downright funny as anything that has featured its way into our view for a long time."

Three R-C Subjects Started

Two Widely Read Novels and Popular Play Being Made for Screen

WITH the production forces of R-C Pictures working overtime in filming two widely known novels and one popular stage play, the West Coast studios of the company are buzzing with activity under the supervision of R. J. Tobin, director general of production.

Having completed "Silent Years" Louis J. Gasnier is now giving his attention to "The Call of Home," founded upon the novel "Home," from the pen of George Agnew Chamberlain. Miss Eve Unsell, chief of the R-C scenario department, followed the book as closely as possible. The cast for "The Call of Home" includes Irene Rich, Leon Bary, Ramsay Wallace, Jobyna Ralston, Carl Stockdale, Robert Bolder, Margaret Mann, Wadsworth Harris, Genevieve Blinn and James O. Barrows.

Pauline Frederick, having completed "The Lure of Jade," is now turning her attention to "Judith of Blue Lake Ranch," based upon the novel of the same name by Jackson Gregory. It was adapted by Winfred Dunn. Colin Campbell will be the director. The cast will include Miss Frederick, Tom Santschi, Otis Harlan, L. C. Shumway, Clarissa Selwynne, Dave Winter, James Curtis, Philip Hubbard, Billy Elmer, Jean Calhoun, Tom Bates, James Winter, Sam Appel, Joseph Singleton and Eugene Pallette.

Doris May's next starring vehicle—her second, to follow "The Foolish Age," will be "Eden and Return," a romantic comedy from the stage success of the same name by Ralph E. Renaud. This subject is now progressing rapidly. The adaptation was made by Beatrice Van. William A. Seiter is the director. Among the players to support Miss May are Emmett King, Margaret Livingston, Earle Metcalf, Margaret Campbell, Buddy Post and Gerald Pring.

Nichols Returns to Stage

Fred J. Nichols, who appeared in the George Arliss starring vehicle, "Disraeli," will be seen in a character role in "Brittie," starring Mae Marsh, scheduled to make a late autumn premier.

What Exceptional Means

ALEXANDER BEYFUSS, vice-president and general manager of Exceptional Pictures Corporation, has issued this statement:

"In selecting the title for our corporation (Exceptional) it necessarily devolved upon us to make that name good. Except upon that basis, we could not hope to continue to exist and become a convincing factor in the industry.

"In deciding upon 'Exceptional Pictures,' we were obliged to use, as the keynote of our policy, a definition laid down many years ago by a mind which we are happy to be guided by—Noah Webster.

"Webster's Dictionary is an accepted standard. It defines 'Exceptional' as follows: 'Forming an exception, not ordinary, uncommon, rare—hence, better than the average, superior.'

"We cheerfully accept Mr. Webster's formation of our policy and, to date, have offered Martin Johnson's 'Jungle Adventures' and Charles (Chic) Sale in 'His Nibs' as pictorial definitions of 'Exceptional.' From every printed and spoken word we have been able to gather the public and the industry have likewise accepted them."

Baby Peggy Picture on Broadway This Week

"A Muddy Bride," featuring Baby Peggy, the youngest star in the movies, plays at the Central theatre, New York, the week of October 2d. The little girl, who is only 25 months old, is supported by grown-ups and also by little Jackie Morgan.

Noted Cartoonists Join International News

MR. E. B. HETRICK, secretary and general manager of the International News Reel Corporation, the new organization behind the International News Reel, distributed by Universal, announces that T. A. Dorgan's famous "Indoor Sports" cartoons and Tom Powers's "Joys and Glooms" cartoons soon will be added to that news reel.

An "Indoor Sports" cartoon will be included in each even number of the International News Reel, released on Mondays, and the "Joys and Glooms" in each odd number, released on Thursdays. Each will be complete in itself; each a short comic cartoon told in action.

The first issue of the International News Reel to contain a Tad "Indoor Sports" cartoon will be number 86, released October 31. The first Tom Powers "Joys and Glooms" cartoons will be International News No. 87, released November 3. Thereafter they will alternate.

Select Exchanges Get "Way of Maid"

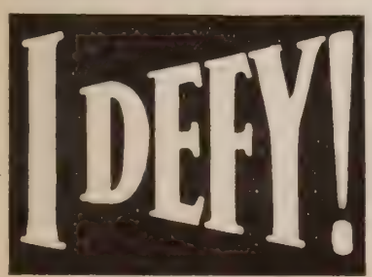
The next Elaine Hammerstein picture, "The Way of a Maid," has been cleared from the Selznick laboratories and shipped to Select exchanges. The release date is set for November 10 and from the conviction that followed a studio showing of the new picture the Selznick forces declare that this will be among the most popular of Miss Hammerstein's releases.

Rex Taylor's story was directed by William P. S. Earle and the filming was done some time ago at Selznick's Studios in Fort Lee, N. J., at a time when most of the producers of pictures were taking "time off" for readjustments. Diana Allen and George Fawcett have prominence in Miss Hammerstein's support.

Ince Starts "Jim" with an All-Star Cast

A productional season that promises to be the most active in the history of the Thomas H. Ince Studios opened this week at the Culver City plant with the filming of the first scene of "Jim," a powerful drama scheduled for release by Associated First National.

The new Ince special will feature an all-star cast, which includes John Bowers in the title role, Milton Sills, Marguerite de la Motte, Aggie Herring and Harry Todd. John Griffith Wray is directing.



N. Y. Welcomes "Bits of Life"

Critics Agree, Commend Novelty of Neilan Production

THE newspapers of New York City are as one in recognizing Marshall Neilan's "Bits of Life" as a dramatic innovation and unite in praising the producer for espousing and expounding a new idea in motion picture which is worthy of being perpetuated as a definite form of pictorial entertainment.

"Bits of Life," which is a First National attraction, opened its metropolitan engagement at the Capitol Theatre, New York City on Sunday, October 16th, presented under the personal supervision of S. L. Rothapfel.

The New York World stated: "Cinema patrons may refer to 'Bits of Life,' a unique motion picture being shown at the Capitol theatre this week, as a novelty. But this photoplay, which combines into one reel four separate stories, each of a distinct character and treatment, is far more than that. It will take its place as a permanent and highly interesting department of motion picture making and programme building, the same as double exposure, color tinting, multiple-reel features and the prologue in life."

The New York Times treats the picture from a different angle, but in an equally serious vein, commenting upon and commending it as a welcome departure from the stereotyped feature, made to order on a footage basis. On this subject, the Times is particularly worth quoting, for the grasp it shows of the true situation at the average theatre.

"One of the chief complaints against many photoplays is that they are too long," observes the Times. "They are padded until everything in them that might be of interest is smothered. This is due in part to the fact that exhibitors demand footage. Programs, you know, are as unchangeable in their form as the laws of the Medes and Persians. Give the average exhibitor the finest photodramatic work in the world and if it is only two, three or four reels long he doesn't know what to do with it.

"It's up to the directors, then, to supply footage. So they pad. They find a fairly good story that can be best told in two or three reels, and they industriously go to work to make it fill five or six. That is, they do so almost invariably. And, of course, tiresome photoplays are the result.

"But Marshall Neilan has done something different. He has made a feature of prescribed length, but he has told four stories in it, instead of one. The first person to do this, according to the records, was Charles J. Brabin, who made "While New York Sleeps," which you may remember gave you a set of separate thrillers in one film. And now Mr. Neilan offers you his four in 'Bits of Life.' Who's the next? Let somebody else carry on the good work."

To Push Kinograms on Top

Educational to Strive for Perfection in News Weekly

EXPANSION and improvement until "there will be no question that Kinograms is the best reel on the market." This is the program that has been mapped out for Educational's news reel, according to a letter written a few days ago to E. W. Hammons, president of Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., by Capt. G. McL. Baynes, head of the Kinograms Publishing Corporation.

"This is just one example of the increased activity, expenditure and effort generally that is being exerted on all of our product for the new year," said Mr. Hammons in announcing receipt of Capt. Baynes's letter, which was written following a tour of many key cities made by Capt. Baynes.

Capt. Baynes's letter to Mr. Hammons said in part:

"As you know I have just returned from a tour of some of your branches—six in all—and I want to express to you the enthusiasm and satisfaction I feel in having our product, Kinograms, in your hands. I have had a great deal to do with a number of distributors and have called on a number of branches throughout the country and I have yet to see an organization as complete as yours for handling the product you are handling. I want to say that my information has not been gathered from your own branches and your own employes, but from Mr. Exhibitor.

"I probably called on some seventy or eighty well-known and substantial exhibitors and every one of them was most enthusiastic not only about your product—which they all claim they could not get along without—but as to the service they are receiving from your exchanges. The class of men you are employing are undoubtedly the best type in the field, and they have the greatest asset a distributing organization could have; and that is, they are 100 per cent sold on your product and on the personnel of your company.

"I have come back so 'pepped' up about our future that I have arranged with the Associated Screen News to purchase the entire stock of the Kinograms Publishing Corporation. I am resigning as president of the Associated Screen News and intend to devote my entire time and the resources of the Kinograms Publishing Corporation to nothing but producing the best news reel on the market, and believe me, there will be no expense or energy spared on our part to give you the product that you so rightly deserve—the product that will rank equally with the productions you are now putting out—and we will not only hold the good name that we have earned since your organization has taken over the distribution, but we hope to improve to such an extent that there will be no question that Kinograms is the best reel on the market."

Five Realart Subjects to Start Next Week

Five directors start work next week at Realart in new productions. Chester M. Franklin will wield the megaphone for Bebe Daniels, while Frank Urson, Maurice Campbell, Thomas Heffron and William D. Taylor are to direct, respectively, Mary Miles Minter, Constance Binney, Wanda Hawley and May McAvoy. These are repeat assignments, as the directors named have just finished photoplays with the same stellar players.

Big Bookings Open Season

Metro Reports Tremendous Demand Greets Array of Features

NEVER in the history of the industry, the officials of Metro Pictures Corporation announce from the home offices in New York, has any producing and distributing company been greeted by such a demand for its issues as has Metro this fall at the outset of the 1921-1922 season.

Metro bases this belief upon the extraordinary influx of contracts for the three big initial productions, "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" and the second Rex Ingram masterpiece, "The Conquering Power," and Nazimova's modernized screen version of "Camille"; and the no less brisk booking of the twenty-nine other pictures planned for release before the expiration of the season.

These include the third Ingram production, "Turn to the Right," an elaborate picture presentation of the great John Golden stage hit, written by Winchell Smith and Jack Hazzard; for the new series of Gareth Hughes features, produced by George D. Baker for S-L (Arthur Sawyer and Herbert Lubin) Pictures; and the big specials starring Bert Lytell, Viola Dana and Alice Lake.

The Metro program calls for a minimum of thirty-two releases for the coming year, and in innumerable instances exhibitors have signed up for the entire list, basing their belief in their drawing power upon the past performances of Metro specials upon the knowledge of the merit of the stories chosen and the abilities of the several stars who are to enact their principal roles.

A significant instance of pre-production booking was the receipt at the Metro offices recently, upon the announcement that Rex Ingram's picture to follow "Turn to the Right" would be "The Prisoner of Zenda," of twenty-six telegrams from exhibitors in various parts of the United States and Canada, asking priority in showing the picture—not yet begun—in their several territories.

Criterion Changes Policy to "Two a Day"

ON Saturday, October 15, the Criterion theatre, under the managing directionship of Hugo Riesenfeld, entered upon a new policy, presenting two performances a day, at 2:30 and 8:15 P. M. This radical departure is said to have been dictated by the prospect of a large number of big features of multiple-reel length which Dr. Riesenfeld now has on his tentative schedule for future showings.

The opening picture under this new policy is George Fitzmaurice's Paramount production, "Peter Ibbetson," adapted from George du Maurier's novel and the play by John Nathan Raphael and starring Elsie Ferguson and Wallace Reid. Other noted players to be seen in the cast are Elliott Dexter, George Fawcett, Montague Love, Dolores Cassinelli, Barbara Dean and Paul McAllister. The prices scale to $2 top and the performances, consisting of the feature, short reels and music, run about the same length of time which prevails in the legitimate houses.

Fifth Mermaid Comedy Nears Completion

Jack White, supervising director of Mermaid Comedies, with a company of forty players, has been taking the concluding scenes in the fifth of the new series of Mermaid Comedies being made for Educational release at San Pedro in the last few days. These final shots in this picture, which is as yet untitled, are nautical scenes.

Booking "Wallingford" Film

Vitagraph Reports Heavy Demand for Picture Among Big Theatres

THEATRE managers all over the United States and Canada are reported to be recognizing the big publicity pull back of Vitagraph's super-feature, "The Son of Wallingford." The fame of its authors—creators of the original Wallingford characters—the wide publicity received by the title through its publication in Collier's Weekly, and its success as a book, all have impelled managers to inquire about this special. Moreover, managers who may not have recognized the full value of these advantages have had their attention aroused, declares Vitagraph, by the circulation of the story in hundreds of newspapers to which George Randolph Chester, the author, syndicated the story in the United States and Canada.

The real harvest of bookings was reaped from exhibitors coincident with the showing at the Vitagraph branch office at Los Angeles. Within one week's date from screening, the branch manager had booked this big Vitagraph special at the palatial Kinema theatre in Los Angeles, and in addition to this he wrote contracts for first runs in 28 towns within a radius of a few miles of that city. The Los Angeles booking is for a run of at least one week; the runs in the smaller cities range from showing of from two days to one week.

Among the earlier theatres to book "The Son of Wallingford" was the Capitol at Hartford, the largest in the entire state of Connecticut; and Allen's theatre at Cleveland. Vitagraph's Minneapolis branch office has booked "The Son of Wallingford" into the Capitol theatre at St. Paul and the State theatre, the latter in Minneapolis. Pantages in Salt Lake and the Crescent in Syracuse are among the larger theatres which have arranged for this special during the past few days.

Lee Moran With Century

Comedian Will Star in Series of 2 Reelers; Blanch Payson Opposite

LEE MORAN, former Universal-Jewell comedy star and a member of the famous film comedy team of Lyons and Moran, has been engaged for a series of super-Century comedies, it is announced by Julius Stern, president of Century Film Corporation.

Until about six months ago the team of Lyons and Moran was one of the most popular in the business. "La La Lucille," "A Shocking Night," "Fixed by George," "Once a Plumber" were some of their most successful five-reelers. Then the pair found there was a greater demand for two-reelers in the comedy line and they made "Blue Sunday" and "Roman Romeos."

Last summer the partners split after being together for over eight years, and Moran made two Universal-Jewel two-reel comedies by himself, "Robinson's Trousseau" and "P. D. Q." which were of such excellence that Mr. Stern was moved to enter into negotiations with him to make super-comedy two-reelers for Century.

As a single comedian, Lee Moran is declared by Century officials to be much stronger than he was as part of a team. Several snappy scenarios have been bought by Century for Mr. Moran, although he reserves the privilege of changing them and inserting his own particular brand of humor. One of the tallest comediennes on the screen has been engaged as his leading lady. She is Blanch Payson, who is six feet four inches tall in her stocking feet.

Lee Moran will be directed by Alf Goulding and will have as one of his starring vehicles a story dealing with lions, for he showed by his work in "Roman Romeos" that he knew how to handle them and was not hesitant of working in scenes with them.

Picture Players in Broadway Play

In "Lilies of the Field," which the Garrick Productions are presenting at the Klaw theatre, New York, Marie Doro, a favorite motion picture actress, formerly identified with Paramount and Pioneer releases, is the star. She is supported by Norman Trevor, fast become a familiar personage to picture followers, and recently seen opposite Mabel Ballin in the Hugo Ballin production, "Jane Eyre," (Hodkinson). The play has been personally directed by Harry MacRae Webster, formerly of the old Essanay and for many years a motion picture director.

Heavy First-Run Booking for "Never Weaken"

"NO previous Lloyd comedy had a more representative list of first run bookings at the time of its release than 'Never Weaken,'" says a statement from the offices of Associated Exhibitors.

"Already booking arrangements have been, or are about to be completed, for big first run showings in New York, Indianapolis, Los Angeles, Dallas, Chicago, Minneapolis, St. Louis, Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Washington, Kansas City, Denver, Omaha, Seattle, Salt Lake City, Des Moines, Newark, Charlotte, Buffalo, Milwaukee and Spokane.

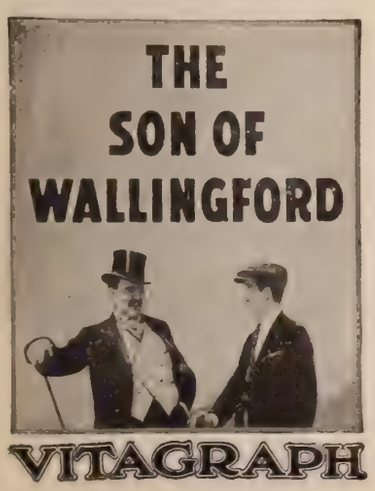
"The offering has been praised from every angle not only by those exhibitors who have booked it, but by the newspaper people in the various exchange cities and by the trade papers," continues the statement. "We expect that the second series of Associated Harold Lloyd comedies, starting with 'Never Weaken,' will exceed all previously established records."

Los Angeles Winner in First National Drive

Final returns in the Summer Sales Contest conducted annually by Associated First National Pictures, Inc., show that the Los Angeles exchange won the coveted first prize for the largest amount of played and paid business obtained during the ten weeks' contest period. The reward, 1¼% per cent of the gross receipts of the territory ,will be divided among the employes of the office.

The second prize of 1% was won by Denver; the third of ⅞ of 1% by New Jersey; the fourth of ¾ of 1% by Pittsburgh, and Charlotte and Atlanta captured the fifth prize, winning ⅝ of 1%.

The final standings of the other exchanges were as follows: Oklahoma, Washington, New Orleans, Minneapolis and Milwaukee, Detroit, Chicago, Vancouver, Omaha and Kansis City, Toronto, Montreal and St. Johns, Louisville, Dallas, San Francisco, St. Louis, Boston and New Haven, Indianapolis, Seattle and Portland, New York and Buffalo, Philadelphia, Cleveland and Cincinnati.



Reviewers Acclaim "Theodora"

NEVER before in the history of the motion picture industry have so many superlative adjectives been used by the motion picture critics of the New York newspapers in their reviews as was the case last week with "Theodora," Goldwyn's Italian spectacular film which received its world premiere at the Astor theatre where it is playing at $2 top.

Here are a few of the headlines over the reviews: Herald—"Play of Dazzling Scenes. Spectacular Picture Excels in its Stupendous Settings"; American—"Perpetual Feast for the Eye. One Inspiring Picture Follows Another with No Let Up in Great Screen Achievement"; World—"A Wonder Spectacle"; Telegraph—"Gives Gorgeous Picture. Is Massive and Magnificent"; Mail—"Greatest of Screen Spectacles, Impressive in Magnificence and Thrills with Sensational Acting"; Telegram—"Biggest Film Spectacle Ever Shown"; Journal—"A Magnificent Production."

In his review of Theodora in the New York World, Louis V. DeFoe wrote: "'Stupendous' is not a too extravagant adjective for this spectacle. To adequately describe it would tax even the vocabulary of a P. T. Barnum. Architecturally alone—forgetting every element of drama in it—'Theodora' is a marvel of marvels. It is as if all the glories of ancient Byzantium had been transferred untarnished to the twentieth century."

The New York Times said of it: "As a spectacle this picture is truly magnificent. Most of the Hollywood products seem like small-town stuff beside this tremendous production. Spectators are convinced that they are seeing Byzantium and its people on the screen. There are dramatic thrills in the picture, too, not only the excitement of battles and murders and masses of men in motion, but the more telling effect of contrast, the contrast of cold, indifferent marble and hot, impassioned humanity. Rushed to an exciting end."

Will Rogers has a new type of role in "Doubling for Romeo," a Goldwyn release

New York Herald: "A live wire connection with history. It is through its tremendous settings that the picture is likely to become one of the sights of New York. The film . . . becomes one of the most regal of love stories. Lustrous beauty and a splendid imperial carriage are given to the part of Theodora by Rita Jolivet."

Journal of Commerce: "Colossal screen spectacle."

Alan Dale, dramatic critic of the New York American, wrote: "Collect all your 'Ohs' and 'Ahs' and your interjections of acute gaspology when you see 'Theodora.' Even the press agent fell down in his job of extollation which calls for a new stock of superlatives. I never closed an eye, I assure you. My attention never wandered. It was impossible to escape the lure of the thing. 'Theodora' is a very long picture. It seemed short."

Harriette Underhill in the New York Tribune: "Will fill the theatre just as long as Goldwyn sees fit to keep it there. A colossal achievement. All around us we heard exclamations of delight."

The Morning Telegraph: "Massive and gorgeous beyond description. A gigantic spectacle, beautifully presented, magnificently costumed, and enacted with a great deal of vigor. The mob scenes are splendidly handled. Rita Jolivet is brilliant. It is an extraordinary performance she gives."

New Ass'd Exhibitors Picture

ASSOCIATED EXHIBITORS, INC., have announced as their next Associated feature the Allan Dwan production, "The Sin of Martha Queed." The production is in six reels and was written and directed personally by Allan Dwan.

"The Sin of Martha Queed" is described as a heart-interest drama woven around the career of an innocent girl whose sin exists only in the warped and suspicious mind of her domineering father. The moral of the production tends to show that it is the force of good and evil thoughts that make and unmake the world, for the sin of Martha Queed was a sin only of suspicion.

The cast includes several names of importance, including Mary Thurman, who portrays the title role; Niles Welch is the hero. Joseph Dowling is the girl's domineering father, and Eugenie Besserer is the long suffering mother. Frank Campeau has a powerful part as the worthless, half-degenerate character whom Martha's father compels her to marry in order to hide her supposed sin. George Hackathorn is a pitiful cripple, who worships the girl without the hope of his love's return. Gertrude Claire plays his aged mother.

In directing this production Allan Dwan gave his distinctive attention to atmosphere and detail, and is said to have accomplished a result which compares most favorably with his other big successes. Associated Exhibitors state that, since the release of their previous Associated Features, over fifty productions have been reviewed without their being released by them, but when negotiations over this feature were consummated they were absolutely confident they had secured a release which matches up with their policy of releasing as Associated Features only such attractions as are distinguished by rare amusement value and unusual box-office merit.

The release date of "The Sin of Martha Queed," has been set for November 3rd. An elaborate campaign book is in the course of preparation and posters, which include an exceptionally effective twenty-four sheet, are about ready. The feature, which is presented by the Mayflower Photoplay, will be distributed by Associated Exhibitors, Inc., through Pathe Exchange, Inc., as an Allan Dwan production.

Former Associated Features include "The Devil," in which George Arliss made his screen debut; the Holman Day timberlands drama, "The Rider of the King Log;" Anna Q. Nilsson in "What Women Will Do," and Bryant Washburn in "The Road to London." These are in addition to the Playgoers Pictures Features which are released on the basis of three a month by the same concern, the latest of which to be announced is "Tropical Love," which was made in Porto Rico, under the direction of Ralph Ince, and featuring Ruth Clifford, who is supported by Reginald Denny, Fred Turner, Huntley Gordon, Ernest Hilliard, Margaret Fitzroy, Paul Doucet, Catherine Spencer, Carl Axzell and Margaret Seddon.

"Conflict" Rushed to Exhibitors

Big Feature to Be at Exchange Centers Before Strike

"CONFLICT" characterized by Universal officials as the outstanding Universal picture of the year, and Priscilla Dean's greatest starring vehicle, has been received in the East and is being rushed to the screen before the impending railroad strike can hamper the distribution of prints and supplies.

The picture will have its premiere in the Central theatre, Broadway at 47th street on Sunday, October 23, where it will stay for an indefinite run. Prints also are being speeded to each Universal exchange, with instructions that the new Universal-Jewel production shall be placed at the convenience of exhibitors whose schedules may suffer from the probable rail tie-up.

As a result of this change in plan, "Conflict" will be released simultaneously with "The Fox," Harry Carey's first Universal-Jewel super-western, now ready for release. "The Fox" was scheduled to go into the Central theatre October 23, but, under present arrangements it will be held for several weeks. The Carey picture, however, will go into the Central in time for the resulting exploitation to benefit the exhibitors who book it for a first run.

Every effort is being made by Universal to get all materials and supplies for "Conflict" ready before the strike. The Publicity, Advertising and Exploitation departments have dropped all other work for the time being and are concentrating on accessories for the new Dean picture. It is expected that a complete line of supplies will be in every Exchange by October 30.

This includes an elaborate campaign and press book, a full supply of posters of all sizes, and an unusual number of other accessories, such as oil paintings, cuts, mats, window cards, lobby cards, postcards, heralds and teaser material.

Universal believes that "Conflict" will prove to be one of the few really big pictures of the year. It is said to be far better than Miss Dean's two previous successes, "Outside the Law" and Reputation." It was directed by Stuart Paton, who also directed "Reputation," and who long has been known as a director of big pictures.

The picture was made from the recent Red Book serial "Conflict," by Clarence Budington Kelland.

Aid "Man's Home" Exploitation

Selznick Promises Every Aid to Exhibitors

THE SELZNICK organization proposes to "get behind" the exhibitor who plays "A Man's Home," the Ralph Ince production which is on the eve of release throughout the country, with a line of aids to exploitation that will leave nothing undone, so far as Selznick is concerned, toward realizing the prospect of cashing in to the last dollar at the box-office. This statement is made on the authority of the Selznick publicity department where work has been progressing for weeks to the end that showmen will be provided with every possible means for advertising the Selznick special.

The routine details of paper, slides and newspaper aids have been fully covered, but there will be additional helps in numbers and effectiveness that are declared to be novel as well as practical and useful. One of the unusual departures from film exploitation is a newspaper serial written by Anna Steese Richardson, who wrote "A Man's Home" in collaboration with Edmund Breese, the actor.

Miss Richardson is associate editor of Woman's Home Companion and her writings are sought after and paid for by magazines and newspapers. The Selznick organization were able to arrange with her for a serial version of "A Man's Home" written with the same literary skill that has made her known to women readers the country over. This serial is done in "mat" form ready for newspapers to use, each of the four episodes being illustrated.

Selznick's publicity department has already placed this serial with scores of daily papers in some of the larger cities and the complete story, ready for exhibitors who desire to negotiate with their local newspapers to handle the story, is also available through Select exchanges. It is confidently believed that Miss Richardson's novelization will be acceptable to papers that run fiction on its merits alone. Her reputation among newspaper men gives her name a value and her vogue with women readers means an attractive feature for a newspaper.

Showmen may adopt the Selznick suggestion to "plant" the serial on its merits, and there also remains other ways to link the novelization to the advantage of the exhibitor and the benefit of the newspaper. Mrs. Richardson's story might be made the basis of a trade "hook up" between the newspaper and local merchants that sell men's wear and articles that are useful in "a man's home." By surrounding the story type matter with advertising that would also include the showman's announcements there would be a way at hand to interest almost any daily.

Like every other producer and showman Selznick believes in and encourages extensive newspaper advertising to promote public interest in pictures. In furtherance of his belief the Selznick organization recommends the use of page advertisements in exploiting "A Man's Home" and believes that it will be mutually to the advantage of exhibitors and newspapers to contract for the publication of Miss Richardson's serial with full page advertisements as recompense to the newspaperman when he will not otherwise consider the story for publication.

Kutinsky Promoted by Big "U" Exchange

Louis I. Kutinsky, one of the leading salesmen of the Big "U" Film Exchange, Universal's New York branch, has been promoted to head the Short Subjects Department of that exchange, under Universal's new Short Subjects organization.

"I Accuse" Opens at the New York Strand

"I ACCUSE," Abel Gance's French film production, which scored a success in all the principal cities of Europe, had its New York premiere at the Strand theatre, Sunday, October 9. The house was filled at all performances, and the picture was warmly applauded.

"I Accuse" is presented at the Strand under the auspices of the American Legion, Department of the State of New York, and has the full and unqualified indorsement of that organization. A portion of the gross revenue from the presentation here will be devoted to the work of the Legion's welfare committee.

"'I Accuse'" has something the great majority of photoplays are without," says the New York Times' review, "namely, genuineness, sincerity, the vivifying quality of honesty born of earnestness but controlled by artistic sense. It is vigorous and unavoidable. You cannot resist it. It makes its people and its story real."

New York Teachers Laud "Fauntleroy" Picture

Without solictation on the part of the theatre management, scores of the hundreds of New York school teachers who have seen Mary Pickford's film version of "Little Lord Fauntleroy" at the Apollo Theatre, have sent expressions of their opinions of the picture, declares a statement from the United Artists headquarters.

Without exception these views are commendatory and come from members of the public school corps ranging in position from Dr. Edward W. Stitt, district superintendent, down through the ranks of the principals and the teachers themselves, it is declared.

Dr. Stitt wrote that "the performance was a most inspiring one and the picture is one of the most beautiful films I have ever seen."

Suggesting a Way By Which Pictures May Be Financed

There is a studio in Florida equipped and ready for modern productions. Dark Stage is 60 by 60 with Cooper-Hewitts,—Hard Lights,—and several 100 Amperes spot Lights. There is also a open-air stage 50 by 142, which is one-half enclosed, and could be wholly enclosed at little cost. The two stages together could accommodate three separate companies. There are 18 dressing rooms and plenty of flats and sets and a laboratory. It is situated right in the city and cost $65,000. To a reputable producing company, that would acquire this property, the financing of its pictures or the selling of stock for this purpose would be an easy matter on account of this asset. The Owner is willing to sell for one-third cash, one-third Stock, and the balance in easy payments.

Christie at Work on Biggest Two-Reeler

E. W. Hammons, president of Educational Film Exchanges, is informed from the coast that the picture now in production at the Christie studio is to be the "biggest thing which Christie has yet turned out in two reels."

"A Barnyard Cavalier," as the comedy is to be titled, features Bobby Vernon with Viora Daniel. Miss Daniel, who is one of Christie's latest star acquisitions, has already worked in three pictures. After "A Barnyard Cavalier" she is to be starred in a situation farce.

Three Warren Specials Ready

Trio of Fall Releases Expected to Prove Big Successes

WITH prints being shipped as fast as they can be handled by the laboratory, practically all the F. B. Warren Exchanges are now in a position to give the trade further details on "Our Mutual Friend," "The Old Oaken Bucket," and "What Do Men Want."

These are the three big specials concerning which there has been much mystery about the Warren offices for they mark the organization's big Fall smash and are counted on by many who have seen them to be the talk of the trade before the first snow of the year.

Negotiations are already under way by a number of the bigger first-runs to secure these three attractions and it is promised that some interesting announcements will be forthcoming within the next few weeks.

"Our Mutual Friend" is adapted from the Charles Dickens novel and discloses to the film world the fact that Dickens as a scenario writer was there with as much desire for thrills and action as any studio-bred author. A murder mystery, thrilling conflict and a tender love story merge in "Our Mutual Friend" with the masterful characterizations to be expected of the famous novelist. Naturally, no Dickens story was ever written without its share of laughs, and they are blended in the romance of "Our Mutual Friend."

Exhibitors are expected to find the kind of "human" picture which 1921 has shown to be the most certain of successes in "The Old Oaken Bucket," May Tully's picture inspired by the famous song. Exploitation opportunities unlimited grow out of the "Home, Sweet Home" theme of this picture and the song known to millions, "The Old Oaken Bucket." Discussing this picture one Warren official declared, "The big success of the past year have proved that the American people want that which hits them inside, the human touches taken from real life, laughs and tears induced by the fact that they seem to be seeking their own lives reenacted on the screen."

"What Do Men Want?" is counted on as the Lois Weber special of the year and is confidently expected to outstrip the record made by "Hypocrites," "Where Are My Children" and other Weber specials that were the outstanding successes of their day. This special has been given considerable advance publicity as reports leaked out during the year of its making and statements of those who have seen the completed production are to the effect that the completed picture more than measures up in dramatic intensity to the reputation and talents of Lois Weber and the unusual money value of the title "What Do Men Want?"

Thomas Ince Issues Statement

Believes "Hail the Woman" Will Set New Standard

THOMAS H. INCE this week issued a statement from the executive offices of the Ince Studios at Culver City, Calif., in which he details the reasons why he has produced "Hail the Woman," his forthcoming special, for release by Associated First National pictures. Mr. Ince's statement follows:

"We are living in a period when people in all walks of life from one end of the world to the other are turning critical eyes upon well established and accepted standards. The spirit of the renaissance is upon us; the world is struggling for a rebirth of ideas, and old standards are being carefully weighed, so it is not surprising that we motion picture producers should have been called upon to establish a new standard.

"Tritely expressed, the challenge of the public has been 'to produce bigger and better pictures.' Thus it is that in the spirit of accepting this compelling challenge for a higher standard that has steadily grown in volume during the year, I have produced 'Hail the Woman.'

"To me 'Hail the Woman' symbolized the answer of the entire motion picture industry to the world-wide cry of newer and higher standards in all lines of human endeavor. And I say this with a full realization of the enormity of the task I have undertaken, the establishment of a new standard in an entire field of art.

"Yet I offer 'Hail the Woman' as a new standard where the standard has already been placed high, with every confidence that it will be so accepted unhesitatingly by critics both within and without our art industry.

"This production has been created with universal audience requirements. If my judgment is of any worth, this picture will attract and completely satisfy not the urban clientele or the rural audience or any particular individual class, but every one everywhere, and at any time. I am further convinced, experience and a careful analysis of the trend of the times, that it will meet with more complete public approbation and will give rise to more word of mouth advertising than any production with which I have ever been connected. This unique story is unfolded like the book of life itself, through the genius of a brilliant company of screen players. Florence Vidor, Madge Bellamy, Theodore Roberts, Lloyd Hughes, Tully Marshall and others have given their best in an almost religious interpretation of the characters of flesh and blood that live throguh this deeply emotional play. I am proud of their splendid achievement."

Fairbanks' Film Breaks Washington Records

According to word from the United Artists headquarters, nearly 40,000 persons saw the new Douglas Fairbanks film showing at Loew's Columbia theatre, Washington, D. C., a record never surpassed by any other feature film playing the national capital.

Second Metro Week Announced

Drive Starts November 20; Big Success Is Foreseen

THE second annual Metro Week has been fixed this year for November 20 to 27. Announcement of the dates between which thousands of theatres throughout the country will show Metro productions exclusively came this week from the home offices of the company.

The institution last year of this period of time for the exhibition of Metro pictures for seven consecutive days proved such a tremendous success that it was then urged by hundreds of exhibitors that the period be extended to two weeks. This suggestion was not accepted by the Metro officials, but the spontaniety of the reception Metro Week met with did determine that it was to be an annual event in the screen year.

As was the case in 1920 Metro Week will have the solid backing of the distributing corporation in the matter of service and exploitation. The exchanges have been for some time making preparations for the inevitable emergencies an exceptional demand entails. Every print put out will be in perfect order. There will be solid advertising co-operation between the exchanges and the exhibitor, so that the public will be apprised of its approach long before the actual advent of the Week.

The estimate by the Metro distributing department last year placed the probable number of theatres which would show its pictures during Metro Week at 7,000. This proved to be conservative, as, in fact, it was considered at the time it was made. There was a goodly percentage more than that number of picture playhouses which availed themselves of the opportunity to cash in by a solid booking of seven days of the big Metro attractions. This year, with the previous achievement of the first experiment as foundation of the confidence of the exhibitors, it is expected that the 1920 figures will be more than considerably outdistanced.

For the thousands of exhibitors, Metro during the big week will have one of the finest collections of offerings for the public that has ever been assembled. The list will comprise drama and comedies, with some of the best known stellar lights in the cinema world.

During Metro Week last spring more than 7,000 exhibitors took advantage of the special drive and ran pictures released by the big producing company and so strongly did they appeal that even before the time scheduled for showing the home office had been flooded with requests to extend the period so that the houses could give their patrons a longer period of Metro attractions.

For this Metro week with greatly increased number of productions available to the exhibitor it is fully expected by the Metro officials that there will be a large addition to the number of showmen who will take advantage of the Metro offerings.

Novelty the Key-Note of "Tropical Love"

Novelty is said to be the keynote of "Tropical Love," the New Playgoers attraction offered by Associated Exhibitors. It was made in Porto Rico by Ralph Ince from an original story by Guy McConnell, and reports say it reflects with amazing clearness the adventuresome, colorful land of romance and tropical beauty.

The cast of "Tropical Love" is headed by Ruth Clifford. She is supported by Reginald Denny. Others in the cast include Huntley Gordon. Paul Doucet, Catherine Spencer, Carl Axzell, and Margaret Seddon.

"Dangerous Curve Ahead" Off to Flying Start

"Dangerous Curve Ahead," comedy drama of young married life, released nationally by Goldwyn Pictures Corporation on Sunday, October 2d, in 150 first-run houses, has repeated the great screen success scored by his photodrama, "The Old Nest," released last month.

More than 1,000 theatres have booked "Dangerous Curve Ahead" for screening within the next few weeks, and additional bookings are being received daily in all of Goldwyn's twenty-two branch exchanges.

"Over the Hill" Scoring Heavily in Boston

"OVER THE HILL," the super-special produced by William Fox, is in the eighth week of its run at Tremont Temple, Boston, Mass., and drawing big crowds at each performance. Reports to the Fox New York offices indicate that new records will be established in Boston, as they have been in New York City and elsewhere, by this picture based on the famous Will Carleton poem.

The fame of "Over the Hill" and of Mary Carr, featured in the role of Ma Benton, supplemented by an elaborate and extensive exploitation campaign conducted by the management of Tremont Temple with the corporation of Fox experts, sufficed to fill the theatre to overflowing at the opening of the run. The intense interest aroused by the picture was shown by the fact that the numbers flocking to Tremont Temple increased steadily through the first seven weeks of the run.

Katherine MacDonald Finishes 1921 Series

With the issuance of "The Woman's Side" in December, Associated First National will complete its series of Katherine MacDonald star pictures for the year 1921.

"The Woman's Side," a cross-section of American life, was written, directed and titled by J. A. Barry. In support of "The American Beauty" in this comedy-drama are such players as Edward Burns, Wade Beteler, Dwight Crittenden, Ora Devereaux and Henry Barrows.

Realart Well Represented on Approved List

REALART is particularly proud of the record it achieved in connection with the "Approved Films" list compiled by the Los Angeles public schools.

The "Approved Films" list is issued by the "Visual Education" section of the Los Angeles schools with the idea of suggesting to parents that they restrict the cinema diet of their children to the productions named therein.

Among the 106 pictures listed, 11 are Realart's. This represents better than ten per cent of the whole and is a splendid representation when it is taken into consideration that the 106 names represent the productions of more than 13 different companies.

Realart pictures on the list are "Anne of Green Gables," "The Little Clown," "Nurse Marjorie," "Sweet Lavender," "Don't Call Me Little Girl," "Erstwhile Susan," "Such a Little Queen," "39 East," "The Magic Cup" and "The Snob."

Mayer Signs Niblo to Direct Stewart

Among the important developments of recent days in filmdom is the news that Fred Niblo, director and erstwhile stage star, has signed a contract with Louis B. Mayer to direct Anita Stewart. Through his able direction of "The Three Musketeers," as well as his past successes, Mr. Niblo has come to be recognized as a master in the art of making pictures. The work of production will be started as soon as Anita Stewart returns from New York, about October 15.

Chic Sale Scores on Screen

Exceptional Pictures Gets Many Laudatory Letters

THAT Charles (Chic) Sale has scored a decided success in "His Nibs" is attested by the scores of telegrams and letters of commendation which have been received by Alexander Beyfuss, vice-president and general-manager of Exceptional Pictures Corporation, since the premier presentation of the picture at the Hotel Astor, New York, on October 6. In "His Nibs," Sales plays seven different roles. According to the opinions expressed, Chic Sale measures up on the screen to the high standards he has already set for rural characterizations on the stage. That his stage work in rural characterizations is considered to be of the highest type is proved by the numerous press comments from all over the country, some of which are submitted below as quoted in a statement issued by the offices of Exceptional Pictures Corporation:

William A. Johnston, president of the Motion Picture News, the day following the showing, wrote Mr. Beyfuss as follows:

"I want to extend my sincere compliments on the masterly manner in which you presented the Chic Sale's picture, 'His Nibs,' at the Hotel Astor last evening. The picture is fine. It is a distinct novelty very well handled, and has many points of popular appeal. Not the least of its assets, however, are its exploitation angles, and these you brought out with remarkable skill. Your country store lobby, the costuming of the ushers and orchestra, and the music—all of these accented the rare personality of Chic Sales and the homely appeal of the picture. You not only introduced 'His Nibs' to New York in the best possible style, but you have given a criterion for all other exhibitors to follow. If the exhibitor who books this picture does half as well, and takes advantage at all of the widely known name of Chic Sale, there won't be any question at all about his box-office profits."

Mr. Arthur James, editor-in-chief of the Moving Picture World, in the editorial columns of that publication, has this to say:

"Alexander Beyfuss has demonstrated his showmanship and insured for himself and his associates of the Exceptional organization a feature picture that will make money for exhibitors and give to their audiences a most satisfying feast of fun. We look for more of Mr. Sales—we need him on the screen."

Miss Marion Russell, of The Billboard, took the occasion to write Mr. Beyfuss as follows:

"I so thoroughly enjoyed the picture, 'His Nibs,' that I am sending you under separate cover a copy of The Billboard, in which the review appears, with my compliments.

"If we had more pictures of this type it would work toward the betterment of the industry."

The following excerpts will demonstrate the esteem in which he is held for his vaudeville stage work:

From Grand Rapids (Mich.) Press:

Chic Sales is the greatest artist in his line on the vaudeville stage. His act is even funnier than ever, if that is possible."

The Post writes:

"Speaking of Charles (Chic) Sales, who will entertain Empress audiences the coming week with his rural Sunday School 'protean' program, one New York writer (Zits) has said: 'How the man ever conceived the act is beyond me. It is a marvelous construction. It is the Woolworth building of monologues. It is fire-proof and indestructible.'"

From the Baltimore Sun:

"To the chronic vaudeville fan 'Chic' Sales is more than likely old and familiar stuff. Last night's visit to the Maryland made him known to me in his own particular field, this quiet and likeable little chap is an artist of the first rank. He is the outstanding feature of an entertaining bill."

The Grand Rapids Herald says:

"Chic, prince of character comedians, hasn't changed his act materially. But he didn't need to. We could go again tonight and laugh just as hard as last night, and so could any of the others who hugged hilarity last night. Vaudeville has no more certain purveyors of comedy than this fellow. From start to finish Chic's act is as clean as a baby's conscience!"

Screen "Scoop" for Pathe News

Gives First Views of Russian Famine to American Public

BY another stroke of journalistic enterprise the Pathe News is now presenting to the American public the first motion pictures to come out of famine-stricken Russia.

In issue No. 82, out Wednesday, October 12,th the Pathe News began the presentation of a series of exclusive pictures that shows every detail of the terrible situation now facing millions of homeless and hungry Russian peasants in the Volga and Samara districts. Georges Ercole, Pathe cameraman, who has made many remarkable contributions to photographic history by his feats for Pathe News, penetrated into the Volga and Samara territories even before the American Relief Commission could carry succor to the famished natives. Ercole covered 3,300 miles in his tour through the famine country.

Pathe News No. 82 was virtually on "the press," as they would say in the newspaper world, when the Russian negatives arrived here. The edition was held up while the story was prepared, but by strenuous efforts the reel was issued on scheduled time.

All of the most prominent theartres in New York made special attractions of the Russian material. Even the Palace Theatre, the big Keith vaudeville house, made a special feature of the Ercole pictures, aside from the regular edition of the Pathe News.

The New York World, which was granted exclusive publication rights to the Pathe News pictures, devoted virtually an entire page to the pictures on Wednesday, October 12, and then followed this the next day with five columns more of pictures.

In this instance, as in many others during the past year, the enterprise of Pathe News enabled it to get its story to New York days before even newspaper photographers.

The story of the latest Pathe News beat is best told in Ercole's report to Mr. Cohen, in which he wrote:

"We left Moscow on September 9. It was a long and difficult journey to the Volga, whose banks were known to be lined with thickening ranks of peasants fleeing from their cropless farms. But we were in time to take the very first pictures in the Samara famine districts. We then returned from Samara to Kasan, where we met the first relief train. The story of the trip on the Volga and the landings for the purpose of intimate investigations and photographing, is too long to tell here. The pictures are the best evidence of the frightful conditions observed everywhere

"At the time of forwarding this I have traveled in Russia more than 3,300 English miles—night and day travel in conditions hardly bearable, days and nights without sleep and often with scanty food.

"From Kasan I rushed back to Moscow, to find myself still a week ahead of other photographers. Inside influence helped me wonderfully, obtaining from the Soviet officials permission for me to leave Russia with all my films undeveloped, and on Thursday, September 22, I was making full speed to Riga, arriving on Saturday, the 24th. I asked the American Red Cross to get my stuff safely to Paris or to London, but they refused, as it was against the regulations. So I used the train system, getting my shipment off on the next train to Paris, hoping to catch a plane to Havre or Cherbourg and atch a fast liner. In any event you are assured of getting the first and best picture of famine-stricken Russia.

"I am in Riga, in bad shape, suffering from fever and stomach trouble."

Realart Release on Program of Benefit Show

Burr Feature in Canada

"Burn 'Em Up Barnes" in Winnipeg: Record Sales in Past Three Weeks

"BURN 'EM UP BARNES" opened its Canadian run under the direction of Capital Films Ltd. who are releasing the feature throughout Canada, this week. The first opening was started Monday at the Lyceum theatre in Winnipeg. A rousing welcome was given the feature and a packed house was present the entire day, breaking all records. This was played against heavy competition from other houses. This opening duplicates the opening at Minneapolis at Rubin and Finkelstein's State theatre last week.

"Burn 'Em Up Barnes" will also open in Calgary, Toronto and other Canadian cities during the coming week and extensive exploitation has been given the features. Johnny Hines has become very popular in Canada through his Torchy Comedies and the public have accorded him a rousing welcome for his first five reel feature. He is now in Calgary filming scenes for the second five reel comedy and will remain there for several weeks in order to complete numerous outdoor scenes.

Sales on "Burn 'Em Up Barnes" were closed for California, Arizona, Nevada, to Louis Hyman of All Star Features and also to John Carlson Company for the entire foreign rights to include the following countries: Great Britain, Scandinavia, Continental Europe, South Africa, Australia, Far East, Mexico and Central America, West Indies and South America. Other sales are expected to be announced during the coming week. With the exception of a few small territories still pending there are only a few territories now open. This feature has been closed in a very short time, practically the entire country has been sold in the past three weeks. C. C. Burr of Affiliated Distributors now has plans to close the entire country within the coming week.

Work is also going forth on Burr's Novelty Review and the third and fourth releases will soon be ready for the exchanges. Harry Charnes has bought the series for the entire middle west and he has been highly pleased with the results. The various groupings of the novelty parts has made a distinct hit with the exhibitors throughout the middle west. Lester Rollin Dixon is now in Arizona completing several other of his scenic poems for the Review. He will furnish poems for each reel.

Nazimova in Repertoire

Star Announces Plan for Forthcoming United Artist Release

WITH the announcement that Mme. Alla Nazimova, whose forthcoming films will be released through United Artists Corporation, will make at least two more pictures before even considering a return to the speaking stage, comes the added news that she will introduce in these two films the repertoire motion picture.

"The first of these pictures," says Mr. Charles Bryant, Mme. Nazimova's representative, "will constitute an entirely new departure from anything heretofore shown on the screen. We will produce Ibsen's 'A Doll's House' on the same bill with a shorter story of about two reels, thereby carrying out the repertoire idea.

"In this idea Mme. Nazimova will be complying with an ever increasing demand by her friends and admirers that she again give to the public in picture form more than one play on the same program."

Mr. Bryant then went on to say that the production to follow "A Doll's House" and the shorter picture would be a greater and more elaborate one than any in which Mme. Nazimova has been seen on the screen. It will be from an original story written especially for her.

Mr. Bryant says he wishes to make it very plain that Mme. Nazimova's "Repertoire Film" will not be in the nature of "great moments from famous plays," nor will the stories be in tabloid form.

Strauss to Head Company

New Corporation Formed to Distribute Foreign and U. S. Pictures

ANNOUNCEMENT of the formation of the Associated International Pictures Corporation has just been made. It is organized for the purpose of distributing the products of both foreign and American independent producers. Those who have been elected to serve on the Board of Directors at a meeting held in their offices at 6 East 39th Street, New York City, are Malcolm Strauss, author, artist and motion picture producer; Louis Meyer and Paul Meyer, publishers of "Theatre Magazine"; George S. Hellman, treasurer of the Hugo Ballin Productions, and Charles Presbrey, vice president of the Malcolm Strauss Productions. The officers of this new corporation have not, as yet, been elected but it is rumored that Malcolm Strauss is slated for the presidency.

Commenting on this newly formed organization, Mr. Strauss had the following to say: "For years the exhibitor ignored independent distributors and flocked to the big program productions. And what was the result? He became tied up with the big corporations and contracted for a stated number of films before they were even photographed, trusting however, that after he viewed the first, the ones that followed would maintain the same high standard. But they did not. The subsequent films were often lacking in human interest, adequate "sets" and good acting. Now I do not say that all films that Mr. Exhibitor contracted, lacked merit. But I do contend that frequently inferior productions were palmed off to him. The exhibitor holding such a contract must take whatever picture the big distributors tender him. Then it becomes a case of paying or playing and so he is forced to play an inferior production while he knows it to be diametrically opposed to the psychology of his patrons. Moreover when a good independent production is available, his hands are practically tied for he must abide by the terms of his contract and furnish his patrons something which they fail to esteem. Thus it appears that the only way for the exhibitor to procure something different is to book pictures from the independent producer who makes only a limited number of pictures annually. In this manner it enables him to donate more time and thought and study; not alone to all the minute details but to the story in its entirety and again remember that he is not bound to rush his production by a certain date as is the case with the program producers."

Tom Mix in Comedy Role

Proves by Performance in "Rough Diamond" He Is an Able Comedian

IN a statement from the William Fox offices it is declared that Tom Mix in his latest Fox production, "The Rough Diamond," proves to be a comedian of unusual ability despite the fact that heretofore he has usually been classed in the mind of the trade and the fan as a strenuous, serious-acting hero of the Western photodrama. Now it appears that in his new picture for William Fox he gives sure evidences of possessing comedy talent of a high order. "The Rough Diamond" was directed by Edward Sedgwick and presents Eva Novak as the leading woman. Here is what the Fox home office has to say about Mix's new role:

"Tom Mix, long the strenuous hero of Western drama produced by William Fox, is a comedian—and a comedian of unusual ability, too. His comedy insight is keen and his methods sure. He can create hearty laughter; whereas until now the impression has been that he could create only thrills.

"Mix gives a singularly fine exposition of broad comedy work in his latest Fox picture, 'The Rough Diamond.' The story in this opens in the barn-yard of a ranch, but is quickly transferred to a circus tent, thence to shipboard at sea, and finally to a Latin-American republic, where the star becomes commander of an insurgent army.

"The picture lacks nothing of the typically Mix heroics. There are daring stunts enough to satisfy any longing for thrills. These are always expected—and Mix always supplies them. But the comedy work—delicious in quality—comes as a complete surprise. In the opening scene he is a young man convinced of his talent as a vocalist and is found with an improvised guitar entertaining himself and the maid of the ranch, but seriously disconcerting the livestock near by—which fails to appreciate his powers in song. The effect is acutely amusing.

"Again, then Mix finds himself, by stress of circumstances, temporarily a member of a circus company, he demonstrates further his ability to compel laughter by his extraordinary performance."

Neva Garber Starts on New Production

Miss Neva Gerber has started work on her next "Arrow" Ben Wilson Production. "The Price of Youth," from the published magazine story by Wyndham Martin.

Nell Shipman Severs Connection

Nell Shipman and Bert Van Tuyle, the producers of the current screen success, "The Girl from God's Country," announce that they have terminated their contract with the corporation known as "Nell Shipman Productions, Inc.," of which firm W. H. Clune is president. By the terms of the agreement the corporation name reverts to Miss Shipman and, with Mr. Van Tuyle, her co-director and manager, the star is now preparing for further independent "Nell Shipman" productions.

Miss Shipman's next story of "God's Country" is ready in continuity form for immediate production. The locale of this latest picture is laid in California as the author believes the title "God's Country" to be as applicable to that State as to the far regions of the Hudson's Bay. Miss Shipman is also at work upon the first draft of a big, special, "Snow" story, dealing with the most exciting period of American romance and adventure.

Fire Prevention Trailer Through Universal

Fire Chief Kenlon, of New York City, has chosen Universal's New York Exchange as the exclusive distributor of the fire prevention trailer to be shown in New York City as one of the activities of Fire Prevention Week. The trailer was made under Chief Kenlon's direction and shows how carelessly tossed matches and cigarette butts cause terrible fires.

Universal Salesmen Meet

Metropolitan Workers Hold Important Sales Conference in N. Y.

ONE of the most important Universal sales conferences of the year was held recently at Keen's Chop House, West Forty-fourth street, New York city, when Universal salesmen from the New York and adjacent territories assembled to discuss policies and fall plans with various Universal executives. The conference followed a beef-steak dinner at which Charles Rosenzweig, newly appointed sales manager of the Big "U" Exchange, was the master of ceremonies.

E. H. Goldstein, general manager of Universal, and H. M. Berman, general manager of exchanges, officiated at the conference and took the opportunity to quiz the attending salesmen at great length concerning the needs of the exhibitor and the ways and means of supplying the maximum number of exhibitors with the best possible service.

A remarkable increase in the popularity of Universal pictures and Universal stars was reported by the various salesmen. From various parts of New York city, from New Jersey, from upper New York State and from southern New England, came the word that exhibitors are hailing the 1921-1922 output of Universal Special Attractions as being without equal in the film market, and as being almost one hundred per cent better than last year's product, itself a vast improvement over preceding years.

The following Universal salesmen addressed the conference, telling conditions in their territories and making suggestions for the betterment of Universal production and distribution from the viewpoint of the exhibitor:

James Holden of the Hudson River territory; Leo Abrams of the New Jersey territory; Sol Edwards of the South Brooklyn territory; Leslie Sherwood of New Jersey; Joe Weinberg of the Bronx; Louis Weinstein, Harry Furst and Ben Price of New York city, and Morris Joseph, branch manager at New Haven, and his aid, H. P. Morgan.

Each of the salesmen was enthusiastic over the reception accorded by exhibitors and the public to Universal's newest Special Attraction stars, Marie Prevost, Hoot Gibson and Miss du Pont.

New Paramount Star Completes Feature

Jack Holt has completed his first starring picture for Paramount "The Call of the North," which was adapted by Jack Cunningham from the novel, "Conjuror's House," by Stewart Edward White, and the play by George Broadhurst. Joseph Henabery directed and Rollin Sturgeon supervised the production.

"Old Nest" Scoring Big Hit in All Sections

The Goldwyn home-office declares that reports from exhibitors in all sections of the country show "a sweeping triumph" for "The Old Nest." The box-office returns received by the MOTION PICTURE NEWS since the general release of this picture substantially support the announcement from the Goldwyn office.

In some instances, declares the Goldwyn statement, the second or third day has been bigger than the opening Sunday at theatres where the Sunday receipts are always counted upon to exceed week days. A case in point is that of the Ogden theatre, Ogden, Utah, where, according to Manager Harmon Peery, the picture built up every day, the Tuesday business topping that of Sunday.

"No Defence" Is New Duncan Feature

William Duncan, Vitagraph's Western star, recently finished a new picture on the Pacific Coast, and the film is now at Vitagraph's Brooklyn studio for final titling and editing. The picture in its rough form created a most favorable impression among Vitagraph's executives. Its title is "No Defense," and the picture is based on the original story by J. Raleigh Davies. As usual in his recent Western features, Duncan has Edith Johnson as co-star. He directed the picture himself.

Associated's Big Program

Offers Jane Novak and Mary Anderson in Two Series of Features

ASSOCIATED PHOTO-PLAYS, INC., in making their announcement of their productions for 1921-1922 wish to lay great stress upon the class of these pictures.

They will have five Chester Bennett Productions starring Jane Novak, who recently finished playing opposite William S. Hart. Miss Novak is of the blonde type and one of the best known screen stars. Among her productions are numbered "The River's End," "The Temple of Dusk," "Wagon Tracks," "Isobel," "Kazan," and a number of others.

She is ideal for the class of productions that she has been cast for. Miss Novak has always been sought for the appealing type which lends itself so well to the outdoor pictures in which she has been most successful.

Miss Novak's first picture is a story of the dance halls and gold fields of Alaska, by J. Grubb Alexander and Harvey H. Gates. Mr. Bennett, who formerly directed Antonio Moreno at Vitagraph, directed Miss Novak. The supporting cast includes Noah Beery in the role of Wade Harkin, the brutal Husband, and Frank Glendon, Alfred Hollingsworth and Florence Carpenter.

Mary Anderson is starring in six Scott Dunlap productions which will be a series of comedy dramas. Miss Anderson, known as one of the best comedians on the screen, has appeared in such productions as "The Hush Hour," "Jonny Get Your Gun," "False Faces," "The Spender," "Bubbles," etc. Miss Anderson bases her great popularity and following upon the various serials in which she has played, and the new series of pictures which she has entered upon for Associated Photo-Plays gives this captivating Miss many opportunities for her droll humor and funny situations.

R-C to Launch Sales Drive

Will Observe November as "R. S. Cole Month;" Hope to Set Record

R. C. PICTURES CORPORATION has dedicated the month of November to its president, R. S. Cole, and will call it "R. S. Cole Month" as a testimonial to his leadership and business acumen, according to Charles R. Rogers, general manager of distribution.

Mr. Rogers and his co-workers in the selling division will launch what he expects to be the greatest business drive in the histoy of this organization. Every branch manager has been instructed to notitfy his staff that November will be dedicated to Mr. Cole and that each of the twenty-six branches will be expected to put forth every possible effort to establish new selling records during that period.

Although R-C Pictures has recorded a splendid record during October, Mr. Rogers is confident that with a little extra effort and the exceptional volume of advertising and publicity which will be put behind R-C productions, November should establish bigger records than ever.

Not only will the publicity and advertising departments concentrate upon R. S. Cole Month in a nation-wide campaign, but a corps of experts is already engaged in devising a special assortment of accessories to be distributed to exhibitors next month free of charge. Other exploitation aids will be furnished exhibitors booking R-C subjects during the drive in honor of Mr. Cole.

Poster Campaign for Ray

Attractive Football 24-Sheet Advertises "Two Minutes to Go"

AN extensive billboard campaign in behalf of Charles Ray's new production for First National "Two Minutes to Go" was begun this week in Greater New York City, Brooklyn, Bronx and adjacent territories as the advance exploitation of the new Ray release which is scheduled for distribution on October 17th. The poster campaign will run for sixty days on this feature alone, and in Brooklyn where the film opens at the Strand on November 6th, the number of stands heralding the new feature will be doubled in number preceding the opening and during the production's run at the Brooklyn's run at the Brooklyn picture house.

Arthur S. Kane who presents the star for distribution through the First National circuit, in announcing the beginning of the billboard campaign on October 10th, declared that the sponsors of "Two Minutes To Go" had initiated their program of advertising with the idea of getting the greatest amount of patronage possible from the seasonal appeal of the subject.

"The twenty-four sheet heralding "Two Minutes To Go" which is on hundreds of stands throughout Greater New York shows the single figure of Mr. Ray crouching in position ready for the signal to go. This alert figure and the simple announcement of the title against a white background makes up the twenty-four sheet and makes it one of the most arresting pieces of billboard advertising on the streets of the city today.

"Poppy" Named for Next Talmadge Revival

Of the twelve Talmadge revivals—six by Norma and six by Constance—promised as units in the "Forty from Selznick" for this season, "Poppy" is in Select exchanges ready for distribution with Norma Talmadge the star. When Lewis J. Selznick was making screen stars of the Talmadge girls Eugene O'Brien was, at the time, also under contract with the same producer and it was the coordination between star and leading man that had so much to do with winning success for Norma, whom he continually played opposite.

The screen version was made and originally released in 1916, from a stage play based on the novel by Cynthia Stockley. Supporting Miss Talmadge, in the company led by Eugene O'Brien, appeared Frederick Perry, Jack Meredith, Dorothy Rogers, Edna Whistler and Marie Haines.

Vitagraph Has Trailers for "Flower of North"

Prints of a special trailer on Vitagraph's James Oliver Curwood super-feature "Flower of the North" have reached every Vitagraph branch office, and it is reported that the screening of these trailers has caused considerable comment by exhibitors in all parts of the United States and Canada.

The trailers, though short, show the rapids scenes, the big fight in a besieged cabin, the friendly Indians galloping to the rescue, a man's fight for his sweetheart's life in the seething rapids just above a water-fall, and several other flashes of red-blooded action.

"The Four Horsemen" Has 100 Road Companies

More than one hundred road companies of "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," a Rex Ingram production for Metro of the internationally famous novel of Vicente Blasco Ibanez, are today touring the country while the home offices of the big producing company are besieged with requests to send out additional companies to meet the demand for this, the most popular film in the history of the screen.

The special presentation which Metro has arranged in connection with every showing of "The Four Horsemen," has received unlimited commendation. As a setting for this most elaborate offering of the cinema world a special musical score was arranged by Dr. Hugo Riesenfeld, director of the Criterion, Rivoli and Rialto theatres, New York, which has proved universally popular.

Curwood on Directorate of Pine Tree Co.

James Oliver Curwood, the "Arrow" author, has become a member of the Board of Directors of Pine Tree Pictures, Inc., the Maine Company producing the four big pictures on Curwood's well known stories, "God's Country and the Law," "The Girl From Porcupine," and two others to follow.

System Makes This Projection a Model of Perfection

How Chief Hagert Runs Baltimore Rivoli's Booth

Termed the model projection room of Baltimore motion picture theatres, the all-important "key to the situation" in the rear of audiences at the Rivoli is all that it lays claim to be.

The projection room staff is composed of Conrad F. Hagert, chief; Carroll G. Bayne and Sidney Marks. The equipment consists of:

Three Powers 6B machines with type E lamps; Peerless arc controllers; Powers speed and footage film indicators; improved shadow box; automatic fire shutters; 3 liquid guns of the Fire Gun Manufacturing Company of New York; 3 powder containers of Fite Fire Company of Newark, N. J.; motorized Fulco rewinding apparatus; Acme (N. Y.) 75-100 amperes spotlight; Safe-T-First firm cabinet of the Hull-Salmon Manufacturing Company of Baltimore, Md., and optical system condenser.

There are several important features emphasized by Chief Hagert. First could be the fire shutter system and this, he modestly admits, is his own contrivance. It is a pulley arrangement by which metal shutters are suspended over each hole that looks out over the audience at the screen and stage. There are nine such, one at each of the five observation ports and the four projection ports.

Hanging conveniently at each Powers machine is a handle and if there should be a fire a jerk at any of the handles would drop all shutters into place. Thus patrons would be prevented from even glimpsing that something untoward was happening in the projection room. The shutters also would tend to keep smoke from floating out over the audience and would withstand a big amount of flame itself.

"A film burns so rapidly a person would hardly have time to close each window," said Mr. Hagert. "The pulley and shutter system enables one to accomplish it in short order and lets him devote those other invaluable seconds to fighting the fire, confident that unless he is forced out of the room for help the patrons would not know of the fire."

Still another commendable anti-fire arrangement is that which instructs a projectionist to push a button outside the fire door after he has closed all openings in the room proper. This button, which is right alongside of the fire hose, bucket and other equipment, starts an exhaust fan in the ceiling of the room. After the fan operates a minute the projectionist is under orders to return to the room. While general requirements call for a fan capable of drawing 50 cubic feet of air out of the room per minute, the Rivoli's which is a product of the ILG Electric Ventilating Company of Chicago, Ill., draws out 3300 cubic feet. In the minute that it operates it is figured to clear the projection room of all smoke.

An improvement now being planned calls for keeping all oil in an anteroom and piping it into the pit. A spigot then will be used to release it.

"Rivoli Theatre Log" is the odd title noticed on a large book seen on Chief Hagert's bench. In it is recorded each and every stop, its duration, etc. Then when a question arises as to who did so and so when so and so occurred reference is made to the log and there in black and white is

DURABILITY

Durability has been developed in the DeLuxe Projector to the highest degree by the use of not only hardened, ground and polished shafts, but also by the addition of hardened, ground and polished steel bearings, the combination of which represents the highest development for durability where speed and extreme accuracy are required.

seen facts. If an entry's overlooked there's more deuce to pay than if a projectionist used the celluloid in a film to make himself a collar.

Vying with fire prevention measures for top-notch honors are the condenser adjustments and baths. "We use an optical system," says Mr. Hagert. "Many houses use whatever size condenser is obtainable in the city, overlooking the fact that the amount of current used is of great importance in relation to the illumination of the screen.

"After the small Wilson, for which I was projectionist, was replaced by the new Rivoli, we found it necessary to increase the focal length of the condenser in proportion to the increased current. The right combination is essential if 'ghosts' are to be kept off of the screen. Then, too, overheated condensers crack. Our experiments finally led us to use condensers of three sizes.

"Our throw is 137 feet on a 15 degree drop."

Rivoli condensers are given a bath every morning as religiously as time itself. Soap and water are used. Then, to preclude the possibility of getting the condensers mixed when they are re-inserted in the machines an odd little card does the trick.

This card is nothing more than ordinary cardboard measured off, cut and accordingly noted on the edge as to the size of the condenser it will fit over. By placing it over a condenser one tells in a flash the size of the glass. Otherwise, or unless another measurement were used, a condenser of one size would be put where another size should go.

The Fulco rewined was motorized by Mr. Hagert and he now contemplates an automatic switch which will stop rewinding when the film breaks.

A black glass for the shadow box has been found more satisfactory by the chief than a red glass in decreasing the amount of illumination that strikes the eye while watching carbon.

Few things enthuse Guy L. Wonders, manager of the theatre, and Chief Hagert, as much as the film speed and footage indicators. The system is connected with Mr. Wonders' office, the orchestra pit and the projection room. It leads to the best co-ordination of all forces in the house toward getting a show over on time. Mighty rarely is the occasion that a telephone call to the Rivoli does not tell you within half a minute what time the feature goes on, or the comedy, or the overture or any of the special arrangements comprising the Rivoli's program.

Community House for Hartford

Another illustration that merchants and other business men realize that a modern family-type moving picture theatre is essential in the retention and stimulation of trade in their particular community or section of a city is noted in the activity of the Park Street Investment Company of Hartford, Conn., which has practically completed plans for the theatre and business block it is to build at Park and Broad Streets, the very heart of one of the most rapidly growing business sections of the city. The plans, drawn by Architect E. T. Wiley of Hartford, are complete and will be sent out for bids within the next week. If the response is satisfactorily arranged it is the intention of the company to immediately let the contract and have work started so as to have the structure roofed in before very cold weather sets in. Construction will be continued during the winter months and plans are to have the theatre ready for business at the opening of the next season.

The building will be three stories in height, with one store on Broad street and two on Park street, in addition to the theatre entrance. The second story will be devoted entirely to offices and there will be a large dance hall and auditorium on the third floor. The total cost of the undertaking, including the property, will be in the neighborhood of $300,000. The Park Street Investment Company, financing the project, is composed of leading merchants in that particular neighborhood and prominent business men of the city. It is capitalized for $250,000 and the first issue of $150,000 of the stock is almost entirely sold. The officers of the company are: A. M. Schuman, president; Joseph Dolgin, vice-president; Loomis A. Newton, treasurer; J. D. Castonguay, secretary; Joseph Glassman, assistant secretary; directors, the above officers and L. S. Goldschmidt, Joseph S. Silver, Francis P. Rohrmayer, Samuel Hoffenberg and Thomas F. Burke.—Agard.

Kansas City, Mo., Has New Elaborate Home Of Motion Pictures In Pantage

Theatre Has An Exceptional Projecion Room; 178 Ft. Tower A Distinct Feature Of Building

First-run pictures have found another elaborate home along "movie row," Kansas City, Mo., in the new Pantage combination motion picture and vaudeville theatre, which opened its doors the other day. The erection of the new house at Twelfth and McGee streets, at a cost of approximately $900,000, is in open defiance to alleged depressed business conditions in the motion picture industry.

Earl Francis and J. L. Bradley are the projectionists who have charge of one of the most completely equipped projection rooms in this territory. Two type E Simplex machines, two Stanford continuous arc feeds, a Simplex spot light and an L. B. Hooker automatic rewind are among the equipment.

Prevention against fire in the projection room has been pronounced 100 per cent perfect by the Kansas City fire department. The automatic shutters are controlled by a single cord, the fusing of which shuts up the entire room.

The Stanford continuous arc feeds are somewhat of a novelty. They are manufactured in Kansas City and act as a barrier against any possible irregularities that might occur in the current, assuring a steady, clear picture at all times.

Another distinct feature of the new house is a huge tower, 178 feet high, which is flood lighted, and which can be seen for many blocks. On the pinnacle is a revolving electrical sign, spelling the name of the theatre, "Pantage."

The theatre is of the Renaissance type of architecture designed by B. M. Priteca of Seattle, and was constructed under the supervision of J. E. Gilbert, representing the architects. The entrance is on Twelfth street, with the foyer and lobby extending back 130 feet to the body of the theatre. The house has a seating capacity of 2,200 and is equipped with a specially designed pipe organ, costing $16,000. Besides the main auditorium, there is a balcony, thirteen loges and six boxes on each side of the house.

An excellent cooling system, designed by Mr. Priteca, automatically changes to a heating system in the winter. Hundreds of yards of luxurious velvet carpets adorn the corridors and rest rooms ; a beautiful art glass dome is equipped with special lighting, while the corridor leading to the main body of the theatre from Twelfth street is equipped with handsome terra cotta and mural decorations. A huge mezzanine waiting room, lavishly finished, will accommodate more than 500 persons.

Los Angeles Producer Places Excellent New Camera on the Market

Pronounced a Triumph of Moving Picture Camera Fabrication

Los Angeles is not only the motion picture producing capital of the world, but when all the new cameras and photographic devices now in process of perfection shall have been placed upon the market, she will almost surely be recognized as the great American center of photographic engineering.

The first perfected motion picture camera to be offered to the public by a Los Angeles producer is the Mitchell, manufactured by the Mitchell Camera Company. This camera, together with its tripod, has been developed by George A. Mitchell and his associates and is pronounced by experts to be a triumph of high class camera fabrication.

The Mitchell Camera is in two parts, the camera box and the base. The box is cast of aluminum alloy in one piece, accurately machined, and all the working mechanisms are assembled in this case. The base is made of the same material, also cast in one piece, accurately machined. The Iris, four way mattes, matte disc, turret, plate and turret are mounted on this frame. Dove-tailed guides or tracks are mounted on this base, on which the box slides. This is actuated from the rear by a handle operating pinions, meshing with racks; a release button in the center of the handle operates the locking mechanism so that in either position the camera is securely locked, and may be instantly shifted from the photographic to the focusing position and vice versa with one hand.

Focusing is accomplished by shifting the camera to one side. The focusing tube on the door carries a series of magnifiers, and you view the magnified image on a ground glass; when ready to take the picture, turning the handle brings the photographic aperture back in front of the lens. In its photographic position, the position of the lens has not been changed, an advantage that is obvious to all cameramen. In this position the focusing tube is now behind another lens and becomes the finder. This operation is practically instantaneous and requires no other motion than turning the handle. Immediately in front of the shutter, but in the base, is a matte disc which carries all the "stock" mattes, together with a special slide where any special shaped matte may be inserted; this is operated from the outside. An index pin is provided which locks the disc in the proper position. All these mattes are readily accessible and are at the instant service of the operator. With these mattes any rectangle opening may be had. Either matte may be operated independently of the other and either matte will cover the whole aperture; they are inside protected from dust and protected from the light, so there is no danger of reflections from electric lights.

The Iris is pivotally mounted and is adjustable to any part of the aperture. There are thumb-nuts by which the Iris may be moved up and down and to either side.

In the lower corner of the turret plate is the rising and falling front; by pressing in on a knob a pinion is disengaged from a stop and engages a rack; turning the knob causes the turret to revolve slightly, giving the equivalent of 15 degrees tilt of the tripod, but without the accompanying distortion. The front is graduated so the lens may be brought to center in an instant and releasing the pressure on the knob locks the turret. The turret is revolved independently of this mechanism.

A slide is provided on the focusing tube, which may be opened, giving access to the ground glass; a matte slide is placed immediately in front of the ground glass and one behind the glass, the object being to slide pieces of ground celluloid in this rear slide and, while the camera is in the focusing position, mark out an object that is to be matched up in a double exposure, which is used to line up the second setting. This is for quick and more or less rough work. The most accurate way is to use the punch we provide, placing a piece of negative over pilot pins and punching out a frame of picture. This may may be inserted in the slide immediately in front of the ground glass and the second exposure viewed through this negative. This negative may also be used as matte by cutting out the parts of the scene to be double exposed, painting the remainder black and then slipping this in the matte disc and revolving to the aperture. If it is not desirable to use the film for a matte, any thin opaque material may be used. In this method of matting you are always focusing through the actual matte the picture is to be photographed through, so the possibility of error is reduced to the minimum.

The movement of the camera is made of the best grade of tool steel, hardened and ground all over and lapped with a diamond lappe to a mirror finish and very close fit. There are three cams which operate this mechanism; a three cornered cam moves the pins up and down; a second cam of the same design, but smaller, operates the pins in and out; while a third face cam relieves the tension and applies it again to the film. Through a cycle of operation the film is held in contact with the aperture by the face cam; the pins enter the film, the pressure is released and the film is brought to the new position; the pressure is again applied and the pins withdraw. The film is at all times positively held and placed in position, yet during the move-

The decorations were under the supervision of A. B. Hiensberger of Seattle. M. B. Pemberton has been appointed resident manager of the new theatre. Alexander Pantage made a special trip to Kansas City to attend the informal opening, which was greeted by a capacity house.

"We intend to purchase all our films on the open market," said J. J. Cluxton, special representative of Mr. Pantage, who supervised the opening of the house, "and we intend to show only the best pictures, which will be six reels in length. We have perfect confidence in Kansas City and feel certain that our investment has been a safe one."

Mr. Cluxton, a veteran theatrical man, is perhaps more widely known in the middle western territory than any other of his profession and rarely makes an erroneous conclusion as to prospective business conditions.

The new theatre marks the addition of the seventh house featuring motion pictures on Twelfth street, within a distance of two blocks.—TRUE.

Local 306 Educational Campaign Deserves Praise

Actuated by a desire to improve projection generally and to keep individual members up to the highest point of efficiency in every thing that pertains to projection and the booth, officials of I. A. T. S. E. and Moving Picture Operators Union, Local 306, have recently passed a law, adopting an educational campaign. This should act as a stimulus to the men; command the admiration of locals throughout the country and demonstrate to exhibitors a desire on the part of Union officials and men to maintain a high order of projection in their houses.

The plan as announced by Samuel Kaplan, President of Local No. 306, provides for the setting aside of the second and fourth Wednesday morning of each month for educational work. Equipment of the most recent design has been installed at Union Headquarters, 57 St. Mark's Place. New York City, and all members who can attend are urged to be present on these days to receive instruction on the development of various apparatus used in the booth, including machines, fire prevention and fighting devices, and all necessary equipment. So far as is known this is the first school or instruction board to be inaugurated by a local and the initiative is deserving of the highest commendation.

Manufacturers are requested to demonstrate new machinery and ideas before the men. The first concern to avail itself of the offer is the Precision Machine Company whose demonstrators have reserved October 26th to appear before the assembled members to go over the latest Simplex models in detail. The educational plan is obviously one which should be welcomed by manufacturers as well as by the operators. Booking dates for these demonstrations may be made by addressing Local 306, Educational Committee, 101 West Forty-fifth street, New York City.

Franklin Opens With Simplex Equipment

With B. F. Keith's boy band of several hundred playing, and a host of distinguished stars of the stage and screen present, the new B. S. Moss Franklin theatre, Prospect and Westchester avenues, Bronx, New York, recently opened with a record breaking audience.

Covering as it does almost an entire city block and seating 3,500 people, B. S. Moss has given to the Bronx a theatre which is claimed by many to surpass all others in the borough from an artistic standpoint as well as in size and equipment.

Three Type "S" Simplex projectors equipped with motors and Simplex mechanical speed controls are part of the wonderful projection room equipment.

Many novel features are incorporated in this new theatre which add to the comfort and convenience of the patrons, players and employees alike. On the mezzanine promenade a first-aid room is located with a nurse in attendance while the players' dressing-rooms are equipped with bathrooms and electrical appliances for make-up. An elevator from the dressing-rooms to the stage is an innovation in theatre building.

The stage itself is large enough to care for the biggest attractions, being 52 feet wide and 30 feet deep.

The theatre was planned by B. S. Moss after his affiliation with the B. F. Keith Circuit and the co-operation of E. F. Albee was sought in the matter of decoration and furnishing.

Feature films and Keith vaudeville will be the theatre's policy, with changes twice a week.

With the installation of Simplex projectors in the Franklin, the total number of theatres now on the Keith, Proctor and Moss circuits in Greater New York using Simplex projectors is twenty-five.

Remodeled Stanton Opens

One more elaborate photoplay theatre was added to Philadelphia's list when the Stanton reopened on Saturday, October 1, after having been closed all summer for alterations.

Opera chairs of the latest designs have been installed throughout the first floor, as well as decorations and alterations, which altogether will enable it to qualify as one of the most beautiful photoplay theatres in the east.

It opened on Saturday with William Fox's photodrama, "Over the Hill," which has the distinction of having been shown at six Broadway theatres at $2 for the best seats. It will be followed by "The Queen of Sheba," and that in turn by "A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court."

The Stanton will in the future devote itself to extended engagements of big feature photoplay productions at popular prices; 35 and 50 cents for matinees, and 50 and 75 cents for evenings.

Music has always been an important feature at this theatre and will continue to be so. A large symphony orchestra, under the direction of Sidney Lowestein, will play concert numbers as well as special scores for the pictures.—FRANKEL.

NEWS AND DISCUSSIONS

NATIONAL ANTI-MISFRAME LEAGUE PLEDGE

AS motion picture operator who has the interest of his profession at heart and is willing to assist in eliminating some of the evils practised in the operating-room, I promise that I will to the best of my ability return films to the exchange in first-class condition. Furthermore, I will when it becomes necessary remedy all misframes, bad patches, etc., that may be in the film which I receive and in this way co-operate with my brother operators and give greater pleasure to those who make up the motion picture audience by showing films that are free from such defects. I also promise that I will not make punch marks in film, and when film is received by me, with punch holes, I will notify the exchange to that effect so that they may use their efforts to correct this evil.

Dear Ed.: I think the Discussions Column for the members of our league will be just the thing. I am going to get together some dope to send in. It may not be written in the best of English, but you will be able to understand it. As soon as I can get a good photograph of my projection room I will shoot it to you with a description of the place. I have rigged up a couple of " short-cuts " to aid me in my work that would undoubtedly be interesting to other projectionists.

To my fellow members of the National Anti-Misframe League, I'll say come on in. This is the way we can learn more than by buying all the books in the United States. Let us tell our trouble to each other and each try to explain away the difficulties for the other fellow.

I have a good idea. Let each member try to write up stunt he has worked out to save time and labor in his work. Draw a plan and get a photograph if possible. If enough of us start this going we will have hundreds of bright ideas in a month or so and we will all benefit.

Look for my contribution in a week or two. Let's go, boys.

Yours, A. F. G.

P. S.—Please leave my name off, as I am inclined to be bashful, until I see how many of the fellows start sending in their dope.

A. F. G.—Fine! You have the right idea. Let the fellows send in their dope and at the same time shoot a photograph of themselves along with it. We'll start a beauty contest among the projectionists in the National Anti-Misframe League.—Ed.

Dear Ed:

Say, this isn't exactly in the line of our regular work, but I got a job to do for an organization I belong to. I want to know how I can light up a boxing ring located in the center of a large hall, so I can take moving pictures of a battle. Don't want to interfere with the view of the spectators. Can any of the members in the National Anti-Misframe League help me out? Surely some of them have had experience with amateur moving picture taking, if we might call it that. Give me any tips you can, fellows, for the fight is scheduled to come off in November.

Yours truly,
ANDREW COMPTON,
Member No. 1596.

What do you say, boys? Can you help Andy out? The idea of this column is to give you room to vent your opinions or feelings. See if you can give Andy any helpful ideas.—Ed.

What's your local doing? How would you like to know what the Portland, Ore., local was doing. Or you may hear the news from the local in San Antonio, Texas. Well if you write a letter telling what you are doing we will soon have the fellows in all the locals writing in their dope. Come on. Make this a clearing house for everything that interests projectionists. We are only taking up small space at present, but there is lots of room to expand. Shoot in your letters, drawings, arguments, kicks, boosts and anything else but home brew. We'll use 'em all, including the home brew if you insist on sending it in. What do you say. Do you want an official discussion column for our league? We have over 1,800 members, and we certainly ought to be able to make a big enough noise. Maybe we can discover some things that all the projectionists want and by going after it 1,800 strong we stand a mighty good chance of getting it.

Address everything to the National Anti-Misframe League, MOTION PICTURE NEWS, 729 Seventh avenue, New York City. If you are not a member fill out the application blank on this page. Mail it in. You will get your supply of film can labels, your official number and membership card and your N. A. M. L. button inside of a week. No fees, no dues, nothing but that which helps boost the projectionist.

Let's go, as A. F. G. says in his letter received this week.—Ed.

Excellent New Camera on Market

ment of the film there is no tension whatever; the film is perfectly free, but on the pins; these pins fit the perforations and correct registration is secured. This movement was tested in the shop by running for ten days eight hours a day at a speed greatly in excess of that which practical use will give it, after which it was taken down and measured to ascertain the wear and was found after this abuse that the wear was almost nothing. This is largely accounted for by having the cams and cam guides glass hard and lapped very smooth.

In the Mitchell a small spool is used in the magazines, the same size which comes in the film, so it is not necessary to rewind the film or to tear out the center and waste any film; the result is after a day's work a four hundred foot roll will go again in the can without rewinding or tightening the roll. This advantage is well known to every cameraman.

The throat of the magazine is three velvet covered rollers in contact; the outside rollers are on spring bearings to keep the contact constant and even. The film rolls between these rollers and rolling the film out of one side rolls it up in the other. Should the belt refuse to take up, your film will be delivered to the magazine, where it can be saved and will not jam in the camera.

Owing to the small spool, a high speed take up is used to take care of the film when first starting. By using this speed we have a very loose belt and there is slippage from the start; the last fifty feet of film will take up as easy as the first few feet; that is, the crank does not get heavier and heavier as the take up roll gets larger.

An automatic shutter is provided on each camera for lap dissolves and fade outs. Maximum shutter opening is 170 degrees. This shutter is Mitchell's own patent; it is the planitary gear type mounted on ball bearings. When the shutter closes it trips and applies a brake which may be released by pressing a button on the top of the camera near the rear. A dial is provided which indicates the instant opening of the shutter.

A shutter gear-change knob changes the length of fade. Shutter may be operated in either two, four or eight feet, as the operator may desire from a full shutter opening.

A shutter lever is a built-in feature by which any length of shutter fade may be had. This is in a convenient position and at the ready disposal of the operator.

Each camera is provided with a Veeder set back counter built in the camera which counts the number of feet exposed.

A sensitive level is mounted in the base of each camera at the rear and is in plain view at all times.

As regular equipment the Mitchell supplies an arm and upright which mounts on the base of the camera to be used when special requirements demand this class of matting. They do not stock a special device for this, as every photographer has his own idea of what he wants and they make these attachments to order. A sunshade in which gauze mattes may be used can be supplied if desired.

There is a turret on each camera with places for four lenses. An index pin is placed in a convenient position which locks the turret when the lens has been brought to the position. As regular equipment the Mitchell furnish a 1⅝-inch, a 2-inch and a 3-inch lens with matched finder lenses, but when a purchaser has his own lens they mount it free of charge, allowing the cost price of the lenses to them.

A special film punch is built in each camera. By pressing a button on the outside a knife cuts a diagonal slot in the film; this does not leave any cuttings in the camera to foul the mechanism, but leaves a mark which is readily found in the dark room.

Music and the Picture

"Sweet Kitchen Sentiments" in the Picture Theatre

GILBERT W. GABRIEL writing in the New York Sun, severely condemns the practise of placing popular numbers on the program as the final group at American recitals. "Pianists have their Liszt, violinists their trifling transcriptions but singers must go down into deepest ballardry," wails Mr. Gabriel.

"Gleaming bassos muffle their thunder in sweet kitchen sentiments," is another scathing line.

And then follows some musical history as follows: "In London such pieces are consigned to ballad concerts, honestly and openly arranged by song publishers for the sake of trying out and popularizing their new merchandise. They are interminable affairs, singer succeeding singer, the audience wandering in and out, with no stricter desire than to come away with a touched heart and a couple of tunes to hum. But worthy young recitals are far different matters with them, and they never mix wine and water. Several American singers learned this abroad to their sorrow. British and continental audiences wouldn't munch, after Mozart, at Picardy roses from a hothouse of ballads, nor favored following Schumann with something like 'Sweet Kitty Malone.' They were hot against our hybrid programmes."

All of which is quoted not so much to epitomize Mr. Gabriel's musical tastes but to serve as an excuse to editorialize somewhat, on what to serve in the musical programme offered at the motion picture theatre.

Mr. Gabriel probably reflects the opinion of the average high-grade musician whether he be appearing in recital or before, the more varied and probably less high-brow audience of the picture theatre.

Left to himself, the musician will forget that "sweet kitchen sentiments" appeal to many a lover of music—whose education—both musical and otherwise, does not permit him to appreciate that which the artist finds most satisfying.

Mr. Gabriel's complaint will probably find scant sympathy in the mind of the business manager for either recital or picture theatre interests, who has learned that a sop to the layman is advisable when finances alone are to be considered.

"Sweet kitchen sentiments" may be overdone at either the recital or in the theatre but so too can the classics.

It is well to listen to the voice of the showman occasionally, lest music in America become a bore to some, through lack of understanding. It is best to creep before we attempt to walk.

London may condemn its popular ballads to the music hall but the picture theatre cannot as yet afford such a course.

Boston Symphony Begins Season

PIERRE MONTEUX has begun his third season as conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Among the scores presented in the early concerts at Boston are Mendelssohn's "Italian" symphony, Rimsky-Kersakoff's "Sadko," Debussy's two nocturnes, "Nuages" and "Fetes" and Strauss's "Don Juan."

Philharmonic Has Many Novelties in Repertoire

JOSEF STRANSKY, conductor of the Philharmonic Orchestra has announced some of the novelties that have been selected for the first part of the season of the Philharmonic concerts. One of them finds a place in the first program of the season—a Prelude and Fugue for piano and orchestra by an American composer, Daniel Gregory Mason. Among the other works new to Philharmonic audiences scheduled by Stransky are Enesco's Symphony in E flat major, opus 13; Henry Hadley's tone poem, "The Ocean"; Charles S. Skilton's Suite Primeval; a symphonic picture by Whithorn entitled "In the Courts of Pomegranate"; Ravel's Rhapsodie Espagnol; Five orchestra pieces by Shoenberg, opus 16, and "Le Mort de Tintagilles," a symphonic poem by Charles E. Loeffler. More novelties will be announced later.

Stage Settings for Overture Numbers Featured by Goldman

DIRECTOR WILLIAM GOLDMAN, of the Missouri theatre, St. Louis, has inaugurated another unique idea in connection with his musical overtures which are rendered by a symphony orchestra of 27 pieces under the direction of Tony Sarli.

The idea consists of illustrating the music with elaborate scenes on the miniature stage which stands to the rear of the major stage at the Missouri theatre. The effect of accompanying the music with tableaux and dancing scenes is the same on the audience as that of playing music to the motion pictures. The local critics on the newspapers have given Goldman considerable notice and praise for his work, especially in view of the comment which it has evoked from the general public.

The accompanying photograph shows a recent musical set. The swan scene is that used in connection with the "Swan Song" from "Lohengrin." The swan moved across the stage, and the rider sang to the music.

The idea has proven popular with the music lovers of the Missouri, and Mr. Goldman is sure that the added expenditures for the settings are more than offset by the added patronage brought in by the presentation.

"Dance Pictures" Latest Brooklyn Music Innovation

"DANCE Pictures" are the latest stage novelties included in the programs of the Brooklyn Mark Strand Theatre. This new conception calls for the translating or interpreting of a classic song through choreography or rythmic art, and in turn the interpretation of the dance through the words of the song as sung from off stage.

Grieg's "A Dream" was the first experiment in "Dance Pictures."

The set was that of a garden in dim early evening light with the silhouette of blossom laden trees barely visible. The Serova Dancers, young girls in convention-colored draperies and in sportive mood came singly and in pairs upon the stage, surrounding a wooing pair and dancing happily around them.

Henry Moeller, tenor, off stage, sang the words of the song which the dancers strived to work out in rythmic motion. Their dancing in turn accentuated the words of Mr. Moeller's song.

As the song started the lights come up gradually as if lifting the fog of a dream. As the trees and dancers became more definite Mr. Moeller's song increased in volume. Toward finale the action of the dancers became less lively, the lights dropped again and the scene closed almost dark, as if curtaining a dream.

Seattle Theatre Installs New Organ

The Pantages theatre in Seattle has just completed the installation of a modern Robert Morton orchestral organ, and Glenn Goff, an organist schooled in his art by the makers of the instrument, has been engaged by the Pantages' management, to play the instrument.

The installation of the instrument is the first step taken by the theatre in their plan to feature motion pictures with organ accompaniments, and possible concerts, in conjunction with their present program of vaudeville bills.

The organ is fully equipped with numerous members of the flute, violin and brass instrument families, and a new touch system enables the organist to use two separate combinations of tones from the same division simultaneously.

Stage setting for the rendition of "Lohengrin" at the Missouri theatre, St. Louis, as told in the accompanying article

Feature Subjects of Short Length

"Never Weaken"

(Harold Lloyd Comedy-Associated Exhibitors)

THE audiences who see Harold Lloyd in his latest comedy, "Never Weaken," will certainly have to admit that he reaches the heights in thrilling fashion, for the demands of the story are such that the comedian with the horn-rimmed "specs" is called upon to show his skill as a stunt actor. There won't be such volumes of applause indicating explosive laughter here as in some of his other efforts, but those who follow the comedian and are susceptible to his style of comedy are liable to weaken themselves through sheer exhaustion. Many will probably possess enough imagination to shriek out loud with hysterical laughter over the exploits that Harold indulges in atop a skyscraper under construction.

He flits from one steel beam to another with the agility of a bird. Truly he is an equilibrist as well as a comedian. And the wiseacres are going to be completely fooled to understand how he gets away with it. The spectator drinks in the sight of Los Angeles spread out in an immediate vision. The streets are far below, and Lloyd is far up in the air. He gets the signals crossed—the signals of the hoisters and steel-workers and other sons of hardy toil. A beam comes sneaking out of space and hits him "amidships" and he topples off to catch the big cable—just in the nick of time.

The story presents him at first guiding over the destinies of a business office. The girl occupies a similar position in the doctor's office around the corner. When he sees her in the arms of another (the other is her brother, though he doesn't know it at the time) he contemplates suicide. There are some amusing gags which introduce some slapstick concerning ways and means of exit from earth. But the iron girder swings into the window and takes Harold to the heights.

Well, the spectators are in for a huge thrill—a thrill which is seldom sent forth in the serials. Make no mistake about it—it is going to take the breath away. Mildred Davis is the charming heroine who rides to the top herself before the picture is over. Fred Newmeyer directed and shows some new stunts and gags—and these must have come from the fertile imaginations of Hal Roach and Sam Taylor. Go to it. Grab it quick.—Length 3 Reels.—LAURENCE REID.

"Pure and Simple"

(Christie Comedy—Two Reels—Released Through Educational Exchanges, Inc.)

BOBBY VERNON cannot be said to go over with a bang in this latest of his comedies. Instead of being a whirlwind of mirth it is a polite comedy, with slapstick much in evidence, which is sufficiently amusing to be satisfying.

Bobby comes over from Sweden to visit old friends of his who have emigrated to America years before. These people believe that Bobby will prove to be the usual type of immigrant, but in truth he is a cultured gentleman, traveling not in the steerage, but in the first-class cabins. To prevent him from disgracing the family they send him money for other lodgings. Bobby decides to play the role they have assigned to him, and, dressing as an immigrant, arrives at a reception. There is considerable hokum, and a cook, the exaggerated Swedish type, proves unusually funny. Bobby is able to prevent the marriage of the young heroine to a man who already has a bride and two children. In the end Bobby comes back to Americanized clothes and speech once more.—MATTHEW A. TAYLOR.

"Strolling Minstrels"

(Bruce Scenic—One Reel—Released Through Educational Exchanges)

LOVERS of the scenic beauties of Switzerland will find plenty to please them in this Bruce scenic. The camera follows a wandering Alpine climber up the winding path that leads to the Gornergrat's summit. The Matterhorn and the rugged, snow-capped mountains stretch before him and the toy village of Zermatt lies at his feet. The minstrel plays his accordion to an audience of Swiss goats. This part of the reel is scenically far superior to the sequence which follows.

Scotland and its lakes and a kilted bag-piper occupy the second half of the reel. This is not unusually fascinating. Scotland offers a striking contrast to the grandeur of Swiss scenery. The piper wanders up hill and down. This will please only those with some special interest in this country, or section of it. But Switzerland, oft-photographed as it has been, never grows weary to the eye.—MATTHEW A. TAYLOR.

"The Last Hops"

(Chester Scenic-Educational)

WHERE sky meets water is reflected more than once in this marvelously beautiful scenic entitled "The Last Hops." Somewhere in the rugged Rockies up Montana way, these cloud effects are vividly brought out through the transparent sheen of water of innumerable rivers and ponds. That isn't all. A group of adventurers are determined to locate the huge grasshoppers which infest the mountain region. They climb and climb over an array of mountains which are awe-inspiring because of their picturesque appeal. The topography of the country is truly primitive and rugged.

Suddenly one encounters a vast army of sheep grazing on a certain plateau. Then the grasshoppers—frozen because of the glacial character of the land—are presented. But the appealing part of the picture are the impressive landscapes. The camera has caught them in a variety of scenes and all are eloquent with their rugged beauty.—Length 1 Reel.—LAURENCE REID.

"A Pair of Sexes"

(Christie Comedy—Released Through Educational Exchanges, Inc.—Two Reels)

THE Christie product continues to be clever, original, honestly funny, well directed and well acted. "Falling for Flossie" was a splendid example of their high class work, and "A Pair of Sexes" is a close, very close, second. It has a story by Sam Taylor, built up from a most amusing farcical idea; it has been directed by Frederick Sullivan in such a way that the very limit of fun is extracted from the high spots of the story; and it has such admirable comedy types as Neal Burns, Viora Daniel, and Harry Murdock in its cast.

A traveling man gets word from his wife that she "has a big surprise for him." Now wifie simply meant that she had moved to a larger apartment across the hall. But when the husband returns to his old apartment he finds a pair of new born twins. The real father is absent, and the mother cannot be seen. So there is no one to undeceive the poor husband and, bursting with pride, he takes the twins to his office, handing out cigars en route and hiring a German street band to give the parade a more festive air. The real husband returns and his efforts to recover his children are frantic. The comedy ends with a cabaret scene where the proud "father," musicians, and business partners are celebrating as the twins rest upon the table. The fight for the babies ends the picture with a good laugh.—MATTHEW A. TAYLOR.

Movie Chat No. 64

(Released by Kineto Company of America—One Reel)

THIS is one of the most consistently interesting Movie Chats that the writer has seen. It starts with some views of the relics of Rome, notably the Castle of St. Angelo, the tomb of Cecilia Metalla on the Appian Way, and then shows St. Peter's, the glory of Rome of the Middle Ages, and contrasts it with the Monument of Victor Emmanuel II, modern Rome's masterpiece of architecture. Leaving Rome, we are taken to the orchards of New England and from there to the West, where the method of dredging rivers for gold is shown. Then there are some scenes of the Peruvian cattle marts; some monkey performers at the Zoo; and the salmon fishing in the Columbia River is illustrated.—MATTHEW A. TAYLOR.

Kineto Review No. 85

(Released Through National Exchanges, Inc.—One Reel)

THIS subject of Charles Urban's is entitled "Pleasant Life in Central France and the Silk Industry of Lyons." Evidently, modern harvesting machinery is rare in the section pictured here, which is seventy-five miles from the nearest railway. The crude methods of farming are interesting to watch. The latter half of the reel reveals the mysteries of high grade silk weaving. Some street scenes of Lyons are shown to begin with and then comes factory views which give a fair idea of the details of silk making.—MATTHEW A. TAYLOR.

"THEODORA"
(Goldwyn)

This Massive Spectacle Dwarfs Other Achievements of Its Kind

THE much abused word "spectacle" may be applied correctly to Goldwyn's latest contribution if ever there was a spectacle in every sense of the word. "Theodora," produced by the Unione Cinematographica Italiana, eclipses anything heretofore achieved along this line. All the announcements made by Goldwyn that it took over three years to produce, that it cost a stupendous sum and that it carries a cast of 25,000 people is believable once the picture has run its course. It is such an immense undertaking that the love-tragedy which provides the story interest is almost overwhelmed. This is due to the scenic embellishments, all of which pass before the eye in a kaleidoscopic and dazzling array.

One marvels over the collection of scenes—the profusion of events. There is so much to see—so much to tell—that the spectator may be pardoned for being confused. Director Ambrosio has brought out the glorification of the Byzantine era in tones that will satisfy the professional eye of the learned. One can easily assume the idea that the picture is of Italian birth. There is much of the same grandeur, the same thrill, the immensity of setting that marked "Cabiria," although the intensified drama of that unforgettable canvas is missing here until the tragic climax is reached.

The spectacle suffers from editing. Presumably it was made in extraordinary footage and the necessary elimination caused vital chapters and incident to be merely glossed over. This is noticeable in the early sequences which rush with almost chaotic fury with scarcely any coherence. But overtopping the plot is the spectacular appeal. Don't forget that. Even the jaded picturegoer who has witnessed spectacles produced in America will have to admit that here is an achievement that dazzles the eye—principally through its immensity and splendor. An earthquake is followed by mad battle, murder, pillage and barbaric games held in the vast amphitheatre. And running in and out of this bizarre design is the tragic love story of the liontamer's daughter, who defied Justinian and the Roman empire and sacrificed her throne and life because of her consuming passion. The clandestine scenes of the lovers invite suspense, for one anticipates the network of intrigue which is certain to ensnare them. The imperious courtezan employs frenzied efforts to save her lover. He is leading the revolutionary forces. He is so righteous that he even denounces her. And with a mad impulse she releases the lions upon the storming, threatening mob. The tragic ending of her life is like the snapping of a string on a virtuoso's violin. It comes abruptly. It is the major note in a whole scale of minor chords of tragedy.

The picture is eloquent in its atmosphere and setting. Italian vistas, gardens, landscapes, dot the action throughout and make it thoroughly compelling. It is too intricate a pattern—too vast for the mere telling of a simple love tragedy. However, it offers a clash of events—the storming of the castle by the lions, the insurrection of the natives and the stamping down of the rebellion by the Roman legions—these are sweeping in their force and action. The forepart of the picture carries too many animated illustrations—there being a profusion of subtitles. But the crashing climaxes in the latter part offer rich compensation.—Length, 10 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

"Theodora," the Goldwyn picture which comes to the ———— theatre next ———— is rightfully called the biggest spectacle of the screen. It was produced in Italy and took over three years in the making. It rivals "Cabiria" and surpasses this spectacle in its splendor of setting and richness of detail. Over 25,000 people are assembled in one of the massive scenes and a thrill is attached when the Byzantium empress, Theodora, releases the lions in order to save her lover. The picture is said to be historically correct and entirely faithful in its representation of the Byzantium empire.

PROGRAM READER

Positively the greatest spectacle ever screened. That is "Theodora," the Goldwyn picture which comes to the ———— theatre for an engagement beginning ————. The romances of the world have been written in song and play and history—and this is one of them. Remember "Cabiria," the Italian master production? Well "Theodora" even eclipses that massive spectacle in its stirring drama, its thrills, its grandeur of scenes, its massive sets. It is an Italian picture which surpasses anything ever shown before.

SUGGESTIONS

This is a massive spectacle and the thing for you to do is to get out the huge 24 sheets issued by Goldwyn and declare a holiday. Bill it as stupendous, massive, thrilling, dramatic, awe-inspiring—a truly great spectacle. Bill it as surpassing anything heretofore achieved in the way of picture drama. Tell that it consumed three years in the making and that it cost over three million dollars. Tell that 25,000 people are in the cast. Make a play with the thrills, announcing that forty lions are released upon a huge mob. Use a big prologue. And put it over big.

"THE SHEIK"
(Melford-Paramount)

AN American made spectacle—one that easily holds its own even in these days of keen competition and when foreign made pictures may boast of the thousands of people numbered in their productions. Most of the countless men in "The Sheik," representing tribes of Arabs, are mounted. They ride like the horsemen one would expect in that country and their wild races over the desert have not been as easily followed, directed or controlled as a similar number of people on foot. In this connection the direction has been splendid.

As a spectacle "The Sheik" is delightful, the photography exceptional. Indeed, it is unquestionably picturesque. Especially are the interiors of interest, representing the habitations of the leaders of Arabian tribes, the hangings, rugs and weird furnishings being most artistic. In addition, they are gorgeous in their extravagance.

The screen version does not follow accurately the book by E. M. Hull from which it was adapted, although touches here and there reflect due precision. Rather than a love tale, the picture is one of adventure, romance playing second in interest, compared with the exploits of the heroine.

The cast has been carefully selected, although three parts carry the burden. Rudolf Valentino is especially well fitted for the title role, which he played for all it was worth. Agnes Ayres as the captured English woman looks the part and takes advantage of every opportunity to register ability. As the French novelist and physician Adolphe Menjou wins recognition.

A headstrong English girl of good family finds the men of her set tame. Her brother is a sort of mollycoddle type, and though she is sought in marriage by an English title, she refuses on the strength of wishing to retain her independence.

She believes in living her life to suit herself, and one of the plans decided upon, against the admonitions of her friends, is to ride into the heart of the desert, unaccompanied by an Arabian mounted guide train.

Just previous to her departure she meets the leader of one great Arabian tribe. He is Ahmed, Ben Hasson, who has won a reputation for himself in captivating the fair sex. He is a sort of social lion, rather than a savage, having been educated in Paris.

According to custom, women are offered at a marriage market. Ahmed is conducting a market for the entertainment of guests at the Casino. The Englishwoman borrows the clothes of a native and steals her way in, burning with curiosity. She is shocked at the procedure, found out and escorted to her hotel by the "Sheik."

Thereafter the action is centered upon her abduction by Ahmed, his endeavors to command her fear and respect to do his will. Her rebellion both amuses and delights him. The arrival of a white man makes her position unbearable. She endeavors to run away and is lost in the desert. Ahmed rescues her, but later the leader of another tribe, a vicious character, plans to abduct the fair English captive. When he does the trouble starts and ends in an attack of Ahmed's forces against the palace of the Arabian leader. The Sheik is dangerously injured and when she believes he will die her love is confessed. The white man then tells her the story of the origin of the man she loves. He was the son of an Englishman, found in the desert by the old "Sheik," who adopted and brought him up as his own. Upon his recovery the short love episode culminates in their plans for a speedy marriage.—Seven reels.—Lillian R. Gale.

PROGRAM READER

It is coming! "The Sheik." The story everybody who has not read is talking about. "How can they show the very heart of the Arabian desert on the screen?" a reader of the book may ask. Just wait until you see it. The desert is all there, the tents, the Arabs and the hundreds of horses. The abduction of the Englishwoman is one of the most thrilling and realistic ever presented in celluloid. Her rescue makes one forget everything except that she is in danger and if "The Sheik" doesn't get there pretty soon—it will be too late. The glory and lure of a moonlight night on the desert make the Englishwoman forget that the tribe leader is supposedly a "black skin," makes her forget that she is a woman of high birth, for she returns the love of the young, determined desert-man, who proves his love for her when he risks his life to rescue her from his vicious neighbor. One of the "thrills" of the season! Don't miss it.

SUGGESTIONS

It is a feature that can be easily and inexpensively exploited. The use of a high-bred horse, with a black shiny coat, and a dark-skinned man in the costume of an Arab, will command both attention and comment. Tents on vacant lots, or a striped canopy from the entrance of your theatre to the sidewalk, will create "atmosphere." Rudolf Valentino proved his ability as an actor in "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," but not until he appeared as "The Sheik" was his ability to handle a spirited horse in so adept a style recognized.

"THE SON OF WALLINGFORD"

(Vitagraph Special)

Spectacular Comedy-Melodrama of More Than Usual Merit

VITAGRAPH'S latest special, "The Son of Wallingford," is comparable to its other specials, "The Heart of Maryland," "Dead Men Tell No Tales" and "Thunder Island," in point of spectacular appeal. The sponsors have thought well enough of the story to dress it up with a rich setting, notwithstanding the fact that its plot on the surface does not indicate any picturesque quality. However, the very fact that the financial wizard, Wallingford, is the god of the machine—a figure which has interested thousands of readers—is sufficient to attract the public. The result of the finished photoplay indicates that the money has not been expended in vain. For it carries the necessary elements for success.

The offering releases a good brand of comedy, an ingredient which is admirably balanced with exciting melodramatic thrills. Therefore it should appeal to most every type of picturegoer. The character of J. Rufus Wallingford is familiar to everyone. The name is coupled immediately with the topic of making money without working for it. And since J. Rufus humbugs his public, the interest of the reader gives him a personality that builds popularity. But the pompous figure is relegated to the background in many of the scenes in order to reveal his son as a "chip of the old block." It is an intricate plot, naturally, and one has to posses a flair for figures to absorb many of the little details of high finance. The youth puts one over on his father, but a girl intercedes with romantic appeal so that the young man has pangs of conscience.

He wants to go straight, and it looks as if he might be successful, but for the fact that J. Rufus looms up with his get-rich-quick boom and very nearly embarrasses the youth. The story revolves around the floating of oil stock. The youngster has discovered an "honest-to-goodness" gusher, but the father, aided by his fellow schemer, Blackie Daw, puts over a deal which places his previous financial efforts in the shade. He has erected a fake well, the oil flowing from cars through a pipe which has been sunk beneath the son's well. The details attached to this scene are rich in comedy and melodrama. J. Rufus is there with bells on when it comes to getting out of a tight corner. He has embarrassed an old skinflint, while the son has embarrassed his rival for the love stakes. The spectacular appeal is developed from the technical equipment of the picture, the Chesters seeing to it that every scene is realistic. An inland lake, oil wells, gushers, and a rich sequence showing crude oil going up in flames—these are all incorporated for the sake of realism. It is not an easy story to follow, although the continuity is clearly defined in most instances. The acting is well taken care of by Wilfrid North, who, as J. Rufus, seems to be a perfect representation of the type; George Webb as Blackie, Tom Gallery as Jimmy, and Priscilla Bonner as the heroine.—Length, 7 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

"The Son Wallingford," the big Vitagraph special, will be the feature attraction at the ———— theatre next ————. This is the latest of the "Get-Rich-Quick-Wallingford" series to be exploited for the entertainment of the public. The character of J. Rufus is a household word. The idea of making money without working for it has always appealed to public fancy. Naturally Mr. and Mrs. George Randolph Chester have hit upon an idea which is always popular. It is a spectacle—this picture. It carries rich appeal through its expenditure of money which has been used to bring out the realistic touches. An inland lake of fire from blazing crude oil forms one of the big scenes, and there are many other thrilling incidents which punctuate the offering. The cast has been selected for its appropriateness. Wilfrid North is a perfect type as J. Rufus, while the remainder of the cast is entirely acceptable.

PROGRAM READER

A story of human interest and spectacular scenes is "The Son of Wallingford," the latest of the "Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford" series made popular by Mr. and Mrs. George Randolph Chester. It presents the son of J. Rufus as the hero—and he is surely a "chip of the old block." However, he has pangs of conscience, for he tries to make a fortune honestly and at the same time prevent his father from carrying out a scheme of crookedness. Wallingford, internationally famous, stages a big pageant to launch a fake building boom in the town where his son is drilling for oil and the heart of the girl. There are other scenes which carry rich interest. See this picture. It is vastly entertaining. At the ———— next ————.

"NOBODY'S FOOL"

(Universal)

Light But Satisfying Comedy-Romance

MARIE PREVOST'S second starring venture on the Universal program possesses all the characteristics of her initial vehicle, "Moonlight Follies," in that it relies upon a vein of light comedy and some irrepressible high jinks for its appeal. There is no substance to the story. What is revealed has served fiction and the screen a score of times, and the spectator need not expect a stimulating recipe from its obvious design. "Nobody's Fool" serves its purpose—which is to present Miss Prevost in the best possible light. She knows her own limitations as an actress. And it is to the credit of Universal that this company is not putting her in stories which might tax her ability. One might say that this is the day of the flapper—and the flapper has come into her own as represented by the erstwhile Sennett bathing beauty.

Just where the title fits is hard to explain—unless one wants to say that she shows the wisdom of Mother Eve in matters of the heart. It is her object to charm a man-hater and force him to his knees with a proposal. And Marie Prevost, knowing all the tricks and using those which the author and director have incorporated, breezes through a dashing, irresistible type of femininity. The comedy opens with the star an undergraduate at a co-ed college. She seems doomed to spinsterhood—what with her inability to cultivate the social graces and the fact that her wardrobe belongs to the old maid school.

There is some conventional college incident which is innocuous in its appeal, though it sparkles because of snappy titling. We next discover the girl a wealthy heiress and her appearance as an up-to-date flapper is as surprising as it is pleasing. This transformation comes too quickly to be accepted as genuine. In one scene she is a hopeless boob, the next she resembles a sub-deb. Had she been put through a course of sprouts the story would not have been injured in any way, and it would have given some reason for her sudden blooming without the purse-strings providing the means.

It is quite episodic, this "Nobody's Fool," for the heroine is next seen presiding over a lonely mountain cabin. The subsequent scenes offer a game of "give and take" between the man-hater, played in excellent spirit by Harry Myers—made up to resemble the conventional bug chaser. But there is no need for the melodramatic flash showing a lounge lizard, masquerading as an honorable suitor, indulging in the petty tactics of compromising the girl. The scene spoils the character of the story. Exquisite scenery punctuates the mountain sequences and the sepia tones will compel admiration.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Universal's new star, Marie Prevost, has in "Nobody's Fool," a delightful comedy-drama of a young co-ed who inherits a fortune from a deceased aunt and proceeds to find enjoyment from it. As Polly Gordon, Miss Prevost demonstrates again her ability to interpret the resourceful girl of the day. During Polly's undergraduate days she has been suppressed to such an extent that she seemed doomed to spinsterhood. She was a horrid dancer and a worse dresser. But with the sudden accumulation of wealth, Polly decided to have a good time. Her adventure takes her to a lonely cabin in the mountains where she encounters a woman-hater.

This man, Artemus Alger, thinks the girl is the wife of his best friend, the owner of the cabin. And it is his duty to rescue ladies in distress no matter how he detests the sex. In the end he capitulates to her charms. It is a picture filled with charming incident and unfolds a pretty romance. In Miss Prevost's company is the talented Harry Myers, one of the most accomplished comedians of the day. King Baggot directed.

PROGRAM READER

Marie Prevost, the erstwhile Mack Sennett bathing beauty, has in "Nobody's Fool" a picture which will bring her into the spotlight of popularity. It is made to order for her since it permits her to flash her individuality—her wholesome personality in a role which is entirely captivating. She is the modern, resourceful girl. She encounters a woman-hater and the task of winning over his affection proves an adventure in which she enters with the keenest zest. The picture is filled with charming sentiment and detail and is wonderfully photographed. It is marked for its sparkling humor, and Miss Prevost is radiant in every scene. At this theatre next ————. A better picture than "Moonlight Follies." Don't miss it.

"BITS OF LIFE"
(First National)

Real Entertainment and Drama in This Neilan Novelty

PICTORIAL fiction of the sort that Americans always read sums up "Bits of Life." Mr. Neilan has taken four stories, three having been published in current magazines and one an original script from the pen of "Micky" himself, and transferred them to the screen without bothering about the traditions of picture making, which among other things has insisted that a photoplay must have a theme, a mushy love story, a sweet young thing as a heroine and a modern Apollo as the hero.

The result is four separate pictures joined together as a feature by a letter from Mr. Neilan explaining why he chose the stories and some of the best entertainment for the fan, especially the male of the species, to come through in a long time.

Mr. Neilan's four pictures in one has action, incident and suspense and each episode tells its interest compelling story and quits after arriving at its climax. "Bits of Life" is a feature for people who pretend to have a little grey matter in their upper story or at least enough so they are willing to dispense for once with sticky romance and the cut and dried style of construction of the average multiple reel picture.

Mr. Neilan's first story is called "The Bad Samaritan." It tells how a crook outwitted the law until one day he started out to be a Samaritan with the result that a chain of incidents framed him for a ten years sojourn in the pen. The second story is about a man who was totally deaf but happy because of what he didn't hear or know from lack of hearing. Then one day he gets a mechanical instrument that restores his lost faculty and his happiness is gone because of what he finds out. This story is a classic, indeed a "bit of life."

The last two yarns are not so pleasing but both are unusual and carry suspense and interest, and any of the four possess more entertainment than half the features being presented. There is room for more "Bits of Life." It is hoped that Mr. Neilan will not stop with this one venture into a new kind of picture entertainment.—Length, 6 reels.—J. S. Dickerson.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Marshall Neilan has discovered something new in motion pictures which is briefly nothing more nor less than using the same idea that is back of short-story magazines. He has produced in "Bits of Life" a six reel magazine of four separate stories—of two reels each, and this distinct novelty will be the feature attraction at the ———— theatre next ———— with a cast that includes Lon Chaney, Wesley Barry, John Bowers, Edythe Chapman, Noah Beery, Harriet Hammond and James Neill. Among the authors are Walter Trumbull, Hugh Wiley, Thomas McMorrow and Mr. Neilan himself. And each author has contributed a plot widely different from the others. The first is a satire, the second a comedy-drama, the third a tense drama and the fourth a big surprise. In all they comprise interesting action athrob with life. There is plenty of romance, laughter, thrill mystery—everything that has characterized a Neilan production in the past.

PROGRAM READER

Do you like surprises? Would you like to see a picture that is different? Would You like to see the short story scheme as arranged in the monthly magazines appear on the screen? Then come to the ———— theatre and see Marshall Neilan's big surprise, "Bits of Life." This is positively a photodramatic innovation for it presents four separate stories all of which are teeming with action, romance, humor, thrill, mystery and suspense. And in these four stories are fourteen real stars. Do you want to know them? Well, among the cast are Lon Chaney, Wesley Barry, Noah Beery, Harriet Hammond, John Bowers and many other favorites. Neilan tells four stories in the ordinary feature length. Come and see the big surprise.

SUGGESTIONS

Marshall Neilan has surely started something here. And it would be a good plan to make a play on his startling innovation of presenting screen entertainment much after the fashion that stories are presented to the reader through the short story magazines. In other words he tells four separate stories of two reels each —all of which are crammed with action and suspense. Play up the scheme and have your crowd write letters stating what they think of the scheme. This is a good advertising angle and will stimulate healthy patronage at the theatre. Play the picture for its punch and don't overlook the cast. Use all their names, but emphasize Lon Chaney and Wesley Barry.

CATCH LINES

Four complete stories—all for the price of one admission. Come and see Marshall Neilan's photodramatic innovation enacted by an all-star cast.

Walthall Scores in Crook Melodrama

WHEN it comes to giving expression to suppressed emotions Henry B. Walthall stands almost in a class by himself. This capable actor, who is seen too infrequently on the screen, can indicate feeling by the employment of a simple gesture or the trembling of an eyelid. The pathos of his expression enlists the greatest sympathy if he is interpreting a lonely, pathetic figure. And in "Parted Curtains" the star portrays just such a character. Since the story revolves around him, there is scarcely a scene in which he does not hold a dominant position. The picture is Walthall's, although the press notices indicate that Mary Alden is sharing stellar honors. But her work is of a minor capacity.

"Parted Curtains" is of a familiar design and wholly conventional, and if the spectator is able to anticipate the action, at least the obviousness does not eliminate the sympathy he will extend to the downtrodden figure who is hounded by the law merely because the prison gates have released him. To place the ex-convict on the upward path it is necessary for the author to become arbitrary in his development. He must needs resort to coincidence which hasn't any convincing quality about it. The hero is rescued from despair at the moment he feels himself helpless against the scorn of society. He encounters the scoundrel who caused him his prison sentence and this same scoundrel bobs up to harass the wife of his benefactor by employing blackmail.

This particular thread of the story is unduly convenient, because it shows a woman burdened with the terrible secret of her past. The hero, going straight, might have turned the unredeemed crook over to the law, but he prefers to perform a noble act of sacrifice. He has the wife's secret and intends to keep it at all hazards. When the crook kidnaps the child in furthering his blackmailing tactics, the spectator will admit to himself that the action becomes crude and clumsy. However, it gives the hero a chance to kill the blackmailer in self-defense and rescue the child. There are no surprises—no twists and turns to the orthodox plot which might give it the element of intensified drama or suspense. But it will appeal because of the sympathetic figure of the hero. An "underdog" type of character always invites sympathy. And it is in this characterization that Walthall appears at his best. There is faulty cutting in a few places, but for the most part the story progresses in an even manner and will doubtless score as an interesting crook melodrama.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

THE CAST

Joe Jenkins ..... Henry Walthall
Wheeler Masters ..... Edward Cecil
Mrs. Masters ..... Mary Alden
Helen ..... Margaret Landis
Bobby Masters ..... Mickey Moore
"The Weasel" ..... William Clifford

By Tom Hopkins.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

An interesting melodrama is offered in "Parted Curtains," which comes to the ———— theatre next ———— starring Henry B. Walthall, the well known emotional actor. It is a story full of romance, humor, pathos and thrilling adventure; it is an absorbing tale of love, treachery and sacrifice staged amid the beauty of society and the slums of New York. The theme revolves around the idea that "once a crook always a crook." Consequently, Joe Jenkins is condemned by society when he is released from prison.

He had made a mistake by trusting a friend with certain funds, with the result that he was convicted. Upon his release the long arm of the law stared him in the face at every turn. In his efforts to secure honest work, Joe is unsuccessful until he meets a man who has faith in him. Then it is a long, hard climb to happiness and prosperity. The picture permits the star to express his talent in an emotional manner and he is well supported by Mary Alden and others.

PROGRAM READER

With seven years and three months of hard labor behind him, Convict 2349 stepped into the sunlight to face the world anew. The prison gates clanged behind him. Joe Jenkins had paid his debt to society—yes, he had paid. But society demanded something in return. Society was willing to condemn him according to the edict—"once a crook, always a crook." Joe struggled to make his way in the world, but the law hounded him at every turn. This is the suspense created in the picture drama, "Parted Curtains," featuring Henry B. Walthall and Mary Alden, which opens an engagement at the ———— theatre next ————. It is an absorbing story crammed with thrill, adventure, pathos, heart interest and romance. Don't miss it.

SUGGESTIONS

A letter and postal card campaign following the idea used in the Program Reader would be a good plan for exploitation. This plan will assure a measure of suspense for the readers. And then you have the leading players to advertise. Every fan is familiar with Henry B. Walthall's name. He is one of the really few emotional actors of the screen. And Mary Alden is also a well known and talented figure on the screen. Her work in "The Old Nest" will testify to her ability. Catch lines would be a good angle, too. Then the title can be worked out in an attractive manner and the idea used for a prologue. Bill it as an absorbing story of life—a story crammed with adventure, romance, thrills, heart interest and suspense.

CATCH LINES

One of the most amazing stories of self-sacrifice that has ever been screened. That is "Parted Curtains," which comes to the ———— theatre next ————.

See Henry B. Walthall and Mary Alden in the absorbing picture of adventure and romance. See "Parted Curtains."

"WOMAN'S PLACE"
(First National)

Another Vehicle for Constance With Emerson—Loos Titles

"WOMAN'S PLACE" is a farce comedy, adaptation of the old idea of whether a woman's place is in the home, with Constance Talmadge playing the role of a scatter-brained young miss who is nominated for the office of mayor of a fictional Ohio city against her equally addle-pated fiance. The man is elected because the women voters are jealous of Constance, but in the meantime she has fallen in love with the political boss of the city so it doesn't make any difference, for the inference is that she is going to boss the boss and the boss is going to tell the mayor what to do.

As a story there isn't much to build on and at no time is the production to be taken seriously. However, Miss Talmadge's admirers will no doubt find the offering entirely satisfactory, as it has all the tried and true ingredients that put this star's picture over; namely clothes, good sets, opportunity for Constance to exhibit her particular tricks of expression and an idea that permits the interpolation of considerable farce comedy incident.

The footage runs rather largely to titles, but these are of the well known Emerson-Loos brand, and add not a little to the picture's entertaining qualifications.

Miss Talmadge is supported by a capable cast and some of the number are good types. Kenneth Harlan is the political boss and hero, while Hassard Short is the erstwhile fiance and political rival.

The picture has good photography and a perfect continuity taking into consideration that titles are necessary to tell most of the story. The offering will probably find greater favor with women than with men in which it differs not at all from the average of this star's productions.

The exploitation possibilities, in the fact that it is a story of a political fight, are excellent.—Length, 5 reels.—J. S. Dickerson.

THE CAST

Kay Gerson	Constance Talmadge
Jim Bradley	Kenneth Harlan
Freddy Bleeker	Hassard Short
Amy Bleeker	Florence Short
Mrs. Margaret Belknap	Ina Rorke

Story and scenario by John Emerson and Anita Loos.
Directed by Victor Fleming.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

"Woman's Place," a new Constance Talmadge comedy, is the feature picture scheduled for showing at the ———— theatre for a ———— days' engagement beginning ————.

In the picture, Miss Talmadge plays the part of a young society flapper who goes into politics, running for mayor of her city against her fiance and who finally grabs off the best political job in town, that of bossing the political boss, as a wife.

The story of "Woman's Place" was written by John Emerson and Anita Loos and not the least of entertainment provided is the titles. In support of the star is a strong cast of fine types. Kenneth Harlan is the political boss and hero who wins Constance for his bride and Hassard Short is the addle-pated erstwhile fiance who wins in the race for a mayoralty title, but loses in the battle for a lady's favor.

The picture is developed along farce comedy lines and in this connection is typical of the vehicles in which Miss Talmadge specializes.

Victor Fleming directed. The production is in five reels and is offered as one of Connie's best pictures.

PROGRAM READER

Constance Talmadge is offered at the ———— in a new comedy vehicle, "Woman's Place," for a ———— days' engagement beginning ————. The picture is from the pen of John Emerson and Anita Loos and presents the star in the role of a flapper who runs for mayor of her city against her erstwhile fiance. She loses the mayoralty race because the women voters are jealous of her popularity with the men, but she wins the handsome political boss of the city for a husband.

In support of the star is a strong cast of well known players, among whom is Kenneth Harlan, as the political boss and hero; Hassard Short as the erstwhile fiance; Ina Rorke as an aspiring woman's rights exponent.

The production was directed by Victor Fleming from the scenario by Mr. Emerson and Miss Loos. Not the least of the comedy provided by the picture is furnished by the titles, also contributed by the famous scenario writing pair.

The picture screens in five reels and is offered as one of Connie's best vehicles.

SUGGESTIONS

Bill Miss Talmadge in the usual fashion, with emphasis on the fact that the story is from the pen of Mr. Emerson and Miss Loos. Give a general idea of what the production is about, but do not treat the plot seriously. Promise laughs from the incident and the titles. Mention the cast, especially Kenneth Harlan, who has friends among the matinee crowd. Tying up with elections and women's political clubs is advised. In your newspaper advertising stress the idea of the picture, the star and the authors in slangy selling talk.

CATCH LINES

They nominated Connie for Mayor because it was figured that her looks would corral the he vote, but the sour grapes of the shes was an item that offset the glad rag advantage. Connie was beaten, but she should worry; she grabbed the best job in town, boss of the political boss, who was young, handsome and a he-man to boot.

As a politician, Connie was a whiz. She made a great canvass, but she didn't figure on the fact that women weren't going to see the best dressed, prettiest flapper in town putting their noses out of joint. But then Connie married the political boss, which was a better job than being Mayor.

"PETER IBBETSON" OR "FOREVER"
(Paramount)

The Ultimate in Atmosphere, Good Acting and Attention to Detail

"PETER IBBETSON" or "Forever" as the film is to be titled outside of New York, is a celluoid triumph, but it is too large a technical and acting achievement and tells too fanciful a story to be called a sure-fire audience picture. The feature is for the classes rather than the masses. Looking at the production from the viewpoint of the average fan, it is an unconvincing vehicle for acting. However, it is so beautifully done that it must command respect and admiration even from the lowbrow, and if some people are inclined to wonder what it is all about, that is their fault and not the pictures.

The picture is the ultimate when it comes to atmosphere, attention to detail, correct and artistic settings, costuming, lightings and direction, and it is wonderfully acted.

Every player of a large cast, even those doing the bits, gives a faultless performance unless it be Wallace Reid, who scarcely seems to measure up to the requirements of the difficult and varied role of the romantic and esthetic "Peter." However, Elsie Ferguson, Montague Love and George Fawcett are equal to the demands of truly great parts. Miss Ferguson demonstrates that she is indeed one of our foremost emotional actresses, while Mr. Love dominates every scene in which he appears. As for George Fawcett, no finer characterization, than that given as the old soldier who served with Napoleon, has ever graced the screen. His last scene is the finest piece of acting of the season.

"Peter Ibbetson" is for the most part episodic narrative, telling the life story of two people who loved each other from childhood. The girl marries after having been separated from her childhood lover. The man is sentenced to life imprisonment for killing a relative who insulted his dead mother.

Although still separated in reality the two are always together in spirit, through their ability to "dream dreams that come true" and after both have died they are united in an occult world. The period of the story is something like a century past and the locale France and England.

The picture, of course, is an adaptation of the famous novel by George Du Maurier and the play in which John and Lionel Barrymore were starred.—Length, 8 reels.—J. S. Dickerson.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

A story of youth and joy, and love's first awakening—a tale of age and sorrow, and love flaming on—a tale of deep pathos, ringing with tragic moments—that is "Peter Ibbetson," the Paramount picture which comes to the ———— theatre next ————. The novel by George Du Maurier which was made into a play by John Raphael, earned a big success upon the stage when it served as a vehicle for John and Lionel Barrymore. Its stirring drama, its deep heart appeal, its charm and sentiment are unforgettable. Now it comes to the screen with all its vital elements intact, serving as a medium for the expression of Wallace Reid's and Elsie Ferguson's talent. In point of artistic appeal, "Peter Ibbetson" ranks with any offering ever produced for the screen. It is wonderfully picturesque and colorful, the scenes being laid in France and England in the forties of the last century. The cast is entirely capable and the direction highly praiseworthy.

PROGRAM READER

The greatest story of love that the screen has ever known—that is "Peter Ibbetson," the artistic triumph which comes to the ———— theatre next ———— as a Paramount production starring Wallace Reid and Elsie Ferguson. It unfolds an all-consuming devotion that triumphs over prison, age and death. It is a picture that makes you feel you've seen a thing of glorious beauty. It tells the romance of a rose-red love, budding in childhood's springtime, blooming through storms of life's summer, and glowing through frosty age and death. It offers a beautiful romance—an ideal romance. And in the supporting cast are such well known and talented players as Montagu Love, George Fawcett and Paul McAllister.

SUGGESTIONS

"Put your hands behind your head, cross your knees, shut your eyes and dream true." This is how Peter Ibbetson realized the fancies which mounted in his imagination. You can use this as a teaser which will stimulate curiosity. Tell that it is a remarkably beautiful picture, one offering an exquisite romance, one wonderfully well acted by no less personages than Wallace Reid, Elsie Ferguson, Montagu Love, George Fawcett and others equally capable. You can put over an effective prologue. A group of figures attired in colonial costumes or the costume of 1840 could put over a gavotte. Or a scene of a young dreamer dreaming true. Bill it as the picture beautiful. Advise your patrons to come and see an ideal romance.

"RIP VAN WINKLE"
(Ward Lascelle-Hodkinson)

Interesting Adaptation of Successful Play

IT will occasion some surprise to many who have wondered why Joseph Jefferson's old-time play, "Rip Van Winkle," has not reached the screen before. The very fact that the filmgoer has had to wait these many years for a silent version would lead one to speculate upon the idea that it is really not adaptable to the silver sheet. True, it lacks the fundamental element of action—an element by which all film pays are measured. But in compensation the immortal classic has enjoyed a wide popularity through the association of the author's name and the fact that the beloved Jefferson interpreted Rip and made it a portrayal which brought him everlasting fame.

There is little drama, but a rich slice of sentiment and humor, and Ward Lascelle has wisely kept it within bounds. The simplicity of Irving's tale and Jefferson's play is brought forth in scenes which conquer through their charm and fancy. Those in the East who know their Hudson River and the Catskills will find it hard to reconcile themselves to California backgrounds, and the almost total absence of any river scene which might be passed off as the Hudson. However, the atmosphere, the costuming and general dress of the offering are realistic enough to satisfy. Joseph Jefferson's son, Thomas, identified with the screen the past few years, once starred in his father's play, and the fact that he portrays the good-natured, but alcoholic Rip, indicates that the sponsors overlooked nothing to make the adaptation authentic.

One cannot say that it is not a faithful interpretation. Indeed, Thomas Jefferson has had too long an association with the play not to be familiar with it. Consequently his portrayal of Rip lives up to the imaginary conception of the role. His make-up could be improved when he returns to the village old and decrepit. The close-ups of his facial expressions certainly give away the false whiskers. However, this is a minor flaw in a picture which carries a wealth of sentimental detail and pretty backgrounds. Once in a while the offering drags, principally because there is no drama to keep it going, and Lascelle has to resort to repetitious incident. A little editing here and there would lend a compactness which is quite absent in the present version. Since every school child and nearly all the grown-ups are familiar with the tale of the irresponsible Rip, who, henpecked by his wife, goes to the mountains and sleeps for twenty years, to return a total stranger, bent and aged, there is no need to go into detail. There is no digression of theme and characterization. The scenes of the tavern, the home life, the gnomes giving Rip the fatal drink—these are atmospheric and colorful. The dialogue errs occasionally. Rip and the others do not speak good dialect. "Fadder und mudder" are too often called "father and mother." In all it is an artistic production which should strike the public fancy.—Length, 7 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Who has not read "Rip Van Winkle?" Who has not found rich fancy and appeal in the immortal classic of Washington Irving's? It has been made into a play and many will remember Joseph Jefferson's truly great rendition of the famous role. Well, the story and play has been adapted to the screen and comes as the feature attraction at the ———— theatre next ————. Thomas Jefferson, a son of Joseph, is seen in his father's role of the irresponsible, but lovable Rip. And the production does full justice to the original script and play.

It strikes the popular fancy—the fancy which has conjured up the tale as one of the most charming ever written. Everyone who has read at all is familiar with the story of the beloved drunkard who was too good-natured to provoke trouble. Everyone will remember how his irascible wife drove him from home, so that he was compelled to seek shelter in the mountains. He goes to sleep for twenty years and returns old and decrepit, with the environment and associations entirely changed. It is a charming picture, well acted and rich in atmosphere.

PROGRAM READER

"Rip Van Winkle" is coming to the ————. Washington Irving's immortal classic, the favorite of every child and parent, has been adapted to the screen. Many will remember Joseph Jefferson's play in which he found lasting fame. His son, Thomas Jefferson, plays the title role—a role which he is familiar with since he toured the country in the spoken version many years ago. Now he appears in the film version. It is a picture which will strike popular fancy. It is rich in sentiment, humor and atmosphere. The Catskill country is reproduced faithfully. And the figures of the book and play live again. So come and be royally entertained.

SUGGESTIONS

Here is a big chance to cash in through the excellent exploitation values of this picture. Irving's immortal classic has been read by everybody. So bill it far in advance. Tie up with schools and children's clubs. Use the name of Joseph Jefferson. Tell that his son, Thomas Jefferson, is seen in the title role. Play up the fact that it is a story which has never grown old—that it still strikes public fancy through its rich charm and sentiment. You can put over several ideas for a prologue. Even a tabloid sketch of the play could be used. Or a figure dressed up as Rip can be employed. The chance is yours to put this over big.

"JANE EYRE"
(Hodkinson)

Hugo Ballin Production a Pictorial Triumph

A VERY able piece of direction. So out of the ordinary that it stands almost alone. It will be appreciated most by admirers of the kind of entertainment that depends upon beauteous production, simplicity of narrative and wonderful photography, rather than thrills, surprises or spectacular effects. Although it is not lacking in these components, yet they fade into insignificance compared with aforementioned values.

Founded upon Charlotte Bronte's novel, it may here be said that the picturization is an accurate dramatization of the original. It may be termed a "costume play," being of a period dating between the years of 1822 and 1835. Particular stress upon detail is evident in the costuming, the sets, the furniture. The locations selected to depict that part of England where the story is laid have been selected with care and precision, the exteriors as beautiful as have ever been shown in any motion picture.

Jane Eyre, youthful heroine, is artistically enacted by Mabel Ballin. In the beginning she portrays the impetuous, uphappy child. An unwelcome burden upon her aunt, Jane is placed in an orphans' home, represented to her as a boarding school. She is shocked and grieved at the unjust punishment given the little folk, but she is destined to spend her early years within the walls of the institution, until finally, having reached womanhood, and prepared to teach, she finds a position as a sort of governess in the home of a rich widower, Fairfax Rochester, who desires that his young ward be educated according to her social standing.

A great affection immediately brings the little girl and the new teacher together, while the man looks on with approval. After a time he asks Jane to become his wife and she, in great happiness, accepts.

But there is a skeleton in the closet of the aristocratic family. Thereby hangs the trouble, for it appears that Rochester already has a wife, though for many years she has been insane.

She is confined to the attic of the big residence with a keeper. Twice she steals out at night, once firing the bed where her sleeping husband lies and the second time tearing the wedding veil that her successor is about to wear the following day.

Following the experience of seeing this strange creature at large, Jane confides in her promised husband. He is obliged to tell her who the woman is, how he happened to marry her and that he has been afraid of the truth before, account of his love for Jane. This only after he has been stopped at the altar from proceeding with the ceremony by a brother of the unfortunate woman.

Jane, heartbroken, leaves the Rochester estate. Wandering through a great storm, she fails to find shelter anywhere until taken in by St. John Rivers, a young minister. While convalescing in his home the clergyman falls in love and proposes to her, but to Jane life without Fairfax Rochester is not worth the living. She wanders back to the old home.

Meantime, following her departure, the mad woman fires the entire house and puts an end to herself. Rochester is rescued from the burning structure, but not until blinded by smoke and heat.

When Jane arrives at the home where he now dwells she finds the man of her choice overjoyed by her return. Eventually he recovers his sight and they turn from memory of the old life into the beauty of the new.

A splendid cast was necessary, Norman Trevor as Fairfax Rochester, Craufurd Kent as the young clergyman and many other well-known players filling the order.—Length, 5 reels.—Lillian R. Gale.

THE CAST

Mr. Rochester	Norman Trevor
Jane Eyre	Mabel Ballin
St. John Rivers	Craufurd Kent
Grace Poole, a servant	Emily Fitz Roy

John Eyre, Jane's uncle	Louis Grizel
John Reed	Stephen Carr
Miss Fairfax	Vernie Atherton
Mrs. Rochester	Elizabeth Meriens
Mr. Brockelhurst	Harlan Knight
Burns	Helen Miles
River's Maid	Julia Hirley
Miss Ingram	Sadie Mullen
Adele, Mr. Rochester's ward	June Ellen Terry
Miss Mason	Florence Flagler
Mr. Rochester's maid	Bertha Kent
Mrs. Reed	Marie Shaffer

PROGRAM READER

It may be of interest to my patrons to know that Mabel Ballin is in private life, the wife of Hugo Ballin, who directed "Jane Eyre," and that Mr. Ballin, once an interior decorator, sought to become a motion picture director in order that his wife might be starred in the kind of pictures most suited to her madonna-like countenance.

The exteriors selected for this picture are said to be almost identical replicas of the locations in England where the story supposedly transpired. Note Mr. Ballin's artistic sense ever in evidence in the decoration of the interiors and his respect for minor detail.

"UNDER THE LASH"

(Paramount)

Well Produced and Acted Drama of South Africa

GLORIA SWANSON leaves the De Millian atmosphere of the American hearth in this production to migrate to South Africa and there to live the dull and docile life of wife to a Boer farmer. And, although the romance develops from the eternal triangle idea, she may be said to have again deserted the sex drama. Certainly there is no attempt for sex appeal. It is straight drama, developing with keen interest for the first few reels, but fagging somewhat towards an unconvincing climax and a protracted ending.

But "Under the Lash," known on the printed page as "The Shulamite," cannot fail to be entertainment, nor can it disappoint the large personal following of its star, except possibly by the lack of beautiful gowns and society background. There is an advantage in laying a screen story in a less-written-about country. And it affords opportunities for new characterizations, which Russell Simpson and Lillian Leighton make the most of. Both of these players give impressionable performances. We do not think Mr. Simpson's strange make-up is exaggerated, but it is possible that the picture public will.

Miss Swanson's role is that of an obedient, intellectually-stinted second wife of a stern Boer who believes in ruling by the lash, and who quotes the Bible (as interpreted by himself) to sanction his cruel and drastic code. To this lonely farm comes an English wanderer who reveals to the wife a new world in the world of books. Influenced by him, she rebels against her husband's claims to absolute dominion over his wife and servants. To save herself from a beating she lies to her husband, telling him she is soon to be a mother. This lie brings about the climax, for the Boer discovers the falsehood as well as learning of the innocent love which has sprung up in the heart of his guest. This offense, according to his belief, merits death; so he takes his wife into the barn to shoot her. She has been forced to put on her gorgeous wedding dress for the occasion. This does not quite ring true. Her danger does not plant fear in the heart. The Englishman is the rescuer, but the end is not yet. He must be cleared of any murder charge. This is rather difficult, since there is a Boer aunt who must be bought off. Evidently there are no coroners in South Africa. As it is a lonely country, this fact seems perfectly logical. But then there is the hero's wife in England to keep the lovers from one another and the picture from ending. A divorce settles this and the fade-out is staged on the Veldt at dawning.

Mahlon Hamilton gives a fine performance as the hero. The picture is well acted and well directed, and careful detailing gives it good atmosphere. —Length, 6 reels.—Matthew A. Taylor.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Having as its principal players, the popular Gloria Swanson, "Under the Lash," the Paramount feature, which will be the main attraction at the ———— theatre on ————, promises to be one of the best liked screen productions to reach the ———— screen in many weeks. "Under the Lash" is a screen adaptation of "The Shulamite," which a few years ago was one of the best selling novels in this country. The novel is from the pen of Alice and Claude Askew. As a play "The Shulamite" enjoyed a lengthy run and unusual praise from the critics.

As a screen production this novel, re-titled "Under the Lash," loses none of the charm or intense drama which made it so popular on the printed page. It affords Gloria Swanson, the appealing star who will be remembered from her sterling work in "The Affairs of Anatol" and "Why Change Your Wife?" as well as other De Mille successes, a new type of role in which to prove even more emphatically her versatile dramatic powers. Her supporting cast may well be called all-star. As the leading man Mahlon Hamilton gives a polished performance and other well remembered players are Russell Simpson, Lillian Leighton and Lincoln Steadman. Sam Wood directed the feature.

The story of "Under the Lash" is laid in South Africa; the star playing the obedient wife of a straight laced Boer farmer, who believes in ruling by the whip. It develops into a beautiful romance, and thrilling drama with suspense which remains until the very final fade-out.

PROGRAM READER

Living in desperate loneliness Deborah, the young second wife of Simeon Krillet, wondered what lay behind the grey horizon which shut her off from the rest of the world. Krillet was a Boer who worked his South African farm until it made him wealthy, and who lived in stern righteousness—reading nothing but the Word; ruling only by the lash; smiling never at all. To this solemn and strange people came a foreigner, an Englishman. To the meek Boer wife he offered books, and through books, new ideas and aspirations which made the dull life she led only more unbearable.

There is little doubt but that you will like "Under the Lash," the screen adaptation of "The Shulamite," which will be offered at the ———— theatre on ————, with Gloria Swanson in the leading role. It is the same Gloria who scored in "Why Change Your Wife?" and "The Affairs of Anatol," but it is a Gloria in a new kind of role, exhibiting in a new and pleasing way the dramatic powers which lay within her grasp. She is assisted by a cast of the highest calibre including such players as Mahlon Hamilton, Russell Simpson and Lincoln Steadman. Whether you have read the novel or not, you cannot afford to miss "Under the Lash."

"THE MYSTERIOUS RIDER"

(Benj. B. Hampton-Hodkinson)

Involved Story Not Up to Zane Grey's Standard

IF this is a faithful adaptation of Zane Grey's novel, then the author has not reached the standard which has established his name as a household word among fiction readers. A Zane Grey picture usually means a throbbing canvas of life—a canvas teeming with rapid action, bristling with incident and charged with suspense. "The Mysterious Rider" finds the author content to get out of his element and revel in a plot which does not carry the breadth of the big outdoors notwithstanding the fact that most of its action comprises a series of exteriors and that its figures are as colorful as the others drawn by the author.

The weakness of this story rests in the limitations of the plot, which reveals a prodigal son—a truly vicious figure endeavoring to harass his father at every opportunity—and a mysterious rider whose identity is well hidden from the spectator for purposes of suspense and surprise. The expected sweep, the fast-moving action which characterizes a Grey story, is missing through the early reels, while he takes special pains to paint character development. If the idea was fresh or novel his plot would carry an adequate force. But emphasizing the weak character and showing intimate detail which has nothing to do with advancing the action tends to make the spectator lose his grip on the array of events. Once the mysterious character is introduced the picture picks up in tempo and a flash of the real Grey is seen and appreciated.

Robert McKim, who seems to have abandoned villainous roles, temporarily, at least, is seen in this sympathetic part of the rider whose mission is to exact vengeance upon the wretch who destroyed his home and ruined his life. A counterplot involves an up-to-date cattle rustler who employs motor trucks in his scheme. It is this man who is the hunted figure. And the prodigal son is caught in his clutches and compelled to follow his plans. There is some flashes of the triangle situation revealed when the wife of the rustler entertains the advances of the vicious youth. And another romance (this one clean and wholesome) involves the hero and the adopted daughter of the ranchman—the girl being the kidnapped child of the plot.

With some of the detail eliminated it may be assumed that the action would proceed in a more progressive manner. Much of this incident concerns comedy relief. The thrill enters when the rider exacts his vengeance. It is a stirring fight and the participants are drawn into a waist-high pond before the criminal succumbs. It all ends happily. The director has brought out the rugged touches in able fashion and his atmosphere is rich and colorful.—Length, 6 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

A story by Zane Grey is sufficient to arouse the keenest interest of the reader. When one of this author's tales is visualized on the screen, it takes on a force which enhances its appeal. It throbs with life. Therefore "The Mysterious Rider" on the screen is crammed with action and incident. It is a story which details a prodigal son who returns to harass his father and others; it is a story of a pathetic figure who harbors a hatred which eventually culminates in shedding the sorrow from his life. For Hell Bent Wade waited many years to exact vengeance upon the criminals who killed his wife and kidnapped his child. Zane Grey's flair for dramatic action—his skill at characterization has never been manifested to a better degree than in this highly interesting picture produced by Benjamin B. Hampton and which comprises a cast that includes Robert McKim and others. "The Mysterious Rider" will appear at the ———— theatre next ————.

PROGRAM READER

No one knew his identity. He roamed the hills—a colorful, pathetic figure—a figure who kept to himself. But he had a mission to perform. This mission was to exact vengeance upon the brute who killed his wife and kidnapped his child. He watched and waited and then—. Far below in the valley, cattle ruslers were busy. But they were caught. Who caught them? The mysterious rider? That is for you to find out. But when you come to the ———— theatre next ———— and ———— you will see a clever story—an absorbing picture adapted from a Zane Grey manuscript. So come and see "The Mysterious Rider."

SUGGESTIONS

Here is the name of Zane Grey attached to a story. So make the most of it. This author has established a wide following through his skill at plot and characterization and his name is almost a household word. The mere announcement of his name as the author of the picture should attract picturegoers. Play up Robert McKim, Claire Adams and Walt Whitman as players who are in the cast. Play it up as an absorbing melodrama of the far-off country—the country of the plains and mountains. Bill it as a picture filled with surprises, dramatic clashes, romance and pathos and thrills. Link up with your bookdealer. A rider garbed mysteriously—the identity unknown—galloping through the streets would invite attention to the picture.

"Lure of Jade" Finished for R-C Release

R. J. Tobin, general director of production for R-C Pictures Corporation at the Hollywood, Cal., studios has announced the completion of "The Lure of Jade," Pauline Frederick's next starring vehicle. It is scheduled for release on November 13 and reports indicate it will be one of the most unusual productions in which the noted star has ever appeared.

"The Lure of Jade" is based upon a story by Marion Orth and was directed by Colin Campbell, who heretofore has done notable work in supervising productions starring Sessue Hayakawa. Much of the action of the story is centered in the South Sea Islands and is rich in color and tropic atmosphere. It is strong drama throughout and perfectly suited to the talents of the star.

Strong Audience Appeal

The Authorship and Direction of "A Man's Home" of a High Order

IT is the contention of the Selznick organization that few pictures come to the screen with so much public appeal in the matter of authorship, cast, direction and production as "A Man's Home," the Selznick special that has early attained so much publicity. The effectiveness of a book has a box-office appeal that is confined to those who have read a single work, but in the case of Anna Steese Richardson, who wrote the story of "A Man's Home," and Edmund Breese, her collaborator, there is a wider and constantly increasing interest in their achievements.

Because of her present position as associate editor of Woman's Home Companion Miss Richardson is every week writing for mothers, wives and daughters who constitute the national circulation of that magazine. Because of her past achievements in movements that benefit women and have aimed directly at the betterment of the American home Miss Richardson is known, by her work, to hundreds of thousands of women.

Edmund Breese, who collaborated with Miss Richardson in writing the play on which "A Man's Home" is based, is a dramatic actor of high standing in his profession. He contributed his knowledge and skill as a player to developing Miss Richardson's story into a play and his name used as co-author of "A Man's Home" will surely have a beneficial influence on the box-office, attracting devotees of the legitimate stage because of the high standing Mr. Breese has attained as leading man and stage star.

Ralph Ince, who directed the picture, has attained distinction and fame in picturedom through years of experience as both actor and director; and his screen career is but an extension of his achievements as an entertainer that began when he was a youth upon the dramatic stage. His work as a director began with Vitagraph in 1907, and for four years previous to his entry into pictures he was an actor on the stage. Thus his thirty-four years of life measure, from his youth excellent service to the field of general amusement plus the specific accomplishment of more than 300 screen productions to his credit.

With the Selznick organization Mr. Ince has been both director and star-directing himself in "The Land of Opportunity" and "The Highest Law." Meanwhile he has directed Zena Keefe, in "Red Foam"; "Out of the Snows," a Ralph Ince special; Eugene O'Brien, in "His Wife's Money"; Elaine Hammerstein, in "Remorseless Love," and Conway Tearle in "After Midnight" and "A Wide-Open Town."

ShortSubjects on Broadway

Educational Films Reports Steady Increase in Its Broadway Showings

WITH the releasing of the early numbers of the new year's product, bookings of short subjects released by Educational Film Exchanges in the big Broadway houses are reported to be showing a steady and most gratifying increase. Each week recently has seen from one to three Educational pictures in the big New York first run theatres.

The week beginning October 9 two two-reel comedies and a reel of Sketchografs were in three houses.

The new Campbell Comedies being made for Educational under the personal supervision of William S. Campbell, had their debut at the Capitol theatre, where "The Stork's Mistake" was on the programme. John Henry, Jr., other child actors, a score of babies and animals ranging from a turtle to a grizzly bear and a big white horse, are shown in this distinctive comedy.

The Rialto theatre showed "Snooky's Blue Monday," a two-reel comedy featuring "Snooky, the Humanzee."

"Eve's Leaves," Sketchografs by Julian Ollendorff, showed at the Central theatre, where another of this new series, "Play Ball," is booked for the week following.

This follows immediately upon a week that also saw three Educational Pictures on Broadway. They were two releases of the series of Sketchografs and a scenic picture. Previous to this, two out of three of the new Selig-Rork Photoplays had their premieres on Broadway, the Capitol showing "The Northern Trail," and the Strand screening "The Ne'er to Return Road."

Architectural Magazine Features Film Story

Something of a publicity feat for Goldwyn Pictures Corporation was the publication in the September 1921 edition of The American Architect and The Architectural Record of a five-page story on its Italian spectacular film, "Theodora." The article, entitled, "The Photoplay Architect," illustrated with six cuts of scenes from "Theodora," was written by Jerome Lachenbruch of the Goldwyn publicity department.

Slow Motion Used in "Glass Houses"

Slow motion photography has been applied to certain scenes of Viola Dana's next Metro picture, "Glass Houses." The action so photographed is that of a Russian dance the star does.

So far as is known this is the first time in the history of the screen that this device has been utilized in the straight narrative of a story in motion pictures

Myrtle Stedman. She has just completed one of the Louis B. Mayer specials, and has arrived in New York

Fight Pictures Do Heavy Business in New York

Fred C. Quimby, who is handling the Dempsey-Carpentier fight pictures, has been forced by increased business to add to his New York exchange Irving Hanover, Dan Dolan and Robert Harris. These men, under the exchange management of Marx S. Nathan, are handling rental bookings of the championship pictures throughout New York State.

The Quimby offices report that they have eighteen prints of the Dempsey-Carpentier films working in New York alone, while the Jersey territory also has been turning in good business from the start.

The states of Oklahoma and California already have been opened up, and reports from there indicate big business, according to the Quimby offices.

Looking for New Director for Harry Sweet

Julius Stern, of Century Film Corporation is looking for a new man to direct Harry Sweet. Tom Buckingham's contract expired and Mr. Stern did not renew it, although Director Buckingham had several scripts ready for production. Alf Goulding will take over the scripts and direct Sweet in the meantime. His first picture with Sweet is now in production and has Bartine Burkett, Century's new beauty, as leading woman.

Charles Dorety's contract has also expired and was not renewed. Dorety will leave within the next week after he has completed the picture he is making at present on the Century lot.

Bosworth Starts Work on Warren Release

An exceptional cast headed by Hobart Bosworth. Elinor Fair, Robert McKim, Freeman Wood, Baby Muriel, Al. Kauffman, Lei Lena has been selected for Lambert Hillyer's first Graf production of C. Gardiner Sullivan's great story "White Hands" for release by the F. B. Warren Corporation. Active production has already started at the Pacific Studios in San Mateo, California. Lambert Hillyer, is directing.

"Foolish Age" Praised by Board of Review

Doris May's first R.-C. Picture, "The Foolish Age," written and supervised by Hunt Stromberg and scheduled for general release October 16, has been praised by the National Board of Review.

The general comment of the board was as follows: "The Board feels that the producers of 'The Foolish Age' are to be complimented on their success in the field of legitimate satire on American society and customs. The picture is more than a mere comedy of situation. It is a comedy of manners containing a number of interesting and amusing criticisms of present-day foibles."

"The Iron Trail" Ready for United Artists

Final assembly of titles and scenes for "The Iron Trail," first of the big Rex Beach film productions to be released through United Artists, has been completed at the Bennett studio in Yonkers, under the personal supervision of Whitman Bennett, assisted by Rex Beach, and the finished product in this sensational railroad melodrama is now ready.

"The Iron Trail" is the first of a series of Rex Beach stories that Mr. Beach personally selected for elaborate film production, and marks the first of the Bennett Pictures presentations on the United Artists program.

Lon Chaney Feature Is Titled "The Mask"

Universal announces that Lon Chaney's Universal-Jewel production, now being made at Universal City, is to be called "The Mask." Supporting the star is a cast including Irene Rich, Frank Campeau, Alan Hale, Spottiswoods Aitken, Dagmar Godowsky, Herbert Standing, and little Stanley Goethals, the youngster who was featured in "Outside the Law."

"The Mask" was written by Lucian Hubbard, scenario editor at Universal City, in collaboration with Chaney himself, and Irving G. Thalberg, studio manager.

Ben Wilson Will Make Peter B. Kyne Story

The next Ben Wilson production will be on the Peter B. Kyne story, "A Motion to Adjourn," Marjorie Daw and Roy Stewart leading the cast, the direction being in the hands of Roy Clements. The story ran in the "Saturday Evening Post."

Roy Stewart plays the part of a young man, Silas Warner, Jr., who, after a series of family misadventures in New York, goes to a Western mining camp and meets with many adventures at the hands of the "ornery and worthless men of the world." The girl appears in the person of Sally, the daughter of the head of this motley clan, and the real plot starts.

"Morals" Realart Release

Woody Says May McAvoy's Vehicle Merits Place in "Specials" Class

AN announcement from Realart is to the effect that "Morals" will be the next May McAvoy production to follow "Everything for Sale."

A preliminary announcement from J. S. Woody, Realart's general manager, who reviewed this picture while at the Coast, is to the effect that it surpasses anything heretofore produced by his company. While Mr. Woody insists that "Morals" is of such merit as to place it in a class with "specials," it will not be handled as such, however, taking its place with the regular releases and being made available for all franchise owners.

The story is an adaptation of the widely red novel, "The Morals of Marcus," which was written by William J. Locke. No less a scenarist than Julia Crawford Ivers prepared the continuity from which William Desmond Taylor worked.

But it is on May McAvoy, Realart says, that the greatest praise will descend for her remarkable triumph as "Charlotta," the little English girl, reared in a Turkish harem, who, through a combination of dramatic circumstances becomes the ward of an English peer. In "Morals," says Realart, Miss McAvoy gives that same wonderful portrayal that characterized her historical "Grizel" and duplicates the marvelous acting seen in her earlier production of "Sentimental Tommy."

The male lead is played by William P. Carleton. Others of an exceptionally capable cast include Kathlyn Williams, who plays the part of Judith Mainwaring; William E. Lawrence as Pasquale; Sydney Bracey as Stinson; Bridgeta Clark, Starke Patterson, Nicolas de Ruiz and Marian Skinner.

Two Paramount Releases

"Three Word Brand" on October 23, and "Experience" Week Following

PARAMOUNT annaunces for release October 16, William S. Hart in "Three Word Brand," and for October 23, George Fitzmaurice's production "Experience."

The Hart picture is from an original story by Will Reynolds and was adapted and directed by Lambert Hillyer. New York critics, following its first presentation at the New York Rivoli, where it played a pre-release engagement, were emphatic in declaring it one of the best Western in which "Big Bill" has ever been seen.

Jane Novak is Mr. Hart's leading woman, while the supporting cast includes such well-known Western character actors as S. J. Bingham, Gordon Russell, Ivor McFadden, Herschell Mayall, Colette Forbes, George C. Pearce and Leo Willis. The photography is of the usual standard of Joe August, A. S. C.

"Experience," released the 23rd, has a cast that reads like a Who's Who on Broadway. In this Fitzmaurice production which was adapted by Waldemar Young from the play by George V. Hobart, Richard Barthelmess is featured in the leading role, Youth. Marjorie Daw appears opposite him in the role of Love, John Miltern is Experience, E. J. Ratcliffe is Ambition, Betty Carpenter is Hope, Lilyan Tashman is Pleasure, Helen Ray is Intoxication, Edna Wheaton is Beauty, Sybil Carmen is Excitement, Yvonne Routon is Fashion, Nita Naldi is Temptation, Robert Schable is Conceit, Joseph Smiley is Chance and Kate Bruce, famous for many fine characterizations in D. W. Griffith productions, has a splendid mother role.

Constance Binney Unit at Work in Frisco

Constance Binney and company have gone to San Francisco, where Argentine "farm" scenes will be taken at a location on the peninsula. Included in the cast are Jack Mulhall leading man; William Courtleigh, Sydney Bracey, Arthur Hull, Edward Martindel, Helen Lynch and Herbert Fortier. Director Maurice Campbell expects to be gone at least ten days.

Screen to Win Foreign Trade for Uncle Sam

American manufacturers are awakening to the possibilities of using practical pictures to get Uncle Sam's share of the foreign trade. The Rothacker Film Company organization is at present working on three pictures which will be sent abroad to create a market for American products. Edward O. Blackburn, Jawn Freese and George Kilgore are directing them.

R-C Subject for Loew's New York Circuit

Loew's Theatre circuit in Greater New York has arranged with the department of distribution of R-C Pictures showings of Pauline Frederick in "The Sting of the Lash," her latest released production, for its entire big-time circuit in Greater New York. The picture has already met with success in several of the larger Loew houses.

Maryland Exhib Stages a "Realart Week"

C. A. Feeser, manager of the Leader theatre of Cumberland, Maryland, took the initiative and booked Realart pictures solid for the week of October 3rd. Opening with May McAvoy in "A Private Scandal," Manager Feeser followed with Constance Binney in "Such a Little Queen," Justine Johnstone in "A Heart to Let," Mary Miles Minter in "The Little Clown," Wanda Hawley in "The House that Jazz Built" and Bebe Daniels in "Ducks and Drakes."

Oppau Disaster Shown in Pathe News 80

While the entire nation was deeply engrossed in the world's series the current issues of the Pathe News, Nos. 79 and 80, have not overlooked the many other important events occurring throughout the world.

In issue No. 80, views are shown of the disaster in Oppau, Germany, where over 1,000 were killed and 4,000 injured in the big factory explosion. In Aberdeen, Maryland, the exploding power of the largest bomb in the world is tested. The projectile weighing 4,000 pounds and loaded with 1,812 pounds of TNT is hurled from a plane 2,000 feet in the air. Views are shown of the tremendous welcome accorded Pershing upon his arrival in Havre, France.
